Victoria Presbyterian congregation made a bit of history last Monday evening by moderating in a call to a minister—the fifth in line since the church was founded some fifty-three years ago. This means that the long tenure of the V. Rev. Dr. McKerroll, 27 years, has raised the average length of the terms of its four successive ministers—Reverends Grant, Pidgeon and McKerroll—to a little more than thirteen years. This is high compared with the terms of the other two pioneer churches founded in the early days of the village of West Toronto Junction—St. John's Anglican and Annette Street Methodist which is now the High Park United Church. At the moment information is not available for an accurate history of the two churches in question but one can recall, in the case of St. John's, such names as Miles, McKim, DuVernet, Beverley Smith, MacNamara and Rev. H. R. Hunt, the present incumbent. Until 1925 the High Park United Church was under the Methodist itinerary system which caused more frequent changes of ministers and names recalled are: Barkwell Howson, Hill, Barker, Parker, Hazelwood, Speers, Hincks and Rev. Dr. Avison, the present minister. As a result of the choice made by the congregation on Monday evening of its fifth minister it would appear that the church at Streetsville has been the stepping stone to the Victoria pulpit of forty per cent. of the ministers called to that important charge. Rev. J. Y. Fraser, whose eloquence, engaging personality and youthful enthusiasm have endeared him to the people of Streetsville, where he now ministers, so it is not surprising that he was the choice on the one ballot that was taken and that the call was made unanimous by a standing vote. Old timers at the meeting afterwards recalled the time about 35 years ago when they called a minister from the Streetsville pulpit—now the V. Rev. Dr. Pidgeon of the United Church—with pride in the abundant success of his work in Victoria. They recalled that Dr. Pidgeon was a tall young man, that he was an eloquent young man, that he was a likeable young man, that he came from Streetsville and that the description of Dr. Pidgeon when this century was young exactly fits the Rev. J. Y. Fraser of 1937. So they went home satisfied that Victoria is about to enter upon a new era even richer in achievement than the best chapters of its creditable history.—Bloor-Runnymede Weekly.

CRITICAL OF THE CHURCH

To The Editor of The Star:

Sir: The pages of history record few such tragic failures as that of the Christian Church. This organization, now hopelessly divided into antagonistic groups, each with its own pet theory—has miserably failed in almost every crisis. Slavery, sweating and war have flourished under its banner and the slow progress away from barbarism has often been with the opposition, not the help, of the church. "Blessed are they who do hunger and thirst after righteousness." "Blessed are they who are persecuted for righteousness' sake." How seldom can this be said of the Christian Church? The church to-day is in no danger of being persecuted for righteousness' sake. The great lessons of truth and righteousness which unite mankind are neglected for theories which only divide. The churches cannot even agree on a policy for the teaching of religion in the schools of this city. "Ye blind guides which strain at a gnat and swallow a camel." These words of Jesus to the leading churchmen of His day are even more applicable to-day. A professional ministry is incapable of following the Master who said: "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister and to give His life, a ransom for many." How different this sounds from bazaars, penny-in-the-slot religion, garden parties, etc., for the purpose of raising funds and still more funds. The minister has become of more importance than the ministry and churchianity takes the place of Christianity. May we not look forward to a church of which it can be said, "Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God?"

Snider's

Fine weather prevailed for the picnic of Wesley Sunday School which was held at J. D. Steen's grounds on the Credit River at Meadowvale, on Tuesday, July 13th. A fine program of races was run off under the supervision of the superintendent, Cecil N. Fish. Nearly all availed themselves of swimming and paddling in the river.

The union service of Trafalgar circuit will be held on Sunday morning next at 10.30 Standard Time at Wesley Church. The special speaker will be Mrs. Ralph E. Hooper, who with her husband, Dr. Hooper, spent several years in Ethiopia in charge of a hospital under the Soudan Interior Mission.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Jennison, Toronto, visited on Sunday with Mrs. R. K. Grimshaw.

Mr. George Emory, Acton, who gave the address at the Trafalgar circuit union service at Munn's church on Sunday morning last, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Burtland Conover, Dundas Highway. He was accompanied by Mrs. Emory and Miss Minnie Bennett, who is principal of Acton Public School and is a niece of Mrs. Conover.

Misses Frances and Ruby Albertson of Toronto are visiting their cousin, Miss Norma Fish.

"Freddie," one of Mr. Miles' donkeys, which has been staying at Mr. Earl Albertson's farm since Mr. Miles moved his stock from Mimico last year, figured prominently in the Toronto Police Games at Exhibition Park on Saturday. Freddie was presented to the best sprinter in the 100 yard dash selected from the Toronto Public Schools. Needless to say, Donald, young son of Mr. Albertson, misses Freddie very much as he has been a great playmate. The children of Snider's will also miss him very much.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Fish, Norman Fish and Roland Shore motored to London on Sunday to spend the day at Mr. Shore's home.

A former resident for many years of Snider's passed away on Thursday last in the person of Mrs. Joseph Fisher, formerly Miss Mary Liston. Following Mr. Fisher's death, Mrs. Fisher sold the farm and moved to the Sixteen district, Dundas Highway. She was highly esteemed by her former neighbors. The funeral was held on Saturday morning at St. Andrew's R.C. Church, Oakville, with interment at Oakville. John Liston, Hamilton, is a brother, and Mrs. Giles Kerswell, (formerly Maria Compton) Richmond Hill, a niece, and Miss Green, Sixteen, adopted daughter.

PERSONALS

Dr. and Mrs. D. V. Reed are spending a week at Rice Lake.

Mrs. Fulcher (nee Nellie Smith) of North Bay visited friends here this week. She formerly resided with Mrs. F. W. Morgan, about 25 years ago. She is visiting Mrs. Brooks, Dixie.

Miss Bessie McLellan, teacher, Toronto, visited with Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McLellan, this week, at the old home in Streetsville.

Messrs. J. K. McIlwrick, W. E. Watson, Tom Sharp and Doug. Steen motored to Midland on Sunday and visited with Mr. and Mrs. Lorimer Watson.

Mr. W. J. Moore and wife motored to Midland one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Tucker entertained visitors from Indiana over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Potts entertained friends from Toronto on Sunday.

WEDDINGS

Johnstone—Ivor

A quiet wedding took place at St. John's United church parsonage, Oakville, on Friday evening, July 9th, when Miss Helen Catharine Ivor, daughter of Mr. Hugh W. Ivor, Toronto, and the late Mrs. Ivor, became the bride of Mr. Thomas Cook Johnstone, younger son of Dr. and Mrs. John C. Johnstone, Trafalgar. Rev. D. H. Gallagher performed the ceremony.

The bride was attired in a becoming suit of powder blue Tahita cloth. With this she wore a blouse of shell pink net, white hat and accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. The groom's sister, Mrs. J. Piercer, attended the bride and was gowned in navy blue net, with navy hat and shoes and white accessories. Mr. Stanley Gorman acted as groomsman.

Following the ceremony, the wedding party dined at the Oakville Inn. Mr. and Mrs. Johnstone leaving later for Buffalo. They will reside in Trafalgar.

SLICED VERY THIN

By Sixbits

"No Matter How Thin You Slice It — It's Still Baloney"

Once again the talk of a Government Commission to control horse racing is to the fore; and although there is nothing startling or novel about such talk, this time it looks as though there might be something more to it than mere conversation.

Our own interest in the subject is more or less academic—kaff, kaff—as outside of a very occasional one or two dollar hunch bet we pay very slight attention to The Sport of Kings.

But if a Racing Commission should be created we wouldn't expect any very revolutionary results from its activities. It would be either a paid commission—in which case the jobs would go to men who are friends of the right people, men who have always voted the straight ticket—or who know where the body is buried.

Or else it would be an Honorary Commission, with the appointees probably looking on it as an excuse for posing gracefully in the stewards' stands what time they were not strolling across the Members' Lawns bowing graciously to admiring friends, rather than as a real job that required real work.

For it isn't in Members' Enclosures that any monkey business that may be going on can most easily be smelled out; and sometimes we have privately wondered if a stewards' stand is a really good place to observe from, judging from some of the things we have seen happen during races without any official action resulting.

Something is undoubtedly wrong with our horse-racing; but there always has been, and very likely always will be. And it is rather remarkable how much more there seems to be wrong with the sport right after you have taken a severe shellacking.

In other words, days when your selections come galloping home in front like trained pigs, all is for the best in the best of all possible worlds, or words to that effect, and it is surprising how even a small wager on the winner can blind you to the fact that the jockey riding in got away with murder in the race.

But when your thumbs are starting to sprout those painful callouses, which come from tearing up losing tickets, your whole outlook on life—and especially horse-racing—changes, and you view with gloomy suspicion every move made on the track.

If Canadian racing is in any worse shape than in former years, the chief reason you don't need to look any further for than the list of tomorrow's entries in tonight's papers.

Over south of the border you will see three or four tracks having cards of races with not a single race offering less than a thousand dollars. Here in Canada three hundred up to seven hundred.

Where the body lies the buzzards will be gathered—No, that isn't the very polite way to talk about the noble sport. What we men, where the big money is, you will find the best horses, the most prominent trainers, and the best jockeys—especially the latter.

So Canadian racing fans have to be satisfied with cheap horses that are liable to be hot as a blow torch on Thursday and cold as the feelings between Hepburn and King on Saturday; with alleged trainers who should really be charged admission to the track; and with so-called jockeys who—outside of two or three of them—who, in happier times, would have considered themselves lucky to be allowed to even work a horse, let alone ride one in a race.

Which should be about enough of the subject, and we shall merely close with the old one about the trainer who was trying to alibi a very poor race just run by one of his charges.

This steed left the barrier about four lengths after the rest and continued to get no better fast—being just about the furlong post when the others were finishing. Half an hour later his trainer came into the paddock, where he was accosted by a friend of ours. "That was a terrible race your gelding ran," he said. "How come?"

"Oh, didn't you hear?" replied Mr. Alibi. "That gelding was badly cut down during the heat, so what could you expect."

"I watched that heat very closely from start to finish" responded our friend. 'And if your horse was cut down, it must have been on the nose."

Sees Danger In Kissing

Georgia State Bacteriologist Warns Chronic Pyorrhea May Result

DETROIT. — Kissing may be quite the thing to some persons but the time-honored custom is just an unsanitary health menace to Dr. Marvin M. Harris, 30-year-old former resident of Detroit and now bacteriologist for the State of Georgia Health Department, Dr. Harris, here visiting her parents, warns of the danger of losing teeth through too-frequent osculation.

The attractive girl and the amorous male who "feel the love bug nibbling," should beware of promiscuous kissing or they may fall victims to fusopirochetal angina, according to Dr. Harris. The forbidding terms is the medical name for a mouth disease which begins in the gums and spreads to the tonsils.

"It is most frequently transmitted by kissing and brings on chronic pyorrhea," Dr. Harris explained. The teeth become loosened and eventually fall out."

Here and There WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

Canadian Scouts from New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia, to the number of 157, are at present encamped with some 30,000 Scouts gathered at Washington, D.C., for the big National Scout Jamboree being held June 30th to July 9th.

In honor of the Fifth World Jamboree of Boy Scouts to be held in Holland from July 31st to August 13th next, the Netherlands Government has issued special postage stamps of three denominations. A 1½ cent stamp depicts a Dutch Boy Scout on a light green background, a six-cent stamp depicts a drummer against a background of flags of different nations calling the Scouts of the world together, and a 12½ cent stamp portrays the head and shoulders of a curly-headed Dutch Scout with arm outstretched in salute to the youth of the world. The stamps bear the legend "Nederland Wereld Jamboree, 1937."

Stuff and Nonsense

Comforting

At a cricket match one of the batsmen received a ball full in the mouth, breaking a number of teeth. When the return match was being played the unfortunate batsman found himself about to face the same bowler.

"I say," he shouted, "don't go after my teeth this time, will you?"

"No, it's your stumps I'm after now!"

A Weak Argument

The engineer engaged in a railway enterprise in South America was seeking local support for a road and attempted to give the matter point. He asked a native:

"How long does it take to carry your goods to market on mule-back?"

"Three days," was the reply.

"There's the point," said the engineer. "With our road in operation you could take your goods to market and be back home in one day."

"Very good," answered the native "but what would we do with the other two days?"

One Day Slipped By

"Six days' notice, cook? I suppose you mean a week's notice?"

"No, m'm. I forgot to tell you yesterday."

Under Cover

An old lady, being shown over a submarine for the first time, was interested in the gun on the deck.

"Does it get very wet when you go down?" she asked.

"Oh, no mum," said her guide. "You see, when we get the order to submerge, two sailors hold umbrellas over it."

The Hint

Young Harry Brown and Lizzie Jenkins had been to the week-end market, where Harry had bought a young pig and an empty tub. Walking home together, at night, along a lonely country lane, with the pig under one arm and the tub under the other, Harry was surprised to notice that Lizzie had suddenly quickened her pace and was almost running. "'Ere," called Harry after her. "What are you running away like that for?"

"Well, seein' that there's nobody about but us two, I thought maybe you'd try to kiss me," giggled Lizzie over her shoulder.

"How could I, with this 'ere pig under me arm and the tub under t'other?"

"Well," faltered Lizzie, "I was afraid you was thinkin' of putting the pig down and the tub over it."

Curious

Farmer Fuddlemuch: "Yep, we've got all the new-fangled machinery there is. Our latest buy was two milking machines."

City Miss: "How interesting. But tell me, do they really give as good milk as the cows?"

Misunderstood

Brown, driving a sports model, was forced to brake quickly, with the result that the car got out of control for a moment and ended within an inch of a lamp-post on the other side of the road.

A policeman strolled up and remarked: "Well, you got a nice skid there, eh?"

"Pardon me," said Brown, haughtily, "but this lady is my wife."

Serious

Doctor: "Well, madam, what is your ailment?"

Old Lady: "Pains in my arms, doctor. I can hardly lift them over my head, and it's the same with my legs."

Very Much Alive

First-aid Man: "Did you hold a mirror to her face to see if she was still breathing?"

Assistant: "Yes, and she opened

Fly In the Ointment

A farmer who was always complaining was showing the result of fine growing weather and superior skill in cultivation when his visitor said to him: "Well, you ought to be satisfied with such crops as these. There is certainly nothing lacking. You have nothing to kick about this year."

The old farmer stood in a meditating mood for a minute, then replied: "Well, you know, son, such crops as these are pesky hard on the soil."

CANADA

Canada Grows

The average hour sees 25 children born alive in Canada.

The average hour sees 12 people die in Canada.

The average hourly net increase in population is 13 without taking migrations into account.

That is every four and a half minutes, on the average, the population of the Dominion has a net increase of one from natural causes.

It is not always realized that although immigration and emigration are no longer proceeding on a large scale, there is a natural increase in population of about 116,000 per annum. — Toronto Star Weekly.

Horribly Killed

Sunday a Simcoe man was horribly killed when the wheel came off an ancient auto in which he was driving. It suggests that people might far better do without autos at all than drive old used cars in doubtful mechanical condition. — Hamilton Spectator.

Ontario's Highways

After driving several hundred miles over highways in one of the neighboring States of the Union, the Editor of The Farmer's Advocate feels that the Ontario Department of Highways is deserving of a few words of praise. We desire to compliment our own officials because of two policies, particularly, one being the absence of all unnecessary roadside signs, and the other is the ample and dignified highway markings.

We have no criticism to offer concerning our neighbors and their highways. We found them just as careful drivers and just as courteous as the average in Ontario. What we do prefer is the clean, peaceful roadside rather than one marred with a municipality advertising and unnecessary highway signs. Our own Department of Highways has shown good taste in this regard, and it is a policy from which they should not depart.

Withal, Ontario highways are well-marked. The highway number just around the corner, when a turn is necessary, is a very useful and reassurring guide. The curves and danger points on our highways are clearly indicated because the signs are not obscured or blended into a confusing pattern of blatant colors and designs.

Most of all we like the simple, dignified marker with crown imposed saying its the King's Highway. There is something regal about that sign suggesting authority, stability and safety. It is only a metal sign, but we respect it and we like it.—Farmer's Advocate.

Grubs in The Wood

We have heard for some time the marvels of the "electric eye," and now comes, as fruit of painsaking research, the wonder of the "electric ear".

It has long been known that the presence of grubs of destructive insects can play a very serious part in relation to the strength of timber. Today, the British Government's Department of Scientific and Industrial research can detect the presence in wood of these larvae because of means of an ingenious telephone instrument, similar to those used in wireless telephony, the "muffled and peculiar noise made by the writhing of their tiny bodies in the wood can be amplified to such a degree that a trained scientific ear can detect them." — Halifax Herald.

Cars From Afar

The Department of National Revenue issued over 4,000,000 permits for tourist automobiles in 1936.

Most of the 2,800,000 tourist permits issued for cars staying not more than forty-eight hours were used by those living along the border. About 1,200,000 cars from the United States came on sixty-day permits. New York and Michigan license plates were in the majority. Six cars came to Canada from Australia. Some tourists from Ceylon, China, Hongkong and Japan brought their cars. From Europe there came automobiles from Belgium, Germany, France, Italy and Switzerland. Naturally the United Kingdom was well represented. From sixty-five from the West Indies and eighteen from the Philippines. Chile sent one car, four came from Peru, three from Colombia, one from Venezuela, eighty-two cars from Panama, seventy-eight from Mexico, forty-nine cars from Alaska and twenty from Newfoundland. — Canadian National Revenue Review.

Hot Weahter Health Hints

The present widespread heat wave has led Dr. Robert A. Fraser, chief medical director of the New York Life Insurance Company, to issue a health warning, cautioning every one to take simple safeguards that their health may not be impaired by the extreme temperatures.

Dr. Fraser offers ten health hints for hot weather that are easily followed by young and old. They are:

1. Take it easy—don't rush around.
2. Wear a hat out in the sun.
3. Wear cool, loose fitting clothes.
4. Get plenty of rest and sleep.
5. Eat moderately of easily digested foods.
6. Drink plenty of cool (not ice cold) liquids.
7. Exercise moderately.
8. Take frequent tepid (not cold) baths.
9. Do not stay in direct sunshine for long periods.
10. Avoid large meetings in poorly ventilated auditoriums.

"If all of us would observe these rules," Dr. Fraser said, "our general physical condition would be vastly improved and we would be able to withstand hot weather with much less difficulty." — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

"Ologies" For Girls

If girls' schools would add to their courses in philosophy, psychology and biology, thorough courses in roastology, boilogy, stitchology and general domesticology, the divorce courts would probably be emptied in no time. — Windsor Star.

Family Tree

Most people are interested in their family trees. They like to trace their ancestry back and discover whence they came in the hope of discovering some progenitor who distinguished himself — and they usually find one. It gives us a nice feeling to know that some member of the family, no matter how far back, made his or her mark in the world. It confirms our belief in ourselves, and we can bask in reflected glory as we relate to our children and our friends the story of the accomplishments of those from whom we sprang. — Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Sixth-Month Licenses

The request made by the people of Schreiber that they should be allowed a six months' license for their motor cars is one that might be made by the other municipalities of Northern Ontario. In this part of the province a motorist must buy a license for the full 12 months, although there is a large part of the year in which he cannot use his car — unless he lives in some such favored community as the Sault, where the streets are plowed by the civic auhorities. And even in the Sault there are only a limited number of car owners to whom that service is of any value.—Sault Star.

THE EMPIRE

Know The Empire

The suggestion recently of Imperial Conferences for ordinary citizens and their wives has brought out the further suggestion that what is really needed to make the Empire a live conception in the minds of its peoples is the stimulation of Imperial tours for children of school-leaving and university age. The proportion is large of men in city, Provincial and Federal Governments in the Dominions who have never seen either Great Britain or the other parts of the Empire. Even a youthful glimpse of "how the other half lives" would give them such a breadth of mind and knowledge that both political and economic co-operation would be made easier. It would be interesting to know how many British members of both Houses have been out of Britain and out of Europe. — London Sunday

Trees That Thrill

The best known grove of big Douglas firs is that which lies on the Island Highway between Cameron Lake and Alberni. These Cathedral Trees as they have been called, never fail to thrill anyone who passes through them. More than one government has promised that they will be preserved. But governments come and go and nothing is done. Mr. Pattullo cannot celebrate his confirmation in power in a better or more lasting way than by making definite and immediate arrangements to save these trees from destruction. — Vancouver Province.

Ontario Herds Set High Marks

Lead in 50 Per Cent. of Classes In Holstein Cattle Tests

BRAMPTON, Ont.—The May record of performance compiled by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, and released by the Holstein-Friesian Association shows that Ontario herds furnished eight out of the sixteen class leaders for the whole Dominion. Peel and Halton Counties breeders were responsible for three out of the eight.

W. L. McClure of Norval had the high four-year-old, milked twice daily, 365 days, with a production of 18,204 pounds milk, 587 pounds fat; Alex McWinney, the high 305day 4-year-old, and Mathuen Dearing, Palermo, the best producing 3-year-old in the 305-day classification. Another McWinney heifer finished fourth in a class of forty 2-year-olds milked twice daily, with a Roy H. Barker entry from Woodbridge in fifth. W. H. Hoiles of Maple made fifth position in the mature class for 305-day production, and George A. Love of Cheltenham and M. J. Bran, Norval, each scored well toward the top on 3-year-olds milked twice daily. Daniel Lindsay, Brampton, also had a heifer holding sixth position in a class of thirty-nine 2-year-olds milked twice daily for 305 days.

Wheat Jumps

TORONTO. — Market excitement, which has carried Canadian July wheat to within fraction of $1.50 a bushel and has left Chicago July wheat just over $1.25, is the brighter side to the disastrous crop situation in the Canadian West. Farmers in the West who have any wheat to sell are now assured a good price, but, judging by latest reports from the wheat belt, the Canadian crop this year is now certain to touch an all-time low in the history of the West.

Various estimates are still coming out on the yield. The more optimistic are insisting that there are possibilities of a 200,000,000-bushel yield, while the more pessimistic are suggesting that it may finally be cut down to 150,000,000 bushels.

Jack Dempsey's Father Faces Assault Charge

SALT LAKE CITY. — Hyrum Dempsey, 80, father of Jack Dempsey, was accused of assault and battery in a complaint signed by Hannah Lythgoe, 66.

Deputy Sheriff Lee Richardson said Mrs. Lythgoe accused Dempsey of striking her on the nose during an argument over Dempsey's stepdaughter and a boy friend.

Dempsey was released on a $300 bond.

TORONTO. — Direct unemployment relief cost $4,074,805 during the first six months of 1937 compared with $5,002,945 during the first six months of 1936, a reduction of $928,140, Welfare Commissioner Laver stated last week in a report to the Board of Control.

At the end of last month there were 56,730 individuals receiving relief, including 90 men in hostels, as against 74,327 relief recipients one year ago, a drop of 17,597.

Up to the end of June the taxpayers of Toronto paid relief bills totalling $1,324,805 while government contributions totalled $2,750,000. During the first half of last year the city paid $1,512,732 and the governments, $3,490,213.

Eleven Million Women In German Labor Front

BERLIN.—More than 11,000,000 women are included in the ranks of the German Labor Front. This is the organization which has replaced the old trade unions and gathered all the German workers together in the one group.

One of the principal concerns of the women's sections is transferring women from heavy jobs into lighter work, by exchanging them with men. As far as possible this is done without diminution of wages.

Five hundred advisory bureaux for working women have been set up by the German Labor Front throughout the country.

Salary Cuts Restored

TORONTO.—School Boards generally throughout the Province have completely or partially restored the salary cuts imposed on teachers during the past few years, reports at the summer meeting of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation in the Physics Building of the University of Toronto, revealed.

Six months ago the Federation set an objective to secure restoration of these cuts. The 200 members attending the meeting indicated they were greatly encouraged by the action of the School Boards in the matter.

In many of the smaller schools teachers will, as a result, receive a flat $100 or $200 more next year than last year, and in the cases of the larger schools, the percentage of salary cut will be returned by half or completely in most cases.

In Windsor for example, teachers had a 20 per cent. cut, one-half of that will be restored when school opens in the fall. A move has been made for equalization of salaries in the Windsor district with the result that outside municipalities will bring their salary schedule up to that of Windsor City.

The teachers expressed the hope that those municipalities which have made no move in this direction will do so next year.

Maize Crop of Argentine Well Below First Estimate

OTTAWA.—The maize crop of Argentina for 1936-37 is placed at 360,017,000 bushels in the second official estimate received here by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. This, the bureau said, is 11,619,000 bushels below the first estimate by the Argentine Government. Abandoned acreage is now estimated at 3,982,000 acres, against 4,112,000 acres in the first estimate. There are 19,963,000 bushels of wheat still available for export. The bureau said Argentina is not at present a factor in international trading.

Big Plan to Conserve Saskatchewan Waters

SASKATOON.—A plan involving expenditure of about $400,000,000 over a period of five years for conserving the waters of the South and North Saskatchewan rivers followed by reforestation and irrigation, is being seriously considered by Eastern Canada financial interests, P. J. Philpot, of the Saskatoon branch of the Canadian Legion, said here.

Heat Victim Survives

NEW YORK. — Daniel Long, 60 years old, is in Bellevue Hospital with the distinction of having had the highest temperature ever recorded in a human being who survived—109.8. Doctors used oxygen and buckets of ice water to force his temperature down to normal, 98.6, after he had collapsed on the street from the heat.

How Much For a Hair Cut For a Shetland Pony?

LINDSAY.—Bert McLean, Lindsay horse fancier, took his Shetland pony to a barber shop for a hair cut. The barber thought the price for cutting a pony's hair should be a little higher than the regular price, but Bert didn't—finally the pony settled the argument by walking out of the shop.

Speeder is Sentenced to Hear 13 Sermons

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Convicted of reckless driving, A. K. Patterson was under sentence to appear in Magistrate's Court for the next 13 Monday mornings and give a summary of a Sunday sermon. Judge John T. Fisher ordered Paterson also to be prepared to quote the minister's texts or go to jail for 90 days. Patterson was convicted of driving 60 miles an hour on Gandy Bridge, a six-mile span between this city and Tampa.

Commentary on the HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEKS NEWS —

By Peter Randal

Air Tragedy

Tragedy and triumph marked another week in the history of aviation. Tragedy as the American Navy carried on a hopeless search in the vicinity of Howland Island, in mid Pacific, for some trace of the missing Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan. Miss Earhart has been distinguished for her daring flights ever since her successful crossing of the Atlantic and her disappearance on the present venture has been the more tragic from the fact that it was her last great adventure.

Air Triumph

Over the stormy Atlantic, two great flying boats have just completed the first round trip in what may become, in time, a regular passenger route to Europe. Under twenty-four hours is the aim and as soon as the route has been tested under all weather conditions, it is reasonable to expect that the object will be attained. Two points are of particular interest in the Atlantic flights, first, there is the ease wih which the ships performed their tasks and the margin of safety indicated by the fact that the American Clipper, one of the planes inaugurating the service, had sufficient fuel left on completion of the trip for an additional two thousand miles.

Ship of the Future

It is not expected that passengers will be carried for another year and in the meantime, larger and better ships are built on both sides of the Atlantic. Under construction in the Boeing works is a new giant capable of lifting forty tons with motors developing 6,000 horsepower. It will be a three decker with accommodation for seventy three day passengers or forty sleepers. Fuel will be carried in the wings and sponsons while a cat walk through the leading edge will allow engineers free access to the motors while in flight. Based on the cost of Pacific flights at the present time, fares to Europe will probably be around $450 to $500.

Prestige Flight

No content with one flight over the roof of the world, another plan bearing Soviet eagles has completed a flight even more outstanding than the recent one which ended near Vancouver. To the Russians, these flights are much more than isolated attempts at records. They are serious attempts at the establishment of regular world triangular plane service. Every equipment and every source of science is being used to make the effort a success

Trouble at Home

And while Russia carried on her conquest of the air, the outer world hears occasional echoes of internal strife as Stalin continues his blood purge of the army. Charges that army leaders have conspired with Japan seem much more like the truth now in view of recent developments in the Far East. Russia and Japan have suffered minor clashes along the Amur River and the latest news is that Japan is threatening another aggressive campaign against China. Many observers say that the Japanese move is based on their belief in an unprepared Russia unable to come to the aid of the Chinese.

Quarrelsome Family

John Bull is having his troubles in the East. Last week, a Royal Commission recommended the partition of Palestine into three territories as a solution to a problem reaching back over twenty years. The Arabs were to get the largest portion, then a section for the Jews and in between, a British mandated territory containing Jerusalem and other holy places, to form a buffer state separating the two fractions. Neither Arabs nor Jews are satisfied and new outbreaks of violence are expected. The quarrel goes back to tangled war promises at a time when Britain was hard pressed for support in the East. The Arabs who participated in the famous rebellion directed by T. E. Lawrence, were promised independence and a unified Arab state. At the same time, to win Jewish support, the British promised to create a homeland for their race in Palestine. Since that time, the Jewish population has increased from 65,000 to 400,000 in spite of the continuous opposition of the Arabs. Outbreaks have been frequent and the present plan is advanced as a means of separating the races entirely now that it seems impossible for them to live together in any form of peace.

King and Queen Pay State Visit To Welsh Subjects

NEWPORT, Wales.—The King and Queen paid a two-day state visit to Wales last week. This town was in gala attire to greet their majesties, who were met by the Lord Lieutenant of Monmouthshire, Sir Henry Mather-Jackson. Then the King inspected a guard of honor from the Monmouth Regiment while guns of the 83rd Welsh Field Brigade thundered a salute. Brilliant sunshine marked the start of the tour. His Majesty wore the undress uniform of an admiral of the fleet. After a brief stay there, the Royal Party left for Cardiff.

Takes Two-Hour Rest to Give Birth to Child

HOLLYWOOD. — Mrs. Esther Estes, wife of seventy-two-year old Dr. St. Louis Estes, raw food advocate, interrupted her household routine for two hours Saturday to give birth to her eleventh child, a nine-pound girl. Mrs. Estes said her ability to resume work shortly after childbirth was due to health rules. "We eat only raw foods, such as fruits, vegetables and nuts," she said. "We do not serve fish or fowl or meats of animals with bloodstreams.

Sporting Comment

By KEN EDWARDS

It seems that throughout this province of ours at the present time the fisherman holds fast to first place in the true sporting world, and truly fishing is a wonderful sport. The thrill of a four-pound bass tugging for all it's worth and the thrill of bringing him in after the battle is something mighty hard to beat.

Last year a group of five boats pulled in 105 lovely bass of the south point of Thorah Island in Lake Simcoe. That same lot of fishermen expect to do the same thing this year. I hope they do because I happened to be one of their number last year.

They say a dog-fish will just bark like a dog after they are landed. I've caught these but whether or not that is authentic I cannot say.

Maybe some of you fellows like to fish muskies. If so the best place you can try around these parts is Mud Lake, and I don't mean maybe. It's about 12 or 15 miles north-east of Beaverton.

Leaving the old fishing pole on port side for a spell we see that Maxie Baer is angling for an exhibition bout with former champ. Jack Dempsey. "The Dempsey of Broadway versus the Maxie Baer of California and all points west," wouldn't read so badly in bright lights and might tend to swell the old pocketbook once more.

Well, it seems as though Joe Louis the "Chocolate Kid", and Tommy Farr, the British Empire Champion, will settle this August 26. All this business is so perturbing to Max Schmeling who will now have to wait for another year to get a crack at Louis.

Well, guess we better run along now, and don't forget to give those fish lots of line.

Today's column is dedicated to one of our sport followers, Len Williams, the "thrower-inner". Thanks a lot for your helpful sport letter.

So long gang—Ken.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

An Outdoor Exposure Guide

Taken against a white garden wall, with puppies on a bench. Exposure 1/25 second, stop f.11 with folding camera.

WHAT kind of camera is yours? What do you want to photograph? Below is a dependable outdoor exposure guide for average picture subjects.

This guide is for days when the sun is shining. When the day is cloudy, the exposure should be about twice as long and when very dull, about four times as long.

For the chrome type, supersensitive and panatomic films, the guide is good from one hour after sunrise until one hour before sunset. For ordinary film, make the margin 2½ hours.

Why not cut this valuable guide out and paste it in your hat, or something?

John van Guilder.

Foresters at Church At Brampton

On Sunday evening, the Brampton Court of the Independent Order of Foresters held its church service and parade to Grace United Church. Some three hundred and fifty members from Guelph, Woodbridge, Unionville, Oshawa and Toronto, with their Degree Teams in colourful regalia, headed by our Town Band made an impressive spectacle as they marched to the Service conducted by Rev. C. E. J. Cragg, M.A., B.D., whose wonderful address on "Fellowship" made a great impression on the gathering.

Through the courtesy of H.W. the Mayor, represented by R. W. Worthy, Reeve of Brampton, the visitors were invited to gather in Gage Park for refreshments; afterwards Reeve R. W. Worthy, on behalf of the town, welcomed the members and invited them to return to Brampton again soon.

G. A. Mitchell, Supreme Councilman of the I.O.F., in reply, thanked Mr. Worthy for the invitation and kind wishes and asked all present to return on Aug. 11th for the Benefit Concert on behalf of our Town Band, when our Order is bringing some one hundred Juvenile members, assisted by Donald Spence and Bert Sanderson, to provide the entertainment on that evening.

John McMullen, on behalf of the membership in Brampton, expressed his appreciation to the visitors for co-operating in making the church service such a great success.

During the evening members of the Town Council and Officers of the I.O.F., visited Rosalea Park, to inspect the Rosebowl Arena.

At 8.30 p.m. the visitors boarded the motor coaches to return to their homes, every member expressing their appreciation of a wonderful time enjoyed and promising to return on Aug. 11th.

Among the Supreme, H.C., and Officers of the I.O.F. present, were, G. A. Mitchell, Supreme Councilman and Mrs. Mitchell; Mimmo Mitchell, H.C.; the Chief-Rangers of Court Oshawa, Guelph, Woodbridge and many Toronto Courts with their ladies and friends; A. E. Trueman, D.D.S.C.; Sam Graham, H.S.J.C. and J. Shaw, D.D.S.C.

The committee of Court Union 86, Brampton, wish to sincerely thank, our Degree Team, Officers and Members and Lieut. C. C. Buckle and the members of the Town Band for their co-operation in making our Church Service an outstanding success.

New Hospital for Peel County

A $1,500,000 hospital will be constructed by Ontario at Brampton, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said. It will be an isolation hospital for mental-tubercular patients from all Ontario.

Besides the new institution the government is studying plans to enlarge other sanatoria through the province, the Premier said. Free travelling clinics to test for tuberculosis germs will be sent out.

Legislation is expected in the near future which will compel tuberculosis sufferers to undergo treatment.

The new mental hospitals at St. Thomas and Port Arthur will only relieve present congestion and will not take the place of present institutions, he said.

ONE MORE WHITE LIE

(Copy righted)

(All rights reserved)

1915—It was during the time we took up the reserve line at Festubert somewhere about the 20th May. I was detailed to take water up to the K.E.H. and the L.S.H. during the day. I had to get the water from a pump in the village and take the rum jars full of clean water up to the front line and return with the empty jars. I had to repeat this errand and nothing much to report. On the way back on my second trip, I noticed a nice large Tiffin Basket lying outside a dug-out, some one did not want it and the enemy had been putting quite a lot of stuff over and that Tiffin Basket, if there was anything in it should have been inside the dug-out. Well I had my troop's interest at heart and it was just the thing to keep our rations in, so I picked it up and carried to my own dug-out, by the way the Sqn. Commander's dug-out was next to the gap at Willow road running from the village to the reserve line and my dug-out was next to his. There were six of the best in our shack, all from the 4th Troop. As soon as the gang saw me bringing in the basket, J. D. says, What have you got there Billie? only a basket, I thought it would come in handy to carry our rations in, ata boy! I said its pretty heavy, then open her up and let's have a look, talk about Alf's Button; well it was a gift from Heaven, wines, liqueurs, chicken, salads, butter, sliced bread, thermos flask and even to the knives and forks. I said to the gang, I am going to take it back and just at the moment I spoke there was a terrific crash and the guns on each side commenced a dual and the shells were dropping all around us. You can't take the basket back now, you'll get killed, let's wait a bit and see if anybody shouts after it. Well no one came around and the artillery dual eased down a little and we got out to see what was going on and the six of us just looked up to our right front and the city of London Rifles or the 8th Post Office Rifles were going over the top. It was a glorious sight for us just to see an infantry charge, then all of a sudden crash! immediately behind us, and the next thing, we knew all of the six of us were picking ourselves up, with our heads in a muddle. We scrambled back to our dug-out in quick time, we wanted a stimulant after that and by an act of God, the Tiffin Basket and I want to thank the owner of the Basket, that certainly saved six lives. At supper time there were no rations coming up owing to shell fire on the roads, so again we had to resort to the Tiffin Basket. I went out of the dug-out with a chicken sandwich in my hand and the Sqn. Commander happened to be looking out and I asked him if he could eat a chicken and ham sandwich with a little claret or port or whiskey, he said are you dreaming Corporal, I said you need a stimulant after that heavy bombardment, I immediately got him a sandwich and a shot, and every thing after that was fine. Our nerves had been partly shattered after that tremendous row, but after the meal the noble six were fit for anything. During the night I was thinking about the basket, my thought flew to the trenches that I had been through to get up to the front line, why they were not wide enough to take the basket up with us, in case we went up or if we had to attack the same as the Post Office Rifles, the least kit we carried the faster we could run, and the basket was nearly empty by now. So I just took out the food and wine that was left and then I took the basket back where I had found it, but imagine my surprise some of the trench had been blown away. So I placed the basket where it could be picked by some one who would be going back, instead of going up the front line. About six o'clock the next morning I heard an awful speech, whats wrong Mac? Wrong Hell, G-Gad! would you believe it Douglas some son of a gun came around our dug-out and pinched our Tiffin Basket, and our H.Q. Mess was without grub and the dam cheek and impudence they brought the basket back. I looked all over God's Creation for the dam thing yesterday and could not find it. Douglas said do you think it was blown away during that heavy strafe yesterday, Hell No! if it had it would have been around, we would of perhaps found a few chicken bones. Well Mac. I don't think any of my men would do a thing like that, as you know there wasn't much chance of any one moving around yesterday owing to the heavy shells dropping around, with that Mac. goes back to his H.Q. a little way down on our left. I immediately went into my dug-out, I was rather nervous about my Squadron Commander asking me about the Tiffin Basket, so I kept in my dug-out. Just afterwards my Squadron Commander got wounded, and we went up to the front line, I only hope that I shall be forgiven in my misjudgment of picking up a basket.

Postmaster's Stamp Was Tried as an Experiment

Stamps as a postal convenience first were introduced in England in May, 1840, and in June of that year Daniel Webster introduced a resolution in the senate suggesting their use in this country. But it was not until 1847, after postal-reform societies had again and again petitioned congress for stamps and many postmasters had in desperation issued their own, that the authorities in Washington finally consented to a general issue, writes a correspondent in the New York Herald Tribune.

The first postmaster's stamp, that issued by Robert H. Morris, postmaster at New York in 1845, was in reality in the nature of an experiment made at the suggestion of the Postmaster General to convince congress that stamps were feasible, and to make the experiment more general supplies of the New York stamps were furnished the postmasters at Boston, Albany, Philadelphia and Washington for use from their offices. To guard against counterfeiting and as a sure means of identification, Morris or his clerks initialed each stamp in red before selling it.

Following closely in Morris' footsteps, the postmaster at New Haven issued his own stamps, each one signed with his full name "E. A. Mitchell," and at Brattleboro, Vt., the postmaster's initials, "F. N. P.", were a part of the stamp design. The Baltimore stamps were barely long labels with the facsimile signature of the postmaster, "James M. Buchanan," and the values, "5 Cents" or "10 Cents," while the stamps of the Alexandria, Va., office were serially numbered. Other postmasters who got out their own issues were those of Annapolis, Boxcawen, N. H.; Lockport, N. Y.; Millbury, Mass., Providence and St. Louis.

These stamps all came out between 1845 and 1847 but dropped from sight almost immediately upon the appearance of the general issue of the latter year.

Romans Loved Cinnamon; Used It in Their Balms

The strong fragrance of cinnamon greeting our nostrils, gives us pleasure even before we eat the food that it flavors.

The human nose has always responded to this odor and the ancient Romans held it in particular esteem. They used it liberally in their ointments and balms as well as in their cooking, and as the ultimate mark of their appreciation of this spice they set it apart as the incense for sacrificial and ceremonial fires.

When a god was to be appeased, or the shade of a departed spirit was to be honored, it was the perfume of cinnamon wafted heavenward on uprising clouds of smoke that carried the message. No Roman doubted that an odor so pleasing to man could fail to placate the Olympian dieties.

The Roman media of atonement was not buns but bonfires, and their theory was that the more cinnamon consumed, the greater the incense and therefore the greater the pleasure of the diety or the spirit who was being honored.

Robert Cavelier de la Salle

On March 19, 1687, near the Trinity river, Texas, Robert Cavelier de la Salle was murdered by mutinous followers. He had attempted to found a French settlement near Matagorda bay, which he had mistaken for the mouth of the Mississippi, discovered by him in 1682. Disaster after disaster, now culminating in his death, had attended the enterprise. Yet the credit due his former exploit remains undimmed: he had traced the length of a continent's greatest inland waterway, later to become an all-important factor in the development of American travel and communication. Of him the historian Parkman writes: "America owes him an enduring memory; for in this masculine figure she sees the pioneer who guided her to the possession of her richest heritage."

Speed of Comets

The speed of comets, while not perceptible to the casual observer, is much greater than that of the planets, writes Dr. Thomas M. Beck in the Chicago Tribune. Moreover, comets are not limited to any particular part of the sky. They may appear in any part of the heavens and come from any direction. In general they move toward the sun, sweep around it in a wide curve, and then move back in the direction from which they came until they fade into darkness. The most striking thing about them is the fact that as they approach the sun they drag their tails behind them, but as they retreat they push their tails ahead—that is, the tail, instead of following the comet, always points away from the sun.

Cholera Deadly to Swine

Cholera is the most deadly infectious disease of swine. As many as 250 or 300 hogs may be wiped out by it on a large ranch within a few days. It is estimated that this disease causes an annual loss of $25,000,000 to hog raisers in the United States. The symptoms are difficult to describe so that inexperienced stock owners may recognize the disease.

Correction

Referring to an item in our last week's issue in reference to the statement that the Orangemen did not celebrate the 12th in Streetsville because they could not get accommodation here, we wish to state that we were misinformed. We have learned, incidentally, that the management of any park had not been asked if they would supply accommodation for the Orangemen that day. We hasten to make the correction, and hope that no persons have been offended. We believe that the proprietors of the local parks are always willing and anxious to give good service in their line, and their patrons always go away well pleased with the treatment they received.

An Appreciation

Again, St. Andrew's congregation are called upon to part with their beloved pastor and his amiable wife who have both endeared themselves to old and young, not only to his own congregation, but also the village and surrounding country, as far as is known.

And we have to stop and consider what all this means to us who have to remain.

Comparatively speaking, the cities seem ruthless and cruel, used to getting what they want and apt to want a great deal.

For a long succession of years Toronto has claimed a heavy toll from Streetsville. Year after year Streetsville has sent some of her best to swell the city crowds. Meanwhile she has looked on and smiled just as the mother who looks on and smiles, whose sons seek and find fortunes in distant lands. But what mother ever saw her sons leave home without a secret pang ?

Death has been busy in our congregation. The old are passing away and we who are left, grieve because they have left us, for there are few who are left to take up the torch they left to us. However much as we regret our pastor and wife leaving us, we wish them God speed in their new home. —"Presbyterian."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON IV.
GOD PREPARES A PEOPLE.
Exodus 11:4—12:36.
Printed Text Exodus 12:21-28

Golden Text.—The Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a people for his own possession. Deuteronomy 7:6.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING.

Place—The passover feast itself was observed only in the land of Goshen, where the Jews were living, but the final plague of death among all the firstborn of course involved the entire land of Egypt.

Time—B. C. 1498.

21. Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel, and said unto them, Draw out, and take you lambs according to your families, and kill the passover. The word passover is the Hebrew word pesach and means exactly what the English translation indicates, namely, a passing over, with reference to the passing of the angel of death over the homes on whose doorposts blood was sprinkled the night of the exodus.

22. And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop. "Outside of the Pentateuch, hyssop is mentioned only in I Kings 4:33 and Psalm 51:7. The cleansing for which it was used was not only through blood sprinkling with water. Though the plant must have been familiar to Israel in Canaan and at the exodus time, we do not know what was the species of it. From John 19: 29, it may perhaps be inferred that it had a long stalk. The sacred use of it required that it should be fit to be formed into a bunch like a sponge." And dip it in the blood that is in the basin, and strike the lintel and the two side-posts with the blood that is in the basin; and none of you shall go out of the door of his house until the morning. The lintel is supposed to mean a lattice through which it was possible to look in or out of the door.

23. For Jehovah will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side-posts, Jehovah will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you. 24. And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever. The destroyer here is the destroying angel. (Cf. 2 Sam. 24:16; Isa. 37:36).

25. And it shall come to pass, when ye are come to the land which Jehovah will give you, according as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service.

26. And it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service

27. That ye shall say, it is the sacrifice of Jehovah's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. The passover feast was given to Israel to be perpetually kept year after year, so that Israel might never forget the wonderful redemption which God wrought for her by his omnipotent power and by atoning blood in the days when she was helplessly in bondage in a foreign land. The commands to instruct the children in the generations to follow regarding the significance of this memorial feast are especially significant. For the instruction of children, see Ex. 10:2; 13:8; Deut. 4:9; 6:7.

And the people bowed the head and worshipped. 28. And the children of Israel went and did so; as Jehovah had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they. The attitude of the people in worshipping clearly indicates that the whole passover observance on this dreadful, but auspicious occasion was not mechanically but reverently entered into.

Farm Problems

Q. — "Can Feeding change the butterfat tests of milk?" — G. R. Oxford Co.

A. — Yes and No. Cows liberally fed and kept in good condition will test at their normal inherited ability. True, these tests may vary a few points from day to day, but will be very close to an average for a complete lactation period. On the other hand, under feeding, using poor quality feeds or pasturing on poor grass will lower the butterfat test below the inherited ability of the cow. And when any or all of these faulty diets are corrected the test will return to normal, and, in this way, feeding increases the butterfat test by bringing it back to normal but will not permanently increase it beyond this point. (Prof. G. Raithby, Department of Animal Husbandry, O.A.C.)

Q. "Why is iodine necessary in the ration?" — B.T., Bruce Co.

A — Iodine is necessary to prevent goitre in new born calves, colts and lambs and to prevent hairlessness in new born pigs. Feed commercial iodized salt or home mixed iodized salt prepared by mixing one ounce of potassium iodide with 300 pounds of salt. First mix the iodine with about ten pounds of salt and then add this to the remainder. Keep in a dry place and do no mix too much at a time. (Prof. S. Raithby, Dept. of Animal Husbandry, O.A.C.)

Q. "Is it necessary to wash and scald a cream separator bowl twice daily in order to produce a special grade cream?" — R.R., Halton Co.

A — The slime which forms on the separator discs contains large numbers of bacteria and other impurities of milk and if allowed to remain will seriously contaminate fresh milk coming in contact with it. Undoubtedly, the cleanliness of a separator is a factor in production of special grade cream. Then, too, it is useless to expect efficient skimming from a machine that has been standing eight or ten hours with the slime caked between the discs.

Experimental work on the effect of washing the separator after using as compared with washing once a day only, upon cream quality with other factors being equal, resulted in an invariable drop in grade from a special to a No. 1 grade during three days collecting cream. Also these results showed a dirty separator to skim only one-half as efficiently as a clean one. (W. H. Sproule, Prof. of Dairying, O.A.C.

Q. — "Should fresh cream be precooled before mixing with old cream in the storage tank?" — S. B., Huron Co.

A. — In the production of churning cream of high quality it is essential that the natural flavour of cream be maintained. Bacterial growth and fermentation, if allowed to develop bring about abnormal flavours. In order to prevent bacterial growth, temperature is the all important factor. If warm cream after separating be added to the already cooled cream in the storage tank, there will be successive increases in temperature with the resultant development of undesirable flavours and souring. Therefore, it is important to cool each lot of fresh cream to 55 degrees F. before adding it to the storage can that ought to be maintained at 50 degrees F. (W. H. Sproule, Prof. of Dairying, O.A.C.

New Preventitive For Poison Ivy

Toronto Doctor Prepares An Extract Called "Rholigen"

MONTREAL—Preparation of an extract labelled "Rholigen," for prevention and alleviation of poison ivy infection is reported by Dr. A. W. Caulfield of Toronto, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. An authority on skin infections caused by contact with tulip bulbs, ragweed and other such plants, Dr. Caulfield tells of directing his attention to a similar infection resulting from contact with poison ivy.

Research on the subject led him to the conclusion poison ivy dermatitis was caused by lack of normal antibody-like substance. The cause therefore, totally dissimilar to those causing hay-fever, which he states, most probably is due to presence of abnormal antibody.

During his study of the infection he proceeded to prepare an extract of the faction of the poison ivy plant which is soluble in either and take it up in corn oil. This extract he named "Rholigen."

By making tests he found many people not susceptible to poison ivy while others who were showed varying degrees of reaction to the poison. Tests made with the Rholigen extract made it possible to classify the various degrees of infection.

SHOW BOAT PLANS TO USE TELEVISION . . . The exact reason why Charles Winninger, "Captain Henry" of the new Show Boat hour picked his cast so carefully was made clear when his sponsor field a formal application with the National Broadcasting Co. for an option to sponsor radio's first commercial television broadcast. The option application was filed with Roy C. Witmer, vice-president in charge of sales of NBC. Television clauses were included in every contract of the new river show. The application also revealed that the entire new Show Boat cast of 73, consisting of principals, orchestra, chorus and dramatic players, is being decked in costumes reminiscent of 19th Century Mississippi River Show Boat attire, and that spotlights and curtains are being installed to make the weekly radio program and ideal subject for television.

Much interest has been aroused in the past few years over the service the CBC has been giving to the hundreds of men who are following the trails in the far North. On each Saturday evening the CBC has a special program which sends personal messages to these men who are up in the Arctic circle from their friends and relatives in civilization telling them how things are going and how Johnny's cold in and that Sister Sue has a new bicycle or baby another new tooth. Needless to say this service is greatly appreciated by these trappers, miners, soldiers, missionaries, etc. The "Northern Mesenger" as the program is called was originated in 1933 by a suggestion of the commander of the British Naval Expedition who were studying magnetic changes along the North Eastern coast, and were acted on by Lt.-Col. W. Arthur Steel, formerly in charge of the Canadian Radio Commission technical department. Since its inception a total of over 11,000 messages have been sent and each year a great increase is noticed over the previous year. There can be no d[illegible] that this service to the north has been of vast importance to our northern citizens residing a far-flung outposts. It is to be hoped that the new CBC see fit to continue this service.

"Pretty Kitty Kelly," the CBS dramatic series centering around the romantic adventures of a young Irish girl, will be heard over the WABC-Columbia network Mondays through Fridays from 10.00 to 10.15 a.m., EDST, beginning Monday, July 19. The programs are currently broadcast from 1.15 to 1.[illegible] p.m., EDST.

The sketches were introduced over Columbia on March 8th of this year, presenting Kitty Kelly as she arrived in New York from Ireland, friendless in the strange city. Michael Conway, handsome police detective, helps Kitty find a position as a maid in the Park Avenue home of the Van Orpington family. Young Jack Van Orpington falls in love with the Irish lass who has also won the affections of Conway.

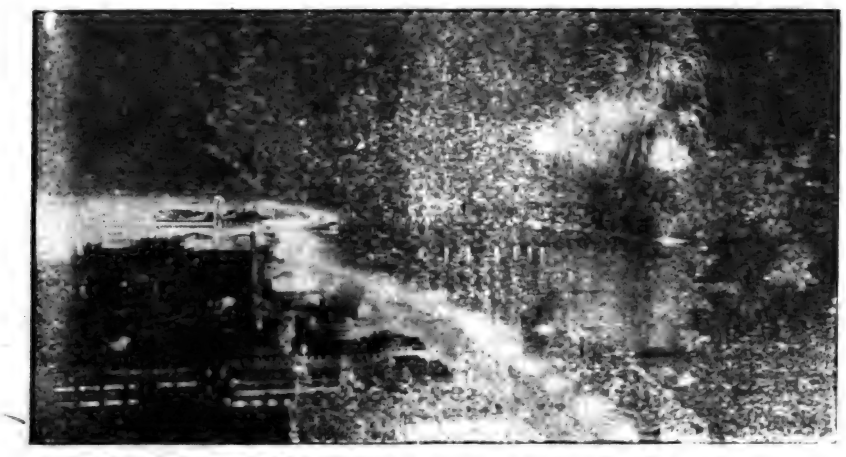
Red-headed Arline Blackburn, a native New Yorker of Irish descent, plays the title role. Clayton Collyer, brother of June Collyer, the movie actress, is heard as Conway, and Richard Kollmar plays the rival suitor. George Dahm of Chicago writes the scripts.

Bryan Field to Report Major Events

New York State's greatest races of 1938 ranging from the Belmont, the Hopeful, and the Futurity to the Jockey Club Gold Cup and the Grand National Steeplechase at Belmont will be broadcast exclusively over the WABC-Columbia network according to an agreement announced between the CBS Department of Sports and the New York Racing Association.

Bryan Field, veteran New York sports writer and generally rated as the nation's outstanding "caller," will be at the microphone whenever Columbia is carrying one of the N. Y.R.A.'s big stake events.

Field has broadcast six Kentucky Derbies, and travelled from coast to coast for oother important stakes.



Racing fans throughout the country have listened to Bryan Field's terse and accurate recountings of turfdom's classics since 1930. Horse racing, easily one of the most technical of all sports, requires a tremendous background and Field acquired his extensive knowledge of the sport through thirteen years of reporting races for one of the nation's biggest dailies.

His terse style lends itself well to the rapid-fire broadcast necessary to tell the story of a horse race as it is being run. His knowledge of horses and colors enables him to identify animals which seem lost to the average onlooker in a rushing mass of horses and dust.

He estimates he has "booted 'em home" for radio audiences on more than 300 occasions.

TERROR MOUNTAIN

By MADELEINE SHARPS BUCHANAN

Three bandits, known as Ike, Lefty and Stutter, seize a trans-continental bus, and force the driver to guide it up a mountainside to a lonely log shack. They are after a secret new explosive formula believed to be in the possession of a passenger, Finley Trump, chemical magnate. Meanwhile, a forest fire, creeping up the mountain, traps the group. The first night, Ike is mysteriously strangled. Circumstances appear to point to one of the passengers as the murderers. Later, the other two bandits are overpowered and bound. Meanwhile, May Lawrence, pretty trained nurse, and Dr. Nick Strand have fallen in love. On the second night, while Trump is guarding Lefty and Stutter, they suddenly leap on him —having surreptitiously cut their bonds.

CHAPTER VI

Trump fought furiously, but he knew he hadn't a chance against the two bandits unless he resorted to strategy. As he struggled, he managed to life one thin leg, and gave the door a vicious kick. It slammed shut, jarring a frying pan from a nail beside the stove. The noise, he hoped, would bring the others to his aid.

Lefty, seizing Trump's gun, made a dash for the open, and got away. But Stutter was too slow. Red Doyle, bounding into the kitchen, had him before he could reach the door.

Lefty's first sensation, upon getting away from the house, was one of glorious freedom. He dashed down the road. He'd find a way out! He wasn't going to sit up there on that mountaintop, like those softies, and wait to be burned alive — or strangled.

He darted into the woods beside the road. But he did not get far. The fire had climbed higher than he had believed possible. As far as he could see, he was surrounded by flames, and the heat was unbearable.

Grasping his gun, he tried another way, across the road. But the fire was even closer there, and hot ash and cinders were blown over him like a thick rain. He was forced to turn back.

He was close to the house again now—too close! But the woods concealed him.

Then, suddenly, he heard something in the brush behind him and crouched. Too late! He felt a searing sensation in his gun hand, and the gun dropped from his limp fingers. There had been a silencer on the weapon that had fired that bullet!

Lefty seized his gun in his other hand, and sprang erect. But just then, something tight and agonizing fastened about his throat.

The gun fell again, and he clawed at it even as he stared, in gasping horror and amazement, at the person who was strangling him. . . .

This horror and amazement were in his eyes when, a short time later, Finley Trump and Nick Strand came upon his body, flat upon the ground, with a rope knotted cruelly about his thick neck.

"He knew the murderer before he died," Strand said as he rose from a brief examination. "And it surprised him. Get the look in his eyes and on his face."

They carried him to the shed and laid him beside Ike.

The house finally became quiet again, but May Lawrence could not sleep. The thought of the fire coming closer and closer, and the horrid knowledge that there was a ruthless murderer in their midst, kept her staring tensely into the darkness.

Finally, at three-thirty, she slipped into her dressing gown and stole through the empty living room toward the kitchen, where Strand had been left on guard over Stutter. She and Nick had plighted their troth on this mountaintop that might soon become their funeral pyre and, with death so closely threatening them, she wanted to be with him every minute that she could.

But Nick was not in the kitchen, where Stutter, bound again, was deep in slumber. Immediately anxious, May went back through the living room to search for him. It was strange for him to desert his post.

Halfway to the front door, she heard a strange sound, a kind of rhythmic tattoo against the side of the house. At the same instant, she stepped upon something, and stumbled. Stooping to pick it up, she saw that it was a man's shoe, with the sole ripped loose and flapping spinelessly. Whose was it? A shiver ran down her spine.

Meanwhile, that horrible tapping against the side of the house continued. It seemed to come from just outside the front door. She must see what was making it. She thought of wild animals driven before the fire, and of Nick not being in the kitchen. . . .

By the time she reached the door, the sound had ceased, but she stepped out, her hand at her throat.

And then—she stood paralyzed, incapable of making a sound!

Finley Trump, in a gayly striped dressing gown, lay on his back beside the door, with his feet against the side of the house. A red bandana was knotted about his neck! It had been his bedroom slippers beating against the logs as he strangled that May heard.

Doctor Strand was bending over him, working at the knotted bandana.

"Dead," he said, his face grim. "Can you stay here a moment, May, while I look about? I must have missed the killer by seconds. I'd gone out for a breath of air."

May nodded, feeling cold and sick. But she was a nurse and, as Strand dashed into the house, she knelt beside the body and made a swift examination.

Strand was back in a few moments.

"Everybody there but little Jenkins," he reported briefly.

"Whoever did this didn't believe in the fire reaching us," said May. "Hopeless people about to die do not murder for great gain. They're after that secret. They even tore up his shoes. Nick, if you have it . . . . oh, I'm so afraid for you!"

"Nothing will happen to me," said Strand quietly. "Have you got that gun, May?"

"Yes." She was shivering, conscious that he had not denied that he had Trump's secret.

"Then wait here a moment. I must see whose bandana that is."

"And that about Amelia Bangor?" whispered May. "I'm worried about her sleeping out in that bus."

As Strand vanished, she walked toward the bus, small revolver in hand, mounted the running board and looked in. Amelia Bangor was not there! The bus was empty!

Apology Is Sent Duke of Windsor

Sir Gerald Wollaston Regrets Criticism of Duke

LONDON, Eng.—The Duke of Windsor has received from Sir Gerald Wollaston, Garter King-of-Arms, a statement of regret for remarks on funeral arrangements for the late King George V.

"ROTTEN STORY"

The Duke was revealed, in a statement to the Evening Standard, to have described Sir Gerald's remarks as "a rotten story."

Sir Gerald, whose chief task as Garter King-of-Arms is to proclaim the accession of a King, told a Lyceum Club dinner:

"Less time was allowed for funeral arrangements to be made than ever before. We had only one week. Although I thought at the time we could not possibly do it, King Edward insisted that the funeral must take place at the end of the week."

Sir Gerald, after the Duke's statement became known, announced that he "mean no sort of disrespect to the Duke of Windsor; if any distress has been caused to the Duke I certainly regret it. . . an entirely unexpected complexion has been put on my words."

REBUKED BY DUKE

The Duke of Windsor, in his statement to the Evening Standard by telephone from Austria, said he "had to speak quite sharply" to Sir Gerald in telling him to expedite his part of the funeral arrangements for his father.

Wollaston referred to that part of the Duke's statement revealing that he, the Duke, called a meeting to discuss arrangements the day after King George's death and that Queen Mary wanted the funeral January 28, 1936, the day it was held.

"I recollect that the Duke did say something to that effect, that it was his mother's wish that the funeral should be concluded in a week in order to avoid prolonging distress to the Royal Family,'" Wollaston said.

"All I said about King George's funeral was simply incidental to my general remarks on the nature of my work."

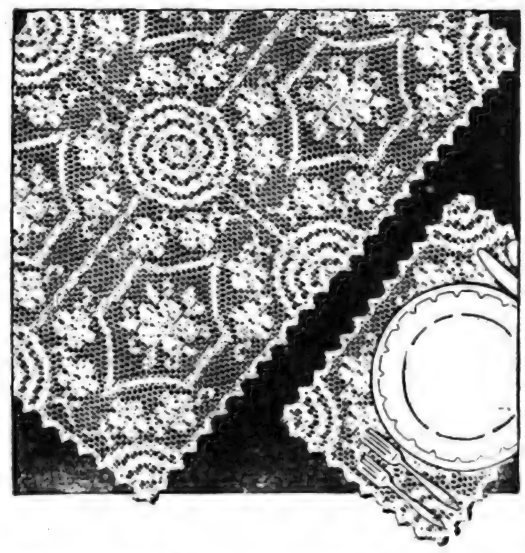
Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express in an editorial declared "the Duke of Windsor defends himself this time, and it is about time, too."

"What is more," it added, "he has done it in first rate style. For long enough every one has taken a free kick at the man who was King. High and low have had their say about him —Now the Duke answers the statements of Sir Gerald Wollaston. . .

"It is a pity this matter had to be the subject of controversy. But do not blame that upon the Duke. He shows, and it is good he does, that in things that concern him personally he is no longer going to let the rest of the world do all the talking."

Stretching Good For Little Tots

Rhythmic, Graceful Movements Best For Young Child



The best exercises for the young child are those which stretch and relax their muscles alternately, and involve rhythmic and graceful movements, says a writer in New Health Magazine. Physical jerks are out of place in a child's curriculum. The key to their movements lies in the care-free dancing and resilient motion of their every-day activities.

Stretching movements are especially beneficial, as they develop the greater activities of the system, and, at the same time, strengthen the ligaments and cords that hold the organs in place. It is easy to include deep breathing with stretching movements and so develop the most important life function of the human being.

Some day we will awaken to the truth of the old saying that "Man shall not live by bread alone," and realize that the indispensable element of our lives is the air we breathe. It is sufficient to state here that the mental qualities and character of a person are now proved to be in direct ratio to the depth and rhythm of his breathing."

Florida has no mountains. The greatest variation in altitude in that State is about 300 feet.

'Standing Room Only' In Trains

When a theatre hangs out a "Standing Room Only" sign, anyone who buys a ticket to see the show expects to stand up.

When a railroad sells a ticket, without hanging up any such warning, the purchaser expects to be able to sit down during his trip.

At any rate that was the contention of a lawyer who sued the New York Central Railroad for $47.80 because he had had to stand in one of its trains all the way from Albany to New York City, a distance of about 150 miles.

The Appellate Term of the New York Supreme Court held last week that the plaintiff had grounds for a damage suit and sent the case back to the Municipal Court, which had dismissed it on the ground that possession of a ticket does not entitle a passenger to a seat, for retrial.

The learned judges of the Appellate Term refrained from declaring that the mere possession of a ticket automatically entitles a passenger on a train to a seat, but they were unanimous in asserting that "the jury would be authorized to find that the plaintiff was not furnished with such reasonable and adequate accommodation as was required in the circumstances."

They based this opinion on the New York Public Service Commissions Law, which requires transportation companies to provide "such service and facilities as shall be sufficient and adequate and in all respects just and reasonable."

Charging a man $2.80 for the privilege of standing up in a train from Albany to New York obviously appeared to the Court to be neither just nor reasonable.—Detroit Free Press.

World Travel

Miss Cora Hind, for long Farm Editor of the Winnipeg Free Press and author of Western crop reports that have enjoyed the highest prestige in grain circles, has lately returned home from a two-year period of world travel that included some 25 countries. While thus engaged she kept her eyes keenly open in the interests of Canada and she had published some of the conclusions reached from these observations.

Among other things, Miss Hind thus advocates: "Consideration of wheat areas, with experts abroad to keep Canada posted on what the world is doing. A well-organized and constantly operating system for selling our wheat."

"Utilizing of markets, however small, with a willingness to buy as well as sell.

"Early consideration of a fresh meat trade with Britain.

"Better status for our Trade Commissioners and close co-operation between the Department of Trade and Commerce and the Intelligence Department.

"Better support on the part of exporters and would-be exporters.

"Finally, persistent, never-ceasing effort to open up the natural resources and enlarge our home markets by increasing our population."

The Ottawa Journal, noting these suggestions, says that it "sounds like a sensible and practical program," which our public men might study with profit. And we can endorse this comment."

A Fine Pudding

Chocolate is a universal favorite at any time of the day, any season of the year. And it reaches its peak of perfection in desserts, particularly puddings. Rich in flavour and color is this delicious chocolate molded pudding. The ingredients which go into it tell you that it is nourishing and healthful and the relish with which it is consumed tells you that it is tasty.

It's attractive looking too with its cunning garnish of whipped cream. Serve it soon an destablish it as a favorite in your home.

Chocolate Velvet Cream

1 square unsweetened chocolate.
1 cup milk.
1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
1-8 teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
I cup heavy cream
½ teaspoon vanilla.

Add chocolate to 3-4 cup milk and heat in double boiler. Soak gelatin in remaining ¼ cup milk 5 minutes. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Add gelatin, salt and sugar and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Cool. Add cream and vanilla. Chill until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Turn into large mold, chill until firm, then unmold and keep in refrigerator until served. Garnish with whipped cream. Sprinkle with chopped blanched almonds, or grate chocolate over top, if desired. Serves six.

Conquest of England

New York Times—Every once in a while some British purist or ancient sounds a warning against the ravages of American slang in the inviolate island. His cause is hopeless. Even in girls' schools, which might be thought the last defence of the proprieties and pedantries of speech, the keen humorous immigrant has made his way. At the annual conference of the Association of Head Mistresses a high school teacher said that modern life is so tiring that the younger generation wants something soothing and relaxing. They are bored by sentences from the classics "whereas slick Americanisms meet their need and are far more effective." One teacher thought "debunk" was an excellent word and defied any one to find a better. She recalled that not so long ago a head mistress would have been fired if she had been guilty of saying "bus." Evidently she believes in selective slang, for she didn't "think children ought to say to their mothers 'O.K., big baby'."

Pay Data Will Cover 29,000,000

WASHINGTON — The Social Security Board will begin receiving from employers this week the most comprehensive data on employment and wages ever gathered in the United States.

The old age pension section of the Social Security Act requires employers to file a return as of June 30 on salary and wages paid to employees.

From these returns the board will know how many days each of the 29,000,000 individuals holding account numbers worked in the first six months of the year and how much they were paid.

Even Hot Dogs Are Imported Now

NEW YORK —Imported hot dogs —from Finland—have just found their way to the shelves of some of the fancier delicatessens and grocery stores. They are much larger and longer than domestic frankfurters. Their unusual size makes them especially suitable for frankfurter recipes that demand stuffing. One of these, "frankfurters with apple," calls for boiling the "franks", splitting and stuffing them with chopped apple, and wrapping a strip of bacon about the combination. The "franks" are then boiled.

Ice Cream Devils—The village of Boddam, near Peterhead, Scotland, has been branded as "a hell upon earth on Sundays"—because its ice-cream and tea shops are kept open.

Similar to the Middle School Chemistry but omitting some industrial methods. The chemistry of soils and fertilizers is stressed. The mathematics and theory of the Babcock Test and loctometer are discussed. There is a section on Animal Husbandry OR Horticulture. Selection is made according to locality.

The time required is three forty minute periods per week or the equivalent thereof in both third and fourth year work.

Special grants are made by the department to cover the cost of special equipment, etc.

DESPAIR

"It is impossible for that man to despair who remembers that his Helper is omnipotent."—Jeremy Taylor.

"Remember thou canst be brought into no condition be it ever so severe, where Love has not been before thee, and where its tender lesson is not waiting thee. Therefore despair not nor murmur for that which seeketh to save, to heal, and to deliver, will guide thee if thou seekest this guidance."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"The fact that God has prohibited despair gives misfortune the right to hope all things, and leaves hope free to dare all things."—Mad Swetchine.

"He that despairs measures Providence by his own little contracted model, and limits infinite power to finite apprehensions.—South.

"He that despairs degrades the Deity, and seems to intimate that He is insufficient, or not just to His word; in vain hath he read the Scriptures, the world, and man."—Feltham.

ENGAGEMENTS

Hothem, Victoria, B.C., the marriage to take place on July 30th at St. Mary's Abbott's Church, West Kensington, England.

Castle of Crusader Is Old Belgian Landmark

Year in and year out Bouillon, Belgium entertains visitors to see the ancestral castle of Godfrey of Bouillon, one of the most famous of the Crusaders and owner of a miraculous sword, which was supposed to fly out of its scabbard automatically and slay infidels on sight.

The castle, which dominates the village, was old even when Godfrey went there over 800 years ago to be duke of the section, with Bouillon as the capital. He did not remain long however, for in 1096 he joined the first Crusade to recover the Holy Sepulchre, fighting with valor at the storming of Jerusalem in 1099.

The same year Godfrey was elected king of Jerusalem, but he refused that title and took instead the one of Defender of the Holy Sepulchre. Then, presumably with the help of his miraculous sword, which was later enshrined, he completed the conquest of the Holy Land by defeating the Sultan of Egypt, but never lived to return to Belgium for he died a year later.

Bouillon has other historic associations apart from those with Godfrey de Bouillon. Napoleon III stayed in the Hotel de la Poste there after he was defeated at Sedan, and Voltaire, Lafayette, the Empress Josephine, Victor Hugo and many others have visited the town.

Sponges Reproduce Like Certain Kinds of Fish

Sponges reproduce in a manner somewhat comparable with certain fish. Sponges have no lungs. The sponges we are familiar with are merely the skeletons of their living counterparts after the flesh is removed. They can breed and live only in warm water, the sponge capital of this country being Tarpon Springs, Florida.

The largest sponge ever known, according to a writer in the Los Angeles Times, measured about eight feet in diameter, but the largest commerical sponge is of the order of three feet in diameter. One of the latter, it is estimated, will soak up almost a ton of water, or well over 200 gallons.

A sponge authority says the most interesting thing about the animal is its prodigious ability to make currents in the water it inhabits. In life the space and orifices seen in the bath sponge are filled with cells separated by tiny canals. The canals are lined with minute whip-like cells which keep the food-bearing water flowing in and out of the animal in a strong current.

Red Flag

Since 1791 the Red Flag has symbolized revolution. By a decree of the National Assembly then sitting in Paris, the waving of a red flag was to be the final warning to a disorderly mob before the National Guard opened fire. It was flourished that year on the Champ de Mars; the mob did not disperse; several were killed; and the Red Flag became their symbol. It was first hoisted in England by the mutinous sailors at the Nore in 1797. Russia was the first country to adopt it as the national flag though the idea was suggested in the Second French Republic in 1848. Lamartine, the poet and Liberal leader, rejected the proposal, saying: "The Tricolor has been carried in triumph round the world. The Red Flag has only been carried in shame round the Champs de Mars."

His New Name

Every revolution throws up some curious quirks in human nature. In the French revolution they abolished nobility, prohibited religion and made a new calendar for themselves, and the story of M. de Saint-Janvier shows how all three worked out in practice. They abolished the "de" in his name because it smacked of nobility; the "Saint," because it reminded of religion; and the "Janvier" (January) because they had changed the calendar; so his name went down on the records as: "Citizen Nivoso, formerly De Saint-Janvier."

Chows Good Sledge Dogs

Natives of Northern China, born and reared to draw sledges over frozen wastes, the chow's steadfast, purposeful eye is indicative of their inbred ability to keep their gaze on the trail and their minds on the destination ahead. They have an amazing instinct to find their way through a country that is entirely new to them; and if they become separated from their masters in a crowd, they do not become confused as many dogs do, running this way and that, but very calmly and confidently thread their way through the throng until they find the man for whom they are looking.

Anthrax

Anthrax is an acute contagious disease of cattle and other animals. It may even affect man. In live stock it takes the form of acute blood poisoning. Men who handle green hides often get anthrax in the form of a skin disease that leads to a type of boils.

Difficult to stamp out, the germs that cause anthrax may lie dormant for years in the soil. The disease is highly contagious.

Local Boys Win Twice In One Week

By Alex Grabb

WANTED

400 or 500 people to support the Streetsville Juveniles at Mimico on the 2nd of August and at Woodgreen Park on the 5th.

We've shown you some of our stuff by winning five straight games, bringing us equal to Woodgreen in second place. We want you to show us some of your stuff by giving us the support we need to be in first place, so don't forget, we go to Mimico on the 2nd and Woodgreen on the fifth.

And while we're on it, there'll be a home game on Thursday night, when we play St. Vincent's. Ask those who've been to our other home games if it's worth coming to see, and then come to see for yourself.

In case you've forgotten the personnel of this great little team of ours, we'll give it to you: Bill Evans (goalie), Schnurr (Captain), Longworth, Reddick, Rice, Walterhouse, Wilson, Reid, Herrin, Pinkney, Russ Evans, Joe Golfetta, Varey.

Since the last issue we've played two games against two strong teams. Last Saturday, Brampton was taken into camp by a score of 11-6, and on Monday, Woodgreen, last year's champs, like last year's kisses, forgot to fizz, and lost to us 8-3, in their third defeat of the season. The spectators were enthusiastic over the clean passing attack which brought the home lads to victory over two much heavier teams.

We've been playing the last two or three games short-handed again, as Rice is laid up by injuries received playing against Mimico. The team wishes him a speedy recovery, and hopes that he'll soon be in as fine shape as he was before.

ALEX GRABB.

Letter to the Editor

Streetsville, July 28

Dear Editor

Through the medium of your paper I wish to call the attention of local sport fans to the excellent lacrosse that is being played here this year. Clever stick-handling, beautiful team - play and clean sport have featured the games so far. The Brampton papers were lavish in their praise of our boys—all local boys, too, when they won in overtime against Brampton. The two home games since then, were also well-earned victories. All the boys played well, but particularly noticeable was the skill of Longworth, Wilson and Redick on the attack and Schnurr & Walterhouse on the defence. Bill Evans in goal not only stops plenty but directs his team play in an admirable way. Be sure to see Toronto St. Vincents here on Thursday (to-night) seven to nine o'clock, and go with them when they play away.

Yours truly
C. P. MacARTHUR

The Open Column

The Lorne Scots Regiment put on a great field day in Brampton on Saturday, but, like the party that "Smarty" held, nobody came, or practically nobody. Pipers and dancers tooted and pranced before a very minimum crowd, which just goes to show that you have to advertise, and do it in the right way. The entertainment was one of the best, and one of the most complete that has been held in the county town for some time past. There was something doing all the time, and even to a non-Scot the show was interesting. There were plenty of competitors but few spectators, probably because the regiment had thought that everybody in Peel understood Highland games.

Frankly, before Saturday afternoon, we knew little about Highland games, and cared rather less. We didn't even know what a pibroch was. We know about pibrochs now, but we still don't give a hoot, or "hoot mon", but we'd go to the same show again if only to see the gentleman in the fancy underwear toss the caber. The sight of any man staggering about with a half-grown telephone pole, just for the fun of the thing, is highly amusing. But we would suggest to the Lorne Scots that the next Highland games they put on, the public had better be informed about what is going to happen, and how it is going to be done.

People in Peel County may think that they have a tough lot, but we recommend the hills of Mulmur to the discontented who would like to become pleased with their own lots. Over the week-end we had a trip to the scene of Friday's murder. The country is built entirely on edge, and the roads would receive favourable mention as cow-paths in most parts of Peel, but would be severely frowned upon as arteries of motor traffic.

Crops, naturally, are hard to grow and harder to reap on the up-and-down fields, and living is a struggle from one year's end to the next. Because the people have little money to spend on improvements, the Council of the district cannot afford to build good roads and Hydro is an undreamed of luxury to most of the farmers.

There is still a lot to be desired of human nature when people will drive over hills such as those of the northern part of Dufferin County to stand and gape at a house in which a murder has been committed. On Sunday, some of the hill-folk of Mulmur not many of them, we must admit, drove to the farm on which Mrs. Ephraim Lesuck was killed, and lolled about the place, gazing at the empty house. They had no business there, could gain nothing by visiting the house, yet there they were, sordid curiosity written over their faces.

Ideas very much parallel to ours were voiced by Mr. Cherry, president of the Provincial Council of Boy Scouts, when the Scout reserve at Acton was opened last week. Mr. Cherry suggested that, by a knowledge of all the tools and all the methods of all ages, from the Stone Age to the present day, an ideal social economy could be founded. Mr. Cherry thinks that, when the human race reaches a more ideal stage of evolution, farmers and scientists will be working side by side, each using the tools which will do their work with the least drain upon the resources of the world. In other words, the farm will have abandoned the tractor and the truck for slower but less costly horse and wagon, and the race as a whole, instead of squandering natural resources in the form of gasoline and coal, will find its pleasures at home, instead of a hundred or a thousand miles away.

"Jesus presented the ideal of God better than could any man whose origin was less spiritual. By His obedience to God, He demonstrated more spiritually than all others the principle of being. Hence the force of His admonition, 'If ye love me, keep my commandments'."—Mary Baker Eddy.

TORONTO MAN FORGAVE DEBTORS

Made Many Bequests; Local People Interested

When Benjamin Apthorp Gould, Toronto broker, died on June 23 last, he left an estate valued at $206,151.85, apportioned largely as follows:

$164,387 in bank and other stocks, $16,900 in life insurance; $11,785 in book debts and promissory notes; $1,825 in securities; $4,921 in household furniture, and $19,000 in a home at 126 Warren road. In his will he appoints a brother, B. A. G. Thorndike, of Massauchusetts, as executor, and devises as follows:

Cancels notes owed by certain business friends, including one for $30,000, and instructs that the executor shall not press for the repayment of the loan to work hardship on the debtor; transfers 7,500 shares of the McCarthy Milling Co., Ltd., to William H. McCarthy; leaves Frances B. Williams $10,000 "for the way she has cared for me," stipulating that if the legatee is not in the employ of the family at the time of his demise the legacy be cut to $5,000; leaves $2,500 to Percy Dean, his butler, with the same stipulation.

The residue of the estate is to be divided equally among the children of his sister, the late Mary Quincy Gould. Testator adds that he be cremated and that no religious ceremony be held.

ADVERTIZING PAYS—TRY IT!

SLICED VERY THIN

By Sixbits

"No Matter How Thin You Slice It — It's Still Bologney"

With the name "Seven-up" appearing frequently on our streets and in our newspapers (Advt.) it might not be inappropriate if we turned over the dump of our memory and tried to dig up the ancient story about that pastime. We think it was Irvin Cobb that told us first, but we make no apologies for that as it has always been our policy to try and steal from the best sources.

And that reminds us—after the Great War was over, a friend of ours who was mixed up in that affair informed us that during the four years he was overseas he tried countless times to tell this tale but never could remember how it went.

• • • •

Of course stories that require explanation generally fall as flat as pit on a plate, in view of the fact that the illustrious sport of Seven-up seems to be widely unknown in these degenerate days, it might be as well if we told you that there are five ways of scoring a point in the game; one each for high, jack and game; one for the player who plays low; and also, if the non-dealer doesn't like the trump turned up he can "beg" for it to be changed—and the dealer, refusing to make such change, gives his opponent a point instead.

• • • •

So now, after all this wordiness, let's try and get started. It was down in the hill-billy country in the south, and Lafe Hawkins had been hauled into court on a charge of assault, battery, mayhem and attempt to murder Lem Yokum.

• • • •

Lem was a sorry sight indeed as the judge looked him over—in fact he appeared as if he had received the going-over of his life.

• • • •

"Lafe Hawkins," said the judge sternly, "thar before ye stands the evidence of what ye done. What have ye got to say for yourself, if anything?"

• • • •

"Well, jedge, it's a sad story," began the defendant. "It happened this-away. Lem and me had been a-settin' in the back room of the tavern, a-playin' of Seven-up—seven p'ints to the game—and two bits on every game.

• • • •

"I had been a-losin' steady all afternoon, till I were down to my last two-bits in the world. And then along come this game and the score stood six for me, one for Lem.

• • • •

"It were my deal, so I dole the cards, and turned up trump. Lem begged—so I gin him one, and the play began."

• • • •

He flang his ace—and I played my tray for low. He flang his king—I played my ten. He flang his queen—and I played the jack."

• • • •

"And then, jedge, then—the mizzable skunk flang his deuce and I hit him."

• • • •

The suggestion is being put forth that the Athletic Commission—in future boxing bouts—should be prepared to over-rule the decision of judges, or referee, in case they think that anything is wrong with same.

• • • •

Which, with due apologies to everybody concerned, certainly sounds screwey to us. What is the use of having officials in charge of a bout if their word is not to be taken—and what control can they hope to have if they are in there knowing that their decision may be reversed?

• • • •

If the Commissioners are better judges of who won or lost a fight then why, in the name of common sense, not let them do the judging right from the start?

• • • •

It all sounds too much like what appears to be happening in the vicinity of Queen's Park. A man is put in charge of a department, and is supposed to be in control of it.

• • • •

But if he makes a decision that doesn't meet with the approval of certain quarters, along comes the Big Head Man and cancels that decision with no more hesitancy than if he was telling an office boy to head in.

• • • •

And the nominal chief of the department has to take it—and try and like it—or else.

• • • •

It may work all right in politics—for a while—but let's try and keep it out of sport—or one of these days there won't be any sport left.

HAVE YOU HEARD

THE OPTIMIST

I sing a song to the Optimist,
To the man that is brave and strong,
Who keeps his head when things go right,
And smiles when things go wrong.

I am proud of the genial Optimist,
His radiant voice an dspeech;
He helps smooth the rugged path
Of all within his reach.

I like the way of the Optimist
Who looks for the bright an dthe best
He scatters sunshine as he goes
And leaves his fellows blest.

I am glad to meet the Optimist,
With his message of good cheer;
He carries hope and confidence
To those assailed by fear.

So here's a song to the Optimist
Who joyously works and sings
And daily shows this weary world
The way to better things. —

—Grenville Kleiser

A spectacular feature of the Coronation Year Jamboree of the Scouts and Cubs of Winnipeg was a living Coronation Crown, composed of 700 Wolf Cubs Another feature was a great "Scout World Friendship Wheel the living Scout spokes of which, representing the different Scouting countries of the world, revolved, singing, about a figure representing the Scouts' patron saint, St. George. Continued evidence of the practical value of Boy Scout training recently brought the gift of headquarters buildings to the Scout Troops of three Ontario towns. A new club house in Agricultural Park, Owen Sound was presented by the Town Council and formally opened by His Worship Mayor Jackson. At Sarnia a new Scout home, to be known as Coronation Hall, was presented the local Scout Association by Mrs. W. J. Hanna, and at Tillsonburg the Bell Telephone Co were the donors of a building on condition that the Scouts removed it to a site given by Miss Cora Anderson.

An experimental camp for sightless Boy Scouts of the Scout troop of the Blind School, of Behala, Calcutta, was counted a promising success. The 19 blind lads, in groups of five, were in charge of "sighted" Scouts, and took care of all camp details except the cooking. A three mile hike was one of the Scouting experiences greatly enjoyed by the boys. Because of the tidiness of the camp, and the smart appearance of the boys, visitors at first did not recognize that the Boy Scouts were sightless.

"Smiling Mixture" is a medicinal novelty at the Rosemary Convalescent Home for Boy Scouts at Herne Bay, England. Peach Patented; It's a 'Bud Sport'

Combines High Quality and Early Ripening, Says Owner

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. — For three years leading horticulturists and fruitgrowers in general have been on the alert for, and continually trying to propagate, new varieties which will more adequately fill the various requirements of the fruit-growing industry. Their efforts have met with a great deal of success, and in the realm of seed fruits, such as apples and pears, have been augmented by the occurrence of several sport varieties which have been of real value to the industry. However, in the industry of peach growing new varieties have been developed by deliberate or accidental cross-pollination which resulted in seedlings with the good qualities of two parents combined in one new variety. A distinct, natural bud sport has very rarely, if ever, occurred, until recently.

Nature has at last produced such a variety. A bud sport with the combination of excellent quality and early ripening. The discovery was made in the orchards of C. Howard Fisher and Sons, Queenston.

On August 9, 1934, Mr. Fisher was walking through one of his orchards, a block of 500 trees of Valiant peaches, when he noticed one limb on one tree bent over the ground with the weight of thirty-six large, ripe peaches while the rest of the peaches on the tree were green.

The limb was examined carefully to make sure that this early ripening was not caused by mechanical injury or disease. When it was found to be perfectly sound and healthy Mr. Fisher concluded that it could only be that rare phenomenon in the peach industry—a bud sport.

The peaches were large, yellow-fleshed, free-stone peaches of excellent quality with a deep red blush covering over half the surface. They had all the good qualities of the parent variety, Valiant, and ripened three weeks earlier.

A propagation test was started immediately to be sure that this early ripening characteristic would be carried into future generations by the buds from this sport limb. A two-year-old Valiant tree was top-worked with twelve buds from the parent limb in September, 1934. These buds grew and developed well in 1935, and in 1936 produced fifty peaches of the same early season and good quality as those found on the parent limb in 1934. The original limb bore a heavy crop in 1935 and 1936.

As stated, this peach ripens three weeks ahead of the Valiant, and nearly two weeks ahead of the season of the earliest varieties of good-quality peaches now being planted commercially. Its value is the fact that it extends the season for harvesting quality peaches from five weeks to seven weeks.

Mr. Fisher has patented the variety under the name of the Fisher peach, and is having it propagated as fast as possible with a view to making it available as early as possible to commercial growers—probably in the spring of 1938.

The Fisher Peach is hardy, vigorous grower and self pollinating.

When Lightning Strikes the Barn

Cover Horses' Heads With A Blanket—Then Animals Can Be Led To Safety

From Western Ontario came the story of a barn struck by lightning. Apparently the fire following did not burn as rapidly as usual, and there was rain soon after which may have helped matters. There was time for several neighbors to gather and help take a few things from the building, but the story says chief difficulty was in getting the horses out. The old rule is to throw something over the head of a horse in a state of fear and the animal can then be led to safety.

Four horses were taken out of that burning barn, but two of them returned and were lost, and in doing so they were acting just the same as a good many other horses have done on similar occasions. And that brings up the old question of why a horse returns to its stall even when the barn is on fire! That they will do it is not open to question because it has been done so frequently, but why it is done is not so clear.

The most satisfactory explanation we have encountered is that the horse regards the stall as a home, and when there is a great deal of confusion as in the time of a fire the horse wants to go home. The feeling is claimed to be much the same as that possessed by a child when it comes on night or when there is danger—it wants to go home.

We recall having seen a blind horse on a farm. It was seven years old and had been blind for four years. It went from pasture near the bushland along a path across a bridge and then along the lane toward the barn. Entering the barn yard the blind horse passed between two buildings and then went to the far side of the main barn, passed five other stalls and entered the sixth from the door, and that was where it belonged. The strange thing is the other horses were not coming up from pasture at the time, but the blind horse quite often came in by itself and went without error to its stall. That animal felt it was at home in its own stall.

The average farm horse spends a good many hours each and every week in its stall, particularly when the summer season is over. It is part of the daily routine going in there when work is done and having the harness removed. It is fed and cleaned there, and as far as an animal can have feeling, we believe the "home" feeling would be centered in its stall. And that is why it wants to get back there even if the barn is on fire.—Peterborough Examiner.

A Dutiful Son

George Bedard, a Ningara Falls youth, was fatally injured in a collision between a truck and a street car. At the inquest into his death it was stated that the last words the boy spoke were: "What will mother think?"

Those four words convey a world of meaning. They show that the ill-fated youth was devoted to his mother and that is sufficient proof that he must have been an obedient son, one who would cause his parents no anxiety if he could help it. There would be much less worry in the homes today if youth generally showed similar concern for their parents.

How many sons and daughters tell their mother where they are going on leaving the house of an evening? If they don't do it, it is a practice they should follow.

How many sons and daughters arrive home three or four o'clock in the morning after attending a show or a dance at a distant point without as much as asking themselves: "What will mother think?" Perhaps poor mother had been worrying half the night, wondering whether her son or daughter had been in an accident because he or she stayed out so late (or should we say early?).

Young people would get into less trouble and cause fewer heart-breaks for their parents if they got into the habit of asking themselves: "What will mother think?"—The Kitchener Record.

The $20 Car

Three Windsor boys bought a 1923 automobile for which they paid $20.

The same three Windsor boys were taken to the hospital, one with concussion, the others with dislocated shoulder and bruises.

Buying an old car for $20 does not come under the head of news, because it has been done so often before. We dare say young fellows have had what they call "a lot of fun" with some of those old cars.

No one wants to interfere with that part of it, but there is an element of danger in these old rattletraps. As a rule they are worn out; they have a good many mechanical defects and they have poor tires. Often enough the brake lining is worn out. The fact that this one in Windsor was sold for $20 is plain enough evidence that it was ready for the scrap heap.—Peterborough Examiner.

How To Be Happy

Ten New England couples who have lived happily, married from 50 to 70 years, asked how they did it, provided ten reasons:

1. Learn to operate on a 50-50 basis;
2. Be honest;
3. Be tolerant;
4. Be companionable;
5. Work hard;
6. Strive for mutual understanding.
7. Try to please each other;
8. Keep your own individuality;
9. Be loyal;
10. Be thoughtful.

Followed by all married couples that decalogue would soon put the divorce mills out of business.— St. Catharines Standard.

Due To Speed

Police Chief Smith of Winnipeg gives it as his conviction that the majority of automobile accidents are caused by speed. Many others in a position to know the facts agree with him. The higher the speed the greater the liability of something going amiss the greater the liability of loss, of control, and the more disastrous the consequences of collision.

Chief Smith would do away with high speed menace by requiring the manufacturers to put governors on all their cars which would prevent anyone exceeding 50 miles an hour, which is now the legal limit in Ontario. It is not exactly a new idea but it has merit. Rarely is there occasion for driving faster than 50 miles and usually those rare emergencies are caused by speed itself.

Except for the very few no pleasure is added to driving by stepping the rate up beyond 50. The necessity is almost always imaginary. It is undesirable that anyone should endanger others by excessive speed. It would be impossible under Chief Smith's plan.—Toronto Telegram.

Dogs in the City

The extent to which dogs and cats have become the favored pets of human beings is shown in the establishment in the larger cities of elaborate hospitals for animals and even the construction of impressive burial places where the pets may be shown the deference usually reserved for the dead of the human species. . .

Dog fanciers today are confronted with a great handicap in their hobby. It is difficult to protect the animals from accidental death if they try to avail themselves of the freedom that they naturally crave. The motor car has made it virtually impossible to permit dogs any freedom on the streets and the death toll is exceedingly heavy.

It would be a grand situation if all dog owners had places in the country where the pets could be offered a life that is suitable to their natures. The restrictions of the city are deadly for dogs but it is an expensive recreation to have to buy a place in the country to exercise the dog.—The Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Poison Ivy

The Ontario Department of Agriculture will sponsor a drive on poison ivy, through the District Agricultural representatives. Poison ivy is a noxious weed and as such must be destroyed. It would be well to have all weed inspectors of the country instructed as to the appearance and character of this weed, so that it may be eliminated from the list of nature hazards that man is compelled to endure.

This campaign will be of interest to a number of Chathamites in a certain district of the city where several children, and older people, have already become affected. But the inspectors cannot do it all. Persons who recognize poison ivy growing in the city limits, or in any part of the county, should immediately notify the proper authorities.—Chatham News.

To the Editor

A certain Mr. Charles Hooper, of Coeur D'Alene, Ida., has created a peculiar record. He is the world's champion writer of "letters to the editor." To date he has written 78,000 such missives, and these have been sent, not only to editors in the U.S., but also to France, Germany, Italy and Spain. All letters are written in the language of the country in which they are printed.

It is easy to incur the criticism of being a busybody merely by writing to editors, but Mr. Hooper doesn't care. He knows why newspapers devote columns to letters— the reason being that people like an open forum for discussion—and he has decided to make use of them. It is better than airing one's views around a stove. We take off our hats to Mr. Hooper.—Hamilton Spectator.

Characteristic

"As far as women go," says Dorothy Dix, "men will always be unfathomable." That's chiefly because a woman thinks it's a violation of the law not to answer the telephone immediately, while mere man grunts, wheezes, stalls, looks out the window, picks his teeth, straightens his tie and chews off a couple of hangnails before lifting the receiver. They are built that way—both of 'em. —Windsor Star.

THE EMPIRE

Barrie's Fortune

Although he gave much money away the late Sir James Barrie lived so frugally that he is expected to leave a large fortune. For over 30 years his plays brought him handsome royalties.

Of his contemporaries Hall Caine left over £200,000, Rudyard Kipling, £155,000, Stanley Weyman, £100,000, Hardy, £91,000, Galsworthy, £88,000, George Moore £75,000, Charles Garvice, £71,000, and Conan Doyle, £63,000.

Rider Haggard left £61,000, Arnold Bennett £40,000, Chesterton £28,000, W. J. Locke, £24,000, Marie Corelli, £24,000, and Conrad £20,000.

The largest literary fortune was Victor Hugo's £300,000. Dickens died worth £80,000.—News of the World.

West Indian English

Now, if we honestly admit that the general English as spoken by the masses in these British West Indian Islands is unsatisfactory, then it behoves those of us with any influence, however obscure, to assume some responsibility to bring about a way of speaking the English language, which is undoubtedly, when well spoken, the best in the world. It should, however, be acknowledged that it seems impossible to change the language spoken by a people for more than a century; local experience with the bilingual French patios and English amply demonstrates present conditions. The majority, therefore, can only become, and do remain, bilingual. But is not "English, grammatical English," one of our aims and concern?—Dominica Tribune.

The amount of wheat . . to Canadian livestock and poultry during the crop season 1936-37 is estimated preliminarily at 12,774,000 bushels as compared with 20,939,000 bushels in the 1935-36 season.

Versatile Child a Credit to Parents

Make the child versatile. If you do this, you are being a fairy godmother indeed.

Most children run on a track. They go to school, know how to dry dishes or rake grass, dress themselves passably well and hold a fork correctly when they eat.

Perhaps they take music or dancing, and know how to skate or catch a ball. But allowing for occasional permissions to attempt the unusual, they are in general entirely green about things outside their regular orbits.

It is summer and an auspicious time to show them a few helpful things. They will spoil a lot, mess around a bit, and try your patience, but in the end they will remember and profit by what they do.

There's James. And there are three taps that drip and need new washers. Let his father show him how to fix one and then give him permission to try his hand at the others—alone.

Phantom Disease

OTTAWA. — A mysterious disease which has afflicted Eskimos in recent years took its toll again last winter, Major D. L. McKeand, commander of the Eastern Arctic Patrol found when his ship the Nascopie arrived at Lake Harbor, on the south coast of Baffin Island.

He radioed to the Department of Mines and Resources that six adults and seven children had died from it near Lake Harbor in February.

Almost every year the disease sweeps down on some and with serious results. Dr. L. D. Livingston, medical officer for the patrol, and other doctors stationed in the North are seeking to diagnose it with the hope some provision can be made to guard the natives.

Doctors in the North are inclined to the belief it is a form of ptomaine poisoning, possibly from eating bad meat. Further information may be gained from doctors who spent last winter in the North. Dr. T. J. Orford is at Pangnirtung far up on the east coast of Baffin Island and may have come in actual contact with it.

Forced Landing Without Mishap

BELLEVILLE. — Robert Newman and Chick Dixon, of Akron, O., made a forced landing in the village of Shannonville, five miles east of here, when their plane ran out of gasoline. After filling their tanks from the pumps of a local garage, the two fliers continued on their way eastward. The fliers were unhurt and their plane was undamaged.

Round-World Flight Hinted

EDMONTON. — Aviation officials here speculated on the possibility of a secret round-the-world airplane flight being made in the near future with a refueling stop at Edmonton, where a consignment of more than 600 gallons of high-test gasoline arrived from New York and San Francisco and forty-five gallons of special oil from Germany. Identity of the flier who is believed planning a world-girdling flight, with a scheduled take-off about the first of next week, was not learned. Persistent rumors in flying circles here have indicated such a flight is pending.

$1,138,606 Tobacco Crop

CHATHAM.—Members of the Burley Tobacco Marketing Association of Ontario received a total of $1,138,606, or $13,124 more than the appraised price, for their 1936 crop, it was revealed in a report tabled at the annual meeting here. President C. E. Desmond of Morpeth occupied the chair.

Representing the tobacco companies for one year are: Guy Miller for the Imperial Tobacco Company, Montreal; W. Milligan of Richmond, Va., for the British Leaf Company of Chatham; C. L. O'Brien of Chatham, for the Canadian Leaf Company; N. P. Lockwood for the Hodge Company of Kingsville; Oliver Drouin for the Leamington Company; William Ross for the Consolidated Company at Kingsville, and M. A. Borkowitz of Montreal representing all other companies.

Directors who have another year to serve are: R. V. O'Neill of Paquette, J. F. Thomas of North Malden, M. A. Drew of Merlin and President Desmond.

New Trick

NORTH YORK. — A new trick of hitch-hikers to obtain rides into the city was revealed this week to a motorist on Dufferin Street.

P.C. Weller (412) of Toronto, and Mrs. Weller, were driving on Dufferin Street when they spied a lad of about 18 lying on his back with both arms outstretched and his legs about three feet on the pavement, in the path of their car.

As the prostrate boy was motionless, they presumed he had been the victim of a hit-and-run driver, and was either unconscious or dead. Stopping their car quickly, they hurried to him, only to have him jump to his feet and ask for a ride into the city.

"Apparently he had been unsuccessful in 'thumbing' a ride and tried this new way of getting some motorist to stop," commented P.C. Weller, who added that the incident had rather frightened and upset Mrs. Weller.

Speaking of fish, we have our own Canadian waters, and journey to Bermuda from whence comes news that a new record has been established.

Harry J. Tucker of Flatts, Bermuda, has just established a new Atlantic Ocean record for "wahoo." It weighed 91 pounds and was six feet, two inches long. Tucker fought it for 20 minutes before landing it. He used a 12-ounce tip and a 24-thread line. An 86-pounder, caught by W. E. Carlin in 1911, was the previous "wahoo" record for those waters.

What player on a baseball team touches the ball more than any other? . . . the pitcher.

Did you know that 'way back in 1887 or thereabouts, the nigger pitcher, Geo. Storey of Newark, won 35 games, the most ever recorded.

Lefty Grove had 330 strikeouts for Baltimore in 1923.

Well, folks, guess I'll run along. Drop us a line any old time.

NEWS PARADE

Commentary on the HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEKS NEWS ---

By Peter Randal

The world this week saw the Spanish war sweeping to a climax while in the far East the first rumbles of a new conflict were heard.

Lashing out from Madrid, General Jose Miaja's re-organized Loyalist army executed its first great offensive in the year-old civil war and struck fifteen miles into the insurgent ring which almost surrounded Madrid and threatened General Francisco Franco's line of communication with the sea. Franco struck back with a violent counter-offensive in an attempt to regain lost territory before the Loyalists could strengthen their newly won positions.

Hundreds of planes, tons of high explosives, and a quarter of a million men were hurled by both armies at the point of the loyalists' newly-won salient in the mountains at Brunete, 12 miles west of Madrid. This may be the deciding battle of the civil war.

If the Rebels are driven back from the position they have held for nearly a year at the gates of Madrid it is likely that new agreements will be formed by the great European powers with Germany and Italy withdrawing much of the support which has so far bolstered the Rebel attack.

One million men, women and children have lost their lives, it is estimated since the war began on July 19, 1937.

Japan's militant imperialist government which has held the nation in readiness for war for several years, made its first move in North China this week when Nipponese troops entered Mopei province which adjoins Japanese territory in newly-conquered Manchukuo.

Japanese soldiers were repulsed however by unexpected and determined opposition by Chinese Communist and Bandit troops, united against the Japanese threat, under the Nankin government. Peace overtures have been made by Tokio and an armistice is expected to relieve the troubled situation in the Far East.

With Soviet Russia disturbed by espionage trials and the execution of army leaders it is not unlikely that Japan will push forward in her march toward the rich stores of war materials in the heart of China.

Hope died this week in two widely distant parts of the world. In the Pacific ocean's wide southern expanse where the United States navy completed its two weeks, $4,000,000 search for Amelia Earhart and Geo. Noonan, and on the wide stretches of Western Canada's wheat country where farmers faced the greatest crop failure in the history of the west.

The United States navy after combing 200,000 square miles of trackless ocean for the lost fliers, gave up hope and pronounced them dead. The only gain from their attempted trans-Pacific flight being the U. S. government's warning "Such flights will not be permitted in future."

Federal Minister of Agriculture James G. Gardiner predicted this week in Ottawa that this year's wheat crop would be not over 150 million bushels, the smallest since the west first became a great wheat-producing area.

Saskatchewan bore the brunt of the drought and 114 degree heat and Gardiner estimated that 600,000 or 60 per cent. of the population would need government aid of some kind before the winter was over.

Following his announcement the Federal government led by recently returned Premier King promised immediate and planned remedial action and better still, heavy rains fell for several days in most parts of the southern Saskatchewan dust bowl as well as in the northern parts of the province.

Hardy westerners immediately washed off their sense of humor and produced drought jokes of which the following is a sample. The rains were so heavy around Shaunavon, dust bowl centre, that a large drop struck a farmer on the forehead and knocked him to the ground unconscious, and the hired man had to throw three buckets of dust over him to revive him.

Three day sensations in Canadian newspapers were many this week, featured by the discovery and conviction on bigamy charges of George Roediger, a modern Bluebeard if there ever was one. This dark and handsome 55-year-old German had married, robbed and deserted at least ten women in all parts of Canada in the last ten years. He pleaded guilty and received nine years in Stony Mountain penitentiary but alert provincial police Sergeant McKay, of Toronto, thinks that the case is not yet closed, for Roediger is alleged to have caused the disappearance of Mrs. Christina MacKenzie whom he married in Barrie, Ont., in 1935. Mrs. MacKenzie has not been seen since she left a house on Vauhan Rd., Toronto, a few days after her marriage. Outside of a postcard, allegedly from her, but thought to be a forgery, that her relatives received in December, 1935, there is no trace of the missing widow.

Two of Roediger's former wives died violent deaths, one by poisoning, the other by drowning in a well. In the latter case Roediger was charged with murder and acquitted although he served two years in a New York prison for bigamy in the same case. The finding of sharp butcher knives and quantities of arsenic in his luggage by police after his recent arrest increased suspicion that this sinister and handsome fortune hunter left many mysteries unsolved in his obscure past. Roediger's son is being sought by police in California for questioning on his father's activities and the fly-by-night German Romeo may yet face changes more serious than bigamy.

British Queen Meets Her "Ain Folk"

The first British Queen of Scottish blood to visit Scotland since Mary, Queen of Scots, Queen Elizabeth accompanied the King on his visit all last week to Holyroodhouse, where interesting old customs of Scotland were revived. Here the King and Queen are seen in smiling mood as they chat with Scottish leaders, while the little Princesses also seem to be enjoying themselves.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

CAMERAS BY LAKE OR OCEAN

Enlarged from portion of negative taken with a folding camera giving post-card size pictures. Exposure 1/100 second at f.11 on supersensitive film.

COMES the time every year when many of us make for the lake or seashore for cool breezes, swimming, sailing, motorboating, fishing, and the many other pleasures that go with a sojourn by the water.

Any one can enjoy this fun without a camera, but verily to go and return without having made a picture-story of your visit seems as useless as trying to write a book about it with water for ink. When you have finished, your memory may retain some of it for a time, but eventually you remember little else than the fact that you went there. Years later you will say, "Yes, I had a good time that summer," but what did you do, whom were you with, what did you see? Bet a million that with nothing in your snapshot album to show for it, you will remember scarcely anything of the details of that good time, and regretfully wish you could.

Another reason for taking your camera to the lake or seashore is that where water is, with its bright reflections, you have exceptional chances for making fine pictures. Usually by the lake or seashore, even on cloudy days you have more light to work with than inland. The extra light gives you opportunity to "stop down" (use a smaller lens opening) and thereby obtain sharp, clear-cut details.

Also there is no better place for interesting action pictures than a summer resort. Except for the beach itself and the hotels, cottages and wharves, everything seems to be in motion. Of course, if you want close-ups of fast action you should be equipped with a fast camera, but don't forget that splendid work with many water scenes is done with an inexpensive fixed focus camera. If it is rapid motion such as an approaching motorboat, shoot from an angle at a distance of 75 to 100 feet and usually you get it without blur. Then have an enlargement made when you get home.

Snider's

Mrs. (Dr.) Ralph E. Hooper, formerly of Ethiopia, who is spending the summer at the Hooper summer cottage at Bronte, was the special speaker at Wesley Church on Sunday morning. Mrs. Roy Fish, president of the W.M.S., conducted the service. Assisting her were Mrs. H. T. Post and Mrs. Cecil Fish. Mr. F. A. Forster offered prayer and Miss Shirley Pickering, a member of the Mision Band, sang a solo. There was a large attendance.

Miss E. Telfer, Milton, is visiting at the home of her sister, Miss H. T. Post.

The Union Service of Trafalgar circuit will be held on Sunday morning next at Munn's church, at 10.30 standard time. Members of the Trafalgar Y.P.U. will be in charge and Professor MacLaren, Georgetown, will be the speaker.

Misses Alma Sparling and Doreen Chamberlain, Streetsville, and Miss Dorothy Taylor and brother, Cooksville, were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. C. Pickering.

Miss Margaret Ogg, Owen Sound, who is taking a summer course in Toronto, spent the week-end at the home of her aunt, Mrs. R. K. Gibson. Mrs. Ogg is visiting her sister, Mrs. Gibson, for two weeks.

Several of Snider's residents attended Bethel Church garden party, which was held last week, at the home of Mr. Emerson Ford.

MILTON

Following a major operation in the Guelph General Hospital, Archie Linford MacNabb, prominent business man of Milton, died Monday in his fifty-first year.

He was born on a farm in Esquesing Township, son of Mrs. MacNabb and the late Alexander MacNabb, pioneer settlers of Halton County. For the past seventeen years he had been in business here, and on July 20 had assumed the duties of Clerk of the County of Halton, when he was suddenly stricken. For a number of years he had been secretary of the Halton County Agricultural Society, a member of Milton Lawn Bowling Club, I.O.O.F. and Past Master of St. Clair Lodge, A.F. and A.M.; a Past First Principal and Scribe of St. Clair Chapter, R.A.M. He was a member of St. Paul's United Church, being on the Board of Stewards at the time of his death. Surviving are his widow, formerly Anna Scott of Milton; one son, and two daughters.

WIND UP AT RATION FARM.

(All rights reserved)

We all know that part of the line in front of Messines Ridge was the home of the Cavalry Brigade, for quite a while in 1915. We constructed Nelles' Walk, Seely's Walk, Strathcona Avenue, King Edward Terrace, and a few more nice streets, including the one leading to Stink Farm. It was a nice place to pull off stunts, such as trying to catch "Jerry" asleep, especially when General Seely's Battery galloped down the road with all the tin cans trailing on behind, and, loud cheers were heard from the Ridge. One night I was sent down from No. 136 to go to Ration Farm for some flares and rockets, those funny things we often used, they went off with a bang and nearly broke your arm in pulling the trigger, and then you could see nothing in front of you. Nothing occurred until I got to Ration Farm; there I was told the flares and rockets had gone up with the rations. There was nothing to do but wend my way back. I took the longest way around, safety first, trench. I was fed up at the thought of having that long walk for nothing. It was about the time the old man used to plough around St Quentin Farm. I had just got to the end of King Edward's Horse Terrace when—whiz—something flew by my ear. I ducked. I laid there ten minutes, it seemed an hour, then I got up and ran. I met the Brigade Major; he asked me what was the matter, I could not speak; then another one went by and we both ducked. He said something about a sniper; I ran, I wanted to get to my dug-out in 136; my whole past flashed through my mind; where should I go if I got hit? I ran into two men of the 10th Bn. who were going up. I thought of the old rhyme—"Two is company, three is not," in this case three was a God-send. I went up with them, everything went well until we got into their front line; one of their officers, seeing a Dragoon, asked what the — are you doing here?' I said, 'safety first sir.' He replied, 'you had better get to —— out of this, your Regiment is on our left, but you cannot go through here, go back, until you get into the support trench, and you cannot miss some of your chaps.' I went back along the support trench, and after a while saw a party working on top of the trench; I could see a sentry, and by the light of a half-moon he looked like a Jerry; he had his hat turned about and his rifle slung on his shoulder. I was trembling all over, where was I? Had I run into a Fritz working party, I was going to get shot. I drew my trusty revolver, made in 1871, and was just going to fire, when Sgt. H. shouted, come on you—!!??Xg!!! when are you going to do something? I shouted to the sentry, who I was, and got on top of the trench, immediately behind the old willow trees, from then I got my direction and ran across the open to 135. I reached the corner of the communication trench and the front line. The sentry at the corner must have heard my breathing for I was ready for me. I jumped, I felt something, a cold sweat ran down my back; the sentry had got me proper, his bayonet was next to my skin. If the trench had been a foot wider, I should be kicking up poppies now, instead of being in Stanley Barracks.

Comets Once Regarded as Most Dreadful of Omens

A star with glowing white hair is a fearsome sight. Since the Latin word for hair is coma, the Romans gave such stars a name which has become the English word "comet" and regarded them as the most dreadful of omens. Two thousand years ago the Chinese were carefully recording their appearances and courses and blaming them for the continual wars, pestilences, floods and famines that afflicted that country.

This tendency to regard comets as manifestations of divine wrath has endured even to modern times. A New York newspaper is said to have announced the scheduled advance of Halley's comet in 1910 with the headline, "Halley's Comet Approaching New York."

During the Middle ages, writes Dr. Thomas M. Beck in the Chicago Tribune, the astronomers were so convinced that comets were messengers of misfortune that they recorded few worth-while observations. Hampered by superstition, they made no effort to chart the apparent courses of these objects across the sky. They generally believed that comets occurred in the air rather than among the planets or stars and that they were a sort of essence of misfortune that had crystalized out of an atmosphere supercharged with it.

We do not need to be told that a comet differs from the rest of the stars in that it possesses a long, hazy tail. Sometimes this tail is too dim to be seen by the naked eye, but in some cases it is more brilliant than the planet Venus.

"God Bless You" Sneeze Started in Middle Ages

It is surprising to find how many people superstitiously say "God bless you!" when they hear you sneeze. This custom is believed to have originated in the Middle ages when plagues and epidemics were rife, relates a writer in Pearson's London Weekly.

Sneezing at such a time often indicated to the superstitious that the victim had caught the plague and so they said sympathetically, "God bless you," meaning "God help you!" At that time it was usual to accompany the words with the sign of the Cross.

Another old belief was that it was lucky to sneeze on the right and unlucky on the left. If a bridegroom sneezed on his wedding morning, his friends regarded it as a lucky omen, and strangely enough, this superstition persists in parts of Britain.

The Greeks considered it fortunate to sneeze in the afternoon, but foretold ill-luck for those who sneezed between midnight and midday.

First Use of "America"

The Sixteenth century printer's house in the little town of Saint Die, in the Vosges, is where the word "America" was first printed. In 1507, fifteen years after Columbus discovered America, a group of scholars, editing the writings of Ptolemy, the Egyptian geographer, wrote a foreword describing the explorations of Amerigo Vespucci, the Italian navigator, who had made several voyages to what is now known as South America. They suggested that his name, in feminine form to correspond with Europe, Asia, and Africa, should be given to the fourth continent. One of them, Martin Waldseemueller, made a map on which he marked the new land as "America." The book and map were then handed to a local printer named Bazin. The map Bazin printed exists in Saint Die, and his house stands in a square in the center of the town. A tablet commemorating the baptism of America is fixed to the shop.

Pirate Days

Until 1820 Turkish warships operating from North African ports as pirates used to terrorize the commerce of the Mediterranean. Captive sailors were carried off by them to the slave market in Algiers or the prisons in Sallee. In the Seventeenth century Barbary corsairs used to waylay ships in the Bristol channel, and once a Sallee rover was caught in the mouth of the Thames. It was from Malta that resistence was most effectively organized by the Knights of St. John, who held the island until it was surrendered by their grand master to Napoleon in 1798. The island passed to Britain by the peace of the Amiens (1802) and it is the headquarters of the Mediterranean fleet.

Argentina's Wild Horses

It will be remembered that horses escaped from the Spaniards on the mainland of North America and multiplied on the fertile plains, says a writer in the Washington Post. Both wild horses and wild cattle multiplied on Argentina's pampas. Thus the Argentina gaucho (or cowboy) became a hunter of free-roaming cattle and horses, while the northern plainsman became a herder. Cattle stealing was never the serious crime on the pampas that it was in North America's wild West, because in Argentina cattle were free for the taking. No great ranch owner objected if a gaucho killed a steer for food, but it was considered bad form not to turn in the hide. Only the hides were valuable.

Burglars Enter Local Creamery

Sometime during Tuesday night burglars broke into the Streetsville Creamery, through the rear of the building. They moved the big safe from the office at the front, to the back end of the creamery, where they were preparing to blow it open when they were evidently frightened by sounds made by people living next door, and ran away, empty-handed. The butter makers did not miss anything. The money is deposited in the Bank every day so the thieves would not have got anything anyway.

Police were notified and two men were sent out immediately to take finger-prints.

This is the second time this Creamery was broken into.. About eight years ago a quantity of butter was stolen, but this time it seemed to be only money the culprits were after

It cost AlexSinclair of Acton $118 for having liquor in an illegal place. P.M., L J.C.Bull levied the fine. It would be cheaper for people to keep their liquor in a "legal" place.

Some Streetsville people attended the funeral at Milton yesterday of Mr A.L.McNabb, the newly appointed Clerk of Halton County. They say that it was one of the largest funerals they ever saw.

The Orangeville Banner thinks that whoever picked the site of the new T.B. Hospital at Brampton has made a big mistake, as, it says,there are a dozen better sites up among the hills of Caledon, in Peel County. They say that altitude is the main factor in the site of a hospital. We think the Editor is offended because the Hospital is not going to Orangeville. We would, therefore, suggest that the chosen site be discarded—and ask the Editor of The Banner to pick a new one (near his town).

Prompt Action Saves a Life

The quick action of Frank Hollings head saved six year old Thelma Arch from possible drowning last Saturday. The little girl was pulled into deep water by another child and, being unable to swim the entire distance to safety, she sank. Frank, who was standing nearby with a friend, saw what had happened and, without hesitation, dived in, clothes and all, and carried the child to safety.

His actions certainly deserve much credit and he is to be congratulated for his deed.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON V
GOD LEADS A PEOPLE — Exodus 13:17 — 15:21
Printed Text — Exodus 13:17-22; 14: 10-15
Golden Text — "The Lord will guide thee continually." Isiah 58:11.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Place — The Israelities gathered together, as they went out of Egypt, at Succoth, which is to be identified with the city of Pithom in the north-east of this great country. Various events in this lesson occurred between the city of Succoth and some part of the Red Sea, which is not today easily identifiable.

Time — B.C. 1498.

"And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not by the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near." If the Israelites had come from Egypt straight up into Palestine all through Gaza, they could have been in the center of the Promised Land within a week. This is the way almost all of the great military campaigns for the invasion of Palestine from the south have advanced. The march is difficult, at certain seasons of the year it is blistering hot, and many miles would be through an arid desert, but, nevertheless, such a march is possible. Napoleon himself led his troops up this way in his futile attempt to reach Constantinople. "For God said, lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they return to Egypt." "But God led the people about, by the way of the wilderness by the Red Sea." The Red Sea is about 1350 miles long, with an extreme breadth of 205 miles, the deepest portion measuring 1200 fathoms. It is located between Egypt and Arabia, stretching from Suez to the Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb. Why this body of water has been called the Red Sea for the last two thousand years, no one seems to konw. The name has been explained by the corals within its waters, by the color of the Edomite and Arabian mountains bordering its coast, or by the glow of the sky reflected in it.

God's ways are so often not our ways: ours seem to be capable of the quicker results and less suffering. But God's ways often appear so much longer than necessary, and involve so much hardship and disappointment, yet God always knows best. We see two evident reasons why in the good providence of God the near way was not chosen. First, the escaped slaves could not bear the sudden danger and fierce struggle in the near way (because of the powerful Philistine people against whom they would immediately have to fight and for which they certainly were not prepared).

"And the children of Israel went up armed out of the land of Egypt." Literally they went up equipped (see Joshua 1:14; 4:12).

"And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him; for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you." This was according to the explicit order of Joseph just before his death (Gen. 50:25, 26; see Acts 7:16). Faith in the Promised Land must also have kept burning in the hearts of some Israelites from one generation to another, or the bones of Joseph would have been forgotten. Would that all of us, in dying, could leave such legacies of one kind or another that those who follow us, especially our own children, might therefrom derive strength for continually walking in the favour of the Lord, living the faith-life!

"And they took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness." The exact position of Succoth is not known, but scholars are coming to believe that it was very near to or actually identical with the city of Pithom in lower Egypt, on the banks of the canal connecting the Nile River with the Red Sea.

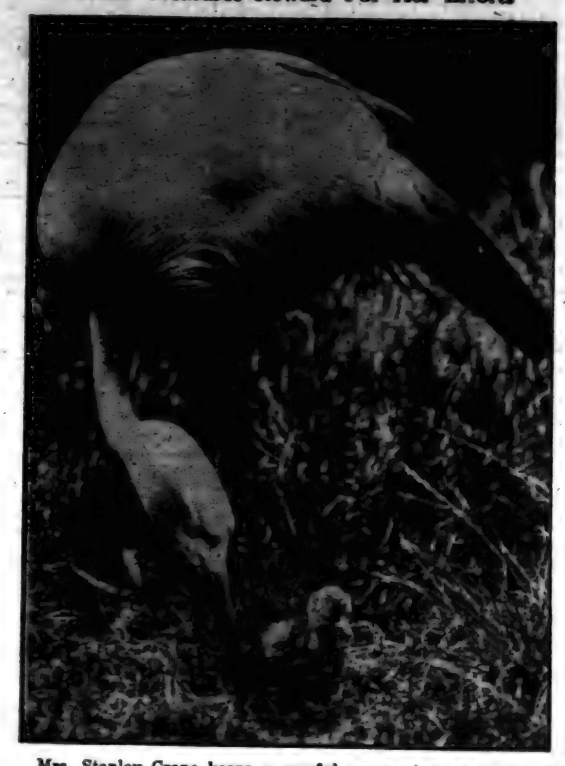
Etham was on the east of the Isthmus of Suez, although its exact location has not been determined.

"And Jehovah went before them by day in a pillar of cloud, to lead them the way, and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; that they also might go by day and night. "The pillar of cloud by day, and the pillar of fire by night, departed not from the people." We are not to regard this miraculous phenomenon as consisting of two different pillars that appeared alternately, one of cloud, and the other of fire. There was but one pillar of both cloud and fire (14:24); for even when burning in the dark, it is still called the pillar of cloud (14:19) or the cloud (Num. 9:21), so that it was a cloud with a dark side and a bright one, causing darkness and also lighting the night. Consequently, we have to imagine the cloud as the covering of the fire, so that by day it appeared as a dark cloud in contrast to the light of the sun, but by night as a fiery splendour. When this cloud had gone before the army of Israel, it assumed the form of a column; but when it stood still above the tabernacle, or came down upon it, it most probably took the form of a round globe of cloud, and, when it separated the Israelites from the Egyptians at the Red Sea, we have to imagine it spread out like a bank of cloud, forming, as it were, a dividing wall. In this cloud, Jehovah, or the angel of God, was really present with the people of Israel, so that he spoke to Moses and gave him his commandments out of the cloud." — C. F. Keil. (See, for further references to this remarkable phenomenon, 16:10; 19:9; 24:16; 34.5; 40:34-38; Lev. 16:2, 13; Num. 9: 15, 22; 1 Kings 8:10; Neh. 9:19; and Psalm 78:14).

"And when Pharaoh drew nigh, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes and, behold, the Egyptians were marching after them; and they were sore afraid; and the children of Israel cried out unto Jehovah." From every human standpoint it was inevitable that Israel should be afraid. The Egyptian army, whatever its number, was composed of trained soldiers, well armed and used to war; the 600,000 Israelite men above twenty years of age, were, in the main, unarmed, ignorant of warfare, and trained very imperfectly. Surrounded on three sides by water, and desert, and ground too rough for foot marches, with the Egyptian army completing this circle of obstacles utterly incapable of being overcome, Israel forgetting that God himself was omnipotent, and that they were in this very place by the command of God, turned against their leader in bitterest complaint. The leader of any expedition is the one that always receives the brunt of criticism. If there is failure, he is severely blamed for it. If there is hardship, he is held responsible for it.

"And they said unto Moses, because they were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? wherefore hast thous dealt thus with us, to bring us forth out of Egypt? Is not this the word that we spake unto thee in Egypt, saying, let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? For it were better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness." Here is an utter lack of faith. There is no turning to God, but a shameful expression of helplessness, and that so soon after God had powerfully manifested his own ability to deliver from every power that was now threatening them.

We, too, have our Pi-hahiroths, when we seem absolutely shut in, and helpless against the circumstances which are surrounding us. Yet, it is when the people of God are brought into the greatest straits and difficulties that they are favoured with the finest displays of God's character and acting, and, for this reason, he oftimes leads them into a trying position, in order that he may the more markedly show himself. He could have conducted Israel through the Red Sea and far beyond the reach of Pharaoh's hosts before over the latter had started from Egypt; but that would not have so fully glorified his own name, or so entirely confounded the enemy, upon whom he designed to get him honour. If we could only look upon a difficult crisis as an occasion of bringing out, on our behalf, the sufficiency of divine grace, it would enable us to preserve the balance of our souls, and to glorify God, even in the deepest waters.



"And Moses said unto the people, Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of Jehovah, which he will work for you to-day; for the Egyptians whom ye have seen to-day, ye shall see them again no more for ever. Jehovah will fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace." Nothing can be conceived nobler and finer than a servant of God, standing out in absolute faith and confidence as against the unbelief and fear of a vast multitude of people, here over two million of them, his own brethren. One thing the children of Israel were not to do — to fear. Two things they were commanded to do—to stand still, and to see what the Lord would do for them. What else could they do but stand still? There was no power in Israel that could have ever overcome the circumstances arrayed as against the Israelites that day. If they were to be saved God must do it. The Lord not only places himself between us and our sins, but also between us and our circumstances. By doing the former, he gives peace of conscience; by doing the latter he gives peace of heart.

"And Jehovah said unto Moses, wherefore criest thous unto me? but speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." What a command—to go forward, when immediately in front of them was a great body of water! When the circumstances seem the most difficult and the time most unripe, then it is that God often commands his people to advance. May it not be in these very days, when the church of Christ seems to be growing weaker and weaker, and its influence more and more circumscribed and its leadership less and less able, when there seem to be no great prophets in the land, when the people of God are indifferent — that this is the time for a real advance led by the Spirit of God?

Announcement

A column "Health Topics of Vital Interest" will appear on this page starting with next week's issue. Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, former Chief Officer of Health for the Province of Ontario and Secretary of the Ontario Cancer Commission will give you timely advice on various health problems.

Crane Treasures Reward For Her Efforts

Mrs. Stanley Crane keeps a careful eye on her youngster, the first to be hatched in the London Zoo, to make sure that nobody robs her of the reward of her careful efforts.

50,000 Deaf in U.S.

In United States there are 50,000 persons who are actually deaf, but tests made of school children the country over show that 11 per cent. of them are hard of hearing.

About twice as many cases of hereditary and progressive deafness occur in females as in males.

Two hundred moving picture houses in England have installed apparatus which enables those who are hard of hearing to follow the talkies. Special seats are provided for them.

The Food You Eat

One has often heard people speculating as to the amount of food consumed by the average man in an average lifetime.

According to Nathaniel C. Fowler's "Book of 1,000 Things Worth Knowing," a French statistician has figured out that a man 50 years of age has spent 6,000 days in sleep; has worked 6,500 days; walked 800 days, enjoyed some amusement 4,000 days; and was sick 500 days.

And now we come to the food supply. The French authority estimates that the average man mentioned above has eaten 17,000 pounds of bread; 16,000 pounds of meat; 4,000 pounds of vegetables, eggs and fish; and has drunk 7,000 gallons of liquid.

Now we know what they mean when they speak of the consuming public.—Windsor Star.

Peace Song For Pan - Pacific

Words Written to Fourth Movement of Beethoven Ninth Symphony

VANCOUVER.—John Murray Gibbon, Montreal, Canadian author and poet, has, on request, written an "Ode to the Pacific" for the Pan-Pacific Women's Association, which is holding its fourth triennial conference in Vancouver.

The song, written to the melody from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Fouth Movement, is featured throughout the conference.

The words are:

ODE TO THE PACIFIC
(By John Murray Gibbon)

Lord of Love in quiet reigning,
Humbly now we bring our prayer—
May the years to us remaining
With the Golden Age compare!
May the world in war contending
Banded be in nobler fight,
Hate fore-going, carnage ending,
Firm in ranks of peace unite.

Curb the storm of human passion,
Calm on anger'd foe invoke,
Nurturing in tranquil fashion
Kindly thought of fellow folk,
Making every realm a neighbor
Friendly, as if kin by birth,
One and all in common labor
Working for a better earth.

So around this mighty ocean
Every heart shall beat as one,
Ever warm in true devotion
Till the cause of peace is won.
Then a Pan-Pacific Union
May in turn the world enfold,
And in one supreme communion
Bring to earth the heav'n foretold.

Oh, Mr. Mountie!

Youth in Ottawa, feeling the urge of love, must be displeased with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police—and with good reason. For years young lovers have found Parliament Hill, with its spacious lawns and well-placed seats underneath trees, a perfect place for trysting. But all that is gone. The Mounted Police have placed floodlights at strategic positions, have had all the bushes cleared away and the branches of trees cut up to a distance of 20 feet from the ground, notes the Windsor Star.

One feels impelled to speak a word on behalf of frustrated youth. What is wrong with love-making? And why should love not be made in such a perfect setting as on Parliament Hill? If maids and young men wish to talk baby talk and hold hands in the Summer twilight, they should be allowed to do so. There are adequate policemen around Parliament Hill, surely, to see that nothing very immore danger of impropriety in cars parked along roads in the Laurentian Hills, or other places to which the young lovers may be driven, than close to the Parliament buildings.

Farm Problems

Conducted by PROFESSOR HENRY C. BELL
with the co-operation of the various departments of Ontario Agricultural College

Q — "Talking with an Englishman who has farmed in Devon, England, I found that over there they broadcast lime and fertilizers by means of an instrument drawn behind their wagons. The machine is built on lines similar to the outfits they use to sand the highways in winter. I would appreciate your opinion as to whether that is a sound way to do it, or if I should get a drill that would handle fertilizer." — R.A.S. — Simcoe Co.

A — The implement to which you refer is known as an end gate seeder and is operated from the back of a wagon by a connection with the wheel and axle of the wagon. It gives a very fair distribution of lime and a fairly good broadcast sowing of oats, but I would not advise it for fertilizers other than for top dressing meadows or pastures. Fertilizer in order to give best results on cultivated crops should be worked into the soil fairly near the seed, but not in touch with it.

I believe you would get your best results from a combined grain and fertilizer drill which is constructed to give continuous and even distribution. I would call your attention to an apparatus which is being put out now to attach to an ordinary grain drill. (Prof. H. G. Bell, Dept. of Chemistry, O.A.C.

Q — As an amateur gardener living in the city I am writing to you hoping that you will advise me regarding the comparative values of different forms of fertilizer which are at my disposal

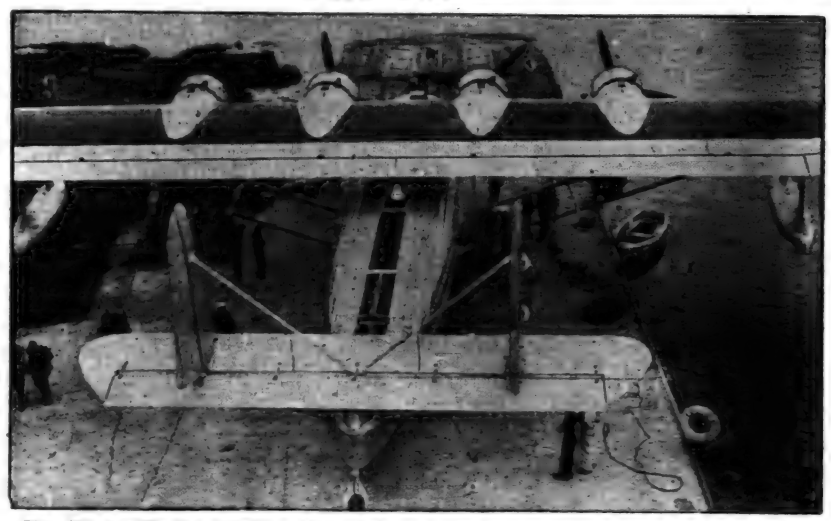
First I have a quantity of wood ashes which I sift. There is much ashes from paper and some from burnt bones, but most of the wood was the soft wood and twigs and branches and also shingles in it. Can you tell me if the potash is quickly available? Would it be good for celery? Is it valuable for tomatoes?

Second, please advise me the value of fresh pig's blood mixed with water as I believe it is rich in nitrogen. I have used it mixed with water, 1 to 24 on tomatoes and one five pound honey pail of the mixture to each plant once a week. Can you give me an analysis of it in nitrogen, phosphate, and potash contents?

Third, in my celery last year, I applied a cup full of water to each plant every ten days with Nitrate of Soda dissolved in it (2 tablespoons to each gallon of water) with wonderful success. This year I am planting over 400 plants, and, can I substitute the above with liquid obtained by soaking one pail of dried hen manure in a large barrel of water and allowed to stand a week? How would the blood mixed with water compare with the Nitrate of Soda dissolved in the water as above? How would it compare with the liquid hen manure that is soaked in water?

A. — Wood ashes as a rule should contain about six per cent if they have not been bleached.

This would be good for celery and fairly good for tomatoes. The wood ashes contain about 30 per cent lime as well as six per cent potash, and celery thrives where there is an alkaline reaction. Tomatoes do well on a neutral to slightly acid condition, but they use a considerable amount of Potash, hence they would benefit a lot from wood ashes.



Regarding the analysis of pig's blood, I wish to say that dried blood carries ten to fourteen per cent nitrogen and about one to five per cent phosphoric acid. A mixture such as you suggest, of fresh blood with the water, would not be too strong to apply to tomatoes. There is no potash in blood.

The dissolved Nitrate of Soda application that you made to your celery is good. Be careful not to get it too strong. Tobacco men use no more than two pounds of Nitrate of Soda to forty gallons of water when they are mixing for application by spraying.

Re your suggestion to dissolve the poultry manure in water I would say that this should give you fairly good results. Poultry manure should run about 20 to 22 percent available nitrogen, whereas Nitrate of Soda is about fifteen per cent. (Prof. H. G. Bell, Dept. of Chemistry, O.A.C.

TERROR MOUNTAIN

By MADELEINE SHARPS BUCHANAN

Three bandits seize a transcontinental bus, and force the driver to guide it up a mountainside to a lonely log shack. They want a valuable secret formula believed to be in the possession of one of the passengers, Finley Trump. To add to the sinister situation, a raging forest fire, creeping up the mountain, traps the group. The first night, one of the bandits is mysteriously strangled with his own bandana, and the next night, a second one meets the same fate. The third bandit, Stutter, is overpowered and bound. In the middle of the night, young Dr. Nick Strand and May Lawrence, pretty nurse to whom he had become engaged, discover Trump strangled to death with a bandana. Two persons are missing, Amelia Bangor and Kenneth

CHAPTER VII

Strand's quick steps were returning. May hurried to meet him.

"It is Lefty's bandana," he announced. "He'd left it in the kitchen, when he beat it. Only Stutter's in there now."

"And the Bangor woman is gone!" said May. She and Jenkins! What does it mean?"

"Listen!" said Strand. "What's that?"

Someone was coming up the road running unsteadily. Clinging to Strand, May stared into the velvety darkness. Then, out of the shadows, staggered the figure of Amelia Bangor.

As they reached her, she stared at them from lack-lustre eyes. Her hair hung in straight wisps.

"The crazy little fool ran right into it," she muttered. "I couldn't stop him.

Strand laid a hand upon her arm. "Who ran?" he demanded.

"The little Jenkins man," shuddered Miss Bangor. "I couldn't sleep. Who can? I heard him pass the bus and I took out after him." She swayed and sank down on the step of the bus. "He must have been trying to find a way out, but he seemed to be running right into the fire. Then, I lost sight of him. Oh, why did I ever make this trip?"

Then, suddenly, she caught sight of the body of Trump, and her mouth sagged open.

"I gave her a sleeping tablet," whispered Miss Jones.

She and May stood looking down upon the slumbering Mrs. Jenkins, who had been prostrated when told of her husband's disappearance. The crackle of the fire nearer and nearer, could be heard —and the constant rumble and boom of the everlasting blasts. Grit lay under their feet, and everything they touched was hot.

"May," said Miss Jones, "the murderer expects to get out of this."

"I wish you'd tell me if you have any suspicion—who it is," sighed Maf, but it really didn't seem to matter. Death was so close anyway. "Stutter says he doesn't know who left the bandana."

It was with his on the kitchen table, said Miss Jones. "Has it occurred to you, by the way, that if it gets any hotter, that sample of gun powder, or whatever it is, may blow us all to kingdom come?"

"But where ran it be?" shuddered May.

"Who can say? But the murderer expects to get out of this — of that I'm sure."

Miss Jones left the house and walked to the bus, where she sat down on the running board beside a limp, dejected Amelia Bangor.

Dawn was breaking. It was a dawn none of them would ever forget—shot with flames and cinders and ash.

"Amelia," said Miss Jones, "I should like to see your field glasses."

Without interest, Miss Banyor entered the bus and returned with the glasses, which she handed to Miss Jones.

Miss Jones, walking to the rise of ground to the left of the log house, examined the glasses before she looked through them. They were very powerful.

"My brother brought them back from the War," offered Miss Bangor, at her side. She was coughing, and her eyes were rimmed with black. "Miss Jones, I don't want to die!"

"Who does?" Miss Jones said shortly, and handed the glasses back to her.

Amelia Bangor took them and returned to the bus.

A strange excitement seemed to have taken possession of Miss Jones. She stared off into the flames. If they never got down from here, if the flames wiped them out, no one would ever know what had transpired among the passengers of the ill-fated bus. Miss Jones' lips were grim. They would have a showdown among themselves, however, before the end came. She would see to that! The truth would be known before death reached them.

And as she walked back to the house, wiping gritty cinders from her hot face, she whispered, "Can that be it?"

Visits Home Of Grandfather

Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada, was able recently to satisfy a life-long ambition—writes the Aberdeen Press and Journal.

He traced the birthplace of his paternal grandfather to Ladysford, Tyrie, and had tea in the room in which probably that pioneer was christened. Before leaving, Mr. Mackenzie King was presented with a carved wooden chair which had come from the old church at Tyrie.

It was indeed a day that the Canadian premier will look back upon with the happiest of memories. Again and again he expressed his delight as he examined the old manor house which was his grandfather's home before he went to Canada with the Royal Horse Artillery.

"It is a great pleasure to me to visit the home of my grandparents," he said "I only wish my father could have been here along with me."

It was by the happiest of coincidences that Mr. Mackenzie King was able to satisfy his lifelong wish. When he heard that he was to be offered the freedom of Aberdeen, he immediately wrote to Lady Aberdeen asking her if she could make some inquiries as to the birthplace of his grandfather.

Lady Aberdeen got in touch with Mr. A. G. Brown, a former provost of Fraserburgh, who, after making an extensive search, discovered that it was at Ladysford that Mr. Mackenzie King's grandfather, Mr. John King, had spent his early days. It was only a few days ago that Mr. Brown received conclusive evidence from the Register House in Edinburgh that Ladysford had actually been the home of Mr. John King.

The Dominion premier could hardly wait to visit the old place.

They motored to the house, which is surrounded by a lovely garden, descended on the surprised occupant, Mrs. Davidson, tenant of the farm of Ladysford, and for an hour Mr. Mackenzie King explored the building and its surroundings, being charmed with the old-world atmosphere of the place.

He was particularly interested in some old stone steps near the house which served as a mounting and dismounting place for ponies.

The building, which is at least 200 years old, is built very solidly of granite and roofed with old Scots slate. A two-storey house with two side wings projecting forward, it has that substantial appearance typical of the old manor houses of Scotland.

It was in this house that Mr. King's grandfather was baptized on May 5, 1814, and when Mrs. Davidson insisted on her distinguished guest having tea in the room in which probably the ceremony was performed, Mr. Mackenzie King's delight knew no bounds.

Canadian Products Require Advertising In Old Country

Traveller Declares Other Dominions Are Over-Shadowing Canada; Back From Six Weeks' Visit to England.

ST. THOMAS. — Canada is falling down badly in advertising its farm products and in getting the British people "Canadian-minded", according to Major F. R. Palmer, who has returned from a six weeks' visit to the Old Land.

"Only in Paris was I told that Canadian apples were used," said Major Palmer. "In London, it was South African raw fruit, New Zealand cheese and butter, and Australian canned goods, raisins and wines. Canada may be doing a big export business to the British Isles but a Canadian certainly doesn't get that impression on a visit. You seldom see Canadian goods on display and rarely hear mention of them. I think the one thing that Canada needs is a good, brisk advertising campaign in the Old Country."

Major Palmer spent a very busy time while overseas—it was six weeks of novelty and also of rather poignant memories, for three days were spent in the beautiful cemeteries, where thousands of Canadian soldiers sleep, around the Vimy Memorial. Major Palmer re-visited the Vimy battleground almost 20 years to a day after he crawled up the old trail, wounded. He walked that trail again on his visit to the cemeteries last month. It is the same trail that he remembered so well. Major Palmer flew to and from Paris, making the 185-mile trip across the Channel in 90 minutes. He marvelled at the marked progress that aviation has made in England and on the Continent as compared with Canada.

Among the highlight of his overseas visit were attendance at the royal garden party at Buckingham Palace grounds, when he was greeted by King George VI and enjoyed a five-minute talk with Earl Stanley Baldwin, the former premier; attendance at the Aldershot Military Tattoo when he was guest of honor at a dinner given by the Northumberland Fusiliers; and a short trip to Scotland. He brought home many sprigs of dried heather for his Scottish friends as mementoes of this visit.

Major Palmer also attended the Royal Air Force Show, the International Horse Show, and the King's review of the ex-service men was a most impressive sight, he said. The ex-service men were one and one-half hours passing the reviewing stand, marching twenty abreast.

Railway Electrification

Major Palmer was greatly interested in the rapid strides being made in England in the electrification of steam railways. Larger depots are being built to accommodate the longer trains. Everywhere he saw signs of this progress. The South-Eastern Railway is electrified out as far as Wimbledon. At the Leeds Military Tattoo, Major Palmer watched the staging of an imitation aerial raid, just one of the many evidences of the preparedness in the British Isles for the possible visit of an air fleet from a hostile nation.

There is no doubt that the British people are preparing for any war emergencies that may arise, yet none appeared to be unduly alarmed, Major Palmer reported. Instructions are being given in the use of gas masks and the proper things for people to do in event of air raids. At the air show he was handed a pamphlet, distributed by the Peace At Any Price organization, uring British people to resist all municipal and national regulations and to decline to take part in anti-gas drills.

Home, Not Structures, Held Need of The People

LONDON.—The five basic principles of life that lead to health and happiness have been laid down by Lord Horder, the King's doctor. They are:

1. Enough of the right kind of food.
2. Suitable shelter at the right price.
3. Access to the fresh air.
4. A reasonable amount of leisure and also of quiet.
5. A job of work.

"Proper housing of the people is one of the most important things in preventive medicine," Lord Horder told a meeting of housing experts. "Houses that are real homes are needed.

"Are we providing homes, or are we only providing structures? I think people are sometimes happier in their old slums than in some of the—I dare say—'modern slums'."

Snacks and Sandwiches

Right now, most of us are trying to find ways and means to serve the family nourishing food without too much trouble or fuss. The Summer is not the time to spend long hours cooking heavy meals and yet variety, flavour and nourishment are still in demand as far as meals go.

There are plenty of times, too, when we wish we had a new kind of sandwich to take to the picnic or some delightful snack to serve on the porch of a hot summer evening. Here are a few ideas on what can be done in the line of giving spice to your next picnic supper and evening snack:

If you've been making jam today and have some left over which wasn't enough to fill a bottle, or if you're family are so enthusiastic that they want to try the jam before next Winter, you can give it to them in more ways than spreading it on bread or toast. A hot waffle shortcake is the perfect thing to serve when there are just a few present. It's a grand dessert any time of the year but will prove especially welcome now.

Waffles

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 tablespoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 egg yolks, well beaten
1 cup milk
4 tablespoons melted butter
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt and sift again. Combine egg yolks, milk and butter. Add to flour, beating until smooth. Fold in egg whites. Bake in a hot waffle iron. When done, brush with melted butter and spread jam over half of waffle and fold over. Cut in half and dust each portion with powdered sugar, and serve hot. Will make four 4-section waffles.

French toast with jam is a very nice change from the usual French toast with syrup or sugar and cinnamon. It is a particularly welcome change at breakfast and is also a good lunch or supper dish. It's really just bread, milk eggs and jam and so is fine for the children who love it.

And now for something new in sandwiches. A book could be written about sandwiches alone—a different kind could be served every day for a decade. They lend themselves to so many variations!

Bread should be cut thin for sandwiches, edges should be neat, and the filling and butter spread evenly to edge of the bread. Day-old bread of close, firm texture is the best to use. Before slicing the loaf, remove the crusts; if long, cut the loaf in two, crosswise, and then slice the long way of the loaf.

Quick-cooking tapioca supplies a long-felt need of the sandwich maker by making it possible to have soft fillings that do not soak into the bread even after several hours' standing. Wrapped in waxed paper, sandwiches made with these new-type soft fillings are just as fresh and moist at the end of a few hours as when they were first made. These sandwiches not only keep well but are really satisfying.

Minced Ham Sandwich Filling

1 cup boiling water
3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ pound boiled ham, ground
¼ cup sweet pickle, chopped
1 tablespoon scrapped onion
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon mayonnaise.

Place water in top of double boiler; add dry ingredients, bring to a brisk boil, stirring constantly. Place over rapidly boiling water, cook five minutes, stirring occasionally. Add the other ingredients. Cool—mixture will thicken as it cools. Makes 2 cups of filling.

Nippy Cheese Sandwich Filling

2 cups strained canned tomatoes (juice and pulp)
2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
1-8 teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon mustard
2½ cups (½ lb.) grated cheese
1¼ cups (¼ lb.) dried beef, finely ground
¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.

Bring tomatoes to boil, using top of double boiler; add dry ingredients and bring to a brisk boil, stirring constantly. Place over rapidly boiling water, cook 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add cheese gradually and stir until melted. Add beef and sauce. Cool — mixture thickens as it cools Makes 2½ cups filling.

Fruit-Nut Filling

1 cup dried figs
1½ cups water
3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
1-8 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup dates, ground
½ cup nut meats, chopped
1 tablespoon lemon juice.

Cook figs in water 5 minutes, or until softened. Drain; place 1 cup of liquid in top of double boiler, bring to boil. Place over rapidly boiling water, cook 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Grind figs; add with remaining ingredients to tapioca. Cool —mixture thickens as it cools. Makes 2½ cups filling.

Perfect Girl Is Growing Taller

She Is Also Increasing Her Weight, According To Experts

Modern women are growing plumper, according to word from London, Eng. Dress sizes which were regarded as standards a year ago are no longer accurate. There is no return to the full figures of before the war, but the craze for slim "plank-like" figures has definitely waned.

Heights are also being increased. Instead of the 5-foot 4-inch average of 1934 or so, women today average 5 feet 6 inches in height, according to the new dress "stock-size measurements.

Broad shoulders and fairly slender hips give the best effect with modern clothes. The swagger coats will however, disguise any discrepancy of hip measurements as long as the shoulders are broad enough to carry the "swing" of the swagger cut.

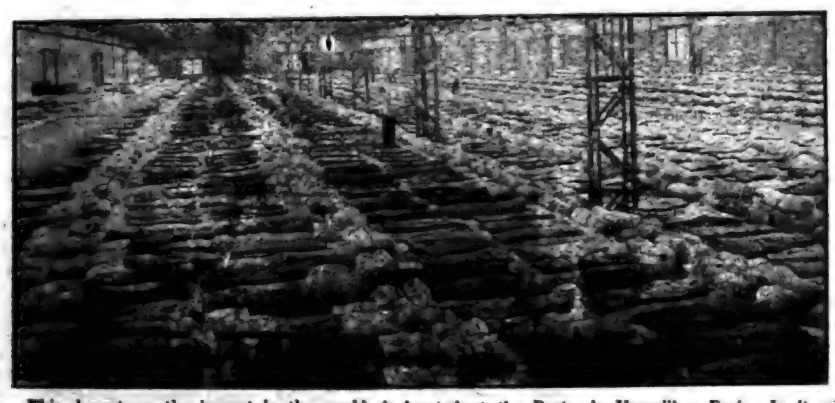
In contrast to this new trend towards larger sizes comes the measurements of an 18-year-old modern Venus, Miss Barbara Allen. She has been chosen to represent the perfect woman in a physical health film.

Her perfect figure is: Height 5 feet

The Traffic Officers

The Brockville Recorder and Times writes—

We speak a word or two for the highway traffic officers, representatives of the law who are not always regarded with favor by the people who use the roads but whose elimination would soon be followed by a carnage beside which present casualties would be infinitesimal.



The highway traffic officers do not possess soft jobs by any means. Often having long "beats" which they must patrol regularly day after day sometimes from early morning to nightfall, they are compelled to spend long hours in the saddle, and their duties do not by any means end when they lay up their motorcycles for the night. There are reports to be prepared, courts to be attended and always the highway traffic officer must be on call to investigate an accident which has occurred at some point on his "beat."

There is the additional consideration that the work which these officers carry out is distinctly hazardous. Many of them have suffered serious injury in the course of duty, others have given their lives. And yet the average traffic officer does not complain.

NOT FAIR, BUT NEVER REFUSED

(Exchange)

A lady was visited by the pastor of the church she had been attending. Bluntly she gave the information that she had not much use for the church and more, that she could hear better sermons over the radio and that was all she needed. A short time later, the lady's husband died. She didn't ask the CFRB announcer to help her in her sorrow. She sent for the pastor she a short time before had felt she didn't need, asked to have a funeral service conducted in the church, desired the choir to attend and that a soloist be provided for the event. This is an actual occurrence. It i frequently repeated. Give nothing to the support of the church, let others bear the burden, but when trouble comes call upon its ministers for the consolation of religion refused or neglected in times of health and prosperity. Many are doing just this thing. It's not fair. But it's seldom or never refused.

"No principle is more whole, as there is none more holy, than that of a true obedience."—Giles.

World's Greatest Plague Being Overcome

Not so many years ago, consumption was the world's greatest scourge. It is still a deadly menace but not so potent because of the effective means which have been taken for its prevention and cure.

The physician, the dietitian and the sanitation expert have all combined and with the aid of the sun and fresh air and rest, have materially checked the great inroads which tuberculosis made upon our population.

The National Sanitarium Association operates the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children which combined have a total capacity of just over 1,000 beds. They are thoroughly equipped and have all facilities for the modern treatment of this disease, and it is largely through their efforts that the death rate from consumption has been so greatly reduced.

These hospitals are not operated for the well-to-do but are maintained solely for the poor who are afflicted with tuberculosis and are without means to pay for their treatment and care.

It requires a great deal of money to operate these institutions, far more than they can hope to receive from statutory allowances, and it is only with the co-operation of many generous friends that they can continue to carry on.

Many thousands of dollars will be needed to cover the shortage on operating this year. Will you please assist by sending a contribution to the National Sanitarium Association, 223 College Street, Toronto 2.

Patchwork Known Since Cloth Wore Into Holes

It is said that the art of patchwork has been known and practiced since the first woven cloth wore into holes, observes a writer in the Montreal Herald. The great queens of Egypt were sometimes carried to burial under a canopy of skins, dyed and put together by patchwork. In ancient Greece, China and India they used patchwork applique on banners and flags and later, every European country adopted the habit for war-pennants.

The idea was carried many years later, into the making of quilts or coverlets, the crazy quilt being the oldest known pattern. Such a pattern evolved from economic principles for the many scraps left over from the clothing, in the days when all clothes were manufactured at home, were utilized in the form of a "crazy" patchwork quilt. "Scraps" were exchanged amongst neighbors and the pieces of wool, silk and velvet, were sewn and feather-stitched together.

In the early days, patchwork was taught at school along with the alphabet. Quilting bees became the order of the day and were considered the jolliest social events of the year. Neighbors gathered for miles around, at the home of the woman who was making the quilt. Wooden quilting frames were set up and two or three women worked on a side, while others sat by and chatted until it came time for their turn at the frame.

Kings, Other Commanders Participated in Battles

In the days of the old-style field battles, especially at critical moments, kings and chief commanders themselves went into action. Reclining on the crossed pikes of six grenadiers, Charles XII of Sweden, sorely wounded, had himself carried into the thick of the slaughter. Gustavus Adolphus died while leading his horsemen. In the meantime his adversary, the great Duke of Friedland, rode through the Austrian ranks "encouraging the bold, terrifying the timid with the glare of his baleful eye." At Kolin the great Frederick, gathering up a few shattered remnants, led them against an enemy battery.

Aged seventy-three, Field Marshal Count Schwerin fell at Prague. Snatching the colors from the hands of a wounded ensign, the old gentleman steadied a wavering regiment and led the way. Pipe in mouth and saber in fist, Seydlitz and Blucher rode with their men. At Munda, 46 B. C., Imperial Caesar himself fought as a common soldier. His body, enfeebled by dissipation, his intrepid soul carried on.

Stone Age Sign Language

Old-fashioned sign language, in which married women talk silently to their husbands, has been studied by Soviet scientists. It is an old Caucasian custom. An expedition of the Tiflis Institute of Caucasian studies found the gesture language surviving in isolated villages of Armenia, Georgia, and other sections, and published a scientific account. In this quick and silent language, a woman can represent a word or often a whole phrase by a single gesture. Married women use the system, not only with their husbands, but in speaking with relatives and elderly male strangers. Special scientific interest attaches to sign languages, since this form of communication goes back to the Old Stone age, and probably preceded spoken language.

Legislature Chartered Road

On February 28, 1827, the legislature of Maryland chartered the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, the first American railway to engage in the public transport of passengers and freight. Although the development of railways is closely allied with that of steam locomotion, the first section of this road was intended to by used for the transport of horse-drawn cars. Over it, however, in the summer of 1829, Peter Cooper ran his diminutive Tom Thumb locomotive. The success of this and other practically contemporaneous experiments convinced the management of the road of the practicality of steam as a motive power. Thereafter the Iron Horse became an important factor in the development of transportation and communication in America.

The Bank of England

The Bank of England is not a government institution, but a private banking house, the largest in the world, with the British government as its chief customer. It is controlled by a governor, deputy governor and 24 directors. The Bank of England is a joint-stock bank, the first of its kind in Great Britain. It was organized with a capital of 1,200,000 pounds subscribed by many stockholders, and opened for business January 1, 1695, during the reign of William III.

74-Ton Bell in Japanese Temple

Chion-in Monastery, main temple of the Jodo sect, is one of the biggest temples in Japan. The buildings were erected in 1639. There is a huge bell cast in 1633 in a nearby belfry. It is the second largest bell in Japan, measuring twelve feet in height, nine feet in diameter, and weighing seventy-four tons.

Lacrosse

By Alex Grabb

After a decisive victory over St. Vincent's last Thursday night, 17-6, Streetsville lost to Mimico Monday night, 17-8. Neither game was interesting from a spectator's point of view, both being exhibitions of what a perfectly co-ordinated team can do to one thoroughly disorganized. The only difference in the two games was that Streetsville played a great game against St. Vincent's and a not-so-great one against Mimico. While everybody played gamely and hard, the usual team-work was lacking, which was disastrous against a team like Mimico. We couldn't help but admire the team-work shown by the Lake Shore lads.
After the set-back given us by Mimico, we're not very anxious to forecast the game at Woodgreen on the fifth (to-night). We could, however, prophesy a better game, if the team could get more support. It's very discouraging to hear a scarce dozen people applaud a good play. This will be the last game before the play-offs, so why not turn out at Woodgreen Park and help it to be a win? The team would appreciate it very much if anyone, able to take some players down, would get in touch with the manager, C. R. Evans. The game starts at 7 p.m.—to-night—Thursday, Aug. 5th.

ADVERTIZING PAYS—TRY IT!

The Open Column

The Peel Gazette, sometimes called the "Gas Jet" by the ribald, carried a very outspoken editorial last week to the effect that any person driving at or near the speed of fifty miles an hour at night should be given a jail term of at least one year, and that the car in which this speed was attained should be confiscated. The editorial was inspired by an accident in which a cyclist had been killed by a driver who presumably exceeded the speed limit after dark.
Perhaps the rigor with which the Gazette viewed this accident was inspired by the fact that the editor-in-chief of that journal seldom or never drives a car himself. Although the editorial in question is hardly likely to move the Provincial Government to an amendment of the traffic laws, it might be well for the person who wrote it, and the person who sanctioned its printing in the Gazette to remember that their newspaper is the only organ in Peel County which is openly supporting the Hepburn Government, and that such outspoken comment on traffic laws, even if the implication is an indirect one, might call forth blistering reproof from the powers that be at Queen's Park.
Political parties, during the past few years particularly, and most particularly since the beginning of the depression, have been catering to the less well-to-do element of the population. The vote of the unemployed citizen, and the man who works for a pittance, has assumed much greater importance to the political nabobs, with the result that legislation, in many cases, is designed to tickle the political palate of this division of our citizenry.
Thus, it is entirely improbable that the onus of protection of life on the highways of Ontario will be divided with complete equity for some years to come. Should the suggestion be made in the Ontario Legislature that pedestrians and cyclists be compelled to carry lights when using the provincial highways as a thoroughfare, there would immediately arise a storm of protest to the effect that the poor, pedestrian public could not afford to buy lights to protect their own lives, and that they should not be made to adopt the same precautions as motorists. Yet the motorist is the man who pays for that highway, by paying six cents tax on each gallon of gas he consumes, and license fees for the operation of his motor car or truck.
A motorist who ventured on the highway at night without lights would be fined, and, if he persisted in such folly, he would be refused the right to drive on the province's roads. Yet cyclists may ride after nightfall unprotected save for a small reflector attached to the rear of their machines, and pedestrians may walk the roads without any warning of their presence to approaching motorists whatever.
The reflectors used on bicycles, unfortunately, are of almost no use to a motorist overtaking the bicycle in the face of glaring headlights. And it is not an uncommon practice for cyclists to ride two abreast on provincial highways, taking up as much space on the road as would an automobile.
There can be no gainsaying the fact that a motorist who drives recklessly, at high speed, after dark or at any other time, should be given a stiff jail term to teach him the error of his ways, but it would well behoove the Gazette to take into consideration the fact that the motorist pays for the road, is entitled to use them within reasonable limitations, and should be given protection by the government from people who do not pay for the privilege of using provincial highways, and who, in too many cases, carry this privilege to the point of utter folly.

COOKSVILLE

Richard Moth, Burnhamthorpe farmer, narrowly escaped serious injury at the fire which destroyed William Winters' barn and crop of wheat.
Moth, one of a party engaged in threshing wheat at the Winters farm, was working in the mow when the blaze broke out. Another worker, in the excitement, removed the ladder leading to the mow, and Moth, in leaving the mow, fell to the floor of the barn, severely bruising and straining his right arm.

BEAUTIFY THE CEMETERY

(Brampton Conservator)
The boulevard in front of the old cemetery at Streetsville shows evidence of a desire to improve the street's appearance, but the cemetery proper — this resting place of some of the pioneers of the district is still overgrown with grass and weeds. Across the road men and women spend many a pleasant, and useful, night at the ancient game of bowls. How splendid it would be for all hands to forego the bowls for a night and derive even greater pleasure in improving and beautifying this holy spot, located in the centre of the village, and viewed by the numerous motorists who pass to and fro every day.

The wheat harvest is now on, and many truck loads are being brought in to the village. Wheat is an exceptionally good yield, the price is high, and the farmers who have it to sell will be on easy street this fall. Nowaday threshing is done at the same time as the cutting, which saves a lot of work. Next year the farmers expect to have flour mills in the harvest field so that they will not have to draw the grain to the mill.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON VI.
GOD FEEDS A PEOPLE
(Exodus 16: 1—17: 7.)
Printed Text: Exodus 16: 11-20; 17: 3-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father. James 1: 17.

The Lesson In Its Setting

Place—The wildernes of Sin was located on the eastern side of the Red Sea on the way to Mount Sinai. Rephidim was probably located on the long Wady Ferian in the peninsula of Sinai.

Time—B.C. 1498.

"And Jehovah spake unto Moses, saying, I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel: speak unto them, saying, At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread; and ye shall know that I am Jehovah your God."—It is quite significant that whenever God works a miracle among his own people or before the nations of the earth, he does it that they might know him. This is a phrase which occurs especially throughout the book of Ezekiel. It is quite similar to the one used of our Lord in the performing of some of the miracles mentioned in the New Testament—he there "manifested forth his glory."

"And it came to pass at even, that the quails came up, and covered the camp; and in the morning the dew lay round about the camp." —this is the only place in the entire book of Exodus where the word "quails" appears. (See also Num. 11: 31, 32; Psa., 105: 40.) "Quails belong to the partridge family. They are migratory birds and in March and April come up from Arabia and other southern countries, and cross the Mediterranean Sea in vast numbers; and return southwards from Europe in even more enormous flights towards the end of September. They always fly with the wind. When they alight, which they generally do at night, they cover the ground; and being usually exhausted can be captured by hand in great numbers."

"And when the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness a small round thing, small as the hoar-frost on the ground. And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, What is it? for they knew not what it was. And Moses said unto them, It is the bread which Jehovah hath given you to eat.

"This is the thing which Jehovah hath commanded. Gather ye of it every man, according to his eating; an omer a head, according to the number of your persons, shall ye take it, every man for them that are in his tent. And the children of Israel did so, and gathered some more, some less."—One omer was equivalent to about three quarts and one-fifth of a pint. Ten omers made one ephah.

"And when they measured it with an omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating." — In 2 Cor. 8: 15, St. Paul adopts words from this verse in begging the Corinthians to be liberal in their alms-giving for the poor Christians in Jerusalem. He tells his readers that he has no wish that they should have distress, in order that others should have relief. He desires an equal balance that they should, at the present time, supply, out of their abundance, the needs of their poorer children. All these instructions were to keep the Jewish people from hoarding and to prevent any man from having such an abundant oversupply that he could sell what God had freely given him to his neighbors. Furthermore, it was a perfect provision against gluttony.

"And Moses said unto them, Let no man leave of it till the morning. Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and became foul: and Moses was wroth with them."—Of course among two million people it would hardly be expected that all would be obedient to even God's commands, and yet one would think when the Israelites realized how miraculously God was providing for their needs and how gracious he was to them in delivering them from the bondage of Egypt, they would have gladly yielded their obedience to him in everything which he asked. Yet, how many of us, who are the recipients of the wealth of the grace of God, have not known times when we deliberately went straight against the will of God and grieved him by our stubborn disobedience?

"And the people thirsted there for water; and the people murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore hast thou brought us up out of Egypt —to kill us and our children, and our cattle with thirst? And Moses cried unto Jehovah, saying, What shall I do unto this people? they are almost ready to stone me?"—One of the great penalties of leadership is loneliness. When a man, by his ability, or brilliance, or great achievements, or positions, is lifted high above ordinary men, and even men above the ordinary, he is in a class by himself, and in his own environment, or community, or business, there are few and probably none wth whom he can fellowship. When people began to criticize Moses, there was no man to whom he could turn for consolation—he was driven to God alone. That is the one blessing that can come to us from the strife of tongues, from misunderstanding on the part of other people whom we have tried to bless, from those who should have helped instead of criticizing—we are driven to the bosom of our Father in Heaven.

"And Jehovah said unto Moses, Pass on before the people, and take with thee of the elders of Israel; and thy rod, wherewith thou smotest the river, take in thy hand, and go. Behold, I will stand before thee there upon the rock in Horeb; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink. And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel."—God, in his graciousness, instead of rebuking the people, instructed Moses how he was to satisfy their thirst at once, by taking the rod of which God had spoken to him before, and which he had so powerfully used during the plagues with which God smote Egpyt. (Ex. 4: 2, 4, 17, 20; 7:9—20; 8: 5, 16, 17; 9. 23; 10. 13; 14: 16) The exact location of the rock at Horeb, where this miracle took place, it is not possible now to identify. The names which Moses gave to this place, Massah and Meribah, mean, respectively, "proving," and "strife." Massah is mentioned again in Deut. 6: 16; 9: 22; 33: 8; Ps. 81: 7. How strange that water should come out of a rock!

A rock would seem the last place to choose for the storage of water. But God's cupboards are in very unlikely places. Ravens bring food. The prime minister of Egypt gives corn. Cyrus lets go the people of Israel from Babylon. The Jordan heals the leper. Meal makes poisoned pottage wholesome. Wood makes iron swim. A Samaritan binds up the wounds and save the life of the pillaged traveller. Joseph of Arimathae buries the sacred body in his own new tomb. It is worth while to go to Rephidim to get an insight into the fertility and inventiveness of God's providence. There can be no lack to them that fear Him, and no fear of lack to those who have become acquainted with his secret storehouses.

Better Understanding Between Individuals Matter of Education

NEW YORK.—Before anything can be done about the understanding between nations, said Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt recently, "we must do something about the understanding between individuals."

"And that, I believe, is entirely a matter of education," she added.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in an address said the men and women of one nation must learn more about the people of other nations before they can understand them.

Well folks as we mentioned a few weeks ago, the news about Amos and Andy has finally broke, the new sponsors to be the Campbell Soup Co. This contract will round out more than 11 years of continuous five-times-a-week broadcasting of the same comedy-dramatic serial. It establishes them in a radio class by themselves, and at a time when the famous black-face team is playing to an audience estimated at 40,000,000 weekly.

The new contract will become effective on January 3rd, 1938, immediately following the expiration of their present contract, and will bring the famous pair a substantial increase in salary.

The story of Amos and Andy is a romantic one, and the entire credit for the unrivaled popularity of their program goes to Freeman F. Gosden and Charles J. Correll themselves. Theirs was the idea of the show, theirs the creation of the characters and theirs unaided the important task of writing the script—finishing frequently just in time to go on the air with it.

We offer them the best luck with their new sponsor and we know that the readers of our little paper will be listening to them as they have been doing for the last several years.

Fred Allen signs 2-year Contract

Fred Allen has been signed to a two-year contract for the starring role of host of Town Hall Tonight, starting in the fall. The Shows will continue as full-hour features on Wednesday evenings over the Nation-wide NBC-Red Network.

The fast-witted comedian, who concluded his season on June 30 left New York last week for a vacation in Maine with wife and microphone partner, Portland Hoffa. Later in the summer they will head West to Hollywood, where Fred is scheduled to make a motion picture for Darryl Zanuck on the Twentieth-Century Fox lot. In the meantime the versatile humorist and master-of-ceremonies, Walter O'Keefe, will carry on at the Bedlamville Town Hall during the hot weather spell.

Allen, whose real name is John F. Sullivan, launched his professional career as a juggler, performing tricks as he learned from a book found in a Boston Public Library. He made juggling funny, billed himself as "The World's Worst Juggler."

Gogo DeLys, who travelled from New York to Hollywood last Wednesday to make a guest appearance on Ken Murray's program plans to continue her journey further. On August 20, Gogo will meet her sister, who will arrive from her home in Shanghai, then they will proceed to Vancouver for the first DeLys family reunion in five years.

..rry McNaughton, Phil Baker's wackey lackey, "Bottle," has dropped his stooging role and microphone monicker for the first time when he appeared as a comedian in his own right on Harry VonZell's "Summer Stars" program last Sunday.

McNaughton, who had established himself as a comedy favorite on the English stage, migrated to America in the twenties. In 1933 he met Phil Baker on a motion picture lot. When the accordian-playing jester came to radio he obtained McNaughton for the all-important "Bottle." As a result the Englishman has become one of the air's best known characters. But until Von Zell invited him to appear on the latter's show, he never received an opportunity to display his talents as a headline comic.

America Cup Races on CBS

A trio of internationally famed yachting authorities will assist Ted Husing in the intricate task of covering the America's Cup races off Newport R.I. starting July 31. WABC-Columbia network listeners will hear Sherman Hoyt and Edward P. Foster, American experts, and John Scott Hughes, Great Britain's outstanding boating authority in addition to Husing's vivid descriptions of the more exciting phases of the races. While Columbia's Department of Sports has not yet completed all plans, pending more explicit information from the America's Cup Committee, it will place this able quartet at strategic points on the 30 mile course.

Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians are again to be the guest Orchestra at the Exhibition this year, they will do their network programs direct from the big dance hall and as usual with their assisting artists they are sure to create a sensation with their playing and showmanship.

It is rumored about that the O'Keefe sing song that takes place at Sunnyside Beach each Sunday evening may be continued during the Fall and Winter months in one of Toronto's large Hotels, we hope this is so because it not only is an exceedingly good program but it also gives to the people attending a feeling of good fellowship and when any one puts their head back and sings at the top of their voice they are happy and gay and this old world sure could do with a lot more lightheartedness.

Horace Lapp and his boys who are playing at Banff are sure making a big hit out there, rumours have it that they almost own the place already, are invited everywhere and the guests state that their music is second to none on the continent. Petite Madeline Peddler who is the vocalist with the band has been voted one of the most popular girls out there and that is something. They will be returning to the Royal York this fall to do their stuff for the Big Hotel this fall and winter.

CFRB are already fixing up the Crystal Palace at the "Ex." in preparation for the big times that take place there in a few weeks, their mechanics and engineers are hurrying up their job and it is said that is will be one of the beauty spots and sights worth seeing when the big show gets under way.

Several low powered commercial stations have asked Ottawa to let them increase their output for the coming season, this is under consideration by the CBS at the present time and we may have better reception of some of the nearby stations as a result of this action.

Before Apple Picking

If there be rain, let it come softly. Wind
Be quiet now. If rain must come at all,
Let it drip gently from the skies of fall.
Be still, O storms, lest this rich fruit be thinned
By the unruly hands of any gale
That charges from a sultry, green-black sky
Upon orchards sprawled across the high
Plume-crested hills of this, my country. Hail
Withhold your knives. Ah, smoke-hazed, blue-sky weather,
Sunny and warm at noon, ah, crisp and still Frost-glittering nights, abide. Wind, be a feather Descending softly past this tree-dark hill,
Till every globed red fruit is gathered in Safely to slatted crate or cellar bin.

TERROR MOUNTAIN

By MADELEINE SHARPS BUCHANAN

Three bandits seize a transcontinental bus, and force the driver to guide it up a mountainside to a lonely log shack. They want a valuable secret formula believed to be in the possession of one of the passengers, Finley Trump. To add to the sinister situation, a raging forest fire, creeping up the mountain, traps the group. The first night, one of the bandits is mysteriously strangled with his own bandana, and the next night, a second one meets the same fate. Then, Finley Trump is found strangled, and it is discovered that Kenneth Jenkins, browbeaten little man, has disappeared. Meanwhile, Miss Tulsa Jones, school teacher, has been doing some private detective work. And young Dr. Nick Strand and May Lawrence, pretty nurse, have found time to become engaged.

CHAPTER VIII

Breakfast was a hit-or-miss meal. No one had any appetite, each thinking that it might be their last meal. But everyone made an effort to eat—except Mrs. Jenkins, who still was asleep.

"We gotta rouse ourselves," Jim Somers told Red Doyle, "We're gettin' so murder don't mean a thing. And that's bad. We've hardly asked a question about old Trump. One of us——"

"Well, Jenkins is gone—let him shoulder it," said Doyle shortly.

"He just beat it," shrugged the bus driver. "He's no murderer. But say—did you know the cash the bandits took from us is gone? It was in a leather case under the pile of guns. Now the case has disappeared. Do you suppose little Jenkins grabbed it before he beat it?"

"And strangled Trump on his way?" said Doyle, suddenly interested. "Trump saw him stealing and ——"

"Rats!" Somers cut in. "Jenkins couldn't strangle a fly! Maybe he took the money, but he didn't kill Trump——"

Just then, Tommy Archer came running into the house, breathless and excited.

"He's out there in the road," he gasped. "I seen him. He's 'most dead, all black and his clothes are burned—gosh, he's a sight!"

Doyle seized the boy's arm.

"Who's a sight?" he snapped.

"Mr. Jenkins! I was walkin' down the road, and there he was!"

Doyle and Somers rushed out, to find Jenkins lying unconscious, a short distance down the road. They carried him back to the house, laid him on his cot, and called Strand.

"Can't talk to him now," was the doctor's order, after he had done what he could for the little man. "I can't say yet whether he will pull through. But there isn't a thing on him which could have belonged to Finley Trump. Not even a cent of money."

"And he had no bag when he beat it," said Amelia Bangor. "He didn't have a thing in his hands."

Miss Tulsa Jones felt her excitement growing, but she said little.

May remained to watch over the sick man, while the others dispersed. The men walked about aimlessly, smoking. Tommy stood in the kitchen doorway with an important eye on the bound Stutter. Amelia Bangor sat in the living room, twisting her hands and biting her lips.

Miss Jones, who sat near her, saw an apple on the table and suddenly tossed it to Miss Bangor.

"Eat that," she advised. "That'll give you something to do."

As Miss Bangor obediently munched the apple, Miss Jones sat very still, looking out the window.

Dusk was falling when Miss Jones stole into the bedroom where Mr. Jenkins still lay unconscious. May sat near by, dejected and weary, her curls damp on her brow.

"I'd like to do a little exploring," whispered Miss Jones.

"Help yourself," shrugged May. "But don't talk."

Miss Jones didn't talk. She went about her search quietly but thoroughly. And in one of Finley Trump's suitcases, she found a newspaper clipping upon which she pounced. She studied it for a long time. Then, with a secret smile, she thrust it into the bosom of her dress.

She found Jim Somers standing outside when she went out presently for a breath of air.

"I'd rather die fighting than go out like this," he said. "Rats in a trap!"

Red Doyle came up the road with Tommy.

"It may not reach us until morning," he said. "I fancied I heard a plane but it couldn't do any good if it flew over us, except to take news to the press."

"Hard to see a plane in this red haze," muttered Somers, gazing upward. "And I'd as lief not see one."

Miss Jones watched his restless pacing.

"If it will make you feel better," she said, "it's my opinion we're going to get out of this. The murderer knows it. The murderer has known it almost from the start."

"What have you got up your sleeve?" demanded Doyle.

"There is a way out, or Finley Trump would be alive at this moment, and none of our money would have been touched. It wouldn't have mattered."

As she spoke, May appeared in the doorway of the house, suppressed excitement in her face.

"Mr. Jenkins is about to talk!" she announced. "He knows who the murderer is!"

Salaried Midwives Britain's Attack On Maternal Mortality

SOUTHAMPTON.—A comprehensive service of salaried midwives as a first-line attack on the problem of maternal mortality is announced by Sir Kingsley Wood, Minister of Health.

The service, which will be launched August 1, is designed to secure for every mother, whatever her circumstances, the help of a qualified midwife, and also greatly to improve the status and conditions of the midwife profession.

Although these and other steps have been necessary in order that motherhood might reach a high level of safety, Sir Kingsley said the number of women who died in childbirth has been relatively small.

He said the young married woman could be told with confidence, that if she is a normal, healthy woman and will take the ordinary and sensible precautions advised by her doctor or the ante-nat alcentre, there need be no anxiety.

College Has Course For Hotel Chefs

Must Be Able To Prepare Table d'Hote Dinner, Serve and Profit

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Ability to prepare a table d'hote dinner, serve it properly and make a profit on the meal will determine the grade of a number of students at Tuskegee Institute.

Practical knowledge of foodstuffs, their preparation and serving is the aim of "in-service" hotel cooks and chefs taking the institute's short course in commercial dietetics.

Examinations consist of a series of dinners divided in three projects: a la carte, table d'hote and cafeteria. The examination room is Tuskegee's cafeteria where 3,000 meals are served daily.

A hotel manger, W. T. Wilson of Montgomery, Ala., started the idea of a school for cooks and chefs when he mentioned southern hostel men had difficulty in getting good cooks.

Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of the institute, added a three-year course in commercial dietetics to the college curriculum. In all, 56 students were enrolled. But the short-course was also added so cooks already in service on hotel jobs might obtain training.

A New Jersey hotel manager drove to Alabama in a station wagon to get six Negroes who will work in his establishment. Other graduates of the school have been placed in Alabama, Virginia, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, New York, Ohio and Michigan.

The faculty this summer includes R. G. Booker head waiter of a Richmond hotel, and Chef Carson Gulley of the University of Wisconsin.

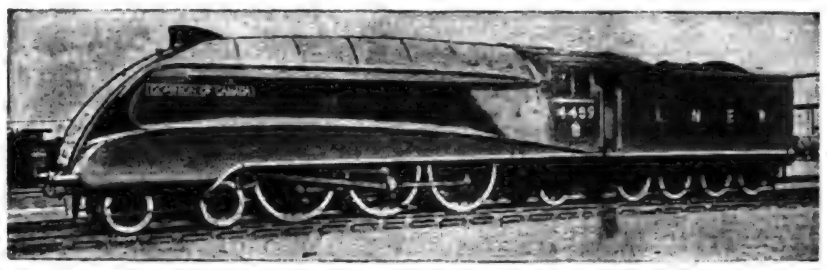
Normal Children Act Their Age



Ten-Year-Old Should Not Play With Toys Five-Year-Old Enjoys

There are dozens of growing epochs, fairly distinct from each other, in every child's life. Therefore, discipline and punishments should be based upon motive and timeliness. Certain allowances should be made for the driving power of the mind.

In other matters, too a child will not only act his age, but should. Unless his intelligence quotient is under average, the ten-year-old should not be playing with things a five-year-old enjoys. This is important, therefore, it is best for him to have some companions of approximate years. He should be skating, riding, constructing things and playing ball, not fussing too much with sand piles or making paper chains, any more than the five-year--old should be engrossed in a rattle.

It follows that if we expect a child to act his age, by the same token he cannot always control the urges of his years. He varies, but he goes on making mistakes, not too deliberately but, as we say, because the Old Nick drives him. And Old Nick is just himself.

Fast Locomotive Honors Canada

With Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner to London, at the throttle, the new locomotive, "Dominion of Canada," was put into service recently at King's Cross Station in London. It is the first of five new locomotives which will, commencing July 5, haul the "Coronation" streamlined trains over the L.N.E.R. line between London and Edinburgh. The trip will be made in six hours, an average speed of 65½ miles per hour, the fastest run in the British Empire. A general view of the locomotive, which carries a whistle donated by the C.P.R., is shown in the photo.

Mothers-in-Law Club Is Started

Five Texas Women Organize An Association To "Preserve American Home"

AUSTIN, Texas. — Five Texas mothers-in-law bade their jibed-at sisters throughout the United States to become members of the incorporated "national association of mothers-in-law clubs," but Gene Howe wasn't on hand to cheer them.

Howe, editor-publisher of an Amarillo newspaper, has been saying nice things about mothers-in-law since 1934. That year he made the country mother-in-law conscious by launching an annual celebration to honor all such relatives, in penance for the jokes he printed at the expense of his wife's mother, Mrs. Nellie Donald.

Recently Mrs. Donald and four colleagues were granted a charter for a corporation under Texas laws, designed to "preserve the American home."

This was taking place while editor Howe was visiting his mother in Westport, Conn., according to Amarillo sources.

THIS JAM IS A PEACH

It's hard to believe that peach time is here already and that should be a warning! It wasn't very long ago that we started with strawberries, the first fruit of the season and came along down the whole line of summer fruits till we have arrived at peaches and grapes.

These are the fruits which herald the approach of fall, and that means that the jam and jelly season is just about over.

To some people, this year's strawberries are but a memory, but not to those smart women who have the goodness of the strawberries sealed safely in glasses and lined up in their jam cupboards—along with cherries, raspberries and currants. Don't pass by the rare treat of Ripe Peach Jam whatever you do! When putting up canned peaches, pickled peaches and spiced peaches, save some of the fruit—the ripest and most luscious—and treat yourself next winter to all of that fresh golden beauty and juicy succulence found in ripe peach jam.

It has no end of unusual uses. It makes a wonderful spread for necessary in jam and jelly making. By this modern short-boil method you no longer need to boil fruit and sugar down to concentrate the jellying substance in the fruit, because pectin is that jellying substance which has been extracted from a fruit abounding in it, concentrated and standardized ready for use.

Apart from the goodness of jams and jellies made this new and modern way—apart from the grand color and quickness—it's a sure method! You simply follow the recipe—a simple recipe at that, and you're assured of success every time. No such thing as luck or the weather to be considered. You get perfect results every time—whether you're an experienced cook or just a beginner.

Ripe Peach Jam

3½ cups (1 3-4 lbs.) prepared fruit
7½ cups (3¼ lbs.) sugar
1 bottled fruit pectin.

To prepare fruit, peel about 2½ pounds fully ripe fruit. (To peel, put about three peaches at a time into a colander and dip the colander down into a saucepan of boiling water for a minute. Be sure the water in the saucepan is deep enough to cover the peaches. This method loosens the skins, without softening the fruit and so makes the peaches easy to skin). After skinning the peaches, halve them and take out the pits, then grind and pulp in a food chopper or chop them fine.

Measure sugar and prepared fruit, tightly packed, into large kettle, mix well, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard for one minute. Remove from fire and stir in bottled pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just five minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 eight-ounce glasses.

If desired, about three teaspoons spice may be added to make spiced peach jam or if you are making several batches of jam and want an added bit of bouquet in one of them, you might crush a few peach pits and put them in with the fruit. That will give your jam a sophisticated almond note that many people like.

Age of Flowers Affects Lasting

NEW YORK.—The age of flowers when they are cut has some bearing on the length of time they will last in an arrangement. Just as bud roses last longer than full-grown ones, so any flower will last longer if cut shortly after it opens. A container should not only be appropriate, but also hold enough water to sustain the number of flowers in it for 24 hours. Arrangements last longer in shaded summer rooms than in steam-heated winter ones. Strong sunlight and draughts decidedly shorten the longevity of a flower arrangement. The proper care of flowers before using them in an arrangement need consume only a few minutes, but the effort will be repaid in longer enjoyment of the completed result

SYMBOLS OF SUMMER

"The summer comes with flower and bee,—"

THE beauty of flowers is an attraction and a challenge to every camera owner. Frankly, good flower pictures are not easy to take and for that reason success brings more than ordinary satisfaction to the amateur photographer.

Proper lighting, a large image and patient work with the camera are the essentials of flower photography. The best camera to use is one with a long-extension bellows, enabling one to focus close to the flower, and having a ground glass focusing screen on which you can see the image before snapping the shutter.

But, if you haven't such a camera, good work may be done with ordinary folding or box cameras, provided a portrait attachment is used to obtain a large image. This supplementary lens, which comes with a table of focusing distances, makes it possible to work within arm's length of the subject. Always use a tape measure to determine exactly the specified distance between lens and flower. Panchromatic film gives the best rendering of the tone contrasts among the colors.

Flower pictures need to be vividly sharp; hence, a small lens opening should usually be used—f.16 or f.22—or the smallest stop on box cameras, and the camera should be on a tripod or held securely with a camera clamp. The exposure should be from ⅛ to one second.

Wind is a problem, of course. At such close distances movement of the subject makes more difference. It is worth while to wait for a moment when the blossom is motionless. If you find the wind too blowy, devise a wind-breaker of some sort.

Hazy days, or when the sun is shining under light clouds, makes the ideal time for flower pictures. Direct bright sunshine is not desirable, but if you can't wait for better conditions, give your subject the protection of a cheesecloth screen. Better results are obtained in the early morning or late afternoon when the light is less harsh and comes from the side. This is especially true for cup-shaped flowers. Nearby foliage, or other blossoms not wanted, may be tied back with string or cut away. A piece of stiff gray cardboard placed behind the flower often is a better background than the natural one.

Sometimes, if you are patient enough to wait, a roving bee will enter the chalice of your flower. Click! Your patience is rewarded with a picture that is a perfect symbol of summertime.

Early History Halton County

Editor's Note.

The Review has arranged to publish two columns every week in reviewing some of the historical events of bygone days, and live in memory again the lives of our ancestors, the pioneers, the brave men and women who blazed the trail for us, in what was always called the banner county of Ontario, the County of Halton.

The writer of this history is the brother of the late J. D. McGregor (Rob Roy) a well-known writer of old pioneer history. These two brothers were always partners in everything they did all their lives. In books of fiction, Dickens and Thomas Hardy were their favourites. But these writers of imaginary characters did not satisfy either of these boys. They wanted the real, living actors on the great stage of life. And before they were the age of 8 and 10, would be found every chance they could get, at a threshing, sitting beside the men when they would be resting their horses, the fine team of horses on the old horsepower threshing machine, often needed and got a rest. During these resting spells, when the men would be chatting, or when the men would be resting under a tree, after following a reel reaper, binding the sheaves by hands, these boys would be there, sent with some refrshment to the weary workers about. Wherever men were gathered together for a chat these boys liked to hear them, the sayings and doings of their grandmothers, grandfathers, fathers and mothers. These old pioneer settlers in Halton county was sweet music to these boy's ears ,which was laid up in memory s storehouse for future use.-

Trafalgar Township

The County of Halton is bounded on the North by the County of Wellington, on the East by the County of Peel, on the South by Lake Ontario, on the West by the County of Wentworth and the Township of Puslinch in the County of Waterloo. It contains 229,555 acres. In 1861 its assessed value was $6,702.-993, with a population of about 22,794. County Town, Milton. Halton has four Townships, Trafalgar, Nelson, Esquesing and Nassagaweya.

In the beginning of the nineteenth century, the front of Trafalgar was surveyed and 960 acres, where Oakville now stands, were left as an Indian reserve. In 1824 the first settler arrived. He was Joseph Brant Anderson. His father, who lived at Forty Mile Creek, was a warm personal friend of Joseph Brant, the Indian chief.

The chief promised if the baby boy was called after him he would deed him 200 acres of land. This was done and the boy was called Joseph Brant Anderson. His home for the first winter at the reserve was beside a giant hemlock that had fallen down.

Against this poles had been piled and covered with green boughs and in this primitive abode his slumbers were often disturbed by the howling of wolves, which would try to tear an entrance into the tent. Trafalgar, back of the reserve, was well settled. On Dundas street in the Sixteen Hollow a town had sprung up. Esquesing, Nassagawa. Erin and other Townships were all producing grain and the advantages of the natural harbor at the mouth of the Sixteen Mile Creek was apparent to the business men of the day. Probably the trade that presented the greatest possibilities was the white oak staves. Trafalgar was covered in many places with oak trees three and four feet in diameter and reaching an immense height in the air.

Port Credit harbor had been doing a large trade and by old records precious to 1826 immense number of staves had been floated down the Credit River loaded on schooners at Port Credit and taken across the lake.

The reserve was finally ceded to the crown and on the 10th day of July, 1827, Thomas Ridout, surveyor general, had it sold by public auction at Crook's Mill, Nelson. It was bought by Col. William Chisholm. He obtained a charter from the Government and began building a harbor which was completed so as to admit vessels in 1830.

The first post-office in Halton was opened in 1820 at Post's Corners and was called Trafalgar. This was the only one at the time between little York and Dundas, and for many years the only one in Halton. Mr. McColl, of the Scotch Block, carried the mail to Esquesing settlers through the blazed trail in the forests. The first post-office in Esquesing was called after the Township. It was situated on the ninth lot of the seventh line with Henry Fyle as post master. It was removed to Stewartown in 1840, but was still known by the name of Esquesing. Stewartown was the seat of Municipal government after 1849. The Orange Tories headed by William Thompson, and the Scotch Block Radicals, headed by John McNaughton, often had serious clashes. These two leaders tried to influence their followers to more peaceful paths. About 1850 a treaty of peace was arrived at and quietness for a time reigned. In 1818 one of the first settlers in Trafalgar Township was John Beaty, from the County of Caven, Ireland, who in 1819 drew from the Crown Lot 7, concession 4. The country at that time was an unbroken forest. Little York, now Toronto, was 35 miles away, with no town intervening, and only a blazed trail a large part of the way. The first winter was one of intense loneliness. Sometimes for three weeks Mr. Beaty did not see a person. Wild animals were very numerous. The wolves were specially troublesome, sometimes at night trying to tear entrance into his modest log cabin. In order to break the solitude this pioneer wooed and won a wife, Miss Elizabeth Stewart, but the Canadian woods contained no clergyman. Availing themselves of a provision in the law that where there was no clergyman of the Church of England within eighteen miles, the ceremony could be performed by a Justice of the Peace, these young people decided to take this avenue to happiness. On trees at different places was posted the following notice:

The annual carnival of the Col. Alex. Thomson Branch, No. 82, Canadian Legion, was held at PortCredit on Civic Holiday with about 3000 people attending. There were races for the children, vaudeville show and clowns, old and modern dancing and fireworks. Proceeds will be used to assist families of needy veterans.

Brampton Lacrosse team defeated the Marlboroughs Tuesday evening by 16—3. The uneven score would make you think the game was very much one-sided, but the Streetsville spectators enjoyed it.

The Independent Foresters are putting on a grand concert at Rosalea Park, Brampton, Wednesday, Aug. 11th, at 8 30 p.m.D.S.T. There will be 100 performers. Lucky Ticket Prize, Solid Walnut Table. Your admission ticket may win this prize. Adults ticket only 25c. Concert is in aid of Brampton Citizens Band.... Tickets for sale at The ReviewOffice Let's Go !

A deer was seen last Monday on the Fifth Line, West, near Norval, in Mr. W.P. Laidlaw's turnip field. A number of Streetsville boys were picking berries there at the time.

Marriage Notice

Whereas John Beaty and Elizabeth Stewart, both of Trafalgar, are desirous of intermarrying with each other and there being no parson or minister of the Church of England within eighteen miles of them or either of them, these are therefore to notify all persons who know any impediment why they may not be joined together in matrimony to give notice to James McBride, Esquire, Trafalgar, one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace. Given under my hand in Trafalgar, September, 1823. James McBride, J.P.

This union, probably the first marriage in the new survey of Trafalgar, was a happy one. In their modest log cabin thirteen children were born, nine sons and four daughters, who grew up to be robust men and women. One son, W. C. Beaty, took a specialty prominent part in public affairs. He secured a certificate from the superintendent of schools, Mr. Thornton, and for a time taught school. He afterwards attended the grammar school then held at Palermo, then taught by Alex Hall. He was one of the first men in the Township to own a mowing machine. In 1854 he operated the mowing machine, and on the following year at a match, he cut a half acre in thirteen minutes and forty-five seconds, thereby winning a prize of a plow, presented by the manufacturers, Messrs. Billington & Forsyth, Dundas. In 1855 the County Agricultural Society offered a prize to the man who could most successfully operate a reaping machine. Mr. Beaty won this with a machine of Lawrence & Son, cutting in 12 days 168 acres while the sun was up. In 1850 the settlement had progressed so well that they wished to have a post office. John White was then the M.P. for the county. He told them to choose a suitable name and he would have the office established.

A meeting was held to choose a name. T. F. Howell, father-in-law of Dr. Buck, had built a store and hotel (now part of the store of Mr. Robertson). The meeting was held in the hotel dining room. Out of compliment to the host they decided to call the office Howellville. The appreciative landlord treated them well, and the name was forwarded to John White, M.P., parliament then being in session. Howell had come from the United States and White despised him as a Yankee. His blood boiled at the thought of calling the office after him. Near where the Whites had lived in their beloved Ireland, was a place called Omagh, capital of Tyrone County. And this was the name given Omagh post office and was the name it was known by until the establishment of the rural mail delivery, then this office was abolished.

The first school was built in 1828 where the Methodist church now stands. Here services were held until 1838. The second school was built on John Biggar's farm, afterwards Ed. McCanns. In 1870 the present large brick school was built. When Mr. Little was Inspector and Miss Emily House was teacher, sixty pupils attended. Mr. Little advocated a second teacher. In 1835 Rev. Mr. Lumsden, a Presbyterian minister, came to the neighborhood. Richard Moore gave the ground for a Presbyterian Church and cemetery on lot 11, concession 3, also supplying all the lumber used for this frame church. This church served until the present modern brick church was built where the Presbyterians now worship.

In 1849, while attending Normal school in Toronto, W. C. Beaty professed conversion and in 1850 was mainly instrumental in building the Disciple's Church at Omagh. For years he was an able and acceptable preacher.

This church is a frame building on lot 10, concession 3. It is in good repair, where services are held regularly. In the cemetery, on the monuments clustered around the church, are many familiar pioneers' names, like guardians of their faith.

THE DOG TAX AND LIVE STOCK PROTECTION ACT

This legislation protects live stock owners against the ravages of dogs

This Act requires:—

The taxing of dogs and the issuing of dog tags.

—where live stock (Cattle and Sheep) are injured, the owner shall notify the local Valuer or the Reeve of the Municipality within forty-eight hours after discovery of the damage.

—the local Valuer must make two reports, one for the Municipality, and one for the owner of the livestock.

—if either of these is not satisfied with the report, he may appeal to the Minister of Agriculture for another Valuer by depositing $25.00. This money is returned if the appeal is successful but is forfeited if the appeal is lost.

—the award made by the Valuer appointed by the Minister is final.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"Here's Dad, it's his turn now!"

Friday night's a special night with the Watsons. Promptly at eight the telephone bell tinkles and Bob's hearty voice comes booming over the wire — then Muriel's and the youngsters'. "Long Distance keeps us young," say their grandparents. "It's the cheapest pleasure we know of."

Like the Watson family, you too will find Long Distance the ideal way of keeping in touch with out-of-town relatives or friends. The low cost will surprise you!

Charleston Holds Claim of "Most Historic City"

Charleston claims to be "America's most historic city." In 1670, those who settled Charleston planned not a frontier post, but a great city.

In July of 1774, at the meeting of the Provincial congress in Charleston there was set up the first independent government in America. On nearby Sullivans island at what is now Fort Moultrie the great British forces under Sir Peter Parker were defeated in 1776, for the colonists' first decisive victory of the Revolution. In Charleston harbor nearly a hundred years later was fired the shot that precipitated the great Confederate war.

From this seaport in 1784 the first shipment of cotton to Europe was made; here in 1830 the "Best Friend," first steam locomotive train ever to operate in America regularly with passengers and freight, made its maiden trip; in 1735 the first fire insurance company in America was begun and in 1822 the first fireproof building was erected. The first submarine ever to function in warfare was Hunley's boat, used by the Confederates in 1863.

Charleston's streets have been trodden by a long procession of adventurers, pirates, soldiers, statesmen, men of affairs and prominence, artists, historians, painters and poets.

Folklore of Agates Is Held Most Interesting

Of all the folklores surrounding various gems, jewels and semi-precious stones, that connected with agate is one of the most interesting, says the Chicago Field Museum News.

In ancient Persia the Magi believed that agates could stop a storm or hurricane. For this purpose the stones were thrown into a boiling cauldron, and if they turned the water cold they were regarded as possessing the necessary magical power. According to the ideas of the Magi, the stones, to be really efficacious, had to be fastened with lion's hair; they rejected hyena's hair as being provocative of family discord. An agate containing only one color was believed by the Magi to render an athlete invincible.

In ancient Crete certain varieties of agate were held sacred and regarded as capable of healing wounds inflicted by spiders and scorpions. This theory was credited even by the ancient scholar Pliny, who took as proof the fact that in Sicily, where many agates are found, scorpions actually do lose their venom. In India, among the Mahometans, there was a widespread belief that agate had the power of stopping the flow of blood, presumably because of its blood-red color.

Ceiba, Cuba's Peace Tree

The ceibas do not grow as tall in Cuba as in the Bahamas but they grow more prolifically. There are ceibas in every direction. Havana's tree marking the spot where Cuba's first mass was said is a ceiba. Its peace tree is a ceiba. In Yucatan, the ceiba is both loved and feared. One of the pet hobgoblins of the Maya is the x-tabai, which appears in the form of a beautiful young woman in a fine huipl, and with long hair. She induces a young man to follow her into the bush and there chokes him to death. The x-tabai is identified with the ceiba tree. It is her home.

Trees, Flowers of Bible Times

The International Bible Encyclopedia lists the following trees and flowers as growing in gardens in Palestine in Bible times: Oleander, vitex (species of verbena), plane, carob, hawthorn, sumach, laurel, broom, myrtle, buglos, scabiosa, squills, thistles, acacia, arbutus, oleaster, styras (mock orange), Judas tree, caper, rockrose, villosus (poppy), crocus, cyclamen, narcissi, anemones, ranunculus, gladioli, iris, hyacinths, flax and borage.

Use for Fungi

A number of lesser known chemical products are prepared through the agency of fungi. The gallic acid used in the most permanent and expensive inks is extracted from gall nuts after they have been acted upon by ordinary molds. A highly specific fungus converts sugar into gluconic acid, the calcium salt of which is an important drug, or rather food, in the treatment of calcium deficiencies in the body.

Doubt as to Date

Shortly before the Civil war a Massachusetts Supreme court reversed a conviction because its emigrant justices claimed the prosecution had not made the date of the crime complete and understandable. The record merely read "on the 15th day of July, 1855." It did not state whether the year was 1855 A. D. or 1855 B. C. — Collier's Weekly.

Goatherd Finds Oracle Site

The site of the oracle at Delphi, Greece, was discovered, legend says, by a goatherd who found his herd crying and prancing wildly about a chasm from which issued a stream of intoxicating air. The priestess who made the prophecies of the oracle used to sit over this, but either the chasm itself was legendary or it has disappeared in modern times.

The Review vs Port Credit News

Found at Last—the perfect man—It is the Editor of the Port Credit News. In its last issue that news paper printed a dirty remark about The Streetsville Review. Of course The News never makes mistakes. Its motto evidently is "No hits, no runs, no errors." Occasionally we read The News, and are surprised at its excellence, never any errors, never any misplaced lines, never any unkind remarks about anybody. As a rule a newspaper editor is too busy to look for mistakes—but not so with The News Editor. The News has a side line, selling lead pencils and scribblers to school children ten months in the year (no fault to find about that) but how he ever gets in the time during the school holidays is hard to understand. We suppose he is kept busy during July and August looking for mistakes in the country papers which come into his office—and he will find plenty. But he will never find any in The News. One thing we would like to know is —why don't they print the name of the Editor on the top of the Front Page so readers would know who it is?

Good reports are heard from the threshing outfits which are busy among the farmers at the present time. Surely the lean years have passed away.

Ralph Dunn of Weston, who has been visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ward, has returned home much improved in health after absorbing the nice fresh air which always abounds in Streetsville.

Next Thursday, Aug. 12th, will be Derry Day. Some of the local Orange Lodges are going to the celebration at Shelburne. They expect a big crowd.

Why not go with the Streetsville Juvenile Lacrosse team this evening and help them to win their game with Woodgreen? The Thistles need your support.

We hope the citizens of Streetsville are not closing their eyes to the fact that the serpent of strong drink is a menace to the lives of the young here. Why sit and close our eyes and let this danger threatening our village pass unheeded? The remark has been heard "Let the ministers look after it, I am not my brother's keeper." These were the sentiments of a murderer.

A carload of visitors from Hamilton who formerly lived in the neighborhood of the Eighth and Ninth Lines Trafalgar, called on old friends and found but few left, on Sunday and Monday. They visited the graves of their dead in the little cemetery beside the Black Branch Creek. They were entertained in the Nunan home. Two sisters of Mr. Nunan were among the number, Mrs. Fagan and Mrs. McConville of Hamilton.

Three former residents of our town —Mrs. John (Ada) Field, Toronto; Mrs. B. T. (Ethel) LaForte, Mont Toursville, Penn.; Mrs. H.L. (Ruth) Gorman, Chicago, Illinois, called on relatives and old friends here yesterday, and spent a happy hour talking about events which happened here many years ago when they attended Streetsville schools. They are the daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs John Jones, and lived on Tannery Street, west of the C.P.R. tracks.—One brother, Arthur, also survives. He lives in the States.

Assessor's Job Goes Abegging

The Village Council did not get a single application for the position of Assessor in answer to their advertisement last week. We don't know whether its because the salary offered was not sufficient or whether we have a person capable of doing the work. Most of the former Assessors are out of town at present. However, the Council must have some person to do this work, and will in all likelihood, negotiate with any applicant.

The Council is again asking for applications for the position, and would like to have them in by noon next Monday. Its a chance for somebody to make some easy money. We would take it ourselves — if we had the time.

London Sparrows Fed in Memory of New Jersey Woman

Fresh Crumbled Bread Tossed to Birds During June, July and August

LONDON. — Today during the lunch hour two immaculately dressed waiters marched from a de luxe West End hotel, each carrying half a loaf of fresh bread wrapped in a clean napkin. On the smooth lawn of Embankment Gardens, adjoining, they solemnly crumbled the bread and tossed it to sparrows that quickly gathered.

This act, performed daily during each June, July and August, rain or shine, is a living memorial in perpetuity to Mrs. Alexander Angus, a New Jersey woman who fell in love with London's sparrows 18 years ago. She died early last year.

Her husband created a trust fund making an allowance to two of the hotel's waiters for feeding the birds daily during the summer, as his wife had done for many years. Punctually at 2.30 each afternoon they march out, dressed just as when they serve the hotel's wealthy clients, and keep the tryst of the woman who lies buried more than 3,000 miles away.

Different waiters get the job each year. This year they are Harold Osborne and Jim Hoggarth. They like the chore, and well they should.

"It gives us a bit of air and sun and a welcome break in the luncheon rush," said Jim, "and besides we get an extra 'fiver' (£5 or about $25) from Mr. Angus' fund, which is handy. The hotel furnishes the bread. It's not leave-overs, no sir; it's fresh cut from today's bread."

Portable Barnyard

The boy or girl is not really educated who has never seen a farm, and the educators are becoming aware of the fact. The parks department of New York is doing something about it, and is seeking to bring a glimpse of the country into the congested city areas. A portable barnyard makes a tour of the playgrounds, with three-day stops at each point: the red barn inside the wooden barnyard fence, with cow and calf, pigs, ducks, turkeys, all making jolly noises according to their kind.

So successful has the experiment proved that a portable garden is also going the rounds of the crowded playgrounds, and the slum children are seeing for the first time, roses and marigolds, fuchsias and forget-me-nots, sweet corn and potatoes, all in their natural setting and some of them in various stages of growth—New Outlook.

Summer Feeding Of Dairy Cows

Cows Kept at High Level of Milk Yield Without Grain

Production from dairy cows during the summer can be kept at a high level without the feeding of large amounts of grain or other supplementary feed in the barn, if suitable pasture is available. At the Dominion Experimental Station, Fredericton, N.B., for the past two years the cows have been turned on fertilized pastures about the middle of May and grain feeding was discontinued on May 20. Production was greater after the cows had been on pasture one month than before they were turned to pasture. The feed cost of milk and butterfat production during the summer months was only one quarter as much as during the period of barn feeding.

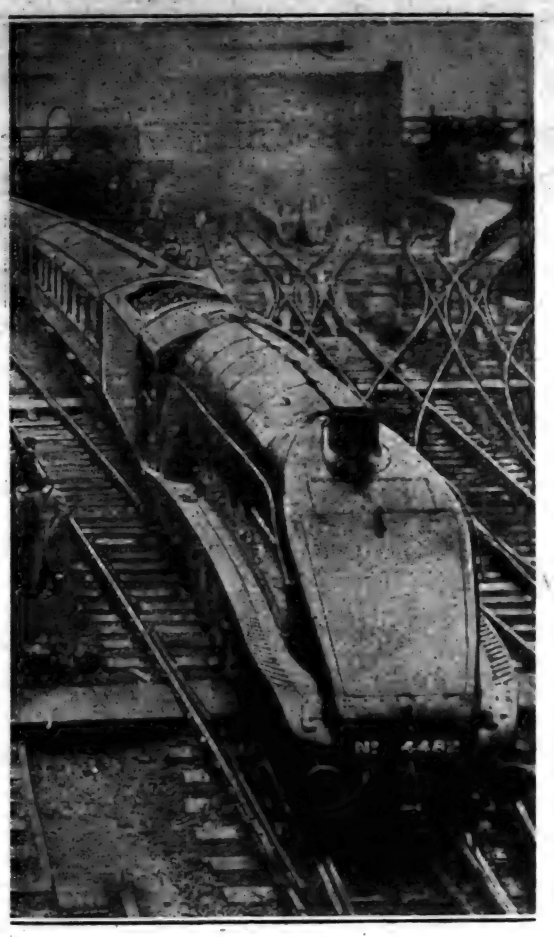
After the fertilized pastures had been grazed short early in the season, the cows were turned to the unimproved pastures to take advantage of the natural June flush of same and to permit the fertilized pastures to recover. The fertilized pastures were rested whenever it was thought advisable and advantage was taken of aftermath on hay fields, green oats sown for this purpose and unimproved pasture.

In order to secure an abundance of nutritious pasture throughout the summer and thus keep the feed cost of production at a minimum, careful planning is necessary. Improvement of at least half acre of permanent pasture for each milch cow, by the application of commercial fertilizers and proper management, is an important feature. Yields of herbage at this station have been more than doubled by fertilization and the quality of the herbage has been greatly improved.

Supplementary pastures are important even when permanent pastures have been fertilized. If hay crops, especially those containing clover are cut early, the aftermath will provide an important source of feed when permanent pastures are short. Oats may also be grown as an annual supplementary pasture. Good results with this crop have been obtained when the oats are grazed for about two hours each day, the cows spending the balance of the day on permanent pasture.

When it is found impossible to provide suitable pasture, recourse must be taken to the more expensive system of barn feeding. Any roughage which is readily available such as hay, green oats and peas, green corn or corn silage may be used to supplement the pastures. It will usually be found advisable also to feed a small amount of grain in the late Summer even when good pasture is available, in order to insure the cattle going into winter quarters in good condition.

"I harvest more wheat because I treat my seed with New Improved CERESAN"



Want to reduce root rots and other diseases—get bigger wheat yields—better profits? Then treat seed with New Improved CERESAN. "This dust..." says a recent Division of Botany report, "effectively controls the smuts of oats, covered smut of barley, and bunt of wheat. It also improves seed germination." Easy to apply. New English Locomotive on First Run

Watch The Hoofs Of Growing Colts

The importance of keeping hoofs of the growing colt level and in normal shape and condition does not seem to be sufficiently appreciated. We judge that from the sad condition in which we so commonly find the hoofs of the adult animal. Instead of coming down squarely upon the ground, we commonly find them canted to one side or the other, or low and weak at the heels, or grown out long at the toes, or steep and stilty in shape and action. As the twig is inclined, so will the branch or the trunk grow and the misshapen condition will persist through life.

When it is remembered that the leg, above the hoof, is formed of pillars superimposed one upon the other, the importance of having a level and sound foundation should be apparent.

If the hoofs are kept perfectly level and normal in every way the leg above will grow in the way it should go and not depart from the perpendicular or become so abnormal, in any way, that perfect action is impaired or destroyed. It is, therefore, advisable to bring the colts from the pasture once a month and after standing each of them, in turn, on a perfectly level place and viewing the hoofs and legs from all angles, use the rasp just enough to remove inequalities and correctly level the walls at the ground surface so that the super-imposed bones will be in normal, natural alignment and position.

In the process it is necessary and detrimental to cut away the soles and frog until new material is seen. It is legitimate to remove only those portions of the frog and soles that are naturally sloughing off, and that occurs only when the underlying horn is ready to take up its work. Unless wide-flanging walls are rasped, as suggested, they tend to split and should the crack extend into the "quick" and hoofhead (coronet), lameness will be likely to result and permanent faults remain. When one part of the hoof hurts, the colt naturally relieves pressure there by putting it upon the sound part, the consequence being that growth becomes uneven and the leg bones above are moved out of plumb and permanent deformity possibly forms.

Overcome Rust By Thatcher Wheat

DAUPHIN, Man.—Plans are being laid for introduction of a seed exchange policy in Manitoba whereby any farmer can get rust-resistant Thatcher wheat for seed next spring.

Hon. D. L. Campbell, provincial minister of agriculture, and members of the Manitoba Seed Growers' Association, discussed plans to prevent recurrence of rust in Manitoba at a meeting here.

Mr. Campbell declared it would be a calamity to allow present stock of Thatcher wheat to escape from the province and at the same time he appealed for co-operation of all Manitoba in locating present crops of Thatcher wheat and have them field inspected to insure purity of the seed.

We'd like to pay our taxes with a smile but they insist on cash.— The Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph.

HAVE YOU HEARD

"The sum of the parts is greater than the whole," says the husband, sadly, auditing his wife's check stubs.

Mike — "My doctor told me to give up drinking, smoking, and going out nights."

Ike — "I guess that means that you will change your habits?"

Mike — "Not at all. It means that I will change doctors."

Business is like a wheelbarrow — it stands still unless someone pushes it.

The club bore was relating one of his long-winded stories that everybody knew by heart. He was describing what happened to him when he went o na trip to the Grand Canyon in Arizona.

"The soft curtain of night was just falling," he orated. "There I stood drinking in the scene, with the giant abyss yawning before me."

"I say, old chap," interrupted one of the listeners at this point, "was that abyss yawning before you got there?"

Intuition — The strange instinct that tells a woman she is right, whether she is or not.

Judge — "You say the officer arrested you while you were quietly minding your own business?"

Prisoner — "Yes your honour."

Judge — You were quietly attending to your own business, making no noise or disturbance of any kind?"

Prisoner — "None whatever sir."

Judge — "What is your business?"

Prisoner — "I'm a burglar."

Read it or Not — W. E. Allred, Livingstone, Tennessee, owns a living three-legged sheep. Three days after birth this freak lamb could stand up, now it can run on three legs even though it is minus a shoulder blade.

Doctor — "That lady who just left this office is the only woman I ever really loved."

Nurse — "She's beautiful. Why do you not marry her, doc?"

Doctor — "I would like to, but I really can't afford to. She's my best patient, you know."

Hubby — "Mary, we have lived together for 50 years, and I haven't deceived you once, have I?"

Mary — "No, Henry, but you have tried hard enough."

CAMP FIRE GLEAM!

There's something in a camp fire's cheery gleam,
That opens wide the windows of your soul;
It sees each plan — each little far-flung dream,
It lights the candles that lead to your goal.
You gain new faith in all your fellow men,
There where the feet of old Dame Nature trod;
Within the camp fire's magic glow, my friend,
Your heart will tell you that you are close to God.

Last year's straw hats look — well, quite a bit like last year's straw hats.

The chemist was explaining to the lady the progress of his experiments:

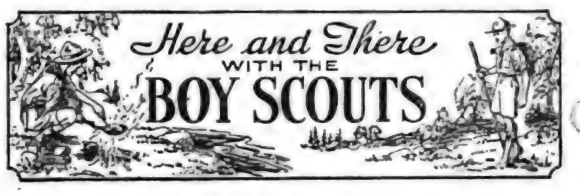
Lady (commenting) — "My the manufacture of synthetic rubber is such a slow process, isn't it?"

Chemist — "Well, we have to make it slow to make it snappy."

What a monotonous old world this would be, were it not for the delusions therein.

When To Plant Raspberry Canes

In the Hill or Hedge Row Systems



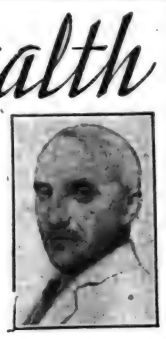
During the month of September, or even as late as mid-October, raspberry canes may be planted with as much success as in the early Spring before the canes have budded out.

The distance at which the rows and plants are to be placed depends largely upon the type of training to be followed. In Eastern Canada two systems are in general use, the hill system and the hedge-row.

In the hill system the plants are set at least four by four feet apart, which permits, wth care, the use of a single horse cultivator either way. Where land is cheaper and the labor higher, the distance may be increased to seven by seven feet, permitting the use of a double cultivator and eliminating most of the hand hoeing.

If the hedge-row system is adopted, the rows may be placed six feet apart, or wider, and the plants set three feet apart in the row. If the plants are checked in rows so that they will come opposite, a single horse cultivator may be used the first season and thus cut down maintenance costs by a considerable amount.

Over 8,000 boys, said to be the biggest body of youth to ever leave the country at one time, will make up the British Empire contingent to the World Scout Jamboree, opening in Holland, July 31st. Thirteen special trains will move the boys to Tilbury, Yarmouth, Dover and Harwich, and here they will board eight steamships for the trip to Holland. In addition to the Scouts from all parts of the British Isles, the Empire contingent will include Scouts from Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, Barbadoes, Bermuda, Hong Kong Gibraltar, Malta, Palestine, Northern Rhodesia and Trinidad.



A dog's yelp enabled two Parksville B. C. Boy Scouts to do their daily good turn. The boys were wandering near an old well, half caved in and 45 feet deep when they heard the dog's cry. Baiting a box with a sandwich, they lowered it into the well with wire. The dog jumped in and the Scouts pulled it up.

Blue Springs Scout Reserve near Acton, Ont., the 100-acre property to be developed as a training centre for Ontario Scouters was formerly dedicated and opened July 21st. The main entrance to the Reserve is marked by a stockade gateway and reproduction of a pioneer days "block house."

Lord Baden-Powell, World Chief Scout has been awarded the 1937 Wateler peace prize of $10,000 "for valuable services to international good will by means of the Boy Scout organization." The Wateler prize was founded by a Netherlander of that name who left his entire fortune to endow an annual prize to the person contributing the most valuable service in the cause of peace.

Boy Scout World Census Figures for 1937 just compiled by the International Bureau, reveal a startling increase of 340,060, with a total membership of 2,812,074. This is the largest increase the movement has ever known. The world census is taken every two years. In 1935 the total was 2,472,014. Boy Scouting countries are now numbered at 49.

Health Topics of Vital Interest

by DR. J. W. S. McCULLOUGH

Doctor Reedman, of the School of Hygiene, University of Toronto, says that the most recent studies show that the nutritional value of milk is practically unchanged by properly conducted pasteurization, while Wilson, Minett and Carling in the Journal of Hygiene, publish their findings of carefully controlled observations showing that the nutritive value of pasteurized milk for calves is equal to that of raw milk.

There has been considerable controversy for years as to the effects of pasteurization on the nutritive value of milk. The stock argument of the opponent of pasteurization, whether or not he knows anything about the subject is that the process destroys the vitamin C. It has long been considered that the content of Vitamin C, (the agent concerned with the prevention of scurvy) was low and that milk is an unimportant source of Vitamin C, in the diet.

The basis of Vitamin C in milk is the ascorbic acid it contains, and this article varies very little in different breeds of cattle, with the stage of lactation or age of the animal. The variation is due to the character of the animal's food. In this respect the grass is the best, hay comes next, while silage retains from 12 to 15 p.c. of the original ascorbic acid for a period of six months. It is calculated that on winter ration a dairy cow receives about 9 grams of ascorbic acid daily in the diet, and on summer pasture considerably more.

Milk alone, will not supply sufficient vitamin C in the diet. It is not normally required to do so. Oranges, tomatoes, (fresh, canned or dried), cabbage, lettuce, green peas potatoes and spinach, are all rich in the anti-scurvy vitamin.

Pasteurization causes no appreciable injury to the nutritional value of milk and it must be remembered that the dangers of raw milk in the transmitting of disease far outweigh any minor objections to careful and efficient pasteurization.

ART OF PLOWING

Plowing is one of the most pleasant, as well as the most important, parts of farming. Provided one has a good team, and the land is free from stone, it is not an arduous task, differing in this respect from some other types of farm work. It is important because good plowing is the basis of good farming. Usually a good plowman is a good farmer, while a bad one is a poor farmer who soon finds his land overrun with weeds. It requires some skill to be adept at the practice. The best plowmen have a natural aptitude for it, and one lacking this can never become perfect. The good farmer knows the proper depth at which to plow his soil, as well as to how to keep a straight furrow.

No matter how good a plowman is, however, he is not going to be much of a success unless he has a well-trained, experienced team. After all, it is the team that does the most of the work, and it is not difficult to keep a straight furrow if possessed of horses that know how to walk straight and pay attention to directions. The horses must also have the proper gait. Anyone who has been kicked on the ribs by a plough handle when the implement is being pulled by a headstrong team knows just what this means.—Windsor Star.

ANTI-TANK GUNS

No sooner have experts invented a new and more deadly war weapon than another set of experts develop a weapon to combat it. The tank is no longer a safety-first fort on a battlefield. Woolwich arsenal gun experts have perfected an anti-tank gun. They claim infantry armed with the anti-tank rifle will be able to stand up to tanks and beat them. A two-pound shell, fitted with a special armored-piercing nozzle, is fired by the anti-tank gun. This shell can penetrate the armorplates of any tank and explode inside. One direct hit from an anti-tank gun means death to the whole tank crew and the destruction of the entire mechanism.

The gun travels on a small rubber tired truck and is so light that it can be taken up into the front truck, mounted on a tripod, and brought into action in less than 30 seconds. It fires with terrific rapidity and can blow up a tank a mile away. The anti-tank rifle is made for use against whippet tanks, and fires special armor-piercing bullets which can bring a tank to a standstill at a range of 500 yards.—Brandon Sun.

CANADIAN BLANKETS

The reputation of the Canadian Government in matters of paternalism seems to have spread across the line. Our Morrisburg, Ont., correspondent reports that while strolling down the street he was hailed by a United States tourist who said: "Pardon me. Can you tell me where the Government woollen store is?"

The contributor says he didn't want to appear dumb in case the Government had recently gone into the wool business, so he asked a few cautious questions. It turned out that the tourist was looking for Hudson Bay blankets.—MacLean's Magazine.

COW RUNS AMOK

The recent tragedy near Sarnia where a farm woman was attacked and killed by a cow which had run into her yard from the road, causes surprise and apprehension as well as sympathy and sorrow. Is a cow, therefore, unsafe?

It is not unusual to hear of people being killed by bulls. Two neighbors of the woman who was killed in Moore Township have met a similar fate in recent years from bulls. But cows are usually regarded, at least by city folks, as placid animals which graze quietly and, in their moments of leisure, chew their cud at peace with the world. Some city girls, out in the country on picnics, are loath to climb over a fence into a field where there are cows. Is their fear justified or are their companions right in making fun of them?

Farmers tell us that, on the whole, cows of course are much quieter than bulls. If cows are together in a group or a herd without bulls, they are almost entirely harmless. If a cow is taken away from other cows, however, or if something exceptional occurs to make her nervous, there may be instant danger. A cow that for any reason does run amok is more agile than a bull and, with its added nervousness, is at least as perilous.

The moral for city people, because farmers are doubtless aware of the situation themselves, is that while they should not become panicky about cows, they would do well to remember that any animal of that size and strength is a potential menace and that watchfulness at all times is the part of wisdom.—Toronto Star.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

"The magistrate suspended sentence." Quite often we read something to that effect in accounts of trials; and a good many, reading, dismiss the matter from their minds with the remark: "Well, that's disposed of!" or "That chap got off easy!" They think, evidently, just "suspended sentence" sees the last of the case. Often, too, it seems that those who have been released on a suspended sentence have the same idea.

That is entirely a mistake. A suspended sentence is just what the name implies—a sentence that is suspended, that hangs over the offender. So long as he behaves himself, nothing further is done about it; but if he offends again during the term for which sentence has been suspended the first offence can be cited against him in case of conviction and the penalty be imposed in addition to that for the second offence.

Suspended sentence does not mean that the judge or magistrate has placed the offender in the position of one who has not broken the law. If he does not take his lesson to heart and breaks the law a second time the magistrate may remind him that he has broken faith. "Authority," the magistrate may say, "has given you a chance to go straight. Only one thing can be done with a person who will not behave; it is high time for you to learn that the way of the transgressor is hard. Society will stand for only so much."

Suspended sentence, then, is not a clearance; nor is it a sign of weakness on the part of the authorities. It is a manifestation of the desire of the law to give one who has slipped a chance to get back on the straight road—a favor which too often is not appreciated.—Timmins Daily Press.

THE EMPIRE

TO CHANGE OUR CLIMATE

Scientists have put forward a new theory. They say that if the ice-caps which cover each Pole, North and South, could once be removed, they would never reform. Once they went the whole climate of the earth would be altered. The hard climate of Britain would change to the soft warmth of the semi-tropics. Scientists say that with modern explosives the feat is not impossible and certainly it would be better for mankind to use explosives in this way than to blow each other to death with them.—Sunday Express.

HEALTH AND ENVIRONMENT

Good environment is a creator and guardian of health, the indispensable foundation of eager living. Those who ruin natural beauty and those who fail to provide satisfactory houses are alike enemies of the peace of mind out of which alone proceed good craftsmanship on the one hand and good housewifery on the other. Health of body and health of mind, nutrition, physical fitness, the happiness of children depend, in the last issue, upon thinking and feeling and therefore upon the influences, and suggestions by which men and women are surrounded. There should be no clash between the demand for beauty and the demand, made again and again in the debate, for effective sanitation, for cleanliness, and for preventive medicine. Hygiene is the craftsmanship of beauty and will usually found wanting where beauty does not exist. Mean streets, mean villages, and mean, or blacklisted, schools, the existence of which Mr. Lindsay regretted earlier in the week are as defective in spirit as in equipment.—London Times.

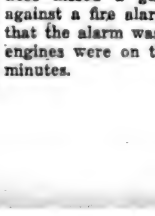
Saskatchewan Reports Loss Of 25-Mile Lake

Dramatic evidence of the transition of a section of Western Canada to an area of severe drought is contained in news despatches that Lake Johnston, famed for years as a nesting place for millions of waterfowl, and the largest body of water south of the main line of the C.P.R. in Saskatchewan, is now a mere puddle of water and will probably be entirely dry by the end of July or early in August.



Once a lake 25 miles long and 11 miles wide, covering about 275 sections in area, Lake Johnston is already so low that cars can be driven right through the lake from north to south.

With the disappearance of the big lake and its conversion into an alkali plain, farmers of the area south of Moose Jaw are facing an added handicap in the white alkali powder that is now being scattered through the countryside with every windstorm.

Every lake in Alberta is shrinking annually, and some in the southern and eastern portions of the province are in danger of disappearing like Lake Johnston, but none have yet shrunk to the same alarming extent.

The fate of the largest lake in the Southern Saskatchewan area emphasizes the need for rehabilitation and conservation of available water supplies in the drought area. Conservation of the annual runoff of water from the Southern Prairies is becoming absolutely essential if the district is to preserve ability to support any population, and work of providing dams and reservoirs to hold the natural water should proceed as rapidly as possible.

Autos to Increase 50 Per Cent. In 23 Years

DETROIT, Mich.—Charles F. Kettering, research engineer told the American Society of Civil Engineers a new highway system must be provided in the United States to accommodate 37,000,00 motor vehicles by 1960.

The number of automobiles on the highways will increase 50 per cent. within the next 23 years, he said, while "an increase in motor vehicle registration on our present highway system would almost prohibit much of our usual driving.

"Such a plan would require a primary system of high speed highways crossing the country in all directions. It is estimated that 50,000 to 60,000 miles of such super-highways would be sufficient. Leading from them would be a secondary system of good highways serving small cities and towns. The third system would consist of service highways serving the rural areas."

'Spartan' Mother Asks Reformatory For Her Son

HAMILTON.—Mrs. Jessie Louttit pleaded with Magistrate H. A. Burbidge to send her 16-year-old son, convicted of 18 burglary charges, to a reformatory.

"He's done enough damage, let him suffer," the woman asked the Magistrate, who sentenced Ross Louttit to Ontario Reformatory for nine to 15 months. Louttit's companion, Joe Poyton, also 16, received five months definite and four months indefinite on six charges of burglary.

"He's been warned a dozen times and suspended sentence or the strap would do him no good. He would be better off dead than free," said Mrs. Louttit as her son, his eyes to the court room floor, listened.

"You are somewhat of a Spartan mother," the Magistrate replied. "Strangely enough our psychiatrists agree with you. They have advised institutionalization if all other methods fail."

News In Brief

CROPS LOOK PROMISING

OTTAWA—All eastern Canada and British Columbia continued to show prospects, said a crop report issued this week by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The drought-stricken Prairies, however, faced failure over a wide area, with low yields expected from those fields which still promised a crop.

In Ontario, the weather has been favorable for the development of all crops. Cutting of fall wheat is nearly finished, and yields should be above average. Some early spring grains have been cut, and in southern districts harvesting will be general this week, with fairly good yields in prospect. Fruit and truck crops are promising. In northern districts haying is delayed by wet weather, but general prospects are good.

U.S. SENATE PASSES NAVY CONSTRUCTION BILL

WASHINGTON.—The United States Senate sent to the White House this week a bill authorizing construction of six naval auxiliary vessels at a maximum cost of $50,000,000.

The Senate agreed to House amendments to the bill, which provides for a new seaplane tender, destroyer tender, mine sweeper, submarine tender, fleet tug and oil supply ship.

CATTLE BOOM NEARS

TORONTO—Canada's cattle business, domestic and foreign, is ready to boom under the impetus of a Government-assisted plan for shipping thin live stock from the dry prairies to Ontario's rich feeding land—then to market.

Live stock men said this week the movement of Western cattle to Ontario has started several weeks earlier than last year, the first in which the Dominion Government paid half-cost of shipment and half-fare of Eastern buyers who select their own cattle for finishing.

Because the market is better, due largely to cattle shortage in the United States, Eastern cattle men are hurrying to take advantage of the Government scheme. Personally or through agents, they are buying Western cattle in July—last year heavies purchases were in August—to get an early start.

The Dominion live stock branch here reported July shipments "unusually large," and added that the heaviest movement was expected in the period from August to November. Three-year-old steers and heifers, oh younger, and cows and calves qualify under the Government plan.

Higher prices and prospects of a ready sale to the United States are incentives to Ontario dealers, who find choice grade steers marked at $9 to $9.25, compared with around $5.75 a year ago.

Cattle moving to Ontario will not be marketable until fall, but live stock men are satisfied there will be no slackening in demand.

4,500,00 MAN-DAY'S WORK LOST IN MONTH'S STRIKES

WASHINGTON—The Labor Department estimated this week 4,500,00 man-days of work were lost in the United States last month because of strikes. A preliminary survey showed 575 strikes started during June, that 300 were in progress June 1 and that 530 ended during the month.

NEWS PARADE

Commentary on the
HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEKS NEWS —
By Peter Randal

Those who will be remembered longest are often the least known. Canada's history studded with names far better known than that of Sir Charles Saunders but it is doubtful if any other man has had a greater influence upon its development. Macdonald created Confederation but it was Saunders' discovery, marquis wheat and its later improvement in garnet wheat that provided the means of existence for a very young nation. Railroads had been built from east to west across limitless expanses of almost laste land. The country was under a heavy burden of debt. The Saunders discovery turned the vast prairie wastes of the west into a treasure house which was to lift Canada from the position of a relatively unimportant appendage of Great Britain into one of the five great trading nations of the world. As wheat poured out, gold poured in and found its way from the farmer's pocket into every form of Canadian economic development.

The West of Today

As the creator of the treasure house passes beyond, it is interesting to examine the future of these same broad lands. The one crop West is passing through a dark period in its history. Thousands of acres are being scoured clean of top soil. Rain has failed and the 1937 wheat crop is a failure in a line of failures. The Western wheat carry over has shrunk from a high of 211 million bushels to under the hundred million mark. Thousands are in dire want.

It Will Come Back

In line with the experiences of the dust bowl states to the south, there are many who belive that this great area stretching across southern Albera and Saskatchewan should be abandoned. Aided by the Federal Government, many families have already been transplanted from the most affected areas but the possibilities of moving an entire population are too enormous to be seriously contemplated even if those involved were agreed that the move was in their own best interests. That is the strange quality of the Western character. In spite of continued crop failures and hard luck, these people still believe that the West will come back.

Irrigation

A few years ago, a well known eastern financier and engineer came to their support. According to R. O. Sweezey of Montreal, the West needs irrigation on a huge scale. True, the expense would be enormous but so will be the expense involved in any other solution. The great difference is that irrigation will be an investment capable of bringing in a great return. Whether irrigation is the key to the riddle or some other solution is required does not matted. The wealth of Canada, not only for the West and the farmer but for the East and industry depends on saving the Western wheat field.

NEW SALVATION ARMY HEAD OF CANADA ARRIVES

QUEBEC—Commissioner G. L. Carpenter, newly appointed head of the Salvation Army in Canada, arrived Wednesday on the liner Montcalm to take over his new duties. He succeeds Commissioner MacMillan, who has become Chief of Staff at Army Headquarters in London. Commissioner Carpenter, accompanied by Mrs. Carpenter and their daughter, is making his first visit to Canada. He was born in Australia and has spent several years in the Argentine.

ONTARIO DOUBLE GRANTS FOR YOUTH REHABILITATION

TORONTO—Fred Marsh, Ontario Deputy Minister of Labor, Wednesday told Ken Woodsworth, secretary of the Canadian Youth Congress, grants for youth rehabilitation projects would be doubled. At the moment the Government provided $240,000 as its share of the Federal Government $1,000,000 grant. Projects are being considered for employment of about 3,000 youths, Mr. Marsh said.

BRITISH TERRITORIAL ARMY STRONGEST IN 17 YEARS

LONDON.—Strength of the Territorial Army is now greater than at any period since it was reconstituted seventeen years ago. The War Office announced officer and other ranks on July 1 totalled 155,090, compared with 138,926 on the same date last year. Since the beginning of the year 30,240 have joined the colors.

CHINESE TEACHERS ARE TOLD TO KEEP ON SHAVING

CHENGTU, Szechuen Province, China. — Primary school teachers in the Chinese town of Chikiang have been ordered by the government to shave frequently and have been forbidden to wear long hair. Not only will this improve their appearance, according to the order, but their spirits.

GERMANY IS UTILIZING WASTE HUMAN HAIR

BERLIN.—The use of human hair for the making of carpets, tarpaper covering for roofs, and felt, is Germany's latest plan for saving raw materials. Hair-dressers throughout the country will be asked at the coming Barbers' Convention at Breslau to start collecting human hair of every kind and length.

ALL EMPLOYABLE MEN IN STRATFORD HAVE JOBS

STRATFORD. — Practically all Stratford's employable men who were on the relief list at the beginning of the year are now at work, and if an urgent order were to come into the Relief Department for five able-bodied men the order probably could not be filled, Alderman James Stewart, Chairman of the Relief Committee, stated.

The recent order of Premier Hepburn allowing relief recipients to go on farm work without deduction from their wages for the maintenance of their families has cleaned up the local situation, he said.

Warned About Backslappers

Women's Club Advised Of Qualifications of Leaders

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.— Women's clubs were warned recently against choosing leaders just because they know how to slap backs, mix well, and wear Parisian clothes.

"We should select the women who can best advance our interests," Miss Lena M. Phillips, lawyer and associate editor of The Pictorial Review, told the convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women.

"It is all right to choose a backslapper and good mixer if she has other worthwhile qualities, but the fact she wears Parisian models does not necessarily make her a desirable leader.

"Good will and affability are no substitutes for directness, efficiency, intelligence and vision."

The speaker advised the women not to gloat over the prospect of repealing the federal law prohibiting employment of both husband and wife in the government service.

Miss Phillips observed "this discriminatory legislation" remained on the statute books four years and has "only just now been rescinded by the lower House."

"What will happen in the Senate", she added, "is stil problematical. Yet the men in Congress who had the power to rescind that bill were sent there largely by the votes of women, who constitute nearly half the electorate.

"Women had the power to force change of that law any time they wanted to. They simply didn't exercise it. . . We cannot stop at talking about co-operation. We must practice it, not only in the national body but in the various states."

Miss Frances Maule of New York, author of books on good business behavior for women, warned clubwomen against allowing commercial concerns to get hold of membership lists.

"When we sell our lists," she said, "we are violating a principle of business ethics—to say nothing of a definite policy of the federation."

$86 INVESTMENT SWELLS TO $8,000 IN 2 YEARS

PETERBOROUGH.—Two years ago the Peterborough Rotary Club purchased eighty-six bushels of white winter wheat at $86 and distributed it among forty-three boys in Peterborough County who were then members of the Seed Club. This year the club, which has shrunk to thirty-five members, will harvest 8,000 bushels of high uniform quality white winter wheat, tentatively valued at $8,000.

Each of the original forty-three members received two bushels of the seed, and last fall their planting ranged from five to twelve acres apiece. This fall the original $86 investment will have swollen to $8,000 in the short space of two years. The plan was introduced by Arthur Ranions, local Department of Agriculture representative, who is now President of the Rotary Club. He told the club at the regular luncheon this week of the success of the venture.

Several of the boys will display samples of their wheat at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, with a further prospect of obtaining prize money.

A SIGNAL LINK OF EMPIRE

Before rising from Botwood on the last leg of his journey, and all the way up the St. Lawrence to Montreal, Captain Wilcockson was in touch with St. Hubert Airport, where the very latest type Northern Electric radio transmitter is in use.

SCIENCE

"What is the end and aim of science but the discovery of the ultimate power—a seeking after God through the study of his ways?"—W. H. Furness.

"In the material world, thought has brought to light with great rapidity many useful wonders. With like activity have thoughts' swift pinions been rising towards the realm of the real, to the spiritual cause of those lower things which give impulse to enquiry."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"To know that what is impenetrable to us really exists, manifesting itself as the highest wisdom and the most radiant beauty which our dull faculties can comprehend only in their most primitive forms—this knowledge, this feeling, is at the centre of true religiousness."—Albert Einstein.

"The person who thinks there can be any real conflict between science and religion must be either very young in science or very ignorant in religion."—Prof. Henry.

"Let us not fear that the issues of natural science shall be scepticism or anarchy—Through all God's work there runs a benutiful harmony—The remotest truth in his universe is linked to that which lies nearest the throne."—E. M. Chapin.

25 YEARS AGO

From The Review of Aug. 1, 1912.

Rev. N. E. Bowles, of Toronto, and Miss Muriel Woods, Rosedale, were married last week by Rev. R. P. Bowles, brother of the groom.

Mrs. Robert Irwin, formerly of Streetsville, passed away in Toronto, last week, aged 75 years. She is survived by nine children.

The funeral of the late Fletcher Switzer, of Orangeville, took place to Eden church and cemetery on Monday.

The Oriental Textiles Co. are moving their plant from Barbertown to Oshawa. They have been employing about fifty hands, some of whom will go to Oshawa with them.

Alfred Williams and Maud Blackwell Cooksville, were married last week by Rev. H. V. Thompson.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Adam McConnell of New Toronto took place to Trinity Church Cemetery, Streetsville, last week.

LET US SMILE

A celebrated lion tamer was once approached by an elderly lady at the close of an exciting performance among his snarling charges "What a very trying ocupation you have," she remarked.

"That's true," said the tamer. "After a few years of this game in draughty cages almost every tamer I know has lumbago."

Woman Taken for a Ride

Forced into an automobile on Queen St. W., Friday night, by two men, Mrs. Vida Saunders, 28, of 336 Bathurst street, was beaten brutally near Streetsville and robbed of her purse containing $28 and two diamond rings.

A passerby found the woman early Saturday at the side of the country road. He took her to Dr. G. A. Montemurro, of Streetsville, who attended her and drove her to Toronto Western Hospital.

Mrs. Saunders was admitted to the hospital at 4 a.m., her eyes blackened, and her face badly bruised.

Hospital authorities reported early Saturday afternoon that Mrs. Saunders was considerably improved although still "very uncomfortable." She had been unconscious earlier.

The woman had left the same hospital, where she is employed as pantry maid. Intending to start her annual two weeks' vacation, she visited some stores on Queen street west on a shopping tour.

After she had made some purchases, two men in a car drove up alongside and forced her to enter the automobile on Queen street between Bathurst street and Spadina avnue. According to Mrs. Saunders they took her first to a bootlegger's where the men did some drinking.

They then drove her west to Streetsville where they attempted to assault her on a lonely side road. The woman succeeded in fighting off the men, who finally left her at the side of the road, after taking the rings and purse.

Dog Breeder of 6500 B. C. Developed Fastest Type

Streamlining is an old story with dog breeders. Back in 6500 B. C. the desert sheiks used this principle to develop a type of hunting dog that is the fastest of all such animals, notes a writer in the Chicago Tribune. Tablets and other relics found in ancient tombs reveal dogs similar to our Saluki, Afghan hound, greyhound, and Russian wolfhound. These are the fastest breeds of dog in the world, according to the American Kennel club.

The Saluki's lines are flowing from the tip of his nose to the end of his tail, with nowhere any definite breaks to offer wind resistance.

This is the breed credited with being the only dog fast enough to bring down a gazelle, supposedly the fastest of all wild animals. The others, the Afghan hound, the greyhound, and the Russian wolfhound, are very similar in conformation. That the ancient Persians, Arabian and Egyptians aimed to breed such lines is evident, for these hunting breeds were the only dogs allowed inside tents and houses. Other dogs of those days were stoned away.

The dog of the vikings, the Norwegian elkhound, dates back to 4500 B. C., but this is a sturdier animal, bred for strength to cope with heavier, slower quarry. The Maltese, a tiny lapdog, is traced back to the island of Melita in 3500 B. C. The chow chow, the Great Dane, and the mastiff, all hunters in the past, were first noted in 3000 B. C., at which time those toys, the Pekingese and the pug, also appeared.

Discovery of New World Held Boon to Botanists

The discovery and subsequent exploration of the New World made known to botanists many new and interesting, as well as economically important, forms of vegetation on the continents of North and South America. One great group that was almost unknown to civilization before that time is the cactus family, writes E. C. Hummel in Nature Magazine. One genus, Rhipsalis, is represented by a species found native to Africa, where it grows on the trunks and branches of trees. Having white, glutinous berries it has been given the common name "mistletoe cactus." How it crossed the Atlantic is one of the botanical mysteries, but many believe it was carried by birds from the American continent.

The cactus family consists of some 2,000 species and varieties. With their almost unlimited variety of form and color it is little wonder they are often mistaken for stones, artificial ornaments, sea shell or fungi.

Citric Acid

Citric acid is a crystaline solid found dissolved in lemon juice, where it is responsible for the sour taste. In addition to a number of lesser technical uses the acid itself is used to flavor prepared foods and beverages, while its calcium salt is extensively used in the cheese industry. It has been known for a long time that varieties of a common mold, Aspergilus niger, produce citric acid when they act on sugar solutions, and in recent years this process has been applied to the large-scale production of the acid. A large part of the citric acid of commerce comes from these fungi rather than from lemons.

The Thyroid Gland

Most laymen can claim a speaking acquaintance with the thyroid gland, probably the best known gland of internal secretion. Its enlargement produces the familiar goiter, states a writer in Literary Digest. The thyroid sits astride the neck, above the windpipe, pours a hormone (exciter) into the blood which regulates the body's energy production. Sometimes embedded in the twin maroon lobes of the thyroid, sometimes just behind the thyroid on the widpipe, are the parathyroid glands, four in number, the size of rice grains. Early anatomists overlooked them entirely or assumed them to be part of the mighty thyroid.

Arrival of the Tuxedo

A real change in men's evening dress occurred in the elegant '80s. It was then that the tuxedo made its appearance in New York pleasure halls, where the Cloth Spongers' society, the Buttonhole Makers' union, the Plumbers' Helpers' coterie, and others disported themselves. Here it was worn in conjunction with embroidered shirt fronts, white satin waistcoats, and ties, and diamond studs. The term tuxedo was an inspiration of cheap tailors, coincident with the rise of the exclusive resort founded by Pierre Lorillard.

"Comin' Through the Rye"

Much controversy has arisen over the reference of the song, "Comin' Through the Rye." It has often been illustrated by a waving field of rye, and the manufacturers of a celebrated brand of rye whiskey have used such an illustration showing the lovers in a rye field. But the full significance of the song, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, is apparent after reading of the custom that established a toll of kisses to be exacted from lassies who were met in crossing the River Rye on stepping stones.

Town Line News

A very delightful gathering took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs John T. Bonham, on Saturday, Aug. 7th, when all the members of their family, with friends, joined together in a farewell party for Miss Edna Elliott of Toronto, who is leaving shortly for Japan, to be away five years. Miss Elliott is going as a missionary nurse under the Anglican Church

Games and contests were enjoyed by all and a bountiful supper served on the lawn, after which Miss Elliott was presented with a travelling bag. All joined in extending good wishes for success and happiness in her new life.

Miss Elliott is a daughter of Dr G.G. and Mrs. Elliott. She sails from Vancouver on Sept 4th, to take up her new work.

The Open Column

Rather too much has been written, at one time and another, about amateurism and professionalism in sport. The amateur, apparently, who accepts a thin dime for his services in games is, theoretically, contaminated with a smear of professionalism thenceforth, or until the Amateur Union sees fit to apply a coat of whitewash. Newspapers derive very interesting copy for their sporting pages from the lapses of pseudo-amateurs, and home-town fans are jubilant, in an irate way, when the taint of money is plastered over a player of an opposing team.

To our somewhat citrine view, this attitude is a lot of hooey. Taking our nearest big-time athletic organization as an example, we would say that the players of the Brampton Excelsior lacrosse team would be soft in their respective brains if they didn't get some sort of recompense out of a season's pounding and bumping. There have been plenty of remarks passed by observers, disgruntled and otherwise, to the effect that the Excelsiors had a juicy split of the residual gate receipts at the end of the season. Well, what of it? Anybody who saw the Brampton-Mimico game at Brampton Saturday night should have been convinced that it should have been worth about ten bucks a head to the players to stand the smacking they had to absorb throughout the progress of the game.

Some unthoughtful person might, perhaps, remark that the boys were out there for the glory of the game. That might go for something light and interesting, such as cricket, but not for lacrosse. Lacrosse, in our none too humble opinion, together with rugby and hockey, are the most manful sports left, and we would head the list with lacrosse.

So, if you ask us, and we don't care whether you do or not, if the Excelsiors, or any other lacrosse team, splits a healthy wad of cash at the end of the season, we are perfectly satisfied, as long as they have provided a healthy, husky exhibition of the game during the playing season.

COOKSVILLE

Displeased when traffic lights for which they had fought for several years were removed from the intersection of Highways Nos. 5 and 10, Cooksville business men were gratified this week, when the work of re-installing the lights was begun.

The new traffic lights will be operated on the "treadle" system principle.

Residents of the village pointed out, when the lights were removed, that there was more traffic over the intersection of the Dundas Highway and the Centre Road than there has been over the crossing of the Centre Road and the new Middle Road Highway, the Middle Road not having been carried far enough, as yet, to draw any large proportion of through traffic, yet the province is spending $80,000 for the installation of a clover-leaf crossing at the latter intersection.

BRAMPTON

Perkins Bull, the noted Canadian historian and guest speaker at the 70th Anniversary Services of St. John's Church, Mono Mills, at eleven a.m., Standard time, on Sunday, August 15th, will have a large party with him.

His historical address at Mono Mills covering over a century of the religious and social development of the neighborhood, will be the climax of a holiday tour for himself and several friends.

He will begin by meeting his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. Michael and the Hon. Mrs. Michael Bull at Montreal.

The party will motor to Ottawa, North Bay, Pointe au Baril and other intermediate points arriving in Mono Mills just in time for the great event.

Everyone knows that our Peel historian is indefatigable. But this is quite a programme even for him especially if as generally happens, he is pressed into service by several clubs and churches en route.

However, Rev. E. P. Wood and some of his congregation who have been helping Mr. Bull collect facts say that the address should be a record breaker both in information conveyed and interest of presentation.

Surveying work was begun on the site of the projected $1,500,00 tubercular asylum which is to be erected west of Brampton. Surveyors and chainmen went over the farm of Robert Sterritt, purchased by the Provincial Government at a price of $45,000, and struck levels preliminary to making a complete plan of the property.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Redick have returned after visiting friends at Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Morley Funston attended the Taylor-Davis wedding at Weston on August 7th. The bride was a friend of Mrs. Funston when they attended college at Guelph a few years ago.

District News

SCHOOLS REOPEN SEPTEMBER 1

Under new Department of Education regulations, schools will reopen after the summer vacation on Wednesday, September 1. Two school days later there will be another holiday, the first Monday of the month. The opening date is earlier this year in view of the fact that the first falls on a Wednesday. Had it come later in the week the classes would have been closed until Tuesday after Labor Day.

ENGAGEMENTS

The engagement is announced of Vera Elizabeth, daughter of Mrs. John Cunningham and the late Mr. Cunningham of Cooksville, to Alfred Percival Ward, Phm.B., son of Mr. Alfred Ward and the late Mrs. Ward, of Walter's Falls, the marriage to take place September 4 in Church of St. John the Baptist, Dixie.

WEDDINGS

Marshall—Meiklejohn

An interesting wedding took place quietly at the home of the bride's parents, in Harriston, when Helen Jane Sterling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Meiklejohn, became the bride of Duncan Marshall, Jr., son of the Hon. Duncan Marshall and Mrs. Marshall. Ferns and summer flowers formed an attractive background for the bride, who was gowned in ivory lace over satin with Juliet cap. She was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Alex. B. Meiklejohn, and unattended. Rev. T. D. McCulloch performed the ceremony and Miss Elspeth Ledingham of Weston played the wedding music. Mrs. Meiklejohn, smartly gowned in flowered chiffon over silk, and Mrs. Marshall in navy and rose chiffon with navy taffeta hat, received with the bride and groom. Later the bridal pair left for Jasper Park, Banff and Edmonton, the bride travelling in a smart grey crepe ensemble with wine cape, hat and accessories. On their return they will live in London, Ontario.

McCurdy—Neill

At Knox Church, Glenallan, Elsie Muriel, daughter of Rev. J. A. and Mrs. Neill, was married to Mr. Wilbert Gertland McCurdy, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert McCurdy, Hornby. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, and the church was decorated for the occasion with Creelman lilies and gladioli. Mrs. Florence Wright, Georgetown, played the wedding music. The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. M. L. Neill, wore a princess gown of white satin, with short train. Her French net veil was held with a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried an arm bouquet of Rutterfly roses. Miss Alma Neill, in a daffodil chiffon frock and carrying Talisman roses, was her sister's bridesmaid. Mr. Fred Robertson, Hornby, cousin of the groom, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. John Neill and Mr. Johnston Neeland. During the signing of the register Mrs. M. L. Neill, London, sang. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where Mrs. Neill and Mrs. McCurdy received. Mrs. Neill in a navy triple sheer gown with corsage of snap dragons and Mrs. McCurdy in yellow flowered chiffon with corsage of sweet peas. Dinner was served to fifty guests and later Mr. and Mrs. McCurdy left by motor for Northern Ontario, the bride travelling in a brown sheer dress with white sharkskin jacket and matching accessories.

HAVE YOU EVER SAVED A LIFE?

Years of training and years of experience lie behind the deft strokes of the great surgeon's knife, as he performs a delicate operation. Life and death are in the balance. Loved ones tremble in apprehension. Finally, after anxious hours,—success! The supreme ability of one man in a million has saved another life.

Most of us can never save a life that way. The surgeon's skill is not ours. But by preventing accidents on streets and highways, every one of us, whether we are drivers or pedestrians, can just as surely save lives and safeguard our fellow men against crippling or fatal injuries.

We can teach our children the enduring principles of safe driving and safe walking—of safe living. We can correct the unsafe practices of our own driving and walking. We can uphold the authority of our public officials in impartial and effective law enforcement. We can help in organized efforts to spread the gospel of traffic safety to everybody. And, most of all, we can resolve in our own minds to perform no act dangerous to others or ourselves.

Great skill and long training are not needed for this kind of life saving. What we do need—all of us—is a new realization that "I AM my brother's keeper." Will you accept your personal share of this great responsibility? Will you help to stem the tide of blood and death that promises to sweep Ontario's streets and highways? Will you SAVE A LIFE?

NEW HYDRO RATES

In response to an appeal of the Streetsville Public Utilities Commission asking the Ontario Hydro Commission to consider the advisability of reducing the rates to consumers in this Municipality, the H.E.P.C. have made a complete survey of the system and have approved the following rates.
Streetsville Public Utilities Commission,

Dear Sirs:

I am instructed to advise you that after investigating the operating conditions of your system during the year, the Commission has determined an interim rate of $35.50 per H.P. per year for power supplied to your municipality during the year commencing August 1, 1937.

Based on an analysis of the cost of operation of the various services in your municipality, which has been made by the Commission, it is recommended that the following schedule of rates for power and lighting services be adopted, same to be made effective at the next billing period.

DOMESTIC: (private homes)
Service charge—None.
Consumption Charge—4.4c per kilowatt-hour for the first 55 kilowatt hours per month.
Plus 1c per kilowatt-hour for all additional consumption during the month.
Minimum Monthly Bill—83 cents, gross.
Prompt Payment Discount—10%

COMMERCIAL: (business places, public halls, etc.)
Service Charge—5c gross per 100 watts of installed capacity.
Consumption Charge—2.6c per kilowatt-hour for the first 100 hours' use of the installed capacity.
Plus 0.7c per kilowatt- hour for all additional monthly consumption.
Minimum Monthly Bill — 83 cents gross.
Prompt Payment Discount—10%.

POWER:
Service Charge—$1.00 per H.P. per month of connected load or maximum demand.
Consumption Charge—2.9c per kilowatt-hour for the first 50 hours' use per month of connected load or maximum demand.
Plus 1.9c per kilowatt-hour for the second 50 hours' use per month of connected load or maximum demand.
Plus 0.33c per kilowatt-hour for all additional monthly consumption.
Prompt Payment Discount—10%.
Waterworks hydraulic power—$500. net per annum.

STREET LIGHTING:
The following shall be the net rates for Street Lighting, to take effect from January 1, 1937:
$ 9.50 per 100-watt Multiple lamp.
$11.50 per 200-watt Multiple lamp.
$16.50 per 300-watt Multiple lamp.

Yours faithfully,
L. L. LYONS,
For SECRETARY and CONTROLLER
Hydro Electric Power
Commission of Ontario.

Under the above schedule all Domestic consumers will receive the benefit of a reduction but there may be some cases where Commercial consumers will receive a slight increase. The separation of commercial from domestic consumers brings Streetsville into line with all other Hydro Municipalities in Ontario.

It is estimated that the above rates will mean a decrease in the annual revenue of the local commission of approximately $900.00.

Dropping of the service charge to Domestic consumers will be welcome news and will no doubt result in an increase of range installations.

The above rates will come into effect with the September 1 billing.

ADVERTIZING PAYS—TRY IT!

Local News

Toronto, August 3, 1937.

Editor,
The Review,
Streetsville, Ont.
Dear Sirs:—

Last year 546 lives were lost in motor vehicle accidents in Ontario. This year, if the remaining five months show the same rate of increase as the first seven, over 800 persons will have been killed and 14,000 will have been injured. None of us has any guarantee that members of your family or mine will not be among this number. That makes it a rather personal matter for all of us to consider.

For years the Department of Highways has conducted educational campaigns encouraging safer driving. These campaigns have made Ontario among the safest areas of the world, although the fact remains that this year we need something more. We cannot face the possible loss of 800 lives with equanimity. For our enviable record in the past our newspapers deserve a large share of credit; they have been remarkably generous and helpful in supporting our efforts, and I am sure will not fail us now.

To meet the present situation the Minister of Highways has sponsored an advertising campaign designed to shock the people into a realization of the need for saner driving and greater care. Your newspaper is to carry the advertisements of this series. But advertising is not going to be enough. We know the power of the press and we know that we must have your wholehearted and enthusiastic support, expressed in editorial and news column publicity.

I am personally appalled by the mounting accident toll of this season, by the stark horror of the growing total of cruel injuries and wasted lives. I am sure that you too must realize the danger that stalks our families and I earnestly seek your help in our effort to make our roads and streets safer, happier places for recreation and travel. Your aid can make our campaign successful and I assure you your assistance will be appreciated by the Honourable Mr. McQuesten and myself.

Yours faithfully,
M. F. HEPBURN.

Streetsville Review
Dear Mr. Editor:—

In a recent copy of your paper,——
——under Orange headings, you made the statement that the reason why no July Twelfth Celebrations were held in Streetsville was lack of co-operation by the park management. The following week you made a withdrawal of that statement, stating you had been misinformed. It is about this later publication I am writing.

Your readers and yourself will no doubt realize that to hold a celebration of this kind plans must be made ahead to insure success. Four years ago, I was holding an executive office in the County Orange Lodge of Peel, and at one of our meetings, on the subject of future celebrations in the county, I proposed holding 1937 in Streetsville as it was the One Hundredth Anniversary of the first Orange Lodge meeting under a provisional warrant of which we have any records. The proposition met with the approval of the meeting, providing it was agreeable to the Orange Lodges in Streetsville. At the next meeting of Union L.O.L. No. 263 I told the meeting what I had done. The subject was discussed and Bro. J. C. Rutledge and myself were appointed to interview Mr. Dawson and others and report at the next meeting.

Mr. Rutledge, Mr. Dawson and myself happened to meet a few nights after in Streetsville Council Chambers at a Court of Revision meeting, I believe. We approached Mr. Dawson on the subject of the use of the park for a July 12th celebration, not stating any definite year, that to be set later. We asked him to name a nominal price for the use of his park with free admission to everyone, free parking and our own booths on the grounds. He refused to rent the park for the day on those conditions.

His conditions, as we understood them, were no booths on the grounds but his own, free access to the park for the procession, but he reserved the right for to charge or prohibit parking or independent citizens not of the Order with a promise of a donation of Challenge Cups for competition valued at ————. As a committee we stated to him then we were not satisfied with his condition, and I gave Mr. Dawson my address if he thought our proposition over for a set price for the day. The committee reported back to L.O.L. No. 263 who unanimously endorsed the committee's proposition and decided to drop proceedings until a suitable time.

Sir, from that date until to-day we have had no reply from Mr. Dawson and the statement I made to you or about July 12, which you printed is correct.

With the approval of Union L.O.L No. 263 at their meeting on Aug 4th, 1937.

Signed—
V. J. BONHAM,

P.C. Master of Peel.

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON VII.
GOD GIVES LAW TO A NATION
(Exodus 19: 1—20; 21.
Printed Text—Exodus 20: 1—17.
Golden Text—Thou shalt love the Lord with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. . . Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Matt. 22: 37, 39.

The Lesson in its Setting

Place—Mount Sinai.
Time—B.C. 1498.

"And God spake all these words, saying, I am Jehovah thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." —Two fundamental reasons for Israel's obedience to the law about to be given are here announced; the one who gives the law is none other than Jehovah and God, Jehovah meaning "the one who is," i.e., the eternal one; this redeemed the Israelites out of the house of bondage, and consequently had a claim upon them for their gratitude and obedience.

"Thou shalt have no other gods before me." — This commandment is a direct prohibition of every form of worship which does not have for its object the Jehovah of the Old Testament, who is the Father of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and strikes at the very root of all polytheism, and of every ancient and modern religion and cult which exhalts to a place of worship either a mythological god or goddess, or an actual human being. There cannot be two gods.

"Thou shalt not make unto thee a graven image, nor any likeness of any thing that is in Heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth. Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them; for I Jehovah, thy God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, upon the third and upon the fourth generation of them that hate me.

"And showing lovingkindness unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments."— As the First Commandment forbade any other being to be worshipped as God, the Second Commandment forbids the making of any images of God or of other creatures to worship and serv

"Thou shalt not take the name of Jehovah thy God in vain; for Jehovah will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."—The word "vain" means "empty", "without reality," and, by taking the name of God in vain, not only is all profanity which uses his name here condemned, but all acts and words of men who pretend to be solemnly worshipping God, while their hearts are far from him.

"Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work. But the seventh day is a Sabbath unto Jehovah thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant. nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates.

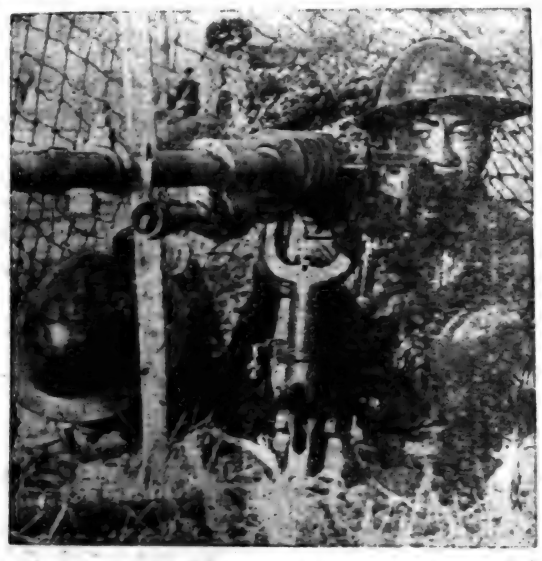
"For in six days Jehovah made Heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore Jehovah blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it." — The word "Sabbath" means, literally, cessation, and, consequently, rest. While the word itself does not appear in the Bible until Ex. 16: 23—29, the idea of the Sabbath is revealed in the story of creation (see Gen. 2: 1—3). For other important references, see Ex. 31: 13—16; Lev. 19: 3, 30; Deut. 5: 12—15; Isa. 58: 13; Jer. 17: 21—27.

"Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which Jehovah thy God giveth thee." "The meaning of the word "honor" is—"to attach weight to; to put in the place of superiority; to hold in high opinion; to reverence, in the best sense of that word." "To the child who is not yet of age to think, to plan, to will, honoring of parents consists in subjection, obedience implicitly and gladly rendered. This, like every law of God, is for the child a gracious and yet imperative requirement.

"Thou shalt not kill."— This and the next three commandments have to do with life, purity, property, and reputation. The command not to take another life naturally stands at the beginning of a series of laws dealing with human relationships.

"Thou shalt not commit adultery." —Strictly speaking, adultery is violation of the marriage vow on the part of either husband or wife, while the accurate term for sexual relationships outside of the marriage state is fornication. Both of them and all sins of every form involved in these certainly come within the scope of the Seventh Commandment. Impurity is probably the most terrible curse in our modern Western civilization, and it is getting darker, and deeper, and more prevalent. Our vicious movies have a great deal to do with the careless, indifferent, almost smart attitude which our present generation is taking toward sexual sins. No man can treasure evil thoughts and let them remain in his heart. They are like the plant which starts in the recesses of your porch, which presently beings to creep out into the light. No man can think foul thoughts, no man can meditate on things that are unworthy without paying the price for it in his manhood. Keep pure associations. There are evil-minded friends who love to spew out upon their suggestions: Against them we can only erect the barrier of aggressive purity.

"Thou shalt not steal." — Underhand dealing was the besetting sin of the Hebrew. It is exemplified in the early days in the character of the national ancestor, Jacob. It is the constant cry in the social teachings of the prophets — Hosea, Amos, Isaiah, and Micah.



"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neigbbor."—To bear false witness is to make a public statement before one or more persons concerning another in such a way as to deliberately utter a falsehood about that person or persons.

"Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's."—The improper desire is the root of all evil. It can seldom be reached by human legislation. But it is open to the Searcher of hearts. The intent is that which, in the last resort, determines the moral character of the act. This last 'word,' is, therefore, the interpreting clause of the whole Decalogue (Rom. 7:7). Covetousness here includes envy, malice, and every other selfish or disinterestedness, but of all forms of unselfish benevolence. This commandment is, therefore, virtually the law of love, and in this positive sense gives that loftier aspect to the Decalogue, the traces of which have been already noticed.

"My hair is cut short. I will not have myself looking like an artist."—Jose Iturbi.

Health Depends On Cleanliness

School or College Girl Needs Plenty of Sleep, Food and Exercise

Exercise, fresh air, sunshine, a sensible diet and sufficient sleep are the best beauty preparations for the college girl. Good health is the foundation of truly radiant beauty, and it's a mistake indeed for the coed to try to subsist in chocolate sodas and fad diets, or to fall into irregular sleeping habits.

It's great fun to sit up in the dormitory and talk for hours and hours after study periods are finished, of course—and conversation is wonderful —but one who makes a habit of sleeping all too few hours a night will find that her beauty, not to mention her alertness, will suffer.

Even though you are not the active sportswoman type do go in for at least one active sport while you are at college. If routine exercises in the gymnasium bore you no end, take up golf, tennis, swimming, badminton or fencing and get your exercise that way.

Brisk walks in the sunshine will keep your figure as trim and supple as it is now. No college girl wants to be bothered with a flock of intricate beauty routines, but walking isn't a bother, and it is more sensible to pay a mite of attention to your figure now while you are young and lovely than to wait until there are noticeable defects which require strenuous treatment.

Cleanliness is part of the business of being healthy. Do bathe every day, and wash face and neck frequently between times. See that your hair always is fresh and clean and fragrant. Also that clothes are neatly pressed and absolutely spotless. Even though you are in a girls' school where clothes do not matter so much during the week, keep the casual ones you do wear immaculate. Habits set so early in life stick. So why cultivate slovenly ones? When you get out into the world and whether you choose a career of business, teaching or marriage, neatness will count. Learn to be trimly groomed now, then you won't have to be bothered trying to change your habits later on.

No Polite Motorist Found in Kingston

KINGSTON,—Search for a "polite" motor car driver in Kingston did not result in any compliments for Kingston, three judges being unable to select one for the $5 weekly award offered by a service club.

Most of the cars were driven with care, but the drivers did not show other cars or pedestrians any exceptional courtesy, which would have won the cash, the judges reported.

Around The Dial

RADIO HEADLINERS OF THE WEEK

G. C. MURRAY

We have all heard of Rubinoff and his violin, but did you know that he is Mayor of a town in California, a place called Fiddletown, having a population of about 300 people? Its name, however, seems to be the important part. The story goes that away back when the town was but a hamlet, they were struck with a drought which lasted several years; so, in the year 1849 the immigrant farmers started to fiddle for rain and lo and behold, they got it and plenty of it—and so today it has been called Fiddletown.

Message That Went 18,000 Miles

Now here is a story of how a message had to go over 18,000 miles so that a reporter could get into telephone communication with a friend in a nearby hotel. It is the story about Fred Meinholtz, who is sometimes called the Radio Listening Reporter and the trouble a brother reporter had to get him on the telephone. Meinholtz was an ardent Admiral Byrd fan and it goes that he had one of his many receivers tuned constantly to the wavelength that was used by Admiral Byrd at his South Pole base, and was in his glory when he was able to pick up the mesages sent out by the South Pole base to the civilized world; he also was right up on all the equipment that Byrd was using and all the technical data concerning it. Well, a brother reporter who was writing a story about the Byrd Expedition ran short on matter and thought that he would call up Meinholtz and see if he had any information he could use in his story. He did so, only to be told repeatedly that the line was busy and finally that the receiver was off the hook and the party couldn't be reached; well, this reporter had a brain-wave; he got in touch with a radio operator, who in turn got in contact with the Byrd Expedition and great was the surprise of Fred Meinholtz when he heard the Byrd Expedition calling him and telling him to put the receiver back on the hook because the "Times" was trying to reach him by telephone. Meinholtz immediately called the "Times" and told them about the message he had received from over 9,000 miles away and offering any assistance he was able to give.

Rumours Debunked

Now for a little debunking about some of the radio artists whom you hear over the various chains: Horace Lapp doesn't really spend four hours a day before an electric fan, getting that windblown effect in his hair: it is there naturally, and the only way it can be controlled is by a good application of hair grease, and as that is distasteful to most men, Horace just lets it have its way. We have all heard of Bob Burns and how he invented the Bazooka; well, it wasn't him at all; it was his uncle, who had that honor, or something. And about Ken. Soble and his amateurs, it is rumored around that Ken. spends all his time looking for new talent for his amateur shows. This is undoubtedly wrong, because Ken. is trying to learn to play a bugle, and that is how he spends his leisure hours. And again the story pops up about Rudy Vallee's hair:— that it is marcelled, permanented, finger-waved, etc., etc.—another error on somebody's part; Rudy's hair, like Horace Lapp's, is naturally curly and he never goes to a hairdresser of any kind. . . And Jessica Dragonette, contrary to general rumors does not like herring as is generally thought . . . Foster Hewitt, our master sport announcer, was really a very good hockey player in his day, and is at the present time considered a very good boxer, which several fans know to their dismay, who have run up against him; he is also a good skier and would be even better if he hadn't a bad knee which was injured during a sporting competition.

Vogue of Ventriloquists

Edgar Bergan, who with his dummy, Charles McCarthy, is one of radio's highlights at the present time, has had his rise to fame all in the past few years. Before his radio debut he was in vaudeville and was earning the very modest (?) sum of about $300 a week and was considered one of the best ventriloquists in the game. Rudy Vallee got to hear about him and gave him a spot on his hour and it wasn't long till he was in the money class; and today he is co-starring with W. C. Fields and Don Ameche on the big Sunday night hour is receiving about $2.000 a performance, and has a promise of a raise to around $3,500 for the hour he is on the air. He has so popularized ventriloquism that at the present time a factory has been opened up manufacturing Charlie McCarthies and is running at top speed to keep up to the demand. Another thing that has brought Bergen to the public eye is the $10,000 trust fund that he has recently drawn up for indigent ventriloquists and is to be called the Charlie McCarthy fund. The dummy nursers will be aided as long as they use a Charlie McCarthy in their work.

Fewer Flies

In the "25 years ago" column of the Ottawa Journal, we read where a fly-swatting contest was held and a boy won a prize of $10. It is a reminder how much cleaner city and town life has become in the last 3 or 4 decades, no more wells for the drinking water, no more dry earth the flies out and covered garbage cans to keep them from breeding. So sanitary progress is writ large in these four items.

TERROR MOUNTAIN

By MADELEINE SHARPS BUCHANAN

Three bandits seize a trans-continental bus, and force the driver to guide it up a mountainside to a lonely log shack. They want a valuable secret formula believed to be in the possession of one of the passengers, Finley Trump. Meanwhile, a raging forest fire, creeping up the mountain, traps the group. The first night one of the bandits is mysteriously strangled with his own bandana, and the next night, a second one meets the same fate. Despite the sinister situation, May Lawrence, pretty nurse, and young Dr. Nick Strand find time to become engaged. Then Finley Trump is found strangled; and Kenneth Jenkins, browbeaten little man, in attempting to find a way through the fire, is overcome. When he regains consciousness, May, who has been attending him, excitedly announces that he knows who the murderer is.

CHAPTER IX

By eight o'clock that night, however, little Jenkins had not uttered a word. After May's statement, he had fallen asleep, and Strand had insisted that he must not be aroused. The men had all moved into one bedroom, so as to give Jenkins a room to himself.

"I don't like your idea of using the poor little duffer as bait," Strand told May gravely. "You know he hasn't spoken."

"It's a bright idea," said May obstinately. "And Miss Jones feels sure he must know a lot."

Strand merely shrugged. His manner asked what difference it made what Mr. Jenkins knew. His eyes lingered on May's loveliness.

"It is hard not to realize my dreams, now that I have found my dream girl," he said, and drew her into his arms.

After a long happy moment, May lifted her head and listened.

"What was that?" she whispered.

"Only the everlasting blasting," said Strand, but she held up a trembling hand.

"No—listen! Not blasting. What I heard is thunder!"

Thunder! The very word was a life saver. It meant rain. It meant safety!

"Good heavens, so it is!" cried Strand excitedly. "May, we may work out of this yet! Let's go and tell the rest. This poor chap will sleep."

"Jenkins must know something, Nick," whispered May. "This is our chance to learn the truth, to force it into the open. I've got an idea. Listen. . . ."

A little later, as May and Doctor Strand entered the living room, where the others sat in silence, there was another distant rumble of thunder. No one else, however, appeared to be aware of it. A dreadful lethargy had taken possession of them.

Now, there was a constant rain of cinders and ash and occasional blazing particles. The snap and crash of the fire seemed so close that no one liked to look outside.

Mrs. Jenkins had gone to lie down again, and Amelia Bangor was playing solitaire. Miss Jones was pretending to read, while Somers and Doyle smoked and walked in silence. Tommy Archer, his spirits subdued by the taut atmosphere, amused himself by inciting two sluggish lizards to battle.

"How's Jenkins?" asked Somers.

"Better," said May. "He knows something, I feel sure. Nick says he will waken shortly and then we can question him. Even though we die here together, it will be better to know. Better to know which one of us—" Her bright eyes travelled about the tense circle.

No one spoke for a moment. Then, Doyle said gloomily: "I suppose that will be something."

"Cheers!" said Jim Somers in a dead voice. "I wouldn't care who the devil did it if I could get a breath of clean cold air again."

In the brief silence which followed, Stutter yelled from the kitchen for whiskey.

"I'm giving it to the poor devil," said Strand, with an apologetic smile. "His nerves are shot as a result of all these stranglings. He's afraid to go to sleep."

Miss Jones looked at May significantly and drew her out into the night.

"Why did you say that about Jenkins?" she asked. "You may have signed his death warrant."

"But we've got to know who is guilty," said May.

"If someone gets to little Jenkins—" said Miss Jones darkly.

"Nick and I will prevent that," said May. "We're going to pretend to leave him alone for a while. After supper, I am going to pretend to go to bed, but I will sneak out of the window and climb into his room. Nick will sneak in there, too. We both have guns, and we'll hide. Then, if anyone comes in there to get Jenkins, we'll trap whoever it is!"

"I have only one suspect," said Miss Jones.

"I have none," said May.

Just then, Tommy burst out of the house and seized May's arm.

"Hi! It's gone! Stutter's bandana is gone!" he cried. "And is that guy scared to death! It was on the table, and everybody has been in and out of the kitchen."

A picture of Mr. Jenkins' scrawny neck floated before May's mental gaze, and she shuddered.

Heart in the Wrong Place

Janus in the Spectator writes — It is always rather cheering when fact turns up to corroborate the improbabilities of fiction or drama. Everybody remembers the doctor in Le Medecin Malgre Lui who, charged with searching for his patient's heart on the right side and liver on the left, observed gehially, in the words that quotation has made classic, that it used to be the other way round, mais nous avons change tout cela.

And apparently we have changed it, for here is the Morning Post's Rome correspondent describing in all seriousness the physique of an Italian army recruit whom his medical officers found possessed of a heart on the left (and spleen and appendix on the wrong sides and a stomach the wrong way round).

Moliere's doctor would have just found him most agreeably familiar ground. But I am told by what it is customary to call a "well known Harley Street specialist" (actually a not quite qualified medical student) that this sort of thing is less rare than might be expected.

In spite of the fact that the violin is the best known of all stringed instruments, few laymen realize the intricacy of its construction. Sometimes the back and belly of the instrument are made of but a single piece each, the total remaining parts in it numbering 60.

Women Take To Skeet Shooting

Used to Take Along Knitting While Men Handled Guns

Skeet shooting, invented some years ago by W. H. Foster and Henry W. Davis, of Boston, is said to be rising in popularity among women, according to the New York Sun. A few years ago only the hardiest of their sex dared borrow a gun and shooting jacket from brother or husband for a few trial shots. Today finds the number of women in the United States who shoot regularly climbing toward two thousand.

With only three years of shooting experience to her credit, and on her first trip to the Great Eastern Championships, Mrs. H. E. Rogers, of Waltham, Mass., walked off with the women's title at this summers' Lordship, Conn., meet with a score of 85 x 100. She also holds the world's long run skeet record for women — 117 straight targets—won in January; and recently gained the women's skeet title of Massachusetts. Mrs. Rogers also does much partridge and woodcock shooting, and is well known in Gulf Stream fishing circles.

Miss Winifred Hanley, of Stamford, Conn., runner-up for the Lordship title, says it's a toss-up as to which she takes more seriously—skeet or golf. Mrs. S. L. Hutcheson, of Larchmont, N.Y., adopted skeet rather than take her knitting to shoots in which her husband participated. Liking it at first trial, she is now an alert, accurate shooter with a constantly improving score.

A mental handicap was added for women shooters at Lordship by the presence of the prominent woman skeet shooter, Mrs. W. W. Walker, of Washington, D.C., who recently not only won the women's championship of Maryland and the District of Columbia, but also took the all-around title from both men and women contestants with the excellent scores of 40x50 and 98x100. She was also runner-up in the recent North-South Women's Skeet Championship. Mrs. Walker dispels any idea that the woman shooter must be a hefty, muscular Amazon. Feminine and soft spoken, she nevertheless takes to the shooting post a quiet confidence and steady accuracy that seldom fails to bring results. A bit of bad luck prevented her from placing at Lordship.

Education May Ban "Dates" and "Places"

CHICAGO, — "Date" history and "place" geography are on the wane and a combination of both, known as "social science," may soon be in use in all junior high schools.

Sidney A. Denison, superintendent of schools of surburban Glen Ellyn, who made this statement said the date of a battle is not so important as "the reason why the battle was fought and an understanding of the causes and conditions that led to the battle."

"The 'place' in geography is not so important, but the habits of the people, their culture and the effect they have had on mankind's progress are."

Synthetic Milk

Fifty years hence, a writer assures us, the milk cow will be replaced by a milk-producing machine. This factory milk will be pure and not lacking in nutritive elements. It will be cheaper, too, notes the Sarnia Observer.

Science is truly marvelous, and there is nothing more astonishing than the number of plans which it has advanced for consigning the cow to oblivion.

A decade ago an English concern announced that it would make milk from grass and we were asked to provision great loads of hay being driven into one end of an industrial plant and an endless chain of bottles, filled and sealed, emerging from the other. Later the soy bean was hailed as the source of our milk supply, and we were told that this legume of the Far East would make the cow as dead as the dodo. Then Roger Babson predicted that by 1950 we would be getting our cheese and butter from kerosene.

So far as can be seen, there is practically nothing between the old cow and extinction except a division of opinion among the experts on how it is to be accomplished. Another minor item is that science hasn't yet mastered the trick of slicing a T-bone steak from a flywheel, extracting a rib roast from an oil can or making a Chinese bean taste like a beef tenderloin. Until science has all the answers, we will cleave to the cow, and yield our laurels only to the inventor who is able to produce synthetic pork crops at something under 25 cents per squeal.

In all this business of synthetic substitutions there is still something lacking and that something constitutes the difference between natural food and a chemical product that may look like the real thing and contain all its elements but has not the flavor nor the appeal.

That mysterious process that causes sap to rise in springtime in the trees, that puts the green color into grass when it is exposed to sufficient sunshine, is the touch that scientists have so far failed to master. If they could do that, it might be concluded that the cow could be dispensed with.

Corn dipped into tar pitch before sowing will not be eaten by crows, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The method is to thoroughly stir a half bushel of corn into a pint of tar.

Blackberries in Two Roles

Blackberries are not on the market yet in some parts of Canada but they should be fairly plentiful in a very short time. Here are a couple of ideas on what to do with them which you can keep in mind until your local grocer has a good supply for sale.

Blackberries grow fairly evenly all over the Dominion and they have always been popular for jam making, but not used much for jellies. This is because housewives know they lack pectin, the substance which makes them jell, and so have naturally avoided trying to do anything about them in the jelly line. But that is an old fashioned excuse for not using these delicious berries in jellies because the modern cook uses bottled fruit pectin to take the place of natural pectin and so is never stuck with a fruit that she can't make into jelly.

Blackberry Jelly

4 cups (2 lbs.) juice.
8 cups (3¼ lbs.) sugar.
1 bottle fruit pectin.

To prepare juice, crush thoroughly or grind about three quarts of fully ripe berries. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 12 eight-ounce glasses.

Here is a grand blackberry dessert which you can serve the same day you make your jelly. Just be sure to save enough berries for this and also be sure that they are the big juicy ripe ones. It is Blackberry Roly-Poly, the kind your grandmothers used to make—a flaky, hot delicious spiral of biscuit dough filled with rich, wine-dark berries and juice. The ingredients given here will make enough roly-poly for eight people — that is, if they are polite and don't ask for a second helping. But even if there are only four in the family, there still won't be any left over. The best way to settle the shortage problem is to serve this delicious dessert quite a few times during the blackberry season.

Blackberry Roly Poly

2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter or other shortening
¾ cup milk (about)
Melted butter
1½ cups fresh blackberries
6 tablespoons sugar.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt and sift again. Cut in shortening. Add milk gradually until soft dough is formed. Turn out immediately on slightly floured board and roll ¼ inch thick. Brush with melted butter, cover with blackberries, and sprinkle with sugar. Roll as for jelly roll. Moisten edge and press against roll. Place in greased loaf pan with edge of roll on under side, brush with melted butter, and bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) 20 to 25 minutes. Serve hot with cream. Serves 8.

Black to Lead In Early Fall Mode

NEW YORK.—Two or three points are obvious about the forthcoming season. It's going to start off black; ever since midsummer black has been rising on the horizon like a storm cloud. Materials whether wool or silk have exceptional texture interest. And the black dresses of fascinating fabrics are going to be figure-enhancing in their slim silhouette! If one is gayly inclined one may wear a high-color hat with one's black dress, or one may select a black hat with a bit of gay trimming. The ultra chic will stick to all-black. The character of the dress fabrics calls for smooth and rich materials for hats, in order that a proper contrast may be made. Felts are sleek as doeskin, antelope is more popular than ever.

Here's What To Do

The first thing to do towards putting yourself in harmony with the hot weather is to refuse to speak so constantly of its discomforts. The second thing is to get up a little earlier in the morning and stop rushing about to make up for time lost in cat-napping. The third thing is to wear loose, light clothing regardless of what that snooty Miss Fashion thinks of it. The fourth thing is to watch the diet, eschewing carbohydrates and gallons of ices and alcohol in any form, and eat sparingly though often. And the fifth and final thing is to stop rebelling against the heat!

So the next time old John Thermometer skyrockets a squirt of mercury out of the top of his head, laugh at him. It's plenty of fun when you get the hang of it!—Winnipeg Free Press.

WATER POEMS

An episode in an amateur photographer's picture Odyssey of the travels of water. Exposure f.22 at 1/25 second.

THE moods of water, tumbling, bubbling, gushing, spouting, dashing, splashing, trickling, rolling, rippling, dripping, glad, angry, smooth, rough, serene, peaceful, make adjectives for poets. For the amateur photographer with any poetry in his soul whatever, they make themes for beautiful pictures and the subject of a delightful picture hobby.

We know of one amateur photographer who used his camera to picture the grand circle water makes in its journey from land to sea to the clouds and back to the land again. This picture epic of water began with a photograph of a tiny woodland spring, then pictures of a rivulet, a brook, a river, a mightier river with its waterfalls and cataracts, the bay through which it flowed into the ocean, the ocean itself, a cloud and sunbeam picture over the ocean, thus picturing water being caught up for its return journey, and finally rain.

This idea far from exhausts the possibilities of poetic water pictures, especially when human interest is added. The majestic sweep of water over Niagara Falls is a poem in itself but a honeymooning pair in the foreground adds romance. A fair swimmer in clear water on which sunshine is shimmering creates a poetic pattern of life and light. A pseudo-moonlight picture over a placid lake of a youth and a maid in a canoe (a shot into the setting sun with a small lens opening) gives a poetic mood to "the waters stilled at even." Foam at the prow of a careening yacht or its churning wake over the stern depicts the poetry of motion.

Verses may be illustrated. "Where the breaking waves dash high on a stern and rockbound coast" is a place for photographs of one of water's most inspiring moods, and then, from the hilltops "there is not in the wide world a valley so sweet, as that vale in whose bosom the bright waters meet."

Endless are your opportunities for making delightful photographs of water scenes. But there's a trick to successful water photography. It's largely a matter of shooting so that the pictured water has the right "feel" or texture.

For example, it's possible to shoot spray too fast, so that it has a hard, brittle look, thereby losing its essential sense of movement. On the other hand, rippling water should be shot fast enough so that the ripples are distinct, each with its own highlights.

Another point is lighting. Choose the angle that gives you the maximum "texture," the characteristic interplay of light and shade. No one can tell you exactly how to go about this; a little experimenting will tell you better than volumes of words. But keep this in mind. Any fair-sized body of water reflects a lot of light. Your exposures, therefore, can be faster or, preferably, your "stop" smaller than for a comparable summer landscape.

Early History Halton County

Hornby

In 1818, five men, with their families, left the old land and landed early in June in muddy York. They were: John Dempsy, John Fisher, Abraham Nelson, Thomas Joyce, and John Wilson. Dempsy and Fisher came from Scotland. Nelson, Joyce and Wilson came from Ireland. They came by stage along Dundas Street to Munn's corners, then up the sixth concession, at that time only a blazed trail, through the dense forest, until they came to the base line between Trafalgar and Esquesing Townships. Two high elm trees stood on the corner, which is now the Chisholm farm. Under these two trees, the five men, the advance guard of the great multitude who have since made their home in the district, slept one July night. Awakening refreshed next morning they went out to view the promised land. During that autumn these pioneers chose five homesteads and erected five log cabins. They possessed considerable skill, shaping the logs with common axes, while with a whip saw they ripped boards for flooring and clapboards for the roof. They returned to Muddy York for the winter, coming back in the spring, bringing their families and a few chattels. The families walked, while the yoke of oxen carried all their possessions. In 1822 Jasper Martin took up lot 14, concession 2, where the town of Milton now stands, and the following year erected a grist mill. This was a great convenience to the settlers, and through the bush they came carrying wheat on their backs, returning with flour from the Milton mill.

The first financial return the settlers received for their labor was from a by-product. An ashery was built on Brooks' farm, Hornby West, in 1823, and another on the Henry farm, Hornby East. The settlers brought the ashes from the clearing, from which potash was extracted. At first the heavy pine was looked on as an encumbrance, but soon proved to be the greatest source of wealth. In 1825 George Miller built a dam and sawmill on the sixteen mile creek above the base line and settlers were able to get lumber cut for building.

In 1828 another sawmill was built on lot 11, Trafalgar, by Mr. Elliot. These dams and mills were a great boon to the settlers at that time. In 1835 Robert Atkinson and Thomas Preston, built a steam saw mill on lot 3, concession 7, on the west side of the road. They ran it until 1855, when Myers rented it for a time, then Robert Hall came into possession. It was finally owned by George Cook, who for years, cut nearly a million feet of lumber annually. In 1863 John Irwin built a sawmill on the east side of the 7th concession. This had a capacity of 18,000 ft. of lumber and twenty square of shingles a day. This suburb was a perfect hive of industry. On a winter day a continuous string of horses would be bringing in large loads of logs; the air would be filled with the merry jingle of bells, the throb of the engine, and the crash of the monarchs of the forest as they came to earth. The greater part of this lumber was teamed down the 7th line to Oakville harbor, and taken across the lake on schooners. A village sprang up in the hollow, cozy cabins were built for the men and their families, and stables for their horses. The place was called Farlton, and for years was the centre of great importance. The pine put most of the farmers on easy street, while the land, when cleared, was the very best wheat land. In 1824 an immense trade was done in white oak staves. Thousands of cords would be piled along the banks of the Sixteen and floated down to Oakville in the spring. Col. Chisholm bought the staves and shipped them across the lake by schooner. It was from this trade that Oak-ville got its name.

Before the G.T.R. was built through Georgetown, wheat from as far back as Erin would be teamed down the 7th line to Oakville harbor. George Cook of Farlton is said to have counted as many as one hundred and ten loads of wheat in an unbroken line. Great hopes were entertained of the benefit that would come from the plank road. The 7th line from Oakville to Balinifad was planked. The heavy teaming done from Oakville in connection with the building of the G.T.R. wore out the road and it only lasted about 7 years. This was a great loss to the shareholders. John McKindsey, whose son afterwards was Senator McKindsey, built the first Hornby Hotel in 1830. This building was used as a hotel for years afterwards becoming famous as the McMillan store, the Eaton establishment of that day. The next hotel was built on the east corner by Gillis Adams in 1835. This was called the Rossin House. Another on the south corner by Mr. McCollom afterwards kept by W. Moody, later by Fred Smith. Samuel Armstrong kept hotel for years in the building where Jim Bailey now lives. The first hotel built in Hornby West was built by Mr. Henry. Another one was built on the same site and was kept for years by David Lindsay under his regime. This hotel, called the Red Lion, was famed far and near for the excellent entertainment provided for man and beast. Mr. Lindsay carried on an extensive trade as general storekeeper in this building for many years. John White, M.P. for Halton County, had a large store on the south corner of Hornby East; here a successful business was carried on by Mr. Duggan as manager. Kyle and Johnston built a large store on the north corner of Hornby East. Mr. Crawford built a brick store in Hornby West. John Simpson started a large tailoring business in the town. Mr. McClusky had the largest pottery in the county in Hornby East. He was a skilful potter and his wares were in great demand. In 1844 John Brain built a brewery north of Hornby East. The first building was a log one where about 300 bushels a year were used. This soon gave place to a large brick one where about ten thousand bushels a year were converted into beer of excellent quality. His sons, John and Edwin, succeeded him and a small village of workmen's houses clustered around the brewery. This business was sold to Mr. Kemp.

A stage coach ran from Guelph, Rockwood and Acton to Georgetown from Georgetown to Oakville daily. With four blood drivers, guard and load of passengers, its arrival was an event of great importance, and, as it carried the mail, a crowd always welcomed it.

In religion the Methodists were first in the field. In 1823 they erected a log church on the west corner of the eighth concession, Esquesing. Excellent preachers ministered to the people in this building. The next church was built in 1825 at Bloomfield, sixth line, Trafalgar. Another was built on lot 2, concession 7, Esquesing. This was afterwards used by the Hornby Literary and Debating Society.

The first brick church was built where the present Methodist Church now is. In 1881 the different bodies united. Early in the thirties the Baptists built a frame church at Farlton. William Pickards was minister and was a man of an intensely spiritual orature. Under his ministry a large and influential congregation was built up.

About 1838 the Presbyterians built a frame church and started a cemetery on the north corner of the eighth concession, Esquesing. This was replaced in 1876 by the present handsome brick building. In 1840 the Anglicans built the handsome frame church where they have worshipped ever since. There is a cemetery adjoining where many of the fathers of the country sleep.

The first schoolhouse was built in 1826. It was a log building and stood beside the Orange hall. The last teacher in the old school was Charles McClennan, when over 100 pupils were on the roll. The present brick building, now in use, was built in 1870. Two teachers were employed for a time in this school, where 130 pupils were on the roll. Lyons, Leighton, Bachelor, Brookbanks, were among the old-time teachers.

Orangemen always formed a large percentage of the citizens of Hornby. The first Orange hall was built in 1823 on the farm owned by A. Stark. This was a log building with clapboard roof. In 1858 the large hall that still stands, was built in Hornby West. This hall has always served for public meetings and in the old days when John White, Dr. Robertson, Senator McKendsay, Col. Clay, were the public speakers, many strenuous meetings were held. In 1818 five men sleeping under trees on the Base Line—today a great stretch of country with homes of luxury and elegance. We honor, and rightly so, the statesman, soldier and poet, but do not let us forget these brave men and women, who, in toil, danger and loneliness, laid the foundation for all the blessings we now enjoy.

Auburn

Auburn, our next stop from Hornby, is on lots 10 and 11, concession 7, John McMillan kept the first store in a building used for a dwelling house for years by R. E. Hall. William Bussell kept hotel in the house afterwards owned by Fishmark, and Mr. Hunwick kept in the house where Fred Tuck lived for a time. This was the home of Billy Downs, who for years, manufactured threshing machines, his separators being very popular. The first threshing machine in the township was owned by Frank Atkinson. It was a wooden cylinder with staples driven in to serve as teeth. It made its appearance in 1825. In 1831 the first separator with decks and cleaning attachment was brought in by Jonathan and Joseph Howes. It was driven by an eight horse-power and although there were no carriers it was a wonderful improvement on the open cylinder. It was built in Palermo by Mr. Lawrence. In 1858 Jimmie Downs made his debut as a thresher, his brother, Billie, getting a machine a few years after. These machines were made by Joseph Brothers, Milton. They were driven by horses on a horsepower, five teams going in a circle. In 1851 the first reapers were bought from Mr. Lawrence of Palermo. These were of the old variety, where a man pulled the sheeves off with a rake. They were purchased by Mr. Howes and Mr. Featherstone. Sanders & Sons had a blacksmith and carpenter shop where, for years, they manufactured all kinds of vehicles and farm implements. The name was changed from Auburn to Agerton. Now it often goes by the name of Millionaire's corners.

WEDDING

Wrigglesworth—Giffen

A wedding of interest took place on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 7th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer May, Hornby, when their sister, Miss Ruth Evelyn Giffen, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Giffen, Georgetown, became the bride of Mr. Howard Cantelon Wrigglesworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wrigglesworth, Georgetown. Rev. B. Eyre of Ashgrove United Church officiated and the wedding music was played by Miss Isobel Wrigglesworth, sister of the groom. During the signing of the register Miss Hazel Harrison, Georgetown, sang sweetly "Because" accompanied at the piano by Mrs. F. Wright.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Thos. Giffen, wore a gown of cobweb silk net over white satin, a finger tip veil falling from a white satin halo and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses and lily-of-the-valley. She was attended by Miss Bessie McDonald, gowned in pink silk net with matching halo and accessories and carrying a corsage of roses. Mr. Gerald Graham was groomsman.

Following the reception the happy couple left by motor for Manitoba, the bride travelling in a figured brown sheer costume with matching accessories. On their return they will live in St. Catherines.

Travelling along concession lines in many Ontario counties one passes over a piece of road, probably two or three hundred yards, well oiled, while long stretches on either side is dusty and uncomfortable for driving. The nicely oiled section is generally opposite the home of the reeve or councillor.—Exchange.

Last Thursday a strange car was standing by the curb on Queen Street, here and when it pulled away, struck another car and badly bent the fenders. The driver played off smart, whisked his car around a side street and was soon out of sight. The other driver followed in the same direction, but was too slow and number one got clean away. He may be caught yet. The fine is heavy for leaving the scene of an accident.

MALTON

At Malton, Toronto surveyors have been working steadily on mapping out the site of the proposed city airport. Farmers of the area on which the port will be sited are busy harvesting and threshing what they feel will be the last crops they will obtain from their land, rumor being current in the district that early fall will see the commencement of the work of preparing the land for the reception of trans-Dominion air liners.

LET US SMILE

The street performer was addressing the crowd: "Ladies an' gents: In a few minutes I will astonish you by eatin' coal, stones an' nails. I will also swallow a sword, after which I will come round with a hat trustin' to get enough for a crust o' bread!"

"Lumme!" said a voice. "Still 'ungry!"

DRUMQUIN

The recent rains will be very beneficial to root crops and in many other ways. This district has, so far, been very fortunate with such gentle rains, very little damage being done.

Mr. Frank Burton is driving a new Ford V8.

Mr. J. A. Schnick has gone North for a few holidays.

Mrs. Reg. Tucker has returned home from Trent River Bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Dinning and family motored to Niagara on Sunday.

Miss Ruth Andrew is visiting Mrs. E. Laraway at Trent River Bridge.

A son was born on Wednesday, Aug. 4th to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wellar.

Mr. Pugh of Toronto is here on an extended visit to his brother, Henry.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Zardo and family drove to Buffalo and Saginaw for the week-end.

Mrs. Dr. J. B. Wilkes of Toronto spent the week-end with her husband in Streetsville.

The great C.N.E., Toronto, starts on Friday, Aug. 27th, and will run until Saturday, Sept. 11th.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. A. McClintock of Brampton visited the McClintock brothers here last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Morley Funston of Hamilton visited with Mr. and Mrs. William Couse, here, this week.

Mrs. J. Walton and son, Arthur, of Pence River, Sask., visited her niece, Mrs. S. B. MacPherson, on Sunday.

Mr. Wm. Marchment, Mrs. Roy Bibby, and Miss Lillian Herdman of Toronto visited Mr. and Mrs. S. B. MacPherson, on Sunday.

Mr. Fred Reeves, who drives the milk truck for Cooksville Jersey Dairy, had an operation for appendicitis at a Toronto hospital last week.

The Northern Rubber Company, Guelph, held a large picnic at Peel Park, Saturday. They came by special train and it took about a dozen coaches to carry them. There was also some picnics from Toronto at Peel Park the same day.

Travelling along concession lines in many Ontario counties one passes over a piece of road, probably two or three hundred yards, well oiled, while long stretches on either side is dusty and uncomfortable for driving. The nicely oiled section is generally opposite the home of the reeve or councillor.—Exchange.

Last Thursday a strange car was standing by the curb on Queen Street, here and when it pulled away, struck another car and badly bent the fenders. The driver played off smart, whisked his car around a side street and was soon out of sight. The other driver followed in the same direction, but was too slow and number one got clean away. He may be caught yet. The fine is heavy for leaving the scene of an accident.

MALTON

At Malton, Toronto surveyors have been working steadily on mapping out the site of the proposed city airport. Farmers of the area on which the port will be sited are busy harvesting and threshing what they feel will be the last crops they will obtain from their land, rumor being current in the district that early fall will see the commencement of the work of preparing the land for the reception of trans-Dominion air liners.

LET US SMILE

The street performer was addressing the crowd: "Ladies an' gents: In a few minutes I will astonish you by eatin' coal, stones an' nails. I will also swallow a sword, after which I will come round with a hat trustin' to get enough for a crust o' bread!"

"Lumme!" said a voice. "Still 'ungry!"

DRUMQUIN

The recent rains will be very beneficial to root crops and in many other ways. This district has, so far, been very fortunate with such gentle rains, very little damage being done.

The Young People's Societies of Hornby Circuit will take charge of the Sunday Services during the absence of their pastor. Bethel Young People will take the service at Ashgrove a week from Sunday.

This week will finish the berry harvest for this year, which was unusually good.

Mrs. Mervin Tuck and baby girl, who have been spending a few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Lyster, returned to her home in Oshawa taking her sister, Olive with her.

Mr. John Dunn has purchased a new Case threshing machine, replacing his old one. There will be some long threshing bills among the farmers this year.

Mr. Cross is building another dam. It is a good idea to store up when the supply is available.

Miss Margaret Pickett is holidaying at her home here.

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Societies of Bethel Church was held at the Church on Wednesday afternoon, of last week. Owing to the busy season, the attendance was not so good. It was children's afternoon. Bouquets of flowers were sent to the shut-ins.

Miss Irene Downs, of the Queen City, was a recent visitor in the community.

They will soon be here—the C.N.E. and Streetsville Fair.

Motoring Signals Should Be Given

Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, and the fact that, after strict investigation on the part of an American newspaper editor, the system of automobile signalling followed in this province has been found the best and is recommended for adoption throughout the United States is naturally gratifying to residents of Ontario, observes the Hamilton Spectator. The majority of drivers in this province, however, have little reason to congratulate themselves. They use the "left turn" signal, by extending the left arm, because the law insists they shall do so; but there are other "courtesy" signals which are seldom given, such neglect sometimes resulting in accidents which might easily have been avoided.

It is not often that the intention of turning right is made known to following motorists, for instance. It is explained that there are two methods of indicating such intention —either by extending the left arm upwards, or by waving the left hand in a clockwise motion, "which simultaneously indicates a turn to the right and signals the driver behind that it is safe to pass on the left side."

Another signal rarely given is the "stop" and "slow" sign, indicated by extending the left arm downwards. It is very important that the driver in the following car should know of such intention. If all drivers would rigidly observe these simple directions, there can be no doubt that conditions on the streets and highways would be immensely improved. Whether the Ontario system is adopted in the United States or no, the survey which has been made will be of real value if it directs the attention of Ontario motorists themselves to the proper signals which should be adopted. In the Old Country there is a more elaborate system of signalling, by which drivers continually indicate conditions ahead, waving on those behind to pass when the road is clear, warning when it is dangerous to do so, etc. It is not wise, perhaps, to complicate the situation by introducing new methods, but it might be well to insist that the existing signals be more generally given.

Stenographers

It is certain that the most impressive single feature of a great many business offices is the stenographer. She is certain to be trim, alert and business-like, and she is more than likely to be very good to look at; and in any case she shares with such diverse professionals as trained nurses, printers, aviators and steamship captains an air of cool, unemotional competence — sure harbinger that any incoming job will be handled capably and without fuss. Instal a man in an office with such a divine creature at his beck and call and what happens? He immediately, and inevitably, becomes a great letter-writer. He could not do less, if he has a heart.

Stuff and Nonsense

"Nothing is more plagiarized than humor."—William D. Kennedy.

Mrs. Brooks called up the local butcher before she went out:

"Send me a quarter's worth of steak," she said, "and if I'm not at home just tell them to poke it through the keyhole."

Clipped:—"If consistency is a jewel, there are a lot of people who are running darned short on jewelry.

Mr. Younghusband—"I tell you, matrimony produces a lot of changes."

Neighbor—"What's that got to do with the case?"

Mr. Younghusband:—"Why, for instance, in one short year I have been changed from a sighing lover to a loving sire."

There must be a "No-man" in every family and in every business; otherwise outgo will exceed income.

The Man—"I'll bet a coat of tan would be becoming to you, girlie."

The Girl—"Oh, thanks, you darling boy, but I'd rather have ermine."

We forget our unpleasant experiences. Those that were pleasing stand out and become exaggerated. It is easy to see why the past is inclined to seem so much happier than the present.

Teacher (in geography lesson) — "Now, can anyone tell me where we find mangoes?"

Knowing Little Boy — "Yes, miss, wherever woman goes."

Smile—We always find ourselves refreshed by the presence of cheerful people. Then why not make an effort to confer this pleasure on others? It doesn't cost any more to smile than it does to frown, and the dividends are not only greater, but far more desirable.

Joe—"Yeah, he and I are old bunk mates."

Sam—"What! You were roommates at college?"

Joe—"No, I mean we believe the same kind of bunk."

Do you remember the sailor who, when asked what he had done with his wages, answered—"Part went for liquor, part for women, and I spent the rest foolishly."

Girl—"Do you make life-size enlargements from snapshots?"

Photographer — "Certainly, miss. That's our specialty."

Read It Or Not:—Queen Inez De Castro of Portugal was crowned with all due ceremony after her death.

At The Turn of the Road

that comes to my mind like a dream,
'Tis the little white house of my neighbor that stands by the side of the stream.
By a stream where the slow gentle current is fringed by a border of trees,
That send out their soft lazy shadows and shelter the birds in their leaves.
'Tis there that the roses of Junetime reach beauty that cannot be told,
And there in the home of my neighbor are comforts far better than gold.
So over and over the picture that I see of that little abode,
Will bring to me thoughts of my neighbor and his home at the turn of the road.

The average man cannot stand prosperity, we are told. Which is probably the reason the average man doesn't have to.

"Does your husband talk in his sleep?"

"No, and it's terribly exasperating. He just grins."

California Plum Tree Bears 1200-Pound Crop

RIVERSIDE, Calif.—H. M. King claims to be owner of the largest plum tree in the world.

The seedling tree, about 45 years of age, bears small greenish colored fruit, some of the clusters containing as many as 50 plums, and the total crop weighs close to 1200 pounds, Mr. King estimates.

For every thousand feet of height from the ground, the temperature drops 3 degrees.

MORE WHEAT YIELDS

CALEDONIA — First threshing results on the farm of Gordon Moore, along the Caledonia highway, one mile north of here, yielded 330 bushels of wheat from an eleven-acre field or 33 bushels to the acre. The weight test was 61 pounds per bushel. In Oneida township, Wesley Peart, 4th line, threshed 280 bushels from nine acres, which is several bushels above the average for the district.

BACON EXPORT SOARING

The total export of bacon to the United Kingdom up to the end of April, 1937, was 66,602,600 pounds, or 21,000,000 pounds more than for the same period in 1936. In addition to exports to the United Kingdom, the United States took double the quantity of bacon in 1937, as compared with 1936, to the end of April. Six million pounds of pork have been taken by the U.S. so far this year against 3,000,000 pounds for the corresponding period in 1936.

UNDER STATE CONTROL

BERLIN — Wheat and rye crops have been brought under government control to safeguard Germany's bread supply. Under a decree of Richard-Walther Darre, the minister of agriculture, in co-operation with Economic Dictator Col. Gen. Herman Goering, all wheat and rye farmers must turn their harvest over to a government grain controller.

HARD-LUCK FARMER

TNFFMAN, SASK., — After several years of crop failure, Sam McKie bought a team of horses this spring to replace animals that died during the winter. Lightning struck and killed the new team as they were grazing in pasture.

FIND PIGS CLEANER THAN COWS

AMHERST, MASS., — Pigs are among the cleanest of all animals, according to Victor A. Rice, professor of animal husbandry at Massachusetts State College. "Pigs like to roll in mud to keep themselves warm," he explains. "Pigs have no sweat glands, and this is a process of 'heat radiation' whereby the body temperature of the animal is regulated. They are far cleaner than either horses or cows."

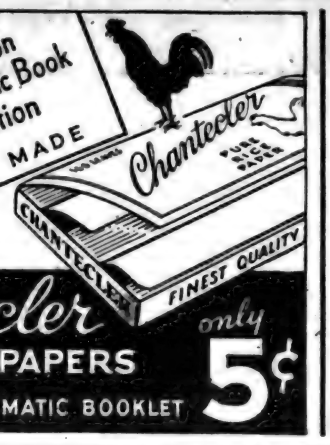
New Brunswick's hay crop is expected to be 20 per cent less than that of last year. Offsetting this is an anticipated bumper grain crop.

THE TURNIP APHID

In connection with the control of the turnip aphid, entomologists advise the planting of two rows of the white turnips in a field of swedes as a "trap" crop for this insect. These aphids, which cause serious injury to young turnip plants through the feeding on the leaves, commonly reach Canadian points in the late summer, but they may be expected earlier this year and probably to cause greater injury. Past experience has shown that this insect prefers white to turnips, and may gather in huge numbers on a small number of white turnip plants, and leaving the planting of a row or two of white turnips in with the main crops attacks the aphids to the "trap" plants so that they can be destroyed easily with srap or dust or by being ploughed under. The turnip aphid or plant lice make themselves apparent in a field through individual plants becoming stunted in growth and sickly in appearance. Purple blotches may appear on the surface of the leaf and these indicate large colonies on the under surface. These infested plants should be ppiled and removed at once.

AUSTRALIAN WOOL CROP

SYDNEY, N.S.W., — The National Association of Wool-selling Brokers forecast the 1937-38 wool clip at 3,146,000 bales, of which 82 per cent should be merino and 18 per cent crossbred. Of this total clip, it is estimated that about 2,860,000 bales will be offered for sale through brokers' stores; the amount offered before Christmas, it is predicted, will not exceed 1,500,000 bales. On an estimated average weight of 300 pounds avoirdupois, the new clip will run to 943,800,000 pounds.



October 11 Is Set As Thanksgiving Day

OTTAWA—A proclamation was published recently in the Canada Gazette setting Monday, October 11, "as a day of general thanksgiving to Almighty God for the bountiful crop and other blessings with which Canada has been favored this year."

"We're No Weaker Sex," Says Woman North Woods Guide

Indian Squaws Did Most of the Paddling in the Old Days While Warriors Watched

ELY, Minn.—Milady may have the services of doctors and lawyers of her own sex and now, should she like to rough it a bit, she may utilize a woman woods guide.

But she must make her appointment far in advance for Marie Sarkipato says business is so good that bookings run into September.

The comely young woman, who is blond and 19, obtained her training [illegible]. Her father, Otto Sarkipato, op[illegible]d a boat livery on Shagawa [illegible] where Marie was born, for more than 20 years.

That is responsible for the young lady's training. While attending high school, Miss Sarkipato won the state breast stroke swimming championship for women. She is also a registered Red Cross life saver.

Miss Sarkipato (she pronounced it Sar-kee-pato) caters exclusively to women, although she has guided couples through the border lakes canoe routes. These trips often keep her in the wilds two weeks at a time.

Strange, this woman guide business?

"Certainly not," snapped Miss Sarkipato. "We're no weaker sex. Indian squaws did most of the paddling and packing in the old days while the warriors fondled their shooting irons and watched for wild animals and the enemy."

Norfolk Apple Crop Increases

Expect Production to Rise 15 Per Cent Over Last Year

SIMCOE, — Norfolk's apple crop this year is expected to exceed the 1936 production by at the least 15 per cent, according to Geo. Wilson, manager of the local cold storage plant. Better quality is also looked for, due chiefly to the abundant moisture and the absence of a drouth such as affected the crop last season.

Early apples will be quite a heavy crop and Spys will be lighter than last year, Mr. Wilson said.

The cold storage is running on Transparents at present, which began coming in on the 20th of July. Last year the apples began coming in on the 16th. To date the deliveries are up 50 per cent over last year.

In the great majority of the commercial orchards, control of apple scab is maintained and side-worm is only prevalent on a few farms. Damage from hail has been very local.

Publicly Whipped

Marshal Edward Carpenter, of Powhatan, Ohio, has an idea as to how to keep down the amount of juvenile delinquency in his village. It has proven successful, and has secured the approval of a pastor, a probate judge and the mayor.

Briefly, the Marshal's plan is to publicly whip young offenders in the public square, so that any, or all, of the 2,500 inhabitants can attend and see the punishment administered. It has been given to 21 youngsters who were caught playing hookey from the school, and they have been taught their lesson. Marshal Carpenter declares that he is going to follow the practice as long as he is in office.

While public whippings may become something of exhibitions, there is little doubt but that the idea will have a good effect on the victims. Not only does a whipping of such nature hurt a boy physically, but it hurts his ego. No boy likes to be the laughing stock of other boys, or to have to cry out in their presence. So the youth of the town of Powhatan are cutting out the illegal capers — Windsor Star.

Our National Anthem

A new stanza for either "God Save the King," or "My Country 'Tis of Thee" was sung on the Canada-U.S. international boundary line the other day by delegates attending the Pan-Pacific Women's Conference in Vancouver. It went like this:

"Two Empires by the sea,
Two nations great and free,
One anthem raise.
One race of ancient fame,
One tongue, one faith we claim,
One God, one glorious name
We love and praise."

The addition admirably expresses the closely allied ideals and aspirations of Canada and the United States and embodies a worthy and, indeed, a noble sentiment. — Brantford Expositor.

Child Brides in Ontario

We are accustomed to raise our hands in something approaching holy horror when we read of child brides in different parts of the United States. But the annual report of the Registrar General for Ontario just to hand also shows that the exceptionally youthful wife is by no means a rarity in this part of the world.

This report shows that in the year 1935 there were no fewer than 111 girls under the age of 16 who contracted matrimony in Ontario. Four of these were married to boys under 18 years of age and two of them were united with men of 38 years of age.

There were 352 brides of the age of 16, 775 of the age of 17, and 2,175 of the age of 18 — Brockville Recorder and Times

"Not-Over-50"

"Join the Not-Over-50 Club" is the appeal featured in a series of small advertisements appearing in the Beacon-Herald. Members receive an emblem to paste on a rear window of the car, and a little red arrow, bearing the warning "Not-Over-50," to be placed opposite the 50 mark on the automobile speedometer. It is a good idea If every motorist pledged himself not to exceed a speed of 50 miles per hour on the highway, our accident score certainly wou'd [illegible] — Stratford Beacon Herald

The Value of Trees

The most important factor in improving forest conditions in any community is the private individual. He must have a realization that the presence of trees in any form is beneficial to his property. This can be demonstrated in town and country alike by the planting of individual trees all around buildings, on the lawn, a country lane and on th roadside. For the protection of farm property windbreaks of evergreen species such as spruce, pine or cedar, may be planted. Such windbreaks will have a beneficial effect on crops, particularly fall wheat, and will give a splendid protection in the winter to farm buildings and in this way lessen the amount of fuel used. If the farm property has no woodlot, in addition to planting windbreaks, to set out a few acres of trees particularly on areas of the farm that are not well suited to agriculture such as steep hillsides, rocky areas or sections of the property cut off by the streams, railroads or highways. — Belleville Intelligencer.

Good in Science

The second flight of the Russian air men from Moscow to the United States within the space of a few weeks has brought about some conjectures as to just what it proves.

There are those who see proof that Russia is merely perfecting another war weapon against anyone within a 6,000-mile radius of Moscow. Others see the aviation horizon vastly widened, with scientific benefits to all who are interested in flying, as well as a better understanding between nations.

Brazil demonstrated the first attitude two years ago when it refused the Russians the privilege of terminating a long distance flight in Pernambuco. But it seems that the United States and Canada, in lending whatever aid was deemed necessary to make the flights a success, have set a better example. — Kitchener Record.

Said It First

It was J. T. Clark who wrote in the late nineties that the twentieth century was to be Canada's century. The saying has frequently been credited to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and no doubt he, too, used it; but the original prophecy was Clark's. — Toronto Star.

Forest Conservation

A most valuable asset is being rapidly used up, and its one that cannot be replaced except over a long period of time. Succeeding generations may have cause to lament the prodigality of preceding ones unless a plan of progressive reforestation is adopted. Our spruce and fir grows as rapidly as in any other country, but it takes a long time for nature to make a saw-log. The time for a vigorous conservation policy is now. — St. John Times-Globe.

Life and Income

The average doctor has a working life of 42 years and the present value of his earnings is $108,000. Next is the lawyer with $105,000 in 43 years. The engineer earns $93,000 and the architect $62,500. The college teacher and the clergyman, both of whom average 44 years, obtain $69,000 and $41,000 respectively; while the worker in the skilled trades with the same working life span only makes $28,600. Averaging 40 years, the lowest of all the groups, the nurse earns $23,300. In 46 years the journalist with $41,500 does a little better than the clergyman. The unskilled laborer averages 44 years of work to make $15,200. The highest in average working years, each at 51, the farmer earns $12,500 and the farm worker $10,400, the two lowest amounts of the sixteen groups. —The Kingston Whig Standard.

Community Singing

Over 50,000 people in Winnipeg joined in community singing under the leadership of 1,200 trained singers a few years ago. Those who had heard this great audience singing the old songs and some of the old hymns, received an impression which they say will glow brilliantly as long as memory lasts. — Kingston Whig-Standard

No Danger Present

A new comet is rushing towards the earth, but as it is computed that it will not come nearer than fifty million miles there is no need for this globe to become even more jittery than at present.—Brantford Expositor.

THE EMPIRE

Empire Trade

Nowadays, while an insane "race of armaments" is proceeding in many of our lands, it is comforting to reflect that no part of the British territories today is arming against its neighbour. Moreover, there has been a definite effort made, following the Ottawa Conference, to place trade within the Empire on a co-ordinated footing. Exaggerated views are held in some of the quarters as to what was done at Ottawa. Britain and her Dominions continue to make purchases of the products of foreign countires worth many millions each year. In fact, we are the best customers of many such nations, who would otherwise suffer much more severely than they do from the lofty walls of trade restrictions built up by their neighbours. There is, indeed, still room for an extension of the principle of Imperial Preference to a very considerable extent, without adopting an exclusive attitude towards imports from lands outside the Empire. A policy of the latter kind would be suicidal for a country like Britain, but there are other ways of dealing with the needs of the economic situation. — Belfast Telegraph.

Britain's Limits

It is possibly true that Britain will find that in practice she cannot keep out of Europe. But she can, and she should, avoid too definitely taking of sides. If the present commitment to France, which at least has the merit of being reciprocal, is to be made permanent, it must be framed with care. It may be worth Britain's while to guarantee France against unprovoked aggression. But that ought to be the limit of British commitments on the continent. It can never profit this country (or advance peace in Europe) to underwrite the security of France against all eventualities. For France can all too easily become involved in a European war as a result of her own commitments in Eastern Europe. Reconciliation between France and Germany is the key to a solution of at least half of Europe's present trouble. And in her satisfaction at an alliance with this country France would be only too likely to throw away the key, or at least mislay it while it was still useful. — Glasgow Herald.

Canadian Horses In Demand

Canadian horses are in demand in various countries. Of recent shipments to the British Isles, the largest consisted of 70 fine horses for the London market where prices, varying from $200 to slightly over $500 were obtained. Twenty-one of the horses, which were big, clean-legged animals, each averaging over a ton in weight, met with a keen demand. Five Canadian horses were recently shipped to Barbados, British West Indies, for police duty.

Teacher Wins Novel Prize

With Story She Had Thrown Into Her Fireplace

LONDON, Eng. — Miss Nora K. Smith, headmistress of Lewis street Council School, Patricroft, Manchester, learned that a novel she wrote and threw into the fireplace as litter has won the £1,000 prize in the competition organized by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, the publishers.

A teacher friend, Miss K. Healey, at whose home in Derbyshire Miss Smith wrote her novel during weekends, rescued the manuscript, and later another friend persuaded the headmistress to enter the competition.

"A Stranger and Sojourner," is the title of the novel. It tells of farm life in Derbyshire.

Miss Smith said: "I have written several stories, but they have all found the same resting place—the fire."

"When I have written a book I am finished with it. I find it boring to go through it afterwards, and it was only through a friend sending me a cutting of the details of Hodder and Stoughton's competition that I had it typed."

"I was staggered when I was told that I had won the prize.

"The Derbyshire hills help me to write. There is complete loneliness there."

Prizewinner No. 2 is 40-year-old Miss Ruth Pitter, of Church street, Chelsea. She carries off the 1937 Hawthornden Prize for Literature.

Miss Pitter would have been ineligible for the prize next year. The age limit is 41.

She received the prize and a cheque for £100 at the Aeolian Hall, London.

Miss Pitter has been writing poetry since she was five. She writes nowadays in between painting wood and pottery at her studio in Chelsea.

Her latest volume, "A Trophy of Arms," secured her the prize. She said:

"When I heard that I had won the prize I could not bring myself to believe it.

"I have been writing poetry for so many years, but I think the net average for this work has been about £100 a year.

"Now I can count myself as no longer among the unfortunates.

"The first of my five published volumes came out in 1920 and three of the five are now out of print.

"Writing poetry is what might be called a side line with me, although that is hardly the right phrase.

"I work all day in the studio painting. Sometimes ideas come to me, and I put the lines down on scraps of paper."

Newfoundland Is In Hopeful Mood

Optimistic Financial Report Under Commission Government

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. — A feeling of confidence in the future is sweeping Newfoundland, as the long-term reconstruction program of the commission of government becomes known in greater detail. General opinion from city and outport is that a new era of prosperity is in sight for Britain's oldest colony.

Coming on the heels of a budget report showing revenue almost $2,000,000 higher than had been forecast, with the consequent ability to accept a smaller grant-in-aid for the year from the Government of Great Britain, announcement of a program under which approximately $8,000,000 will be spent throughout the colony in the next eight or ten years was hailed in practically every quarter.

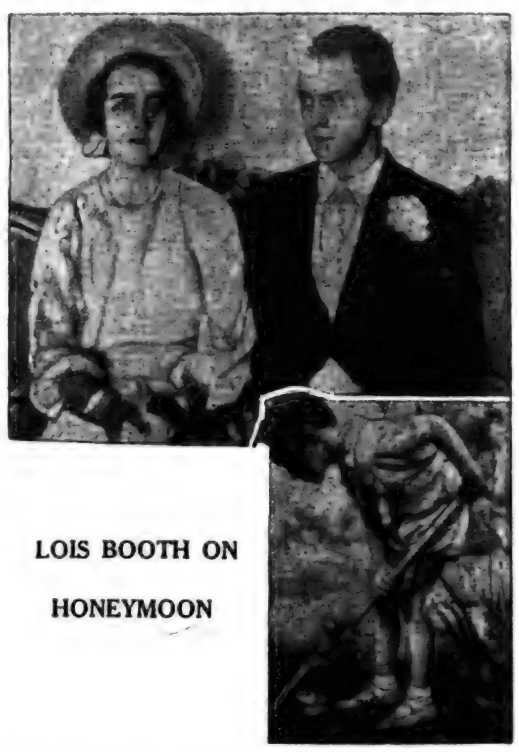
"We have waited three years for such a statement as the Commissioner for Finance gave us in the budget speech," commented the News. "It was for many reasons a message of hope and an inspiration to greater confidence."

Germany Expels Woman Sociologist

Secret Police Objected to Her Frequent Trips Abroad

BERLIN.—Dr. Alice Salomon, noted sociologist, who was expelled a month ago, received a summons early last month to call at the headquarters of the secret state police to give an explanation of her frequent trips abroad.

She informed the police that her numerous friendships and acquaintances abroad resulting from her international activities in the women's movement made these trips desirable. The police, it was learned, thereupon "suggested" that under these circumstances it might "be desirable" if Dr. Salomon left Germany permanently.



Dr. Salomon closed a six-month lecture tour in the United States in November. She also is well known in England, where she has many influential friends. She is now in London. According to private information Dr. Salomon adopted the Protestant faith long before the present regime came into power.

Will Use Blocks In Planning Home

Architect Says Houses Will Be Cheaper, More Beautiful

NEW YORK. — Instead of poring over blueprints honeymooners of the future will play with a set of blocks before ordering their homes built. This is the prediction of Harvey Wiley Corbett, New York architect, who says that within 30 years houses will be manufactured on mass-production scales, cheaper, more beautiful and more comfortable than present-day homes.

He predicts the manufacturers will send blocks which are tiny replicas of the various sections of a house and "on your dining room table you will erect your own model by fitting together the blocks. Thus you will know exactly how the houses will look."

LOIS BOOTH ON HONEYMOON

The former Ottawa girl, Lois Booth, is here seen above, with her new husband, Thorkild Juelsberg, her secretary, when she was Princess Erik, wife of Prince Erik of Denmark. Her first marriage was dissolved by Danish Royal decree. A daughter by the first marriage is with her father. The four-year-old son of Prince and Princess Erik, who lives with his mother, is seen in the lower picture playing in his mother's garden.

How Indians Should Be Treated

WINNIPEG, — Grey Owl, well-known Prince Albert naturalist, is advocating a new attitude towards Indians. He said "Treat the Indian as an Indian and don't try to change him. My suggestion would be that the Indians be put to work conserving wild life. There's nothing left to hunt, so they can't live hunting and trapping as they used to do, but they could conserve what animal life there is left," he said.

Eden Nominated for Nobel Prize

LONDON, — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's efforts to keep Great Britain at peace at almost any price are about to receive the highest recognition available such diplomacy — nomination for the Nobel peace prize. Capt Eden's sponsor is not Benito Mussolini, Adolf Hitler, or the Spanish combatants, to whom he has so often turned a charitably blind eye and, when necesary, the other cheek, but the Norwegians.

U. S. Corn Crop Best Since 1929

CHICAGO—A corn crop valued at $1,750,000,000, the biggest money crop United States farmers have had since 1929, was ripening in the corn belt, the August estimates of six Chicago grain experts indicated this week.

Basing their estimates on reports from farmers throughout the producing area and on the latest official acreage figures, the private crop authorities here, most of whom have just returned from personal field inspection trips, forecast 1937 domestic corn production would total 2,771,000,000 bushels.

This would be the biggest United States crop since the record-breaking harvest in 1932 of 2,926,000,000 bushels. It would be more than a billion bushels larger than the crop of 1,524,317,000 harvested in 1936.

The estimates of the private authorities ranged from 2,715,000,000 bushels to 2,834,000,000 but the average was 2,771,000,000. This represents an increase of 200,000,000 bushels compared with the latest Government figures based on conditions as of July 1.

C. N. Revenue Up 10 Millions

VANCOUVER.—President S. J. Hungerford of Canadian National Railways estimated in an address to Vancouver Board of Trade this week that operating revenues of the C.N.R. system during the seven months of 1937 have been $10,000,000 more than in the same period last year.

Mr. Hungerford said he was "unticipating the actual figures a little," but he also estimated net operating revenue had been about $4,500,00 above the corresponding period of 1936.

The C.N.R. President on a tour of inspection of the railway system, said the railway directors had looked forward to a continuation of these revenue increases, but now "it seems certain that on our Western lines which have been built and equipped to handle a very large volume of wheat tonnage, the amount of wheat which we will have to move in this year's crop season will be far less than could have been anticipated."

Dies After Claiming Huge Fortune

MELBOURNE, Australia. — Mrs. A Houston a claimant to the estimated $24,893,750 estate left by the late Lady Houston in England, died this week. Mrs. Houston was an elderly woman in poor circumstances. She advanced her claim only three days previously on the grounds that her husband, George Muir Houston, was a nephew of Sir Robert Houston, who amassed the huge fortune in shipping.

Bathe Together at Lido

VENICE, Italy.—The former Wallis Simpson and the former Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, bathed together at Lido Beach. Their husbands, the Duke of Windsor and Count Haugwitz von Reventlow, were also in the party.

Health Record

Toronto in 1936 had only one resident die of typhoid fever; one of measles; one of infantile paralysis; two of diphtheria; none of smallpox. Diphtheria, smallpox, typhoid, those once-great scourges, are yielding to toxoid, vaccination and the purification of water and milk supplies. Tuberculosis is also coming under control. Including the deaths of Toronto people in sanatoria, the tuberculosis victims in 1936 numbered 275. If the pre-war rate had been in effect, they would have numbered 742.

Record Number of Farm Jobs

OTTAWA—Reporting the best farm placement record ever experienced at the Government employment office, George Hamilton, superintendent has told The Journal that 275 men had been sent to good farm jobs during the month of July.

"It was an exceptionally good month and I am very pleased," Mr. Hamilton said. He estimated the men placed would have work of varying periods, probably until the end of August.

The wages being paid to the men range from $25 to $30 and keep, with many farmers offering the straight one dollar a day.

Bride First Time at 78

LOS ANGELES,—Annie M. Cotton, 78, "can hardly wait" until Friday to marry John E. Scott, 79. That's what she said when they drove up to the marriage license bureau and wrote out an application at the curb because of their infirmity. It will be Miss Cotton's first wedding, the fourth for Scott.

Rattlesnake Killed at Niagara

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont.—Four men walking in the Niagara Glen came across a four-foot rattlesnake with three rattles and killed it after a short skirmish. Roger Hunt, John Disher and his son Engin and Norman Irvine, all of Niagara Falls were walking in the Glen when Hunt, at the rear of the party, heard a noise about his head. Hunt turned his flashlight up and saw the snake coiled on a ledge above his head. He shouted to his companions, who aided him in killing it.

Lindbergh Passes Unnoticed

PARIS.—Interrupting a flight to England, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh landed at Le Bourget Airfield to thank the commander for radio advice given him on recent flights around Europe. His visit to the field, where he completed his trail-blazing trans-Atlantic flight 10 years ago, went unnoticed for half an hour. He was on his way home after a week-end with Dr. Alexis Carrel, with whom he invented the "artificial heart," at Dr. Carrel's home on St. Gildas Island off the coast of Brittany.

Queen Mary's Brother Visits Duke

Ignorance As Well As Poverty to Blame For Malnutrition

British Speaker Believes Schools Impart Elementary Knowledge of Effect of Food Upon Health

LONDON.—No child should be allowed to leave school without an elementary knowledge of the effect of food upon health, in the opinion of Sir John Orr, director of the Rowett Research Institute, Aberdeen.

Speaking at the Imperial Social Hygiene Congress in London, he declared: "It has been said that malnutrition is as much due to ignorance as to poverty. If that is so, it is a very sad reflection upon our educational system.

"Surely knowledge of how to feed a family to keep them healthy is as important for the future mothers of our race as the knowledge of French, irregular verbs, or the tributaries of the Ganges. In the higher education of girls, some book like the report of the International Committee of the League of Nations on what constitutes an adequate diet should rank as high as a book on grammar or a Latin or French text.

"It is almost certain that in the immediate future, nutrition will be regarded as an important subject in education."

Urges Music To Aid Peace

Woman Suggests Whole World Getting Together to Sing "Halleluja"

NEW YORK.—Miss Kitty Cheatham known for her folksong recitals, will make a plea for peace music to the women of the world as a speaker at International Women's Week at Budapest next month, she said as she prepared to leave the United States for the European meeting. The aim of the conference is the promotion of international understanding and friendship, and women of 16 nations will converge on the Hungarian capital to this end.

"Can you imagine the effect if all the nations of the world would join together and sing 'Halleluja'?" she asked. "I think it is about time we had a purification of all the national anthems in the world. Most of them are obsolete and instill hatred, especially in the minds of children. They are largely hymns of unintelligible patriotism, and not understood by children.

"Why should we teach our children to sing songs of hatred on one hand, while on the other we send peace delegations abroad? In the parks I see so many children playing with toy pistols. At their play it is a constant 'bang! bang! bang!' What else can you expect when they are nurtured on songs of hate?

"I am not criticizing Francis Scott Key, but we are not fighting Great Britain today and the 'Star Spangled Banner' does not suit this era.

"So does a national anthem like the 'Marseillaise.'

"Ultimately, I believe that when nations and individuals come together in co-operation, we will have new national anthems."

Before rising from Botwood on the last leg of his journey, and all the way up the St. Lawrence to Montreal, Captain Wilcockson was in touch with St. Hubert Airport, where the very latest type Northern Electric radio transmitter is in use.

Manitoba Letter

Clanwilliam, Man.,
July 30, 1937.

Dear Editor:—

Nearly the end of July. A number of farmers here started barley harvest to-day. Last week we had two very bad hail storms; some farmers hailed 100 p.c., others 50. It started a few miles south of here; we had a little, nothing to hurt, for which the farmers must be truly thankful. One farmer was hailed so badly, it is said, the ground looks as if it were ploughed. His wife is in Brandon hospital; went under an operation for tumor, and is very low. Her husband was over since the hail. He did not intend to tell her, but her first question was, Are we hailed? He did not let on how bad it was; he wanted to know how she had heard, over the radio, in the hospital. So her husband, Mr. Wilson, did not have to break the bad news to her.

This month has been a very unlucky one for a number of people. Mrs. Alex Madill fell down the back steps of her kitchen and broke three ribs on both sides of her body. She is able to get about once more, but it will be quite a time before she will be herself again. The sixth of this month Ancil McKinney was found dead in his cellar. He was as well as usual on Saturday. He lived alone, but ate one meal a day with one of his neighbors. Sunday he went over as usual for his dinner; the family were getting ready to go to Clear Lake. Winnipeg Rowing Club were putting on a regatta that day, and everybody that could go did go. 15,000 people were in the park that day. Mr. McKinney said, What about my dinner? Mrs. Myers said I will give it to you, and you can cook it at home. He said, that's fine, will be quite alright, and those are the last words he ever spoke. Monday and Tuesday, Mr. Hutton, a near neighbor, did not see him around, so thought he would go and see him; thought he might be sick. He went in and found him dead in his cellar. He took fainting spells sometimes, and it is thought he took one in the cellar and died. Mr. Hutton phoned for police and coroner. Doctor said he had been dead 48 hours. Mr. McKinney was an old-timer; he was 63 years of age. His father, John McKinney, lived at one time near Streetsville. His was a large funeral. Mr. McKinney left one sister, Mrs. Munro, five nephews, three nieces. Mr. F. W. Shaver of Clanwilliam is a first cousin.

A couple of weeks ago, three men entered the home of two old-age pensioners, Mr. Rook and Mrs. Rook. They beat him unconscious and Mrs. Rook was abused also. They searched the house for money and found $7.50. They wore masks. A woman had come in to visit the old people. When she saw them, she slipped past them and ran two miles, to their nearest neighbor, carrying a little baby. The man got on his bicycle and went to the nearest phone and phoned the police at Minnedosa. They were caught and convicted last week; given penitentiary terms, and one of them ten lashes extra. One was a middle-aged man, the other two were young men, two brothers, one 20, the other 22. The elder man has had several jail terms; no sooner gets out and does something to get back again. He must enjoy jail life.

Last week, George Bailey was moving from the drouthed out part of Saskatchewan and going to northern Saskatchewan. He had his truck loaded—wife and children with him, coming down a hill near Regina. He was near the bottom when the brakes did not work properly. He went over, turning over several times. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey were unconscious and taken to Regina hospital. His brother-in-law was coming behind him, so was able to take charge. George has a brother, Clifford, living in Regina. He is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Shaver. Such a terrible accident—we never know what will happen next.

Yesterday, Sunday, Aug. 1st, was decoration day in Minnedosa. It looked so like rain we did not go. Today the rough riders from Winnipeg were coming to Minnedosa to climb Minnedosa's highest hill. It rained heavily last night, so we did not go to that, either.

Mr. Mark Madill called today. He is an old neighbor and a great Orangeman. His lodge at Bethany went to Rossburn for the 12th July and had a fine time, but no crops there—drouthed.

This is surely a letter of tragedies. I never remember of having so many at one time.

Prairie Rose.

CHEERFULNESS

"There is no greater every-day virtue than cheerfulness."—Anon.

"If we look to the body for pleasure, we find pain; for Life, we find death; for Truth, we find error; for Spirit, we find its opposite, matter. Now reverse this action. Look away from the body into Truth and Love, the Principle of all happiness, harmony, and immortality. Hold thought steadfastly to the enduring, the good, and the true, and you will bring these into your experience proportionately to their occupancy of your thoughts."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"Cheerfulness keeps u. a kind of daylight in the mind, filling it with a steady and perpetual serenity."—Addison.

"If I can put one touch of a rosy sunset into the life of any man or woman, I shall feel that I have worked with God."—G. Macdonald.

"To make knowledge valuable, you must have the cheerfulness of wisdom. Goodness smiles to the last."—Emerson.

"Oh, give us the man who sings at his work."—Carlyle.

Turner Societies Have Long Been in Existence

The first Turner hall in the United States was opened in Cincinnati on New Year's day, 1850. Within a few months Turner societies were begun in a half dozen other cities, and before the year had come to a close a convention had been called in Philadelphia at which the Union of Turner Societies of North America was founded, the parent of the American Turnerbund, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press.

By the time of the Civil war Turner societies were strongly intrenched in every community in the United States which could boast a German population, and there were few of any size that couldn't.

Despite the fact that their ideals were wholly social and athletic and had no contact with political activities, the Turners nevertheless found themselves involved in the "Know Nothing" agitation of the 1850's. The "Know Nothing" movement, which began as a political opposition maneuver, was captured by a lawless gang element which used it as a weapon for the persecution of the foreignborn element, especially the Germans and the Irish.

In self-defense the Turners banded into militia companies to protect their lives and property. Many lurid street battles took place in Philadelphia and other Pennsylvania centers of German population. But when the agitation at last died down, the Turners returned to their games and singing contests.

Stradivari First Maker of the Perfect Violin

There were violins before Stradivari, but it was he who brought violin making to its perfection. How many instruments he actually made is unknown, but more than 500 violins and 50 violoncellos have survived.

Although his violins have been studied, piece by piece, no one has been able to say definitely what gives them their superior tone, states a writer in the Washington Post.

One expert claims that it is due to a uniform thickness and weight in the wood in all parts. Another says it is due to good construction, and a few even think that the very air of Cremona, Italy, his birthplace, had something to do with it.

His greatest advantage, however, is generally regarded to have been the varnish, the secret formula of which died with him and is unrecoverable. The varnish was soft in texture, shading from orange to red.

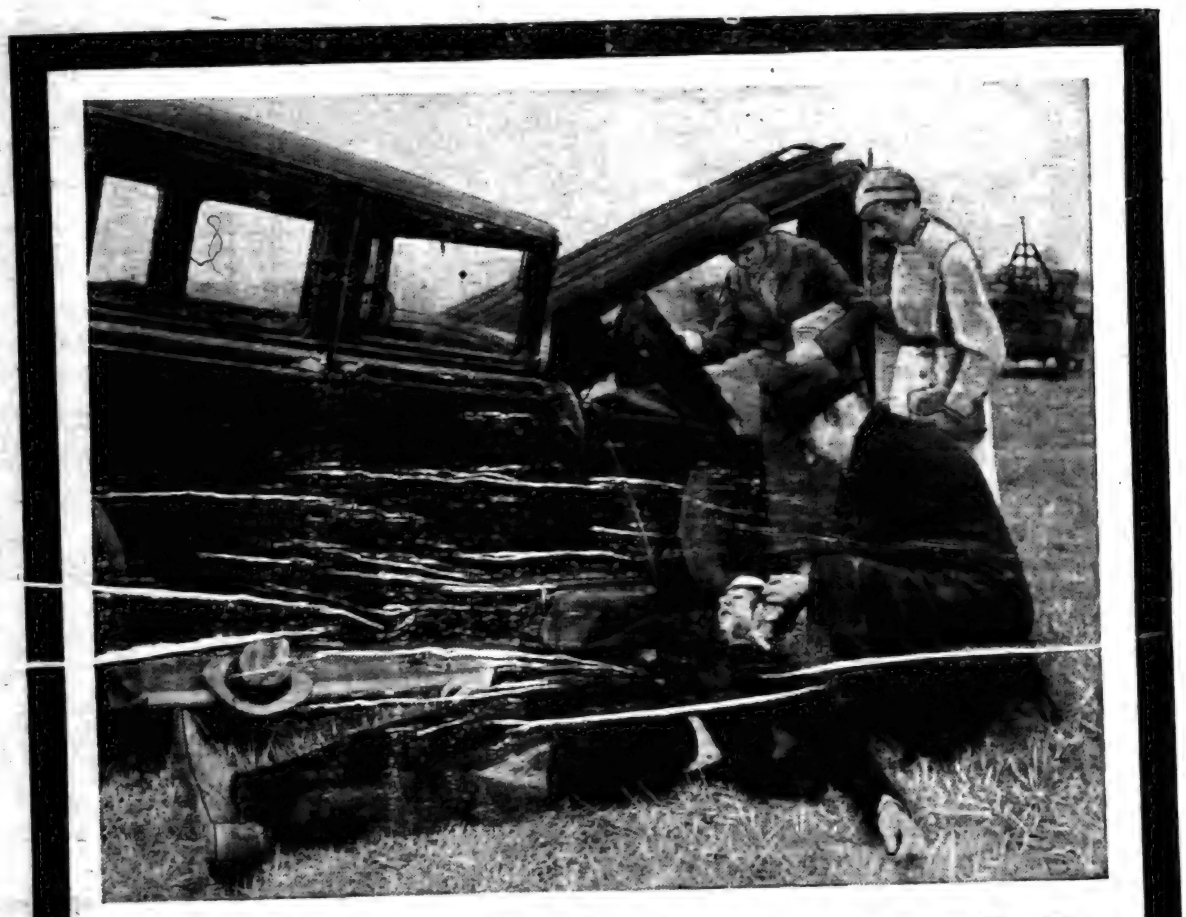
Bones as Weather Guides

Weather and climate, affecting every human being directly and unremittingly, naturally has been the source of many supersitions. Almost any community has its individual with rheumatism, or who has suffered injuries to the joints, who claims to predict weather changes by sensations in bones. Strangely enough, this ability, long laughed at by skeptics, appears to have a basis of scientific fact, asserts a writer in Literary Digest. Careful investigations indicate that weather conditions have a definite influence on such rule-of-thumb prophets, a shift in barometric pressure bringing definite changes in the blood and tissues of the joints.

Arizona's Petrified Forest

America's most famous petrified forest is in Arizona. The fossil trees there are species of pine, now extinct, which grew in the Age of Reptiles, or about 200,000,000 years ago. After falling, they were washed down a watercourse and lodged on a sand bank, where they eventually became buried under sand and clay. Later the sand and clay was washed away, leaving the bare trunks exposed. At one place a stone log 110 feet long forms a natural bridge across a deep gulley which has been washed out under it.

Tomb of St. Francis



Sancien island, scene of the establishment of the first Christian mission in the Orient, is the land in which St. Francis Xavier established a mission in spite of efforts to keep him and his devoted band out of the Orient. And on this island he lies buried. In late August, 1552, he landed on the island, called Chang-shuen-shan, off the coast of Kwang-tung which served as a rendezvous for Europeans. Soon after his arrival Xavier was seized with a fever, and died there.

The Cloak Was Titian

That dress maketh the man was noted long ago. Titian, the famed Italian painter of the sixteenth century walked home in his working clothes unnoted, but returning immediately to the street again, in his court costume of purple velvet, every person he met bowed and did him homage. Disgusted, Titian, back in his studio, threw the cloak on the floor, exclaiming, "Thou, then, art Titian; so much for drapery!"

Paint Prescriptions

"Industrial paints" are those coatings designed for use in the multifarious products of industry. The range is very wide—from automobile to agricultural machinery and implements—and in each case the paint is designed for its specific purpose, usually under specifications of test requirements.

THIS MUST STOP!

The appalling loss of life and frightful injuries caused by reckless driving in Ontario must stop! Motorists have been requested to be courteous on the road, but the death toll still mounts at an alarming rate. Reckless drivers must be dealt with according to their deserts, and to the laws of this Province.

A reckless driver who causes death or injury is a criminal—just as much of a criminal as a thief; for reckless driving is illegal. Cutting in, passing on hills, excessive speed, driving slowly in the centre of the road, and all the other breaches of safe driving are to cease.

RECKLESS DRIVERS BEWARE!

Ontario has an internationally famous highway police force but they cannot be everywhere. Most accidents occur out of sight of the police. We therefore ask with all sincerity for the co-operation of public-spirited motorists to report to this Department instances of reckless driving. It is your duty to help check this wicked slaughter —deaths that could be avoided, and the maiming and crippling of healthy men, women and children.

Here is what to do!

When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders.

Ontario Election Wednesday, Oct. 6

Three Parties are In the Field

Premier Hepburn has announced that the Ontario Elections will take place on Wednesday, Oct. 6th.

The candidates in Peel County will be:

Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture in Hepburn cabinet—Reformer

Hon. Tom Kennedy, who was the Minister of Agriculture in the Henry cabinet, Conservative.

Russell Pawley, Brampton, who will run under the C.C.F. banner.

The time is short—only about five weeks, so you can look for a real hot campaign, and plenty of smiles and handshaking. The Grits are betting heavily on Marshall, and the Tories say Marshall can't beat Kennedy a second time. We don't know where to place the C.C.F'rs, but we do wish their treasurer would call and settle a debt contracted at The Review Office at the time of the last Provincial Election

The Open Column

A few random notes on the forthcoming provincial election: October the 6th is the favored date, we are told, and a very nice date, too, for it will give us an opportunity to have our holidays unmolested by the threat of having to exercise our sacred civil right of voting for somebody or other.

Indications, as at the moment of writing, are that the campaign in Peel will be one of the hottest, bitterest, etc., etc., in the last three hundred years or something. The best joke of the affair, to date, is the situation that developed in Brampton recently. The Conservator had just installed new presses. The press broke down. The Gazette, containing a "scoop", was printed and ready to go on the street early in the evening, but, lest the Conservator snatch their thunder, the Gazette publishers courteously, albeit impatiently, waited for the Charters journal to come out first, and finally, when the Conservator was not on the street until nine o'clock, gave it up as a bad job, and did not issue the Brampton circulation of the Gazette until Friday morning.

The "scoop", incidentally, was the "news" that W. J. Lowe and Hon. Duncan Marshall, by untiring efforts, had obtained the expenditure of $4,500 on the improvement of Port Credit harbor. Strangely enough, we cannot recall that Mr. Lowe had anything to say about the Port Credit harbor in his last campaign for the Dominion House. The impression seems to have been left with us that Gordon Graydon was the gentleman who insisted that Port Credit should have an improved anchorage.

But then, the rumor has been current in the county for some months that Mr. Lowe would like to be a senator, and, of course, Mr. Marshall would appreciate another term at Queen's Park.

And concerning Mr. Marshall: The Toronto Star will not print his name, but, in instances where some reference must be made to him, simply says 'the minister of agriculture'. It seems that Mr. Marshall told one of the larger and puffier gentlemen of the Star to go jump in a lake, or words to that effect, only nastier. Neither of the other Toronto papers pays a great deal of attention to Mr. Marshall, and the Gazette is the only organ that really stands at attention and emits loud noises when his name is mentioned. In this case, virtue is its own reward, for the Gazette is given the first announcements of all the great benefits conferred on Peel by the Hepburn administration, and, consequently, "scoops the world". These scoops, it might be noted, have been coming with great frequency with the nearer approach of the election.

But one little matter that might bear some explanation is what the government expects to do with the Middle Road. The situation down there reminds us of the man who built a house, and put up the chimney first. The Middle Road is going to be a wonderful highway, some day. It will have the first cloverleaf crossing in the Dominion, constructed at a cost of $80,000, while up at Cooksville, at the intersection of the Dundas Highway and the Centre Road, where there is at least twice the traffic that the Middle Road carries, there are stop lights, costing, probably, less than $1,500.

The Middle Road, of course, will eventually become the main artery between Toronto and Hamilton. But what a fine, outstanding, healthy wad of money will have to be spent before that day is reached. The highway is like Mahomet's coffin, hung in the air, with a narrow pavement at the east end, through a thickly populated area, and the vanguard of pavement construction lethargically crawling westward.

Perhaps Mr. Hepburn doesn't want to be premier again, and is just playing a dirty trick on his successor, chuckling to himself that, after all, the Conservatives started the Middle Road, and they can darned well finish it.

WEDDINGS

CAMERON—MINOR—On August 19, 1937, at the Church of St. Andrew and St. Paul, Montreal, by Rev. Allan McLeod, B.D., Nancy West Minor, daughter of the late Lieutenant Lucian Minor, United States Navy, and Mrs. Minor of Galveston, Texas, to Flying Officer Robert Alexander Cameron, Royal Canadian Air Force, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander A. Cameron, of Oak Lake, Man.

LET US SMILE

Rustic—If you please, zur, Janet and I'ud like to put off our wedding for a week or two.

Vicar—Dear, dear, what has happened? Is Miss Janet ill?

Rustic—Oh, no, zur; but the weddin' presents ain't a-comin' in up to expectations.

Miss Katharine Reid and Miss Bea Jones are spending a week at Bridgeview Inn, Wasago Beach.

OBITUARY

Walker Wilkinson passed away in Brampton on Aug. 16th, where he had lived for nearly thirty years. He was a Presbyterian and a Mason. His widow and one son survive.

Owen A. Smiley, prominent elocutionist, passed away in Toronto last week. He leaves a wife and one son.

J. D. Scott, of Glen Williams, passed away in Brampton on Aug. 10th, and was buried at Milton, where he formerly lived.

Joan Miller, 4-years-old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Miller, Inglewood, Peel County, fell into the cistern and was drowned.

Charles Cox, 73, of Islington, passed away in Peel Memorial Hospital, Aug. 20, and was buried at Woodbridge. He was a native of England.

William P. Molesworth passed away at Oakville on Aug. 19th and was buried in Oakville cemetery.

Jane Addams Figurine Is Added To Gallery

A figurine representing the late Jane Addams, founder of Hull House and internationally known world peace worker, has been added to the gallery of these little figures of prominent Chicago women in the Chicago Historical Society in Lincoln Park, says the Christian Science Monitor in a story from Chicago.

The small wax figure dressed in an orchid-colored silk gown is carrying a tiny book titled "Forty Years at Hull House." It was made by Mme. Minna Schmidt, costumer and originator of several thousand figurines of women from many nations who have contributed something to the progress of humanity. Some 400 of her "women of the world" are now in Washington, D.C., and are gradually added to when diplomats of foreign countries propose women of their nation who, they think, deserve this honor, Miss Schmidt said.

Alleged WIT

It never pays to worry about what other people are thinking about you, for they are probably wondering just what you are thinking about them.

Harold — "Was Ed shocked over the death of his aunt?"

Jacob — "Shocked? He was electrocuted."

Ashes to ashes, dust to dust;
If it weren't for paint, women would rust.

Handler — "He failed on legs — not long enough."

Exhibitor — "Well, they touch the Man (to farmer) — "Why are those bees flying around so frantically?"

Farmer — "I guess they have the hives."

BILLBOARDS

I think that I shall never see
A billboard lovely as a tree
Perhaps, unless the billboards fall,
I'll never see a tree at all.

Lady — "Here you are again, and I just gave you a pair of shoes last month."

Tramp — "Yes, lady. I just came back to see if you would have them half-soled for me."

READ IT OR NOT !—Dutch clocks are made in Germany.

Exhibitor — "Why didn't my dog win a prize?"
floor, don't they?"

Operator — "Number please?"

Drunk — "Number nothing. I just put a nickel in here. Where's my chewing gum?"

Guest — "Well, goodnight, I hope I haven't kept you up too late."

Host (yawning) — "Not at all. We would have been getting up soon anyway."

Breathing through the mouth is said to be harmful, talking through the mouth also has very serious results at times.

Friend — "She'll come along soon, without a doubt."

Man — "Yeah? Shell be doubting my sobriety, my veracity and my fidelity."

Explaining gets to be a chronic habit with a lot of people.

Traveller — "This rain should do a lot of good."

Porter — "Yes, sir. An hour of it would do more good in five minutes than a month of it would do in a week any other time.

The fellow who got that job away from you yesterday is a low-down, chiseling so and so, and he cut the price to the bone to get it. When you got that job away from him last month it was superior salesmanship.

June Groom — "Who spilled that mustard on this waffle, dearest?"

June Bride — "Oh, Jack how could you? This is lemon pie!"

His employer said he was an independent salesman; he took orders from nobody.

Bountiful Crop Ruined By Rains

Serious Loss Caused in Grain Fields in Many Points in Ontario Potatoes in Danger, Too

TORONTO—Rain, tumbling down out of sodden skies during the past week and soaking farmlands over a large section of the Province, has blasted the hopes for a bountiful grain crop held by farmers earlier in the season.

Reports from numerous Ontario points indicate that an over-abundance of rainfall is liable to cause a serious loss of grain, while farmers in the Chatham district have encountered an outbreak of foot rot among their herds of cattle, result of wet ground.

Farmers in the vicinity of Woodstock report grain crop conditions in Oxford County to be the worst in many years. In the London district, several cases were reported of grain sprouting in stooked wheat on the field. The hot, damp weather, it was said, is also having a bad effect on the potatoes, and it is feared that a continuance of such weather may result in blight.

In the St. Thomas district there were also reports of grain sprouting while lying in the fields. Many sheaves have fallen over, sprouted and grown fast into the ground.

Rain fell upon Kingston in heavy sheets, coming down in such quantities that windshield wipers were of little use and street lights were turned on to enable drivers to see approaching traffic.

Some apple growers in the Ingersoll district are preparing to give their orchards an extra spraying to counteract the effect of the wet spell. An attack of apple spot is feared. Usually the orchards receive five sprayings, but owing to the almost continuous wet weather for nearly a week, it has been deemed advisable to give an extra spraying.

One grower stated that there is a plentiful yield of early apples. The later varieties, it was estimated, will not be more than 60 per cent of an average crop, with the indications that the Spys will probably not be 50 per cent of the average.

Soviet-U.S. Trade Pact Won't Affect Canada

OTTAWA. — The new commercial agreement between the United States and Soviet Russia proclaimed at Washington will have little or no effect on Canada's trade with either of the countries in the opinion of trade officials here.

Interpretation placed on the agreement here is that the principal change will be to give Russian coal and coke free entry into the United States. Canada and Russia are not competitors in this commodity and there is little competition in others

The expansion of Russia's purchasing in the United States will also make little difference to Canada. The trade between Canada and Russia, freed last September from a mutual embargo, amounts to only a few thousand dollars a month.

"The great task of this generation is to save democracy, to preserve it and to inspire it."

—Stanley Baldwin.

Size of Dairy Herd to Keep

To Prove Most Profitable on Average Farm

The question is often asked as to the size of a dairy herd likely to prove the most profitable on the average farm.

The profit in milking cows lies mainly in the selection from, and in the breeding of high-producing, pure-bred dairy stock. Good cows are seldom bought, but they can be raised. This means beginning with a pure-bred sire with either the cows one already has or with young heifers selected from practical, pure-bred herds.

The size of the herd should be determined by the amount of pasture land that is available, the possibility of growing the bulk of other feeds necessary, can be cared for without the employment of additional regular labor, or without requiring added buildings.

A group of fewer than five cows is unprofitable because it requires too long to fill the cream can, does not easily justify buying a separator and demands approximately the same amount of labor and barn room as a large number of cows. A herd of more than ten cows per family demands further employment and assistance, and more buildings on the average farm.

SCOUTING Here There Everywhere

A brother to every other Scout, without regard to race or creed

Boy Scout world census figures for 1937, just compiled by the International Bureau, reveal a new record increase of 340,000. The figures bring the world total membership to 2,812,074. The last world census, taken in 1935, gave a total of 2,472,014. Scouting is active today in 49 countries counting the British Empire as one.

The Herculean job of feeding some 25,000 Boy Scouts is reflected in some of the catering figures of the American National Scout Jamboree, recently held in Washington. For the 75,000 "boy meals" served each day, the cooks ordered 250 tons of foodstuffs. This included 900 bushels of potatoes, 13,000 pounds of bread, 25,000 quarts of milk, 4,000 pounds of butter 50,000 eggs and 1,200 gallons of canned vegetables, such as tomatoes, corn, succotash and string beans, which, after consuming, the boys went out into the arena and played Indians-and-cowboys.

The rescue after two hours' effort of a young woman clinging to the face of a cliff was an achievement this summer of the 6th Bridgewater Boy Scout Troop, Somerset, England. A young man and his fiancee had been caught by the tide in a cove, and attempted to scale the cliff. The young woman was unable to complete the ascent, and her companion, finally gaining the top, discovered the Scouts, and called upon them for help. With rope and tackle the Scouts descended the cliff by another route, then ascended to the young lady, secured her with their lines, and climbing ahead, hauled her by stages to safety.

An interesting introduction of a public official involving Boy Scouts took place in New York recently. Governor Lehman appointed Charles W. Frossel, a Justice of the City Court, and he was inducted into office before nearly 400 people. As the ceremony was drawing to a close, Eagle Scout Theodore Endres was called to the Bench, and he administered the oath of the Boy Scouts of America, with Justice Frossel repeating. This ceremony was requested by Justice Frossel, who has given 16 years of service to the Scout Movement.

Education—Under Fire

Incidental to the major news of the battle for Madrid comes an item to the effect that children in Spanish government territory are going to start to school again.

In Madrid alone, about 100,000 youngsters of school age who remained in the city because their parents would not consent to their evacuation, were not able to attend classes because their schools were within range of Rebel guns.

Since Madrid is still a target for Rebel missiles, it is interesting to see just how the minister of education solved the problem of re-opening the schools. Here's just how simple it was: "Madrid children will have their schools even if we have to open them under fire from enemy batteries," he said.

Thus, despite great obstacles, the nobility and dignity of learning is re-established. Spanish children may proceed in their quest of a higher existence, studying history while it's made, with daily object lessons in the latest, most destructive methods of "perpetuating" civilization. — Kitchener Record.

Long Lived Canadians

There are 163 persons in Canada today, says "Canada's Weekly", published in London, who are aged 100 years and over. "They had begun their young lives when young Queen Victoria ascended the throne, just one century ago this Coronation year.

"The population of Canada 100 years ago was about 1,250,000. There were 200,000 in Nova Scotia, 600,000 in Lower Canada and 397,000 in Upper Canada. There are 3,666,000 persons in Canada today who were alive at the accession of Edward VII in 1901. In that year the population of the Dominion had risen to 5,371,000.

"There are 4,355,000 persons living in Canada today who were alive when George V became King in 1911, 26 years ago, and the population in that year was 7,207,000. It is now 11,000,000."—Niagara Falls Review.

Highway Laws Stricter

An English court refused a man permission to appeal his conviction for dangerous driving, whereby he was imprisoned for 12 months and disqualified as a driver for 15 years. He was driving very fast along a straight road late at night, when his car knocked down a woman, who died as a result of the accident. It was described by one of the judges as the worst case of dangerous driving that could be conceived. English courts certainly do look at such accidents differently than do Canadian courts. Imagine a Canadian going to jail for a year and losing his driver's license for 15 years because he ran down and killed a pedestrian. — Amherstburg Echo.

Geography Lesson

Lord Tweedsmuir's trip is helping also to educate Canadians. Thus most of them have learned for the first time that there is a place in the north called Tuktoyaktuk. — Peterborough Examiner.

Irrigation Plan's Weakness

The $400,000,000 irrigation scheme proposed by R. O. Sweezey for the arid West has two weaknesses. There is no guarantee that fertility would be secured, nor that the amount of money would be sufficient or securable. Moving the people to better pasture would be quicker and cheaper. —St. Catharines Standard.

The Probation System

There has been much discussion in Canada of the merits or demerits of the probation system for both juvenile and adult offenders against the law. The success of the system depends largely upon the thoroughness and tact with which it is administered. An excellent illustration is found in Manchester, England. Not only has the work of the probation officer produced good results, but it has been done at very small cost to the city. The cost is only one shilling per case, compared with £2 5s. per week for sending a boy to a remand home or thirty-two to thirty-five shillings per week for life in prison or thirty-eight shillings per week in a Home Office school. Records kept for a period of five years show that eighty per cent of the offenders who began their probationary term in 1932 have not appeared again before the magistrates although they have been free from supervision for three years.—St. John Telegraph-Journal.

Hitch-Hike Racketeers

If all the young, well-dressed, able-bodied men who solicit rides along the highway were really penniless and unable to furnish themselves with recognized transportation, there might be some reason for allowing them to pester passing traffic and for meeting their wishes, although it is often a decidedly risky business to take strangers into a car and many a man has found himself slugged and robbed as reward for his kindness.

But in all too many cases, these people who prey upon motorists are not only neat and well-dressed, carrying their belongings with them in grips or suit-cases, but have ample funds in their pockets to pay for transportation by means of train or motor coach.

The average young hitch-hiker is simply a petty racketeer who moves from place to place by his nerve and at someone else's expense and who boasts of his free travel at the end of his journey while he has plenty of money to move without such assistance. — Brockville Recorder and Times.

THE EMPIRE

Canadian Policy of Shirking

When Canada takes stock of her vulnerability in considering her share in Empire defense, she cannot be blamed for including the protection that she can reasonably expect from her powerful neighborhood, the United States, as an important item on the credit side. It would be another matter entirely if she held her place in the Empire merely for what she could get out of it in the way of benefits. The time might come when those benefits would be in danger of being destroyed by an enemy. Take Australia alone. We buy from Canada more than we sell to her. Would Canada stand idly by and see that market lost to her through some cause which she could have helped to prevent? Her market openings in Great Britain are vastly greater, and there are the other Dominions and also the colonies and dependents to be supplied.—The Australasian.

Solving Palestine Problem

There is a possibility, perhaps, small, but distinctly growing, that if partition (of Palestine) is not hurried it may prove unnecessay; and nobody wants it for its own sake. Among the Jews the trend of opinion seems to be that partition would be acceptable, but only if the Jewish share were made much bigger. Likely enough Arab opinion would favour a division with a bigger Arab allotment. But the important thing is that both Jews and Arabs are beginning more and more to think that mutual reconciliation and co-operation would be preferable to the scheme of partition which is, in fact, before them. Now that movement may be temporary, it may fade away, it may be countered by the extremer elements on the two sides. But should it succeed, it would give possibility of a settlement far preferable to partition — which was frankly a policy of despair. It is plainly wise to give this new move towards a new deal in Palestine a chance.—London Daily Herald.

McArthur Warns Our Schools

TORONTO, — Warning against the possible use of the schools of this continent for political propaganda was sounded by Dr. Duncan McArthur, the Ontario Deputy Minister of Education, speaking at a dinner of the Canadian Teachers' federation.

"It is not the function of the school to indoctrinate any theory or 'ism' whatsoever however one might agree." he said. "It is improtant, it seems to me, that we should keep our eyes steadily on the fundamental principles of education.

"The school will have discharged its responsibility when it trains boys and girls to think clearly, accurately and consistently and sends them out with an unquenchable thirst for truth and stimulates their curiosity in regard to the life about them."

Boy Given Up By Real Mother

CHICAGO, — The real mother of little Donald Horst, Lydia Nelson, gave him up this week to his foster parents, well-to-do Mr. and Mrs. Otto Horst. Attorney John E. Johnson, who said he represented all parties, announced she signed a consent of adoption permitting the Horsts permanent custody of the 31-month-old boy spirited away from the Horst home last Tuesday.

Scientist Watches Brain at Work

Uses For Medical Diagnosis the Newly-Found Electrical "Waves" in the Brain.

LONDON.—Striking success in his attempts to use for medical diagnosis the newly found electrical "waves" in the brain, is reported by Dr. Frederick Lemere, following a series of tests at the National Hospital for Nervous Diseases, London.

It is now possible through these waves to watch the brain at work. Their production, at the rate of about ten beats a second, is suspended by any form of concentrated thought. Wireless amplification is used to make visible the minutely small electrical changes involved.

After studying the "brain waves" from 15 normal persons and 60 patients suffering from various brain injuries, Dr. Lemere concludes that such records could be used, in many types of cases, to remove doubt as to the site of the injury.

Other workers have concentrated on finding new and wholly abnormal forms of brain wave. The violent electrical discharge noted in attacks of epilepsy and an unusually slow rhythm of about three beats a second are examples.

Rhythm Changes

Dr. Lemere has concentrated almost entirely on the measurement of minor variations in the regular ten-a-second rhythm. He finds that when the brain is injured the rhythm may be more pronounced on the injured side of the brain. On the other hand, a number of other types of brain injury result in no such unbalance.

Dr. Lemere believes that brain wave records show also that there must be a fundamental difference between the mechanism of epilepsy and that of the violent form of headache known as "migraine." It has been argued that "migraine" represents a nerve storm of broadly similar type.

Dr. Lemere is psychiatrist to the Eastern State Hospital, Washington. With a grant from the Rockefeller Institution he has visited this country for the special purpose of studying the new brain technique.

Replacement of Lost Soil $192,000 a Square Mile

Re-establishment of Canada's Drought Area Would Be Costly Business—Some Drifting So Extensive, Injury Is "Almost Permanent"

CALGARY.—If all the nitrogen and phosphorous which has been blown out of crop lands of the drought district of Western Canada in the last seven years were to be replaced by artificial fertilizer, it would cost from $121,000 to $192,000 a square mile, a survey conducted by four Canadian soil experts reveals.

The men—Dr. F. A. Wyatt, professor of soils at the University of Alberta, and E. S. Hopkins, A. E. Palmer and W. S. Shepil of the Dominion Experimental farms branch—published a booklet on their investigations and listed cures for the farmer's biggest bugbear, soil drifting.

Here are some of their findings:

It would require from $150 to $250 worth of commercial fertilizer to replace nitrogen lost from one acre of fertile farm land by the removal of a layer of soil one inch deep and from $40 to $50 to replace the phosphorous.

One inch of soil over an acre contains 300 pounds of phosphorous, 1,500 pounds of nitrogen and 15 tons of organic matter.

Sand Storms In Tons

One inch of surface soil blown from a single section of land means the removal of approximately 100,000 tons of soil.

A cubic mile of lower air during a dust storm contains 225 tons of dust.

In some districts where the land is lighter, soil drifting has been so extensive the injury appears to be almost permanent.

Where from one to four inches of top soil have been lost it will be found almost impossible to raise good crops for many years, even with abundance of moisture.

In 1934 a quarter section near Regina that was subjected to heavy drifting from high winds was found to have lost the equivalent of 1¼ inches of top soil, or approximately 195 tons per acre.

Damage Widespread

At one time it was thought that soil drifting was confined to the open prairie lands of the south, but of late years it has spread northward and now much damage is being done in formerly wooded farm lands in southern and central Alberta and in the Peace River block.

Strip farming is the most highly advised of the preventatives. Under it strips are laid down at right angles to the most frequent winds and from 10 to 24 rods wide.

Other suggestions include:

Shallow, plowless cultivation of summer fallow.

Extensive use of cover crops, including the planting in regions of sufficient rainfall of seedlings in early August.

Program For Canadian Youth

A gigantic plan for the rehabilitation of Canadian young people caught in the maelstrom of hard times and unemployment is before the Federal Department of Labor and the Unemployment Commission. $1,000,000 has been voted to the scheme by the Dominion Government, a sum which will be used to promote apprenticeship in many trades and industries so Canadian boys and girls may be properly trained for work. All groups of youth will be taken into consideration and absorption made into as many branches of industry as possible.

Ontario hopes to receive $240,000 of the total allotment, and an agreement will probably be drawn up to that effect and submitted to both governments for ratification. Much preparatory work is already going on in Ontario. Government employment offices are being asked to keep a list of all unemployed young people and maintain close touch with the situation in each locality.

Will Stay Out of Politics

It is inevitable that reports will never cease to be current during the rest of his natural life that the Duke of Windsor is about to return to England and enter politics. Already rumors are circulating that the ex-King is going back to England inside of the next six months to become Prime Minister. Londoners say that it is only in the United States that such ideas are given credence. In England, they declare, there is no apparent body of opinion that would lift a finger to facilitate a political career for the former king, and it is more probable that public opinion would strongly resist, on impersonal grounds, any attempt of a member of the Royal family to enlarge his influence with the public.

An authoritative London source says there is not a scrap of evidence to indicate that any substantial number of Englishmen regret their decision of December. They would make it again and in like circumstances with equal emphasis.

Vanish In Arctic

A four-motored Russian plane piloted by the famed Sigismund Levanevsky and bound to the United States from Moscow, is long overdue at the Fairbanks, Alaska, landing field. It was the third Russian flight over the North Pole in the past two months. A Russian plane flew from Moscow and landed at Vancouver, Wash., June 20, and another flew from Moscow to San Jacinto, Cal., on July 14 after a 6,700-mile trip. Both flights were non-stop.

While the search goes on for the missing flyers, theories accounting for the disappearance of the plane piloted by Levanevsky hold that he may have run out of gasoline and come down in the tundra, or that he may have crashed in a 100-mile-an-hour gale. Only the Arctic wastes know the secret of what happened to the plane. Meanwhile the Soviet Government is going ahead with plans for further experimental flights over the Pole.

Clash With Aberhart

The Dominion-Alberta impasse over the banking laws enacted at the recent special session at Edmonton was dramatically terminated this week when Premier Mackenzie King announced that the three objectionable statutes had been disallowed. In a wire to Premier Aberhart, the head of the Dominion Government says in part:

"If it is felt that changes should be made in the banking or currency laws of the Dominion it is open to any citizens of the Dominion residing in Alberta, or in any other province, to seek to have those changes made by the only body which has the due authority. The issue in the present instance is that a direct attempt is being made to infringe upon a field of jurisdiction universally recognised as falling to the Dominion, and to buttress this action by denying any questioning of the constitutionality of this section in the courts."

It is thirteen years since the power of disallowance has been exercised by the Dominion. The Federal Government claims that by passing the three pieces of legislation (licensing bankers, introducing measures to control banking, closing the courts to actions testing Alberta statutes), the Province of Alberta has over-stepped its powers. The fight is on.

Sino-Japanese War

A conflagration that appeared to have died down somewhat last week has flared up again with the Japanese attack on Shanghai, and the Chino-Jap disagreement has been brought within the category of a major conflict, a deadly war of the first class. The greatest aerial bombings the Orient has ever known, are going on. Sections of Shanghai have been destroyed by incendiary flames, ships belonging to both belligerents sunk, and innocent bystanders done to death. Hundreds of soldiers on both sides have been killed. The war in China is looked on with great disfavor by the Japanese at home who are already overburdened with taxes, yet a mobilization of all resources of that country has been proclaimed, and Japanese troops by the thousands continue to pour into Chinese war zones. The Chinese meantime are stemming the Jap advance and using blockades to keep enemy ships from penetrating inland. Reprisals on whites are feared and the foreign population of Shanghai are right in believing themselves to be in grave danger. It is expected that in order to spare the city, Great Britain may propose that she, the United States and France assume responsibility for safeguarding Chinese and Japanese interests there.

Near Panic on Liner

SHANGHAI.—More than 300 Americans fell to the decks of the Dollar liner President McKinley to escape two fusillades by Chinese snipers.

The passengers were frightened first when bombs from Japanese warplanes fell uncomfortably close to the ship in the Yangtze River, although Captain Bryant had ordered huge American flags flown from every mast.

Near panic broke out later when Chinese snipers along the shore began peppering Japanese destroyers and bullets began to whistle over the McKinley's decks and through her rigging.

Passengers dropped to their stomachs on the deck, fearful to stand long enough even to race for protection below.

Chinese Fliers Promoted

NANKING. — Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek this week gave all Chinese fliers who participated in the air battles over Nanking and Hangchow a promotion and a raise in pay.

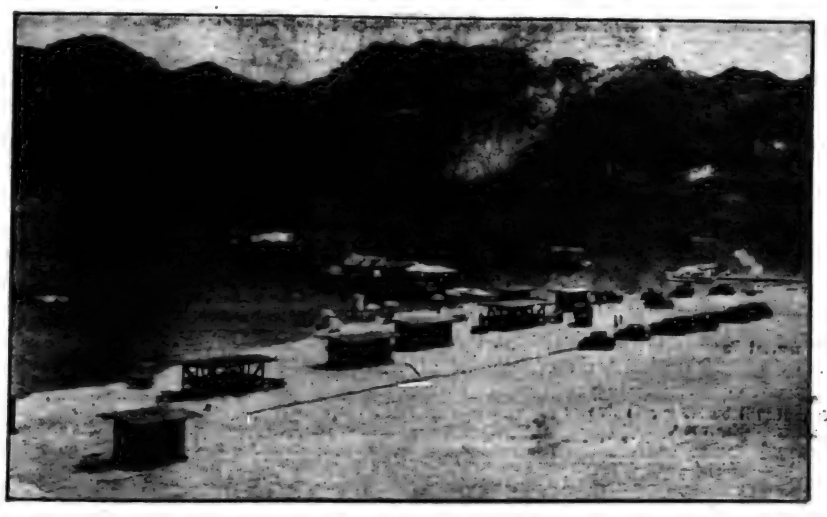
The order, citing the "heroic" defense of the Chinese fliers who reportedly shot down eight Japanese planes during the skirmish, raised each aviator one peg above his former rank.

General Chow Ting-fang, leader of the squadron, received a bonus of 20,000 yuan ($6,000).

Government Revenue Up

OTTAWA. — Figures released this week by the Comptroller of the Treasury show an increase of 36 million in the Dominion of Canada government revenue during the present fiscal year. Total ordinary revenue of the Dominion for July was $37,881,966, and special receipts brought the grand total to $37,893,945, compared with $34,275,531 in July, 1936.

U. S. Grain Trade Booms



CHICAGO.—Grain pits in the United States bubble with a big volume of orders. The United States' grain trade is enjoying its best business in seven years. Customers' house along the streets are crowded. The white chalked figures on the big board again have captured public interest. Small investors are back with hopes of sharing in current prosperity.

In the last three months the turnover on the board of trade, world's focal point in the grain business, has been running 77 per cent. greater than in the corresponding 1936 period.

Normandie Makes New Record

HAVRE.—Averaging 31.2 knots, the French Line's "Normandie" last week sped across the Atlantic (Ambrose Light to Bishop's Rock) in 3 days, 22 hours, 7 minutes, fastest crossing in history. Since she had just made a westbound trip in 3 days, 23 hours, 1 minute, she acquired, all in ten days, both east-bound and west-bound records. Her increased speed is attributed to new propellers with a deeper pitch, and four blades instead of three.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Early History Halton County

By SANDY

Drumquin, our next stop. Jonathan Howes, one of the first settlers, came to lot 8, concession 7, settling in 1819. In those early days the sixteen-mile creek was a much larger body of water than it is at present. And Mr. Howes, being of a mechanical turn of mind, immediately saw the possibilities of this stream. There was no grist mill at Oakville, Milton, Streetsville or anywhere on the Credit and all grain had to be taken along trails to Little York.

In 1820, Mr. Howes built a dam, made a water wheel with his own hands, carrying iron from Dundas, and fashioning it at a little home-made forge. He then secured two immense stones, so heavy that they required three yoke of oxen to draw them, and dressed them down to millstones. The mill was soon running and the quiet little spot was soon a hive of industry. For twenty miles around people came, bringing their grain to grind. Through the forest trails they came, some carrying their grain on their backs, others with oxen, and a few with horses. In 1821 a saw mill was added, utilizing the same power. This was in the days when circular saws were unknown, the one used being of the up-and-down variety. This little mill supplied the lumber for all buildings erected in this part of Halton and Peel for many years. In 1823 a distillery was erected. This was before the days of excise laws, or inland revenue departments and whiskey could be manufactured and sold for 16 cents a gallon. Good whiskey, old customer says it was—not a headache in a barrelful. This part of Ontario was then a forest of the finest white oak, with trees four feet in diameter and sixty feet high. Imagine the banks as they used to be in the spring piled up with rows and rows of oak staves, corded up each stave bearing the owner's brand, and waiting to be floated down the river after the breaking up of the ice. These staves were eagerly sought after by American barrel firms. At that time schooners came up as far as the Oakville station where the staves were loaded and taken to the American side. So great was the volume of business brought by the grist mill, saw mill and distillery that the lane through Mr. Howes' farm to the sixth line was the regular public road for many years, after No. 5 sideroad was surveyed. Charles Brown owned and operated the blacksmith and carpenter shop, where all kinds of farm implements were manufactured, supplying the farmers for miles around. After the planks of the seventh line were removed, Wm. McDougal, then Mayor of Oakville, W. F. Romain and R. K. Chisholm, agitated the gravelling of this road. The by-law was snowed under by a large majority, Jonathan Howes being the only man in the vicinity who voted for it.

Turning northeast on number five sideroad, from Drumquin, we come to the 9th concession, where the O'Haras, Highlands, O'Connors, McCartins, Laverys, McCarrons, Johnstons, Nunans and many others had settled. This was a dense forest of oak, elm, black and white ash and maple. Many of these trees were three feet in diameter and sixty feet high before there was a single limb. After the first cabins were built an immense amount of work had to be done before a small plot of ground was cleared. The men for several winters worked on the Welland Canal to procure money to tide them over the first years, leaving the women and children to the dangers and dreariness of the long winter. All the settlers were from Armagh, in the north of Ireland, and were loyal Roman Catholics. One of the greatest privations to them was being cut off from religious privileges. The nearest priest, Father O'Riley, of Dundas, was forty miles away. While the O'Hara home was always open for service, still the people longed for a church building, and also for a spot of consecrated ground where their possible dead might rest. In the spring of 1823 action was taken. A small spot on the Highland farm, lot 6, now owned by Will Nunan, was secured. Willing hands felled the trees and raised a neat log building. The lumber was secured from the mill of Mr. Howes, Drumquin. On a lovely day in June, 1823, the church was opened and the small plot cleared was consecrated as a burying ground. Various troubles beset the people, but death stood aloof until 1825. On an October afternoon a young man and woman were seen coming down the 9th line. They had walked from the Gore, thirty miles distant. The man carried a home-made coffin that had been made dainty by loving hands. The young couple had been married in the church. Their golden-haired child, now in the coffin, had been baptized by the loving Father and now with bleeding hearts they laid their dear one in the first grave in this cemetery. The log church gave way in the fifties to a frame one. And in 1882 the present brick church was erected. A store, called the "California" was at one time on the corner below the church. In the winter the girls were kept busy spinning wool from the sheep that were on every farm. This was afterwards woven into cloth by James Fullerton, and a travelling tailor, Johnny Lavery, made the cloth up into suits. Along the black branch rice grew in abundance. The girls would pick this, plait it into hats and sell them in Streetsville for ten cents each. A school was built on the farm now owned by Will Cook. Andrew Porter taught it for years, fifty or sixty pupils attending. This school was burned down in 1858 and a brick one was built at the tenth line, where Pensioner McGill was the first teacher. This school was replaced in 1870 by the present white school.

The beginning of McCurdy's Corners, lots 10 and 11, 9th concession. In the year 1819 John Mason received from His Majesty, north corner, David Cordingley took the east corner, Isaac Askin the west, Robert McCurdy the south. This place was, like the rest of the country, an unbroken forest. The settlers had to bring their supplies from Little York through a blazed trail on foot through the forest. Being of good British stock, they early felt the need of a school for the education of their large families. A bee was called to erect the building. It was a bright May day, 1823, when the following settlers assembled: John Mason, Hugh Mason, John Bussell, Isaac Askin, Robert McCurdy, David Cordingley, Bartholomew O'Connor, Adam Anderson, John Anderson and Patrick McCarten. As there, at that time, was no clergy reserve fund, no township council nor organized school board, the enterprise was purely local. The building was of unhewn logs, plastered with mud. It was a gala day in the community, the whole population picnicking in the bush. The women providing a real old time picnic lunch. At the lunch hour some one suggested the school be baptized. As the school was on the Askin farm, some thought it should be named "Askin". Others said the corner had no name, why not put the names of the four men, who owned the corner lots, in a hat. John Mason, David Cordingley, Isaac Askin and Robert McCurdy's names were put in a hat and Robert McCurdy's name was drawn. And thus McCurdy's Corners got the name it has been known by ever since. The first building lasted until 1838 when a log building of hewn logs replaced the mud plastered one. This, in turn, gave way to the present brick building in 1870. For a number of years the school was used for a meeting house. The settlers were chiefly Methodist and early felt the need of a special place to worship. After due consideration they undertook the work, and on the 9th of September, 1832, the people came from far and near to the opening of the new church. It was a commodious frame building, the largest and most costly for many miles around and the people were justly proud of it. It was replaced in 1884 by a large brick one. This one was removed the time of church union. Everything in church life about McCurdy's Corners dates from the famous revival from November, 1852, to March, 1853. Rev. T. M. Jeffers was the minister then in charge. The church was crowded every meeting, sleighloads coming from every direction for many miles. The work progressed until every man, woman and child professed religion.

Prior to 1852, a tavern called the "Blue Boar" did a flourishing business at the corner. The genial proprietor, Billy Briggs, gave accommodation to man and beast. In his house the weary settlers often sought to vary the monotony of clearing the soil by nights of revelry. His tavern was on the 9th line, opposite the Anderson's farm. Famous for miles around, Billy Briggs spread himself like a green bay tree, until calamity suddenly overtook him, and the verdant foliage was nipped by the fearful frost of the revival of 1852 and 1853. Men, whose voices had been raised in song and story in the tavern, gave testimony in the nearby church. Night after night, Billy Briggs sat in his deserted bar room. The sign of the "Blue Boar" creaked wearily above the door. The lights from the windows glanced alluringly across the snowdrifts, but the sleigh-bells went merrily past, never stopping until the church was reached, whence the words of Wesley's hymns were wafted across to his straining ears. There is interesting historical history in the following familiar places in Trafalgar Township: Snider's Corners, Sleigno's Corners, Fisher's Corners, Munn's Corners, The Sixteen-mile Creek, the Triller house, where the little rebel, W. L. McKenzie, was hid; Postville municipal hall, churches, stores, and taverns, Mullholland's Corners, and many other places of historical interest.

ADVERTISE IN, THE REVIEW

HONOURABLE EARL ROWE
States His Party's Stand on Labor

The national policy of the Liberal-Conservative Party, Provincial and Dominion, for many years has been to create industry for the purpose of providing work and wages for labor and a profitable home market for the farmer; the lumberman and other primary producers. The Party's sympathetic attitude towards labor is evidenced by the Social legislation on our statute books.

The Liberal-Conservative Party believes that labor should receive a fair share of the fruits of industry and is entitled to organize in order to improve the lot of the worker as regards wages, hours, security in old age and all other conditions of industrial life. The Liberal-Conservative Party reaffirms its traditional policy of insisting upon the maintenance of law and order in all industrial disputes and pledges itself firmly and scrupulously to uphold the laws of Canada.

1. The right of employees to bargain collectively through their own representatives chosen without dictation, coercion or intimidation.

2. It is and has for many decades been a fact that both capital and labor are International in their organization. Accordingly the right of the worker to belong to the union of his choosing, Canadian or International, craft or industrial, is fully established; provided always that the unions must observe, and that capital must observe, in all their actions, the laws of Canada.

3. The Liberal-Conservative Party is unalterably opposed to the introduction into Ontario of sit-down strikes, sabotage or other violations of our law, and for the purpose of clarity hereby places itself on record as being opposed to such illegalities whether they are introduced into Ontario by labor unions affiliated with the C. I. O., the A. F. of L., or any other organization, capital or labor.

4. That representatives from other countries, both of capital and labor, shall be subject on the same principles as other people to our immigration laws and that they shall when admitted to this country, strictly observe the laws of the land.

5. The primary function of the state in all industrial disputes is FIRST—to take no sides and to maintain law and order without the display of unnecessary or provocative force, and SECOND, to enact and impartially administer adequate legislation for the conciliation of industrial disputes.

6. The right to work in Canada is not dependent upon membership in any organization.

7. That no strike shall take place until all reasonable methods of conciliation are exhausted and the worker should have the right of secret ballot free from improper influence or coercion in all decisions relating to the dispute.

8. The Liberal-Conservative Party will continue in the future as in the past to defend the principle of freedom of association within the law. The party re-affirms its belief that the essence of democracy is trust in the people and to rely on freedom and not in dictatorship, that public opinion may be led but not driven and that the greatest safeguard of orderly progress and reform is the sound common sense of all classes of the Canadian people.

I have stated frankly and fearlessly my party's policy toward labor and law enforcement. I stand now, as always, for law and order, for all, under all circumstances. This policy is the democratic British method and I shall apply these principles in the administration of our provincial affairs.

Earl Rowe.

Leader of the Liberal-Conservative Party in Ontario

Local News

Philip Rundle was seriously injured last week while helping at a threshing on the farm of W. J. Houlgrave, north of Streetsville. One arm and three ribs were broken and he received several bruises as well. Dr. Montemurro took charge of the case and Philip is now on the way to recovery. He fell several feet, alighting on the barn floor.

WEDDINGS

The wedding of James Sullivan, Streetsville, and Miss Gladys Langtree, formerly of Rainy River, will take place in St. Joseph's Church, Streetsville, on Saturday, Aug. 28th, at nine o'clock a.m. by Rev. Father Egan. The groomsman will be Mr. Louis Tedesco, and Mrs. Tedesco will attend the bride. Immediately after the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan will leave for Buffalo. Mass will be said in the Church immediately after the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan will make their home in Streetsville. Their many friends wish the young couple a long and happy married life.

OBITUARY

The people of Streetsville and district were shocked to hear of the sudden passing of one of our prominent citizens, in the person of Mr. John A. Cook early Monday morning, Aug. 16th. The deceased was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter Cook and he was the last surviving member of the family. Mr. Cook was born seventy years ago on a farm near Streetsville where he farmed all his life until taking up residence in Streetsville a few years ago. The funeral service was held on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 in the United Church, of which Mr. Cook was a member. Interment was made in Streetsville cemetery. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Mary Horner, one daughter, Mrs. John McKellar, of Toronto, and two sons, Clarence, of Kingston, and Roy, of Streetsville. The pallbearers were Mr. Cook's nephews, Mr. Wellington Cook, Mr. Will Cook, Mr. Elwood Cook, Mr. Peter Stephens, Mr. Edward Cook and Mr. Clifford May.

SNIDER'S

The union services for Trafalgar circuit closed their ninth service for the summer last Sunday with worship in Munn's Church. Next Sunday morning Wesley resumes its service.

Misses Lillian and Barbara Sibbald have returned to their home in Hatchley after spending three weeks with relatives here.

Mrs. Wanless, London, and Mr. and Mrs. Wooster and sons, Detroit, were recent visitors at the home of their relative, Mrs. E. F. Wilson.

Mrs. John D. Orr, (formerly Eva Stevenson, Snider's) Radial Road, Bronte, entertained on Wednesday afternon at a miscellaneous shower in honor of her cousin, Miss Ruby Albertson, whose marriage to Mr. Edmund Chamberlain, Oakville, takes place early in September. Mrs. E. F. Wilson played the wedding march as the bride-to-be entered the room. The gifts were presented to Miss Albertson by her little niece, Beverley Albertson, Toronto, from a pretty pink and white small wagon. Mrs. Orr was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. L. Cherrington and Mrs. F. Stevenson, Oakville, Mrs. J. McSparran, Snider's, and Mrs. J. E. Hurst, Toronto. The ladies from Wesley were among the guests.

OPEN LETTER TO A BOOR ON WHEELS

Some day, my ill-mannered friend, you are going to go too far. Some day when you swerve around a street corner, you are going to clip the buttons of the wrong pedestrian's vest, and he is going to catch up with you, haul you off your comfy upholstery and deal you the smacking-down you deserve. You're a veritable Titan of self-assurance, aren't you, when you're behind an eight-cylinder engine? But how do you look on your feet? Are you the same dashing, imposing self-assertive personage for whom the rest of the world must make room? Would you dare shove another pedestrian aside; would you jostle a six-footer? You would not, for you're just a grubby little inferiority complex who's been sublimated by a shot of gasoline.

And what's the reason for this break-neck rush of yours, anyway? You're in an automobile. You'll arrive at your destination 10, 15 or 20 minutes quicker than the pedestrian you're crowding back on to the curb. The best he can do is five or six miles an hour. You are going 25 or 30, perhaps 40 miles an hour. Is your business ten times more urgent than his? My, my, what an important fellow you are! What vast designs, what momentous projects must occupy your waking hours to justify such impatience.

The automobile, it seems, is the devil's gift to the Little Man. Put him in control of a motor car and he's cock o' the cross-walks. But if you suddenly yanked that ton or two of iron and steel out from under him, you'd find him just a measly nonentity with the mental set-up of a public school bully. You may say I'm in a bad frame of mind. You're right! And I'll get over it when fellows like you begin to use a little care, caution, courtesy and common-sense when you're driving on the streets and highways of this province.

"A PEDESTRIAN."

"All human virtues increase and strengthen themselves by the practice and experience of them."—Socrates.

"Rise in the strength of Spirit to resist all that is unlike good. God has made man capable of this, and nothing can vitiate the ability and power divinely bestowed on man."—Mary Baker Eddy.

The World's Premier Agricultural Fair

Canadian National Enters 59th Year of Operation

C. N. E. is Direct Descendant of Niagara Agricultural Society Founded in 1792—Coronation Year at Exhibition Features Display of Latest Developments in Agriculture—The Weeks of August 27 to September 11 Are Packed with Attractions, Educational in Aspect.

Few people realize that the great Canadian National Exhibition which this year enters its fifty-ninth consecutive year of operation and is universally acknowledged to be the world's greatest annual exhibition, is the direct descendant of the Niagara Agricultural Society founded in 1792 under the patronage of John Graves Simcoe, Governor of Upper Canada. This society founded to aid the development of the products of the farm, so that the sturdy pioneers of Upper Canada might benefit in their fight against the wilderness by the pooling of their knowledge and experience, did a mighty work in the development of the struggling colony.

Having in the intervening decades grown away from the parochial limitations inevitably set by nature upon that Society, the Canadian National Exhibition has never lost sight of the original purpose for which it was founded, namely for the encouragement of agriculture and industry; so that today we find the basic industry more firmly than ever established as the foundation upon which the superstructure of the "Show Window of the Nations" is reared.

Prize Lists Extended

It is generally acknowledged that there is no agricultural exhibition in the world equal to the Canadian National Exhibition, and in this Coronation Year all the latest developments in agriculture and aids in the scientific cultivation of the products of forest and field are on display. Entries in the different classes of livestock and field produce have attained record proportions, and to keep pace with these developments the prize lists have been extended and increased with the modern demands of growers and breeders. Also in keeping with the spirit of Coronation Year, special medals and handsomely embossed diplomas will be awarded.

In other fields the Canadian National Exhibition has encouraged the development of Canadian livestock. One of these is the trotting and pacing races. This year these ever popular races are held from September 7 to September 10 with prizes of $7,000 in Futurities and $3,000 in Class races.

Canada's Premier Horse Show, in the Coliseum Arena, and the Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock show are other examples of the Exhibition's interest in the development of Canada's basic industry.

To all lovers of the out of doors the news that Tom Mix in person with his own three-ring circus and Wild West Shows will be at the Canadian National Exhibition will indeed be welcome. These shows, supreme triumph of the art of the "big top", are indeed different from the conventional presentations and are unique and modern in every respect. Tom Mix will take part in every performance.

Mounted Police In Pageant

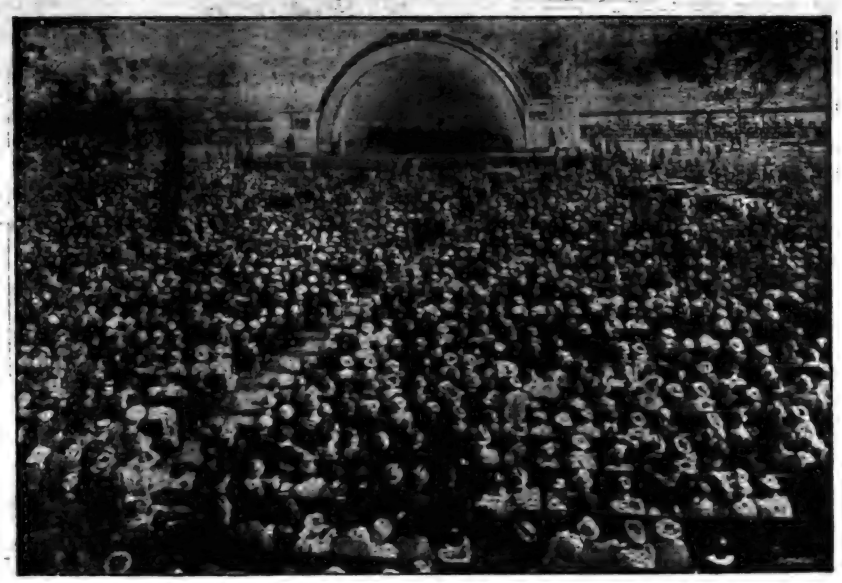
Among the most popular attractions of the 1937 Exhibition will be the Coronation detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. This splendid body of men together with their perfectly trained and magnificent mounts will be present for the whole term of the Exhibition, and will be seen nightly as a part of the Pageant. Every Canadian will feel a thrill of pride at the spectacle of the "Mounties" guiding their steeds through the intricate evolutions of the Musical Ride.

In keeping with the Canadian National Exhibition's policy of presenting the finest of the world's musical organizations this year the United States Navy Band will be featured. The consent of President Franklin D. Roosevelt had to be obtained in order that the band might be present. Music lovers are promised a rare treat in the opportunity to hear at the Exhibition's magnificent new band shell this world famous aggregation of more than eighty musicians.

Every year there is something new, some innovation or improvement at the Exhibition and this year it is in the realm of amusement. Gone is the old Midway and in its place is a new amusement zone known as Frol-Exland. Here are many startling innovations in the way of entertainment: Eskimoland, an Eskimo village complete with igloos, dog-teams, blond Eskimos from the Arctic wastes, and Major Godsell's famous collection of northern trophies. Hollywood on Parade, which can best be described as a revelation of "movies" from the inside, taking in every phase of the making of a moving picture. There are many more interesting, mirth-provoking and instructive features of Frol-Ex-land which sets its apart as being in the forefront of the amusement world.

Of the utmost importance is the fact that exhibit space in the many buildings of the Canadian National Exhibition is in greater demand than has been the case since 1930. Space rentals as a whole are ten to fifteen per cent. higher than last year, and since the Exhibition has for years been acknowledged as Canada's business barometer this is indeed indicative of the Dominion's increasing prosperity.

Overseas Exhibits



Overseas exhibits are bigger and more comprehensive than ever before, the British Empire being particularly well represented. Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and the Indian Empire all have large displays of natural and manufactured products, while Great Britain is represented by the commercial displays in the British Section and the exhibit of the Scottish National Development Council. Foreign nations have taken over the International Building this year and among those exhibiting are Finland, Czechoslovakia and Japan, who is represented at the Exhibition.

The 1937 dates for the Canadian National Exhibition are from August 27 to September 11. In keeping with its policy and possibility as a tangible link with the Niagara Agricultural Society, one day each year is traditionally set aside as Agriculturists' Day, this year Wednesday, Sept. 8.

When the old-time fiddlers and square dancers were introduced at the Canadian National Exhibition it was done as a novelty and intended as a temporary attraction. The innovation was an instantaneous hit and will be continued this year.

Horses! horses! horses! Hunters and jumpers, draught, carriage and general purpose animals are provided for in the prize list arranged for the Horse Show at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The C.N.E. Band Shell

Huge crowds listen here daily to concerts by world famous bands. The U. S. Navy Band will be heard this year.

Sunday School Lesson

GOD CONDEMNS INTEMPERANCE
Lev. 10:1, 2, 8-11

GOLDEN TEXT — Romans 14:21. "It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything, whereby thy brother stumbleth."

"And Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, took each of them his censer, and put fire therein, and laid incense thereon, and offered strange fire before Jehovah, which he had not commanded them. And there came forth fire from before Jehovah, and devoured them, and they died before Jehovah." The first section of our lesson has really no relation to the subject of temperance and the drinking of wine, though in it is the record of a sad incident occurring during the forty years of Israel's wanderings, which has served for centuries as a powerful warning against serving God in a presumptuous and self-willed manner. Two sons of Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, putting fire in their respective censers, offered strange fire before the Lord, which he had not commanded them, and immediately by fire, God slew them. What this strange fire was has been a question of dispute among commentators for a long time, but at least we know that they offered this fire either in a way not commanded, or at a time not commanded, or in a place not commanded, or, perhaps, in each and all of these ways, they offered fire not commanded of the Lord.

"And Jehovah spake unto Aaron, saying."

A Statute Forever

"Drink no wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tent of meeting, that ye die not; it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations. And that ye may make a distinction between the holy and the common, and between the unclean and the clean. And that ye may teach the children of Israel all the statutes which Jehovah hath spoken unto them by Moses." In this paragraph we have the first word of many spoken by the Lord down through the ages against the drinking of wine.

"It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes to say, where is strong drink? Lest they drink, and forget the law, and pervert the justice due to any that is afflicted." If the king who is here called Lemuel is not King Solomon himself, we do not know who he might be, for he is never referred to in any other place in the Bible except in the first four verses of this chapter. While the words in the preceding section forbade wine to the priests of God's people, the words here are a warning against the drinking of intoxicating liquors on the part of kings and princes, and the reason given for such a prohibition is that, by heavily drinking, those in whose hands government and the execution of the law rest would be in danger of forgetting the law of the land, and being unjust to those who are in trouble.

"Woe to the crown of pride of the drunkards of Ephriam, and to the fading flower of his glorious beauty, that is on the head of the fat valley of them that are overcome with wine!" Ephriam is only another name for Samaria, or the northern kingdom, comprising the area occupied by ten of the twelve tribes of Israel, of which Ephriam was the leading tribe.

"Behold, the Lord hath a mighty and strong one; as a tempest of hail, a destroying storm, as a tempest of mighty waters overflowing, will he cast down to the earth with the hand. The crown of pride of the drunkards of Ephriam shall be trodden under foot." This is a reference to the Assyrians, whom the Lord would use as an agency for the punishment of his own people because of their stubbornness and wickedness.

"And the fading flower of his glorious beauty, which is on the head of the fat valley, shall be as the first-ripe fig before the summer; which when he that looketh upon it, while it is yet in his hand he eateth it up." The first ripe fig ripened in June, while the common fig does not ripen until August. The idea here is that the early fig would be plucked and eaten with great greediness, rather than picked and put away for future use. Prophetically Isaiah is telling the Samaritans that, as soon as the Assyrians should see their beautiful country, they would rush upon it and destroy it.

"In that day will Jehovah of hosts become a crown of glory, and a diadem of beauty, unto the residue of his people." The threat is now followed by a promise. The place of the false glory thus overthrown is now filled by a glory that is divine and true. The remnant of his people is not Judah, but Judah and the remaining portion of Ephriam, as distinguished from the portion which had perished. After the perishable thing in which they gloried had been swept away, the eternal person of Jehovah himself would be the ornament and the pride of his people.

"And a spirit of justice to him that sitteth in judgment." (See Isa. 11:2; 32.15, 16; 1 Kings 3:28; John 5:30.) The phrase undoubtedly means that the day would come (we do not believe it has yet come) when those who judge in the land will do so in the illumination of the very Spirit of God who will be to such judges a spirit of justice. "And strength to them that turn back the battle at the gate." This must undoubtedly refer to the turning back of the hosts of Sennacherib which were besieging the city of Jerusalem during the reign of Hezekiah, the vivid record of which is to be found in 2 Chronicle. 32 and in 2 Kings 19.

"And even these reel with wine." This paragraph refers to those within the kingdom of Judah, who, though they saw the terribly disastrous effects of drunkenness upon their northern brethren, still continued to indulge in the same vice. "And stagger with strong drink; the priest and the prophet reel with strong drink, they are swallowed up of wine; they stagger with strong drink; they err in vision." To be swallowed up of wine, is a vivid way of expressing the terrible fact that they were in the complete grip of the sin of intoxication, their very reason, strength, and virtue devoured by such indulgences.

"They stumble in judgment." For every true minister of the gospel and for all worthy priests, occasions must arise, with more or less frequency, in which they will be called upon to render judgment, and give advice or comfort in the most critical and delicate problems of life, which will demand the clearest mind and the purest heart for proper evaluation. Everyone knows that intoxicating liquors becloud the mind; one does not hear accurately, the delicate fibers of the mind do not function readily or in unison, and one says the most foolish things, and thinks generally the wickedest thoughts, when under the power of such a demon as drink. Alcoholic beverages are not the only things that becloud the minds of ministers.

"For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean." All the tables of the carousal are full without being any further room; everything swims with vomit. The prophet paints from nature, here, without idealizing. He receives their conduct, as it were, in a mirror, and then in the severest tones holds up this mirror before them, adults though they were.

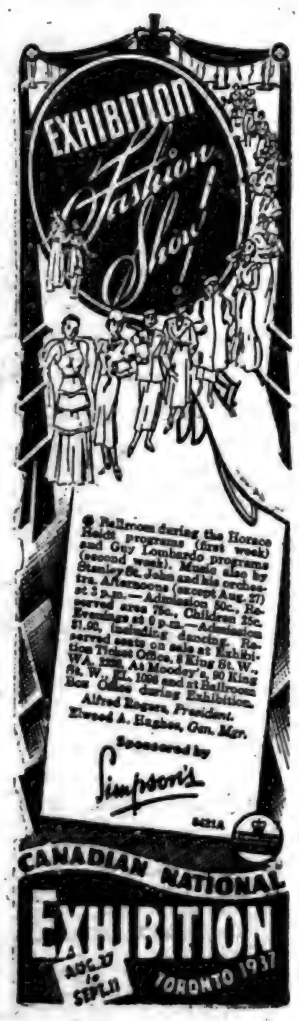
"It is good not to eat flesh nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth." For a still stronger expression of the noble principle of this verse see 1 Cor. 8:12. Of the three verbs, the first refers to the wounding of the heart caused to our neighbour by conduct which he disapproves; the second to the sin which he would be led to commit by being drawn away to do what his conscience condemns; the third to the want of regard for the scruples with which he is affected through weakness of faith.

What a vast change would come over our country if every time a man ordered a glass of intoxicating liquor he would first say to himself: Am I by drinking this leading others into temptation, or in any way weakening the power of their moral life to resist temptation?

Exhibition Notes

There is no agricultural show in the world equal to that at the Canadian National Exhibition. . . All the new developments as applied to farm, field, and orchard are on display. Horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, goats, calves, dairy products, vegetables, fruits, flowers, grain machinery and farm equipment of all kinds are there in profusion.

"Empire Onward", the pageant at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, will savor largely of Coronation activities, but as usual the glittering extravaganza for which these productions are famous will be deftly woven into the theme . . . Incidents portraying the coronation of Queen Victoria of revered memory and of the other monarchs through the years to His Majesty King George VI will be included.



When the Royal Canadian Mounted Police appeared in the recent Coronation parade in London they were accorded a vociferous reception all along the route. Their specially selected, highly-trained horses and the ultra-smart appearance of the men were a credit to Canada. This same carefully prepared unit will be a Canadian National Exhibition feature this year.

Business men have learned that the new trends in business, in business methods, new types of goods, equipment for plants and offices and all the ramifications of the world of trade and commerce are on review for them. Foreign buyers from around the world make an annual pilgrimage to this exposition. The retailer, wholesaler, jobber and manufacturer find not only pleasure but profit in admirable combination. Highly important to all of the foregoing classes of business men is the fact that two million consumers attend in two weeks.

The Canadian National Exhibition, originally chartered "for the encouragement of agriculture, industry and the arts," has never forgotten the purpose for which it was organized. It has grown and expanded in many respects but the basic plan has been carefully adhered to.

It was necessary to secure the personal approval of President Franklin D. Roosevelt to bring the United States Navy Band to the Canadian National Exhibition this year. With eighty-five musicians and attaches the personnel will run to almost one hundred. They will travel to and from Washington, D.C., in special trains.

Tom Mix and his famous horse "Tony" will be at the Canadian National Exhibition to delight the youngsters. The oldsters, too, will be entertained by the hero of the movies, who has quit the silver screen for the circus, and will bring his own three-ring show and "Wild West" to Toronto for the "Ex."

TERROR MOUNTAIN

By MADELEINE SHARPS BUCHANAN

Three bandits seize a trans-continental bus, and force the driver to guide it up a mountainside to a lonely log shack. They want a valuable secret formula believed to be in the possession of one of the passengers, Finley Trump. Meanwhile, a raging forest fire, creeping up the mountain, traps the group. The first night one of the bandits is mysteriously strangled with his own bandana, and the next night, a second one meets the same fate. Despite the sinister situation, May Lawrence, pretty nurse, and young Dr. Nick Strand find time to become engaged. Then Finley Trump is found strangled; and Kenneth Jenkins, browbeaten little man, in attempting to find a way through the fire, is overcome. When he regains consciousness, May, who has been attending him, excitedly announces that he knows who the murderer is.

CHAPTER XI

Stutter had been drawn from his bench through the open window, and, as Miss Jones entered, she saw only the bandit's legs and feet. The rest of him was hanging outside the window.

Of Jim Somers there was no trace. Miss Jones dashed across the kitchen to the door, then out and around to the window. Stutter was choking and purple in the face, his bandana had been knotted tightly about his throat.

Miss Jones quickly loosened it sufficiently to give him air. Just in time. In another moment, he might have joined Lefty and Ike.

Pushing him back through the window, Miss Jones crawled ungracefully after him. As she worked over the gasping man, she puzzled over the question of why the murderer should kill off these bandits. The murder of Finley Trump she could understand, and she was prepared for an attack on her own life, because of what she knew, but this strangling of Stutter was beyond her.

A sudden voice at her back, swung her sharply about, hand on her gun.

"What the—" It was Jim Somers.

"Where have you been?" demanded Miss Jones acidly, "while this man was being murdered?"

"I walked down the road a way," said Somers. "Holy cats, were we having another murder? We must have a maniac here! Who'd want—"

"If you'd been attending to your duty, this could not have happened," Miss Jones snapped. "Unless you are guilty yourself."

"What duty" Somers grew angry. "Who's got a duty now? I knew this guy could not get away, and, if he did, where would he go?"

"Well, you can see where he might have gone," said Miss Jones tartly. "Help me get him into the living room now."

Bending over Stutter, she spoke distinctly, looking into his terror-stricken eyes.

"Who?" she asked.

Stutter shook his head. "I di-didn't see a-anyone," he gasped. "I w-was a-asleep, and they m-must have reached in the w-window and g-got me."

Miss Jones nodded grimly.

"Just help me move him to a living room couch," she said again to Somers. "Tommy has one, and Stutter can have the other. He'll be safer there."

Somers stooped to help the bandit up.

"Of course," he said, "I suppose we all suspect each other."

"I suppose we do," said Miss Jones flatly.

The criminal was swearing Miss Jones out. She knew this vaguely, through her partial stupor, as the night wore on. From her chair in the bedroom, she could see Tommy Orcher asleep on one living-room couch, and Stutter on the other. Her head nodded, and she jerked it erect, then moistened her lips from a glass of water on a near-by table.

It was two-thirty by her wrist watch —It was three — Three-thirty. The house was quiet. But at four, there was a resounding crash of thunder, accompanied by a blinding flash of lightning, and the heavens opened to deluge the suffering mountain with the blessed rain!

And Tulsa Jones knew that she was in immediate danger of her life. For the thing the murderer had known was coming had come. The seige by fire was over, and life would go on. But Miss Tulsa Jones must not go on!

Mrs. Jenkins, awakened by the storm, lumbered out of bed, and left the room to go to see how her husband was. Miss Jones sat stiffly still, clutching her gun.

There was almost instant relief of the terrific heat, but the storm was a savage rescuer. It blew a mighty gale. It flung down a terrific torrent of water. There was blinding lighning, and a constant roar of thunder.

The bedroom looked dully familiar to Miss Jones as she glanced about it. The cots, the old shaky table, the chairs, the suitcases, and on the floor beside her, Mrs. Jenkins' red dressing gown flung over a stool.

No! There was no stool! There was nothing for Mrs. Jenkins' dressing gown to be thrown over — nothing at all that woud make a bulge! It moved! There was something alive beneath that red garment—

Miss Jones leaped up, retreated from that moving garment. Ike's gun in her almost paralyzed fingers. The thing plunged at her, and, as a steel-like grip closed about her thin neck, she fired — once!

Doctor Strand, on guard with May in Mr. Jenkins' room, seized her arm.

"What's that?" he cried.

"A shot!"

They dashed out through the living room toward the women's bedroom.

Jim Somers, however, was ahead of everyone. It was he who dragged the murderer's desperate grip from Miss Jones' throat, then floored the fiend.

Fastest Lens In World Completed

ROCHESTER — Believed by its makers to be the fastest in the world, completed taking pictures of light rays which left distant stars before dinosaurs trod the earth.

The Bausch and Lomb Optical Co. announced completion of tests of the new lens by Dr. M. L. Humason at the Mt. Wilson observatory.

In conjunction with the 100-inch reflector at Mt. Wilson, the largest existing telescope, the new lens has photographed spectra ofa nebulae 30,000 times fainter than the faintest star visible to the unaided eye.

Recent data has placed these nebulae at an estimated distance of eighty million light years from the earth, Dr. Humason said.

The lens, designed by Dr. Wilbur B. Rayton, head of the company's scientific bureau, is described as six and one half times faster than the fastest "candid camera," with the F. 1.5 lens. The speed of the new lens is F. 0.59.

Want To Be First Woman River Pilot

Gabrielle Lemay and Laura Archer Both Want to be Canada's Leading Female Navigator

QUEBEC.—Two girls with but a single thought are Gabrielle Lemay, 20, of the tiny south shore village of St. Jean Deschaillons, and Laura Archer, 19, of Bracebridge, Ont.—they both want to be Canada's first woman river pilot.

Miss Lemay first mate on her father's oil-carrying, motor-driven vessel Adelphie, will attend a marine school at the close of navigation next fall, preparatory to applying for a master's certificate.

Veteran river men down this way say she has shown rare navigating ability at the wheel of the Adelphie on its journeys between Quebec and Montreal. Capt. Alphonse Halle, director of the marine school here, expressed the opinion she will complete her course and be in position for a master's papers before next Christmas.

Rival for the honors, Miss Archer, played a heroine's role last Sunday when she safely beached her father's vessel, The Mildred, after it struck a rock in Lake Muskoka.

The vessel sprung a bad leak and while her father, Capt. C. W. Archer, and members of the crew worked to block the hole in the hull, Miss Archer steered the craft ashore, beaching it without further damage. No crew member or any of the 21 passengers aboard were injured in the beaching.

Shows Youth Is Temperate

New York Survey Reveals That Young People Drink "Very Little"

ALBANY, — New York young people "drink very little," but 87 per cent of college youth drinks occasionally, according to a survey report by Mrs. John S. Sheppard, New York City, member of the New York State liquor Authority.

A full summary of a study made by Dr. Paul Studenski, New York University economic professor, from which the conclusion was taken, was released yesterday.

The study also found that the New York young folk disapprove of "excessive" use of alcohol and approve of public liquor control.

Based on questionnaires answered by college students, frequenters of settlement houses, and groups of "white collar" workers, all between 18 and 25 years old, the survey declared that "the great majority of people in those segments of youth drink very little."

It was also found that "they disapprove both occasional excessive drinking and of so-called steady drinking; that they make sharp distinctions between so-called social drinking at home or at parties, which is relatively innocent, and drinking at a bar which has more serious implications."

Approval of "certain reasonable controls by public authorities of the consumption of liquor generally and of that by young people especially," also was reported.

Nazi Enemies Forbidden To Drive in Germany

BERLIN—"Enemies of the State" are barred from driving automobiles, the Prussian Supreme Court ruled last week. The judgment confirmed a decision of Nazi police, who refuse to grant a driver's license to a German who had once been sentenced for "perfidious attacks against the State."

Scotsman Gives Recipe for Living

Advises to Use Oatmeal Brose To Meet the Rising Cost of Living

LONDON, — Frederick Alexander Macquisten, Member of Parliament from the Scottish Highlands, has a good Scot's way to meet the rising cost of living.

It is oatmeal brose.

Not porridge. For porridge is a "nasty English dish."

And in the words of Macquisten himself, this is the proper way to make brose:

"You get a cupful of pinhead oatmeal — good sized oatmeal — and put into it a lump of butter about as big as a walnut, with pepper, salt and also some water — not boiling, though it may be hot, and stir it up. You will have the finest meal you could wish for, with a cup of good fresh milk. If you take that three times a day you will never be hungry, and you will be in splendid health."

Nourishing, too.

"I remember that in Argyll," Macquisten told fellow members of the House of Commons, "there was a father and ten sons who were the most magnificent specimens of humanity one could imagine. The old man complained to his laird about the state of the road leading up to his farm and said his cart had sunk in it up to the axles.

"The laird, who was accustomed to the quarter deck said: 'It must have been damned bad,' and the old man's reply was: 'Yes, Admiral, it was so bad that when I took out the horse I could hardly pull the cart out myself.'

"Men like that were bred on oatmeal brose — not boiled oatmeal or scalded oatmeal, because if you boil oatmeal or even put boiling water on it you kill the meal and it has no nourishment. These men had the real brose, and they had herrings and potatoes and good fresh milk such as you cannot buy in our town today, and they were giants."

German Housewives Must Save Garbage

Needed for Pigs; Economy Also In Use of Paper

BERLIN— Berlin housewives have been officially warned that they are liable to criminal prosecution if they fail to deliver to the party social welfare organization any garbage that can be used as fodder for pigs.

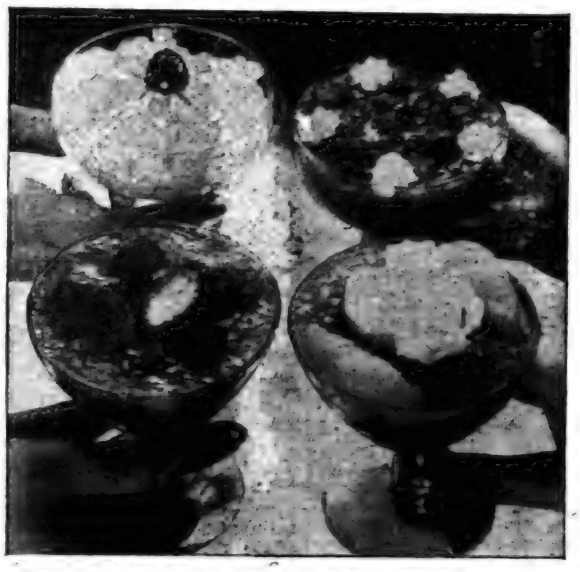
The printed proclamation posted in apartment houses by the party headquarters for the city says that many housewives are still throwing away gabage which could be fed to pigs. In this way part of the food policy of the four-year plan is being hindered, the proclamation goes on. One guilty of this conduct, it adds, "damages a national asset and makes himself or herself punishable by law."

The proclamation ends with a strong appeal to all housewives to deliver their garbage to the party every day without fail.

The Nazi conservation policy went forward in another sector of national economy—paper, of which there is a shortage. Dr. Wilhelm Frick, minister of the interior, orders that henceforth, in order to save paper used in official business, all typewriting in the ministry must be single spaced, margins must be reduced from four to two centimeters, and both sides of every sheet of paper must be used.

Members of the advisory council of the paper processing and printing industries, sitting in Berlin, were informed at the same time that the quality of certain brands of paper will be lowered, further limitations adopted packing and additional savings made by changes in schoolbooks, postcards and other products.

Suing to Curb Tunnel Blasts Under Homes



NEW YORK—Supreme Court Jus-Raymond E. Aldrich of White Plains, said he thought that residents in the fashionable Lawrence Park West section of Yonkers were entitled to some sleep even if the city is hastening to complete the Delaware River water tunnel 150 feet under their homes. Nevertheless, he reserved decision on two suits for temporary injunctions to force the contractors to cut down on their dynamiting.

Variety is the Spice of Tapioca Desserts

How often, as meal times draw near, do you wonder rather desperately what you are going to serve for dessert Here are a few tricks to the dessert trade which will save you a lot of worry and work when that problem comes up again and the results will delight your family.

Quick-cooking Tapioca Cream is the basis of seven different and tasty deaserts, all of them practical, delicious and very economical too. This cream requires only five minutes to cook after the liquid scalds which is a definite improvement on the old kind of tapioca which took at least fifteen minutes to cook. It saves time and saves dishes and gives you a tapioca pudding with a new delicacy of texture.

Quick-cooking tapioca cream contains so many food essentials that it suggests planning the meal backwards—merely supplementing the dessert with a few simple dishes and a beverage. It contains eggs and milk, fresh fruit and energy-giving tapioca, all of which go a long way towards meeting the family's daily food needs. Then all these good things are offered in a fluffy, creamy dessert, they banish all thought of duty and are eagerly eaten up.

Here is the recipe for the Tapioca Cream.

Quick Cooking Tapioca Cream

One third cup quick-cooking tapioca
Half cup sugar
Quarter teaspoon salt
1 or 2 egg yolks
4 cups milk
1 or 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1 teaspoon flavouring

Combine quick-cooking tapioca, sugar, salt, egg yolk, and milk in top of double boiler and stir enough to break egg yolk. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 5 to 7 minutes), and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from boiling water. Fold a small amount into egg white; add to remaining tapioca mixture and blend. Cool, mixture thickens as it cools. When slightly cool, add flavouring; chill. Serve in sherbet glasses.

Illustrated here are four desserts that can be made and even more variations can be turned out by the imaginative housewife. Once you have the basis, there are all kinds of fruits and sauces which can be added to the cream or poured over to make a novel dessert.

Upper left shows a plain tapioca cream dessert with a maraschino cherry to add a bright bit of colour. Lower left shows what can be done by the addition of fresh fruit. Add crushed berries to the cream and leave a few whole ones with which to garnish the top. In the upper right corner is a dessert which will appeal particularly to the juvenile members of the family. It is Tapioca Cream with chocolate sauce poured over and garnished with fluffs of whipped cream. In the lower right is Tapioca Cream garnished with fresh or canned peach halves and topped with whipped cream.

This is an all year round dessert because you can use either canned or fresh fruits and vary the garnish according to the season.

Parliament Has Quota Lunatics and Donkeys

OXFORD — If Parliament were fully representative of the community, it would have as members one or two criminals, a few lunatics, some hefty children and in true democracy, an elderly donkey, said Miss Margery Fry, speaking at the summer school of the Howard League for Penal Reform. The next speaker, George Benson, Labor member of Parliament for Chesterfield, retorted: "I can assure Miss Fry that Parliament is fully representative, and our democratic system is far more perfect than she seems to realize. We have criminals, lunatics, children, and even donkeys in the House of Commons."

Stop Reckless Driving!

If you drive recklessly and have not made up your mind to stop it, you are going to find yourself in serious trouble — soon! The Department of Highways is determined to put reckless drivers off the road and keep them off. If you need your car in business, stop and think for a minute what would happen if you had your driving license cancelled. You might lose your job. But what is your job compared to the death, crippling, or injuring of a good citizen!

Reckless drivers are criminals going along our highways breaking laws, maiming and killing defenseless people. Our laws are adequate and fair. Obey them and you will keep out of trouble; break them and take the consequences.

You cannot say you have not been warned. Stop speeding! Stop cutting in! Stop passing on hills. Stop taking chances of any kind. If you must drive slower than the average traffic, keep well to the right side of the highway or use the side roads. Do not block other traffic.

ONTARIO MOTORISTS WILL CO-OPERATE

to put reckless drivers where they belong. Here is what to do. When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders.

THE OPEN COLUMN

After listening to Mr. Rowe and Mr. Hepburn, we have just about come to the conclusion that the ideal form of government for Canada would be a dictatorship. The Henry Government left Mr. Rowe an extremely unpleasant legacy, in the form of those much-discussed Hydro contracts, and we greatly miss our guess if Mr. Rowe, under his present political policy, is given a majority of members in the next Legislature. In fact, sad though it makes us to admit it, on account of our Conservative ancestry, we doubt if Mr. Rowe will even have a very formidable Opposition at his command.

Then, we have listened to Mr. Hepburn, and, if all he says is true, we believe that he has done more, whether the right things were done or not, in his term of office, than either of the two preceding Provincial administrations. If the Hydro contracts were as nefarious as he claimed, then we believe that he was justified in cancelling them, or, at any rate, was no more culpable in cancelling them than were the men who made them.

But the chief point of our argument is that the public will, in a large measure, be given the legislation it wants by either Mr. Rowe or Mr. Hepburn, and that the legislation the public wants is not necessarily going to be good for it.

One of the big election gifts to the county of Peel, this time, is a million and a half dollar hospital for tubercular mental cases. We pride ourselves on our democracy and our humanity, and build a huge hospital for the housing of unfortunate creatures who were once human to prove our humanity.

Under a rigid dictatorship bent on bettering the race and making permanent improvements in Canadian conditions, these unfortunates would be examined, and, if there was no hope of their recovery of health and sanity, they would be painlessly removed from society.

Yet no political party dares sponsor even as drastic a measure as sterilization for the safeguarding of social stability in the Dominion. A platform which included even the hint of sterilization, let alone the removal of the unfit, would be too risky, would have too little popularity, to appeal to any political party seeking favors at the hands of the voters. Yet the need of some such measures, particularly of sterilization of the mentally unfit, has been trumpeted across the Dominion for several years.

There has been, recently, a terrible increase in the number of persons confined to asylums and mental institutions, and an equally alarming increase in the procreation of the mentally unfit. The lower types of our population, unfortunately, raise larger families than the more intelligent. Yet, should anyone raise the proposal that these unfortunates should be denied the right to have families, immediately cheap political feeling would be raised in their defense, "because they love their children as much as we do". Perhaps they do, but they, it must be pointed out, cannot afford to keep their children, and must, in too many instances turn to the public purse for support.

Barns Burnt

Friday evening, shortly after supper the barns on the farm of Mr. William J. Steed, 1st Line West of Britannia caught on fire from spontaneous combustion and were totally destroyed, along with nearly all the season's crop, and about 20 pigs. There was some insurance. Cooksville Fire Brigade responded to the call but could not render assistance as the flames had gained too much headway The house was never in danger as the night was calm. It will be a heavy loss to Mr. Steed

Hundreds of people came to see the fire, some from many miles away as the reflection could be seen for quite a distance

Passing of Mrs. Chester

This morning, Sept. 2nd, Mrs. Mary A. Chester, one of our oldest citizens, passed away. Had she lived until Sept. 15 she would have been 91. She had a rugged constitution and her last sickness was of short duration. She was born at Burnhamthorpe and spent most of her life in Toronto Township, and the last 29 years in Streetsville. Her husband, Isaac G. Chester, died 31 years ago. She is survived by one son, Bert, Streetsville, and one daughter, Mrs. Philip LeMaistre of Montreal, both of whom were with her at the last. Deceased was the younest child of Mr. and Mrs. John Foster, who came from Yorkshire in 1828, and was the last member of the family

The funeral will take place on Saturday, with service at Trinity Anglican Church, at 2.30 p. m., which church she attended for over 40 years. Interment will be made in Britannia Cemetery.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The last meeting was held at the home of Mrs. C. May.

A donation will be sent to Peel Memorial Hospital to pay for a bed

A corn roast was held at Mrs. H Beattie's on Wed. Sept. 1st

Mrs. Lee and Miss Dora McCarron won prizes for contests

Next meeting will be the annual meeting. It will be held at Mrs H. Campbell's on Sept. 15

Our Premier, Mr. Hepburn, is the wittiest man! According to reports of one of his most recent addresses, he is ready to test the validity of the Canada Temperance Act, if any district in which the Act is operative, such, for instance, as the county of Peel, will only ask him to do so. Now why couldn't he have thought of that when he was in Brampton, a week or so ago?

Somehow, we cannot imagine Mr. Hepburn testing the validity of the Canada Temperance Act as applied to Peel. Hon. Duncan Marshall, canny Scot that he is, apparently believes that there is a majority of feeling against the opening of beverage rooms in Peel County, although some of the hotel-keepers of the county are desperately displeased that they have not been given the privilege of dispensing malt beverages containing nine or more per cent alcohol. So Mr. Hepburn disregarded the Canada Temperance Act in his address at Brampton, although he will, of course, be willing to put the matter to a test if a representation of the county citizens ask him to do so. We wonder just what majority of voters would be needed to bring about such a test in Peel, and whether the test would have to be made over the politically dead body of Mr. Marshall, who prides himself on his teetotalism.

The ludicruous side of the whole thing, however, is that, according to usual legal procedure, the Canada Temperance Act has no force in Peel, and the southern portion of the county, at any rate, should be in a position to slake its thirst, for Judge Trevor H. Grout ruled that the Liquor Control Act was in force in Peel, when a gentleman made a more or less private test of the Canada Temperance Act several months ago, and, to the best of our knowledge, Judge Grout's decision has never been reversed. Therefore, if the Liquor Control Act is in force in Peel, hotels located in municipalities where there is no local option should be given the opportunity to compete with other hotels where beer may be obtained.

We would like Mr. Marshall, if he ever finds time, to explain whether the refusal of hotel licenses in Peel was due to the fact that he personally saw to it that no such licenses were issued, lest the introduction of beer to this county might harm his political prestige. Probably this is not the case, but if it is not, it would be very nice of Mr. Marshall to give the exact reasons why these licenses are not issued. Not that we have any personal interest in the question. We don't give a hoot. We can take our ale, or do without it. We would just like to know, that's all.

Early History Halton County

By SANDY

The late John White, M.P. for Halton County, started the first private race track in Canada, many times being winner of the Queen's guineas.

Few men had as prominent a part in the building of the political, business and sporting activities of a new country as the late John White had.

Born at Omagh, Ireland, in 1811, he came to Canada in 1823. He at once engaged actively in the lumber trade. Halton had some of the finest pine on the continent and he had mills at Bronte, Acton, Nassegaweya, later having extensive mills in Manitoulin, and also in the State of Michigan. His operations along these lines were among the largest of the time. Being a great horse lover, he, together with his brother, James White, imported a string of thoroughbred horses from Tennessee and on the Bronte farm established the first private racetrack in Canada. The track was a splendid one and was thoroughly equipped with stables and jockeys to accommodate the sixty horses that were kept in constant training.

This stable became famous for winning the Queen's guineas, Mr. White having had the honor of leading in more winners than any other stable until 1891. One of the winners of the guineas, "Yellow Rose", had the proud distinction of having thirteen colts, who all won the guineas.

In 1876 Mr. White exhibited "Terror", a most beautiful horse, who had won the famous race at the Woodbine the former year, at the Centennial, and winning the Silver Medal as the finest thoroughbred horse at the World's Fair. Of all the White horses, "Terror" was probably the favourite, he becoming a famous sire of racers, the candidates for the guineas for years.

Mr. White owned and operated seven farms in differtn parts of Halton County.

While he specialized in race horses he also imported a large number of registered shorthorn cattle from Great Britain, one of his farms being called "White's Paradise" on account of every animal being pure bred and of the very highest quality. In this way the quality of the stock in Halton was much improved, and great good done to the farming industry. It was, however, as a politician that Mr. White was best known. In the stormy days of 1827, he was an oustpoken enemy of the "Family Compact" and a warm supporter of Wm. Lyon McKenzie, in fact that great patriot was for a time secreted in the Devil's Cave, a cave on the White Bronte farm, while he was being searched for by the soldiers of the King. Being thoroughly posted on public questions, an able and fearless public speaker, he was asked to contest the County as Reform candidate. In 1851 he defeated Dr. Hamilton, and sat in Parliament until 1854, when he was defeated by Col. R. K. Chisholm by 300 votes. In 1857 Mr. White and Col. Chisholm again tried conclusions, Mr. White winning by 520. In 1861 he beat Finlay McCallum by 331. In 1863 he defeated ex-sheriff Levi Wilson by 831. In 1867 the first election for the House of Commons, Mr. White was again opposed by Col. Chisholm and, after a most strenuous election, was elected by 137.

In 1872 Mr. White was opposed by Sheriff McKindsey, and was elected by 135. In 1873 the Government of Sir John A. MacDonald was defeated and the new Premier, Hon. Alexander McKenzie appealed to the people in 1874. D. B. Chisholm, a young lawyer ran as an Independent and defeated Mr. White by 23.

This was the first time politics and temperance got mixed up in an election in Halton. Mr. Chisholm was a temperance man and on every bill board, in stores and even in hotels was posted in large letters "Vote for D. B. Chisholm, the Independent Temperance Candidate and save the boys from a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's hell."

The good old temperance people could not resist this appeal to save their boys. It was marvelous the number of temperance advocates this election brought forth, men who never had a good word to say for temperance, suddenly became temperance workers. The old reformers, who were always temperance workers, were speechless before all the arguments that were put forth and joined forces with these earnest workers. This political temperance victory was celebrated in Oakville by roasting a sixteen-hundred pound ox. It was prepared for consumption by hanging it on an iron pole, a number of firemen were kept busy piling pine stumps and store boxes on the fire under this huge animal to have it properly cooked. Some of it was overdone and some of it was rather rare. Many waiters were employed cutting bread and meat for the great multitude of men who were partakers of this great feast. And although this was really a temperance victory, I venture to say there never were more drunken men before or since in Oakville, at that free feast. And this was the last that was heard of temperance during that session of parliament. Mr. White was never again a candidate although he was an acceptable and powerful campaign speaker. Old-time Reformers claimed that one of the greatest mistakes ever made by Hon. Alexander Mackenzie was in not appointing Mr. White to the Senate or making him Lieutenant-Governor. He, for many years, had been Liberal Whip and during his time was looked on as one of the most able and aggressive debators in parliament. In 1853, when Halton became a separate County, as at present constituted, a County Capital had to be selected.

The Chisholm family, his political opponents, were Oakville men, and put up a strong fight to have Oakville made County Town. The contest was a strenuous one and it was the prestige of Mr. White and his aggressive spirit that was the means of Milton being chosen. He dearly loved his adopted County and did much to benefit the people of Halton.

SANDY.

By MADELEINE SHARPS BUCHANAN

Three bandits seize a trans-continental bus, and force the driver to guide it up a mountainside to a lonely log shack. They want a valuable secret formula believed to be in the possession of one of the passengers, Finley Trump. Meanwhile, a raging forest fire, creeping up the mountain, traps the group. The first night one of the bandits is mysteriously strangled with his own bandana, and the next night, a second one meets the same fate. Despite the sinister situation, May Lawrence, pretty nurse, and young Dr. Nick Strand find time to become engaged. Then Finley Trump is found strangled; and Kenneth Jenkins, browbeaten little man, in attempting to find a way through the fire, is overcome. When he regains consciousness, May, who has been attending him, excitedly announces that he knows who the murderer is.

CHAPTER XII

Mrs. Jenkins stood in the middle of the living room and screamed. Tommy Archer, startled from his slumber, was dancing about in excitement.

"Gosh!" he gasped, as the prisoner was dragged into the living room. "It's Miss Bangor!"

Miss Jones felt her throat and, when she spoke, her voice cracked, but she managed to make herself understood.

"It's not—not Miss Bangor. She—it—he's a man!"

Fumbling in her bosom, she produced the newspaper clipping taken from Finley Trump's luggage.

"Here he is!" she cried triumphantly, pointing to a photograph on the clipping. "Thomas Astroft, missing San Francisco bank teller — missing with about thirty-five thousand dollars of the bank's funds! Here's all about him!"

The storm still bombarded the log house as the little group assembled in the living room to hear Astroft's brief confession. Realizing the hopelessness of his position, he was ready enough to talk.

"I worked for Finley Trump in his laboratories fifteen years ago," he began. "He was working on this new explosive then. I came along on this bus to get that formula he was taking to Washington. He fired me fifteen years ago and, so far as I know, he hadn't seen me since. He didn't recognize me, anyway, in the character of Amelia Bangor.

"I assumed that character after I took the bank cash. Thomas Astroft vanished, and Amelia Bangor came into being. At the house where I took a room, they never doubted that I was a woman.

"Then I read about this secret formula that had been perfected in old Trump's laboratories, and I figured I knew what it was. If I could get my hands on it, I had channels through which I could dispose of it outside this country. I'd have got a pretty penny for it from the parties who employed those three thugs, but I wasn't in with them, you bet. I worked alone. I had no intention of letting them get it."

"So Trump didn't recognize you?" Doyle put in.

"Not until just before he died," said Astroft. "I didn't want to kill him, but I had to when he recognized me. If he hadn't walked around at night, and caught me examining his shoes, he'd still be alive. I'd like to know where the devil he hid that formula. I went through all his stuff."

"I had it," said Dr. Strand, quietly. "I was an old friend of Trump's. I happened to be coming East at the same time and, when he told me that he feared the formula might be stolen from him, I offered to carry it for him."

There was an amazed silence.

May gave a little gasp.

"So you've got it!" snarled Astroft. "Where the devil is it?"

"In my gun," said Strand.

"Your gun!"

Strand nodded. "I had two small ones concealed under the cushion of my seat in the bus."

"Then when you gave me one — you kept the useless gun?" asked Ma "You could not have fired the one you had?"

"No," grinned Strand. "But I acquired another later on."

He turned back to Astroft. "What about little Jenkins? Did he see you with Trump? Does he know as much as Miss Lawrence suggested?"

"No—he came around the house while I was still bending over Trump, but he never even saw us in the dark. He went off down the road, like I told you, and I followed him to see what he was up to. He was evidently trying to see if there was a way out. When I lost sight of him, I came back."

"How did you succeed in strangling Ike, and later knocking me out, on the night you were drugged?" asked Strand. "And what did you have against the bandits, anyway?"

"I wasn't drugged, brother. That was camouflage. I had to kill Ike because he suspected that I was a man and had let me know it. And it was an even chance he'd told his fellow bandits. I wasn't letting them loose with that knowledge."

"You searched me pretty thoroughly when you knocked me out and dropped Mr. Jenkins' snuff on my arm," said Strand. "But the important gun was hidden in the house then."

"Oh, yes, you were all too smart for me," sneered Astroft.

"Especially Miss Jones," said Doyle, regarding the school teacher with respect. "How did you ever guess?"

"Amelia Bangor seemed a strange sort of woman to me," said Miss Jones, frowning thoughtfully. "I began to watch her out of idle curiosity. For instance, I threw her an apple yesterday, and she caught it like a man. A woman uses her hands differently.

"And then, I knew that the murderer must feel sure we'd get out of the fire—otherwise, there was no point in the murders. I thought about this for a long time. And then, I remembered Amelia Bangor's binoculars. I looked through them and saw how powerful they were. Rain was the only thing that could save us, and I wondered whether Amelia could tell, by looking through these powerful binoculars, that a storm was on the way.

"Then, when I searched Mr. Trump's belongings and found this newspaper picture of the missing bank teller, I had grown so suspicious of Amelia that I saw the likeness almost at once, despite Amelia's clever disguise. I knew then that Amelia and this bank teller were once and the same person and that he was after that formula to add to his other loot. I suppose Mr. Trump had cut the clipping out because Astroft had once worked for him."

She turned to Astroft.

"You were very stupid not to destroy that clipping if you saw it when you went through Trump's things." She paused, then said tartly, "I knew you would be coming after me next —I was waiting for you tonight. You must have crept in through the window."

"I did," said Astroft shamelessly. "I found the dressing gown right under the window. I hid under it and moved a bit at a time. I had you tracked after I settled with the crooks, I knew you'd doped it all out."

"Well," said Red Doyle, "let's rustle up some rope, Somers, and tie up this baby. I guess we'll be getting out of here in the morning."

Nick Strand led May outside.

"You had that dreadful formula all the while!" she breathed reproachfully, looking up into his eyes.

"We'll go on with it to Washington, where Trump was taking it, and then, darling"—he drew her into his arms—"we'll make tracks for the marriage-license bureau!"

May relaxed against him, drew a long happy breath.

"Yes," she whispered, and gave her lips to his.

Elegy For A River

Francis Sweeney in the New York Times

The river here is like a prisoned thing,
Boxed and bridged and hurried through the town.
Who would know these currents once could swing
In gentle eddies where the deer come down?
In this gray waste of water who can see
The hill-born streamlet, smooth for clouds to trace
Their mirrored selves? Ah, would the river could be
A brook again, with brown leaves on on its face.

Work Provided For 750 More

$300,000.00 Construction in Leamington and Delhi Districts Will Mean Employment of 2,100 Tobacco Workers.

Good news for seasonal tobacco workers and their families in the vicinity of Delhi and Leamington, Ont., is provided in an announcement this week by the Imperial Leaf Tobacco Company of Canada, Limited. New construction costing in the neighbourhood of $300,000.00, now under way at these two points, will provide work for as many as 2,100 employees, which is 750 more than formerly employed —the exact number depending upon the size of this year's tobacco crop—and will result in better working conditions and improved facilities for the handling and storage of tobacco after it is received from the growers.

A new three storey building 88' x 142' is being constructed at Delhi. It will be of reinforced concrete throughout, and the upper floor will have glass bricks in place of windows. Through their northern exposure will come an even and abundant distribution of the precious north light, so coveted by artists and all those who work in colours, to insure greater precision and uniformity in the selection of the different colours and grades of tobaccos.

Additional improvements to be incorporated in the new building include a depressed road which will allow easy handling of tobacco from the farmer's truck to the basement floor. From the basement it will be conveyed vertically to the second floor where a continuous horizontal conveyor, running all around the room, will carry bundles of tobacco to those who grade it for colour and quality. After it leaves the graders, the tobacco will be gathered on a central conveyor which will discharge on the first or middle floor. Here the tobacco, now graded, will be tied into hands and placed on sticks ready to go into the dryers.

Similar work on a smaller scale is being done at Leamington, Ontario, where alterations costing in the neighbourhood of $50,000.00 are taking place.

Chinchilla Fur Hunted As Gold

ST. LOUIS. — Five Chilean Chinchillas—rarest fur for commercial purposes—are being kept in an air-conditioned garage in a St. Louis suburb.

These rare rodents, which are sold at $3,000 a breeding pair, led their captor, Bob Urian, a seven months' chase before they were finally captured and brought here.

So susceptible are the mice-like creatures to varying climates, that success in importing them from South America has been slight. Several years ago a Californian did succeed in transporting thirty of them. From that group three or four other Chinchilla farms were started in the United States.

Harder even than transporting the delicate Chinchilla, is to catch or find the rodent.

Richer But Jobless

Because he is a cautious as well as an honest man, a resident of Southampton is worried. It seems that Mrs. Stanley Mortimer lost a $2,000 platinum and diamond ring and reported it that she might have lost it in the Southampton theatre. So Gilbert Byron, theatre manager, ordered Mr. Moynihan, the janitor, to search through the sweepings from the theatre's cleaning system. Mr. Moynihan found the ring. Mr. Byron asked him to hand it over for safe-keeping. Mr. Moynihan said he preferred to deliver the ring himself to the insurance company. The company paid Mr. Moynihan the $200 reward and then the management fired him, he said.

THE TALKER'S FRIEND

RELIEVES DRY THROAT

Woman's World

By Mair M. Morgan

A SEVENTEEN CELEBRATION

Is there a member of your household who is just turning seventeen? Perhaps it's a stalwart son who is reaching this age and making his first dates with girls or maybe a daughter who is sweet seventeen and all that goes with it.

Whichever it is and whatever the age, there will be a party to celebrate the event and no birthday party is complete without the most scrumptious cake you can possibly bake. The cake is the center-piece of a birthday party and the rest of the refreshments must take a second place.

Here is a grand cake [illegible] it's large, it looks beautiful and tastes—well, the young guests will have the right word for it—swell!

Don't limit yourself however, to just making this cake for a birthday party. There are lots of occasions this month when you can serve it even without the birthday candles. For any time and place where there are young people, this cake will prove to be a big attraction. The teen-age crowd love good food and rich, flavorsome cake with lots of chocolate icing.

And here is a tip to the teen-age girl who likes to bake the occasional cake herself. The boys will find your porch a very attractive place to spend the evenings when they know you can bake a cake like this. But don't let anyone know that it is so easy to make!

CHOCOLATE FUDGE CAKE

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg, well beaten
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
¾ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well; then chocolate and blend. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in greased pan, 8 x 8 x 2 inches, in moderate oven (325 deg. F.) about 1 hour. Spread Fudge Frosting over cake, and between layers.

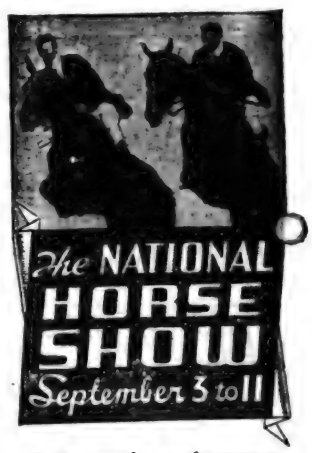
FUDGE FROSTING

3 squares unsweetened chocolate
1½ cups milk.
3 cups sugar
Dash of salt
3 tablespoons light corn syrup
3 tablespoons butter
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Add chocolate to milk and place over low flame. Cook until mixture is smooth and blended, stirring constantly. Add sugar, salt, and corn syrup; stir until sugar is dissolved and mixture boils. Continue boiling, without stirring, until a small amount of mixture forms a very soft ball in cold water (232 deg. F.). Remove from fire. Add butter and vanilla. Cool to lukewarm (110 deg. F.). Beat until of right consistency to spread. If necessary, place over hot water to keep soft while spreading.

A BREAD THAT SATISFIES ALL

Warm evenings in the city or at your summer home call for cool foods and nourishing dishes. No one want to stand over a hot stove to prepare meals and yet there have to be three meals a day.



Here is a perfect supper salad which will relieve the homemaker of tedious work and will certainly satisfy the family's demands for a cool, flavorsome and nourishing meal.

This salad adapts itself particularly well to a buffet supper when there are more guests than you can conveniently seat. Dainty nippy cheese sandwiches or minced ham sandwiches complete the course.

SPANISH JELLY SALAD

1 package lemon jelly
1 pint warm water
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
2 or 3 pimientos, finely chopped
½ cup white cabbage, shredded fine.
1 cup celery, finely chopped
½ cup pickles finely chopped

Dissolve jelly in warm water. Add vinegar and salt. Chill. Combine pimientos, cabbage, celery, and pickles. When jelly is slightly thickened, add vegetables. Turn into ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce if desired. For the center, fill with Green Vegetable Salad made by combining cooked string beans, new peas, diced cucumber and minced onion; marinate, top with French dressing.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON X
GOD REQUIRES SOCIAL JUSTICE
Leviticus 19: 1-18, 32-37.
Printed Text: Leviticus 19: 9-18, 32-37.
Golden Text—As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise—Luke 6: 31.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time—B.C. 1497.

Place — Undoubtedly these words were uttered by the Lord to Moses from the tabernacle of the congregation located not far away from Mount Sinai, where the Israelites were encamped (see Lev. 1: 1).

"And when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field, neither shalt thou gather the gleaning of thy harvest." "And thou shalt not glean thy vineyard, neither shalt thou gather the fallen fruit of thy vineyard; thou shalt leave them for the poor and for the sojourner: I am Jehovah your God." There is no book in all the world which so tenderly, and justly, and helpfully considers the condition of the poor as do both the Old and New Testaments (see also Deut. 15: 4-11; 24: 12-15; Ps. 41: 1; 72: 13; 82: 3, 4; Prov. 28: 3, 8, 11, 15; Isa. 11: 4; Matt. 11: 5; Luke 14: 13; 18: 22).

"Ye shall not steal." (See Ex. 20: 15; 21: 16; 22: 1; Deut. 5. 19; 24: 7; Prov. 30: 9; Rom. 2: 21; 13: 9; Eph. 4: 28.)

"Neither shall ye deal falsely, nor lie one to another." (See Ex. 20: 16; Lev. 6: 2; Eph. 4: 25; Col. 3: 9.) Stealing is often followed by lying, because a person who will steal will attempt to cover up the theft by untruthful words.

"And ye shall not swear by my name falsely, and profane the name of thy God: I am Jehovah." This admonition corresponds with the Third Commandment.

"Thou shalt not oppress thy neighbor, nor rob him." There are so many ways of oppressing one's neighbor—by making it inconvenient for him to have packages delivered to his door because access to his home is across a piece of property that another owns; by making it so disagreeable for one's neighbor that he will be compelled to move from the community. "The wages of a hired servant shall not abide with thee all night until the morning." While the letter of this command cannot be carried out in most cases today, i.e., the payment of laborers each night, yet the spirit of it can be carried out by paying laborers at the time when an employer enters into an agreement with his employees to pay them.

"Thou shalt not curse the deaf, nor put a stumblingblock before the blind; but thou shalt fear thy God: I am Jehovah."

"Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment; thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honor the person of the mighty; but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbor." In this verse God turns our attention away from personal wrongs to official wrongs, giving a commandment intended to guard men against injustice as they stand in courts of law.

"Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer among thy people." "The original word from which 'tale-bearer' is translated, literally signifies a traitor, a peddler, and is here applied to one who travels up and down dealing in slanders and detractions, as a merchant does in wares, possessing himself of the secrets of individuals and of families, and then blazing them abroad, usually with a distortion of motives and facts."

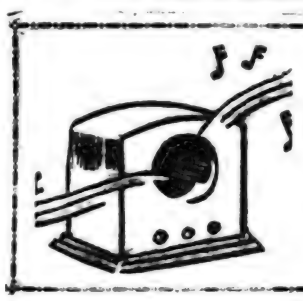
"Neither shalt thou stand against the blood of thy neighbor: I am Jehovah." This command is simply to further protect the life of our neighbors by forbidding the children of Israel to stand aside while the life of any neighbor was in danger, i.e., in drowning, in attack by robbers or wild beasts. Probably also it means that, if we have knowledge of another's crime in the shedding of the blood of some person, we are not to keep silence when possessing such knowledge.

Thou Shalt Not Hate

"Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thy heart." Of course it is in the heart where hatred lives. Hatred can quickly grow so powerful in one's life that it can lead to almost every sin imaginable, including murder. "Thou shalt surely rebuke thy neighbor." We can properly obey this command only if we rebuke others in the light of God's word, in the power of the Holy Spirit, and in love. "And not bear sin because of him." "If I do not warn my brother when the opportunity offers, I am to be blamed for want of truth and love."

"Thou shalt not take vengeance, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people; but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself; I am Jehovah." This is the first time in the Bible that the command to love one another appears. "We are told to love incompatible members of the families and kindreds with which we are associated, and perhaps they are occasions of irritation to us, thorns stabbing our most densely massed and delicate nerve-processes.

"Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head, and honor the face of the old man, and thou shalt fear thy God: I am Jehovah." "When you meet them in public places, or they come to where you are, show them reverence. Infirmity, wisdom, nay, age in itself, have each a claim on us.



"And if a stranger sojourn with thee in your land, ye shall not do him wrong."

"The stranger that sojourneth with you shall be unto you as the homeborn among you, and thou shalt love him as thyself; for ye were sojourners in the land of Egypt: I am Jehovah your God." The law commanding the Israelites to be kind to strangers is frequently repeated in the Pentateuch.

"Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment, in measures of length, of weight, or of quality." "Just balances, just weights, a just ephah, and a just hin, shall ye have." "It is of no account to keep the Sabbath — in a way—and reverence outwardly — the sanctuary, and then on the week day water milk, adulterate medicines and foods, slip the yardstick in measuring, tip the balance in weighing, and buy with one weight or measure and sell with another, and 'water' stocks, as the manner of many is. God hates, and even honest atheists despise religion of this kind. A religion which is only used on Sundays has no holiness in it."

"I am Jehovah your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt." "And ye shall observe all my statutes, and all mine ordinances, and do them: I am Jehovah." There are three fundamental reasons here given to persuade, and encourage, and even compel man to obey these and other laws which God has given: the fact that the one who gives these laws is none other than Jehovah, the omnipotent sovereign, th only true and living God; that this Supreme One beside whom there is no other, though exalted in heaven and invisible to the naked eye, is yet "our God"—ours in love, ours to guide us, ours to pray to, the God before whom, some day, we shall stand and the God who knows all that we do. Finally, to Israel, Jehovah was the God who had redeemed them from the bondage of Egypt, and, to us, the Father of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, who sent his Son that we should be redeemed from sin and the power of Satan, and that we should be brought into the very presence of God by his love and grace.

RADIO HEADLINERS OF THE WEEK

G. C. MURRAY

Radio Year at Ex.

Well folks the "Ex" is on us again and this year is going to be a banner year as far as radio is concerned. They may call it something else but to me it is going to be "Radio Year." Every possible arrangement has been made to broadcast all the important events that take place, the swim, the bands, dance orchestras, athletic events, even the good old hog is coming in for its own in the form of a broadcast from the judging pens. There will be all the new radio sets on display and this will afford all the prospective buyers a chance to judge both from looks and sound the set they wish to buy.

This girl Deanna Durbin is really going places. Born in Winnipeg 14 years ago she took part in all the amateur shows and finally was "discovered" by Eddie Cantor. She has a remarkable voice and is just as pretty as her voice is sweet. She starts her program with Cantor this coming fall, September 12th to be exact, and we will harbor a guess that she will be the hit of the program.

The Big Fight

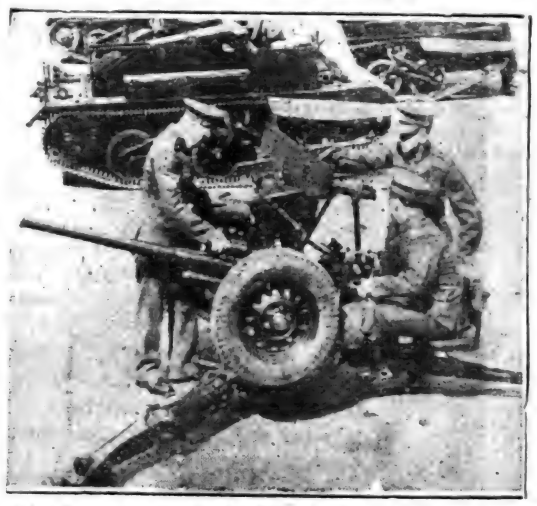
Well, all the arrangements have been made for the big fight on the 26th. Clem McCarthy is to be the official announcer at the ringside and his mile-a-minute description will surely give all the radio fans their money's worth. He is recognized as the leading sports commentator on events such as this. The fight will be broadcast via short wave to Britain, Mexico, Argentine, and all Spanish speaking countries with Alonso Noriega and Julian Muriel both handling microphones for the foreign countries.

Just about the only musical instrument in the world on which one could wash one's shirt is the washboard used by Paul Trietsch on those Station EZRA broadcasts over the networks. The gadget is 17 years old this month. It was away back in 1920 that Trietsch designed and built the freak apparatus which since has reduced his laundry bill and helped him earn his living. The musician's washboard is equipped with six auto horns pitched to different tones, one wood block, two cow bells, one studio auto horn, two pie-pan cymbals and six "stop and go" signs which light up when he plays . . When Kate Smith returns to the air on September 30th, she will have Jack Miller back again with his orchestra to supply the musical background. Like Kate, Miller was discovered by Ted Collins. Again like the famous songbird, he has never taken a music lesson. He learned music by ear and discovered his [illegible] by accident.

Eddie [illegible] to get himself elected President a short time ago has seemed to work. He is now President, not of the U.S.A. however but of the American Federation of Radio Artists. He was elected to this post a short time ago when at a meeting of the newly formed society he was chosen head of that outfit. Other officers are Lawrence Tibbett, Helen Hayes, Jascha Heifetz, Norman Field and Jimmy Wallington, vice-presidents; Lucille Wall, recording secretary, and George Heller, treasurer.

Sign Language

The radio orchestra leaders, according to observers, have a sign system all their own for use in broadcasting studios where, owing to the sensitiveness of microphones, it is impossible even to whisper instructions to members of the orchestra. The Maestro for example, stands like the Statue of Liberty, his right arm raised high with one finger pointing to the sky. That, believe it or not, tells the orchestra to start right at the beginning of the score—at the introduction. If the leader should assume a droopy posture and point a digit to the floor it means the musicians start playing right at the chorus . . . You just watch Geoffrey Waddington, Percy Faith or Jack Arthur some time. And if you should see them close a fist and shake it vigorously before the orchestra members, do not think they are planning to start a fight, they merely are telling the orchestra to "Stop where you are." This of course is only when time necessitates cutting the music immediately. If speeding up is all that's required the leader draws his finger across his throat as if to slit it or indicate that mebbe he'd slit somebody else's, not mentioning any names.



Exports from Canada to Switzerland in 1936 were 70 per cent greater than in 1935. The 1936 exports consisted of various items, wheat, cereals, and animal products predominating.

Two Beautiful New Oxford Bibles at Very Attractive Prices

Following the most distressing period of unrest the world has ever known, comes a world-wide revival of Bible reading, which must tend to ameliorate the unrestful conditions of mankind. To encourage such an end, leading newspapers throughout this country have joined forces to promote the distribution of the great Book of Books, and have adopted a plan that should readily place the Bible in the hands of every reader. Two exclusive editions have been chosen for this purpose—first the beautiful Oxford Basket Weave edition illustrated, and a new reference pocket Bible, at nominal prices. Both editions are produced by Oxford University Press—the world's largest distributors of the Bible.

This Question of the Universe

This Bible—this miraculous Bible—this Book of All Books—luminous with the light that dwelleth not on land or sea—this noblest and most beautiful Thing in all the world—what is it—whence cometh it—what means it?

It has made and unmade Nations. It has uprooted Kingdoms and Empires. It has diverted the mighty tides of History. It has crumpled ancient Faiths and Superstitions. Because of it fell Pagan Rome. The antique Systems of India and the Far East have bowed their heads to its enlightened sway.

China and the Orient now first awaken from their sleep of thrice a thousand years, and follow their sister nations of the Occident—whose feet are guided by one sole lamp—the sacred flame of which was kindled by the inspired Hebrew Prophets, and fed for all time by the Lord and Master of the Golden Rule.

Only ignorance scoffs at the Bible! The greatest rulers—the greatest statesmen—the greatest scholars—writers—orators—scientists—soldiers—and the untold millions of the Common People, whose collective genius outweighs them all—have thrilled to its Divine Wisdom.

Its lyrics of unfathomable tenderness — its orations of compelling potency — its contemplative prose of preternatural grandeur —have never been equalled. Its emotional depths and its intellectual heights make it the one and only Book of Books, vouchsafed for the guidance of mankind throughout the ages.

New Oxford Reference Bible

Printed in England in a new and beautiful clear-face type specially cut for this edition. Printed on Oxford Bible Paper. Size of page 7" x 4¾"; thickness ¾". Cover is morocco-edge, over lapping edges, round corners, gilt edges. Remarkable value at $1.24. Add 9c postage.

EVERY READER May Have a Bible

At these very special prices Offer is for a limited time and every Bible is sold with the absolute guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded. Remittance must be at par in Toronto. Be sure to include postage.

WAR

"If nations could overcome the mutual fear and distrust whose sombre shadow is now thrown over the world, and could meet with confidence and good-will to settle their possible differences, they would easily be able to establish a lasting peace."—Fridtjof Nansen.

"It should be thoroughly understood that all men have one Mind, one God and Father, one Life, Truth, and Love. Mankind will become perfect in proportion as this fact becomes apparent, war will cease and the true brotherhood of man will be established."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"War is an instrument entirely inefficient toward redressing wrong; and multiplies, instead of indemnifying losses."—Jefferson.

"There never was a good war, or a bad peace."—Franklin.

"Peace is the happy natural state of man; war is corruption and disgrace."—Thomson.

"Even toy soldiers should be abolished. We must disarm the nursery!"—Dr. Paulina Luisc.

"The old proverb that Beelzebub has to be driven out by Beelzebub is a dangerous one: the use of evil will create more evil, war more hostile feelings, and the use of force more need of force."—Fridtjof Nansn.

Snider's

Mrs. H. W. Albertson entertained at a trousseau tea on Wednesday afternoon, August 25th, for her daughter, Miss Ruby Albertson, whose marriage takes place this week. Standards of gladioli were used in decorating the living-room. In the dining-room, the table was covered with a lace cloth, and centred with basket of summer flowers and pink tapers in silver holders. Pouring tea were Mrs. John D. Orr, Bronte, and Mrs. Earl Albertson. In the evening, Mrs. J. Chamberlain, Mrs. F. Stevenson, of Oakville, and Mrs. H. Albertson, Toronto, presided. Assisting upstairs and in the tea-room were Miss Marian Chamberlain, Mrs. Orville Stout and Miss Mary Albertson.

A baptismal service was held at Wesley church on Sunday morning, when the two small sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. Shaw were christened by Rev. Mr. Lovering, the names Joseph Russell and Norman Charleston.

Until the end of September, the service at Wesley church will be held at 9.15 a.m., standard time.

Many friends of Mrs. Charles Irvine, Upper Middle Road, Trafalgar, will be calling on Saturday afternoon and evening, Sept. 5th, to wish her Many Happy Returns. Her son and daughter, Mr. Ernest and Miss Mary, are entertaining at a reception in her honor on that date.

Misses Roberta and Louise Dunn, Misses Eileen Pickering, Alma Sparling and Doreen Chamberlain enjoyed a boat trip to Niagara recently.

The engagement is announced of Reta Mary, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman E. Russell of Streetsville, to Frederick James (Roy) only son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Elderfield of Streetsville, marriage to take place on Saturday, Sept. 18, in Streetsville United Church

George and Bob Are Fond of Birds

There are birds called mosquitoes
That live on our farms
And they love to see men
With bare backs and bare arms.

And when these birds see
The cattle men come
These little birds start
A strange unmelodious hum.

When the men count the cattle
The birds get on the job
And how they do love
To jump onto Bob

When they light into George
He gets awful mad,
He says many words
We know are real bad.

The boss of the show
Says, as long as we live
These birds will take more blood
Than we are willing to give.

DEATH STALKS OUR HIGHWAYS!

If every human life in a village of 800 people in the Province of Ontario were snuffed out in one day, newspapers throughout the entire world would carry the story of the ghastly tragedy.

If one of your loved ones—or even a friend—were a victim, it would become quite a grievous, horrible, personal loss!

That is precisely what is going on in Ontario this year. Nearly 800 people will be killed on our highways. Nearly 14,000 will be injured—many of them crippled; many of them suffering almost unbearable pain. Death and untold suffering stalk our highways and this must stop!

RECKLESS DRIVERS BEWARE!

Motorists have been requested to be courteous on the road but the death toll mounts at an appalling rate. This Department, with the aid of our internationally famous police force and public-spirited citizens, intends to put reckless drivers off the road! You must stop cutting in, passing on hills and curves, crowding, racing, taking chances. Unless you have regard for the safety and convenience of other users of our highways you will soon find yourself in serious trouble.

MOTORISTS: WE ASK YOUR HELP!

When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place, and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders!

No Examinations

Dr. Duncan McArthur, Deputy Minister of Education for Ontario, says his department is ready to issue every certificate from the kindergarten to the university without any special written examinations on the part of the pupils, but the department cannot proceed to take action beyond public opinion. Dr. McArthur, who was addressing teachers, pointed out "it is your important task as teachers to convince the parents in your community that your judgment is adequate to determine without a written examination whether William or Mary should be promoted to the next grade." That is a reasonable view, for undoubtedly a pupil should be judged on the term's work rather than on examinations. The trend toward promotion on the work of the term seems wise.—Niagara Falls Review.

Know Canada First

Hon. R. B. Bennett urges young Canada to become familiar with the history of our country. That's good advice, and it wouldn't hurt a few of the older folks, some of whom see goodness everywhere else but in their own country.—Guelph Mercury.

Pays Heavy Price

An accident victim who had his leg broken in three places is shortly to be released from Goderich hospital after having been a patient there since last Labor Day. Nearly a year in hospital is a heavy price to pay for someone's carelessness at the wheel of a car.—Ottawa Journal.

Men Drivers Better

From Washington comes word that tests in every state reveal that men excel women in the driving of autos. The reports show that the males of the species generally possess better vision, are not so easily blinded by the glare of other lights, hear better, park better and concentrate more closely on the wheel. To offset this list, women see better from the corner of the eye, distinguish the color of traffic lights more quickly and drive more slowly. Of course only mere men were at the head of the investigation.—Brantford Expositor.

A Real Horror Campaign

Commenting on the Ontario Highways Department's "horror campaign," Sault Star suggests printing the pictures of drivers in the cells. "A century or so ago," it says, "it was the custom to leave the bodies of those who had been executed hanging on the gibbet as a warning to other criminals. Why not adopt that idea and show pictures of reckless drivers serving jail sentences? Or drive them along the streets in a case mounted on a truck? That would be a real horror campaign."

Which is not a bad idea. Horror is abstract; fear of publicity is concrete.—Owen Sound Sun-Times.

Character-Building In Children

It is said that Windsor's juvenile delinquency has dropped 23 per cent. since the city opened its summer program of playground activities. This supports the theory that if children are given something to do which is healthy and character building, there is less chance of them getting into trouble.—Chatham News.

The Fertile North

Lord Tweedsmuir saw wheat and vegetables growing on a farm 950 miles northwest of Edmonton. Even melons were grown there last year. Doesn't this give us a new idea of Canada?—Winnipeg Free Press.

THE EMPIRE

The North-West Frontier

The Frontier is still the Achilles' heel of India. A quarter of a million of the finest fighting men in Asia wait for the day when Allah shall deliver Hindu into their hands; behind them and ready to follow them stand half a million of their own breed under the absolute Amir. So long as communalism divides the people of India they cannot hope to stand up unaided against invasion through the passes of the North-West; the ultimate responsibility for holding this great Imperial frontier must rest on the shoulders of the British people. The intrusion of Indian politics has introduced a new element of danger. The question must be faced afresh. One school of thought would place the tribal hinterland under a military governor, keeping frontier questions entirely outside Indian politics. There is something to be said for this view. This much is certain; if the reactions of political movements in the settled districts of the Frontier constitute a threat to the peaceful control of the border tribes, then in the interests both of India and Britain a system of control must be devised which would neutralize political influences beyond the administrative border. — Sir William Barton in The Forum (London).

Trade With New Zealand

Because of the market that exists in New Zealand for Canadian manufacturers, especially motor-vehicles, and the lack of a market in Canada for New Zealand butter, it seems inevitable that the trade balance between the two countries will remain very favourable to Canada. Before the unfortunate dispute which caused Canada to be placed on the foreign tariff schedule, trade was reasonably well balanced. The loss of the butter trade due to duty and dumping charges accounts largely for increased disparity. Last year the figures of both countries rose, but the unfavourable balance was nearly two and a quarter millions. New Zealand wool now enjoys an Empire preference which formerly did not exist, and we continue to sell to Canada hides and skins and sausage casings. Further trade of any consequence has not materialized, in spite of official efforts. On the other hand, Canada has benefited by the "recovery" demand for motor-vehicles and tires, selling also paper, boots and shoes, hosiery, electrical machinery and timber.—Auckland Weekly News.

Planes May Carry 100 Passengers

Airliner of Future Pictured as Big Six-Motored Flying Wing

LOS ANGELES.—A giant six-motored flying wing with no fuselage and no tail was the picture two noted airplane designers painted of the airliner of 1947.

The "wing" will "permit pay-loads of 100 persons, tons of baggage and mail," said Donald Douglas, founder of the aircraft factory here that bears his name.

Hall L. Hibbard, chief designer for the Lockhead Corporation, elaborated:

"We have seen struts, braces and guy wires disappear. The next step is the vanishing of the fuselage itself. This, however, only will be practical in a craft weighing more than 200,000 pounds and carrying almost 100 passengers."

Both said that to-morrow's airliner would be controlled through wing-tip fins and wing ailerons.

Electric Eye Chooses Ripe Cotton Only

Invention for Automatic Plucking Selects Only Fully-Ripened Bolls

WASHINGTON.—An Illinois inventor has obtained a patent on a revolutionary cotton-picking machine which utilizes the photo-electric cell to select only fully-ripened bolls for automatic plucking.

The inventor, Charles H. White, of Moline, has already assigned his patent to a manufacturer of agricultural machinery.

By use of the photo-electric cell or "electric eye," Patent Office experts said, Mr. White has overcome a major defect of earlier cotton-picking devices—lack of selectivity.

Experts explained that in some sections of the country, cotton plants vary in height and the bolls ripen at various times. In many fields ready for the first picking the plants also carry young, tender bolls. Mr. White's machine, experts said, apparently was capable of selecting only the opened bolls, leaving the green and partly-ripened ones untouched.

Mr. White's invention involves the use of photo-electric cells which are arranged to be subjected to light reflected from the white cotton of the opened boll. When an opened boll of cotton comes within the range of the photo-electric cell the picking mechanism controlled by the "electric eye" is projected out into the plant to pick the boll. Then it recedes from the plant, dropping the picked cotton on a conveyor which carries it to bins at the rear of the harvester.

When the machine passes over unripened bolls, it remains inactive because not enough white cotton shows to activate the "electric eye."

The mechanism is mounted on a tractor, operated by a motor which is the source of current for operating the various devices.

Cross Atlantic In 11½ Hours

FOYNES, Irish Free State.—Imperial Airways flying ship Caledonia, on the return hop of another experimental commercial trans-Atlantic flight, alighted on the River Shannon at 9.15 a.m., from Botwood, Nfld.

The hop completed the third round trip of Imperial Airways planes over the northern route since survey flights were started early in July.

The Caledonia's flying time was announced as 11 hours, 33 minutes which was the fastest crossing of any of the survey trips.

Italy Wins Air Derby

LEBOURGET FIELD, Paris. — The Italian pilot Cupini crossed the finish line first in the Istres-Damascus-Paris 3,600-mile air derby at 10.08 a.m.

The winner, however, was decided on the basis of elapsed time.

The team's unofficial elapsed time was 16 hours 24 minutes.

Thirty minutes later the Italian team of Flori-Lucchini flew over the field. Their estimated elapsed time was 17 hours and 12 minutes, qualifying them for the second prize of one million francs ($37,500).

Premier Mussolini's son, Bruno, and his co-flier, Col. Attilco Biseo, landed in third place to qualify for a prize of half a million francs ($18,750).

British Destroyer Fired On

HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontier.—Loyalist coastal batteries were alleged this week to have fired on the British destroyer, Keith, as it sped down the Biscay coast on an "errand of mercy" to rescue loyalist war refugees.

Thomas Bates, British Consul at Santander, who was aboard the destroyer, said the loyalists opened fire from Santona, a fishing port thirteen miles east of Santander.

Insurgent despatches at the frontier reported that, a few hours after the attack on the Keith, Santona was captured by a rebel column of Italian "Black Arrows" advancing along the coast from Laredo.

King Farouk Engaged

CAIRO. — The engagement of Egypt's young King Farouk to Mlle. Sasi Naaz, 16-year-old daughter of Youssef Bey Zulfikar, councilor of the Alexandria Mixed Court of Appeals, was officially announced this week.

Her mother, Madame Henem Zulfikar, is lady-in-waiting to the queen mother.

The king's fiancee is the granddaughter of former Premier Mohamed Pasha Saied and is a renowned Egyptian beauty.

First Paralysis Death In Manitoba

WINNIPEG.—First death from infantile paralysis since the light outbreak began in June, was recorded here this week. Emily Jones, of Dominion City, 55 miles south of Winnipeg, died at King George Isolation Hospital here. About 30 persons are ill with the disease in Manitoba.

Strong Temblors In Alaska

FAIRBANKS, Alaska. — A strong earthquake was felt here this week but no damage was reported.

The 'quake followed several lesser shocks. The University of Alaska seismograph recorded another earthquake shortly before, the epicentre of which was given as 500 miles southwesterly in the Pacific Ocean.

Doctor Spurs Business

CALLANDER, Ont. — A sudden decrease in the number of tourists to Dafoe hospital this week caused Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe to explain that the Dionne quintuplets were still making their public appearances although visitors had been barred from inside the nursery.

The quints' physician said his ban against visitors did not apply to tourists as the babies are viewed through a glass enclosed balcony or in the playground entirely separate from the nursery and thus did not come in contact with outsiders.

Joins U.S. In Appeal

LONDON.—Great Britain, alarmed by the threat to her enormous interests in Shanghai, this week joined the United States in a formal appeal for an immediate end to the Sino-Japanese warfare.

A Seven-Mile Jump

MOSCOW.—K. F. Kaltanoff claimed a new parachute jumping record of 11,037 metres (about 36,210 feet).

He said this bettered his old mark of 9,800 metres (about 32,150 feet), made in July.

Kaltanoff is one of the leading Soviet parachutists. The Government paper Izvestia has said some of his jumps were experiments in parachuting for possible war-time application.

Nazis Survey New Air Way

BERLIN — Lufthansa, Germany's leading aviation company, announced this week three Reich fliers in a trimotored plane flew from Kabul, Afghanistan, to Ansifan, in the southwestern extremity of Kansu Province in China, a distance of about 1,550 miles, in 11 hours.

The flight, an experimental one to discover whether it was feasible to establish an air route linking Europe to the Orient over the northern route, was held successful, inasmuch as the route taken by the German plane is about 1,240 miles shorter than the present southern airlane via Rhodes, Turkey, Baghad and Teheran.

The plane was piloted by Baron Cary von Gablenz, technical director of Lufthansa. Captain Untucht and Mechanic Kirchoff were the other members of the crew.

After an hour's stop in Ansifan, the plane hopped off for Soochom, near Shanghai, where it landed safely.

On Outstanding Events of the Week

Times Attacks Mussolini

In a speech at Palermo, Premier Mussolini of Italy issued a warning that Rome and Berlin would never permit "Bolshevism or something like that" to establish itself on the shores of the Mediterranean. The London (Eng.) Times immediately attacked Il Duce, taking it that his warning implied "exclusive Italian control" in that sea.

The editorial saw a double danger in Mussolini's statements regarding Bolshevism. This phrase, the paper said, might signify that Italy is pledged to continue military intervention in Spain, and secondly, it might imply that Italy is assuming control of the domestic policy of Mediterranean nations.

"The claim might lead her very far indeed—to Spain today, Turkey tomorrow, and no one can tell where after," the Sunday Times said.

Air Service Delayed

Unless special legislation is enacted in the U. S. Congress, another year may go by before the projected trans-Atlantic air mail and passenger service between Great Britain and the United States is inaugurated. Meantime test flights continue to be carried out from both sides of the Atlantic.

Killed In Spain

Since the Civil War in Spain began a little more than a year ago, nearly 400 British subjects, volunteer fighters on either side of the combat, have been killed. Detachments from Canada, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Poland, have also lost many men in the fray, none of them, however, sponsored officially by the countries they represent.

Tourist Boom

Reaching the proportions of a major industry, the tourist influx into Canada from the United States and other countries, is this year expected to swell Canadian coffers, public and private, by the addition of $300,000,000. During the month of August alone, nearly one million United States cars will have crossed over into Canada. The present year's tourist business may come close to the high mark set in the peak year of 1930 when 21,000,000 visitors were inside our borders. Some observers say that the Dionne Quintuplets are largely responsible for the comeback, others that returning prosperity is giving new life to the tourist industry.

Rain Halts Harvest

Harvesting operations in Western Ontario have been at a standstill due to the excessive rains and crops in the fields have been seriously damaged. No bumper crop this year, either!

Prison Commission

Appointed to inquire into the administration of penal institutions in Canada, the Penitentiary Commission headed by Mr. Justice Archambault have concluded their study of prison systems on the Continent of Europe and in England. They will now shortly complete the business of investigating the home field. Trouble in a number of Canadian penal institutions, it will be remembered, led to the inquiry.

News From China

Japan's great military machine is only beginning to go into action, but already the war is spreading over half of the great country of China. The armies are striking by land, sea and air along a 1,000 mile front.

But earlier in the week, Japan got the worst of it. Japanese reinforcement troops led by suicide detachments of the "White Band of Death" were annihilated by Chinese gunfire as they attempted to land at Shanghai wharves.

War and fire continued to lay waste to Shanghai. A large section of the city containing British and Japanese-owned properties, was fired by incendiary bombs from Chinese planes. The International Settlement escaped destruction by flame but 400 persons were estimated killed and a 1,000 wounded by a heavy artillery shell that crashed into its crowded store section. The civilian death toll so far in the war is placed at 10,000.

Child Bride Quits School

Mrs. Eunice Jones, 9, of Sneedville, Tenn., Stays Home After Being Switched

SNEEDVILLE, Tenn.—A switching for "general mischievousness"—so her teacher said—was the reason Mrs. Eunice Jones, Tennessee's nine-year-old child bride, was not at her desk in the Fairmount grade school.

Eunice, who gained the spotlight last January when she and Charlie Johns, 22, were married, was a pupil at the grade school several miles from here in a remote section of Hancock County—for two days only.

Wade Ferguson, her teacher, said the child quit school after he switched her. The incident, he said, brought her lanky husband to the two-room school house where Ferguson teaches 40 children.

"Why, you can't whip another man's wife," Ferguson quoted Johns as saying when he came to protest against the punishment.

"Oh, yes, I can whip another man's wife if another man sends his wife to school to me," Ferguson said he told Johns.

Sir Robert Borden's Will

Sir Robert Borden, Canada's wartime Prime Minister, who died June 10, left an estate valued at $665,163, it was shown when application was made for probate.

The will, dated May 5, 1936, made Lady Borden chief beneficiary and listed bequests to ex-soldier and benevolent organizations in Ottawa and Halifax. The Canadian archivist was given the right to select papers and documents for permanent record.

To Preserve Niagara Beauty

WASHINGTON. — Representative Alfred F. Beiter, of Williamsville, N. Y., asked President Roosevelt this week to include an appropriation of $1,[illegible]00 in the next deficiency bill to [illegible] the United States' share of the cost of preserving the beauty of Niagara [illegible]. Beiter said such a move would be evidence of good faith and might ensure prompt action by the Canadian Government on a treaty for remedial works to correct the flow of the falls.

LONDON—The House of Lords has decided Frederick Gregory, laborer, should not pay an extra four cents a week rent. His landlords had appealed a decision of the Court of Appeal.

Traffic Violators Next To Insane

Declared Underdeveloped Nervous System and Unnatural Egotism Are Their Characteristics

DETROIT, — If you are a persistent traffic law violator, maybe you're parapsychotic. Dr. Lowell S. Selling, head of the Detroit Recorders' Court clinic, has announced discovery of a new mental disorder known as parapsychosis.

Dr. Selling described the disorder at the International Congress of Psychology, which he attended recently in Paris.

"Parapsychosis is a mental disorder due to an underveloped nervous system and lack of insight," Dr. Selling said. "It is a border-line case of insanity."

For example, the parapsychotic has strange explanations for his traffic violations and is notably lacking in insight, which causes the patient to develop an unnatural egotism, the doctor said.

Dr. Selling believed that victims could be cured, but noted that at the present time his Detroit clinic was unable to take care of the disease. He said he had found six cases of the disorder among 300 people examined in traffic clinic during the last year. All six were males, he said.

He cited the case of a parapsychotic, who felt he was privileged to park in a certain prohibited zone, although he would not park in any other restricted zone. Another victim, the doctor said, disliked his stepfather, who was a police officer. From the dislike he developed a mild hatred toward all law officers.

Lonely Valley

Blackened trunk and blackened twig, and still the living green
Comes bravely forth to hide the scars.
O Friend, when you have seen
The naked hillside, bare and gray, where once the lilac bloomed,
Will you not give a thought to these your careless act has doomed?
The smouldering fire you left behind that bright September day,
The match you flung so carelessly as you drove on your way,
That half-burned cigarette that fell
beside the winding road;
You bear the sin in secret—yes, but you bear a heavy load.
And yet, the stricken valley wears a trusting hopeful air,
As though it really tried to say: "Now
don't you fret and care!
This frightful thing that came to me
was never planned by you;
We'll both forget the harm they did
—but YOU be careful too!"

He Was Afraid To Cross A Street

Lost His Nerve After 12 Months' Agony

Suffering from acute rheumatism in both his knee joints — treated in hospital twice without result — so unnerved that he was afraid to cross a street—how readily every rheumatic sufferer will sympathise with this man, Read what he says:

"For 12 months, I suffered pain and misery with acute rheumatism in both my knees. Twice, I was treated in hospital—but it was no use. I could not walk up or downstairs. I was afraid to cross the street, for I had lost all confidence in myself. Fourteen days ago, I started taking Kruschen Salts, and already I am a new man. I can walk with a smart step, go up and downstairs with ease, and cross the street with complete confidence. My rheumatism is getting better every day." — D.L.

In a good many cases, rheumatism cannot resist the action of Kruschen Salts, which dissolve the painful crystals of uric acid — often the cause of those aches and pains—and assist the kidneys to eliminate this poison through the natural channels.

Starling Problem Up To Board of Health

LONDON, Ont.—Finding means to combat the starling nuisance in London was a problem for the Board of Health, City Council agreed this week after Ald. Frank Gray had called attention to a number of complaints he had received.

Alderman Gray wondered if there was anything the city could do to eliminate the nuisance.

"Send it to the Board of Health," Alderman T. W. Cop suggested.

"Let them handle it," added Alderman C. E. Killingsworth, who is a member of the board.

Alderman Ollan Towe asked for a report from the City Engineer whether the Public Utilities Commission had any money left for tree trimming. He thought such a program might work in with any move to oust the starlings.

Alderman Gray revived his suggestion of cutting off the tops of trees, but his fellow-members did not discuss the situation further. The Board of Health will be asked to consider the matter.

Sues Near-Wife For Romance Expenses

MONTREAL.—Romeo had his troubles in courting Juliet. But they were nothing compared to the woes of Elie Stasesen, who loved and lost.

Elie took his intended wife, Eleanora Dominica Zdroubou, to Bucovina, Roumania, for the marriage ceremony at her request, he claims. Now he asks $420.14 from his near-wife for expenses entailed by the journey.

Along with the action to recover cost of the trip, Elie has tied up his former sweetie's bank account here with a seizure until the merits of the case are decided.

In the main action, Elie says he courted Miss Zdroubou for three or four years and finally she agreed to marry him but stipulated the ceremony take place in Roumania.

Elie says he conceded the point and paid costs of the trip, only to be met some time after arrival with a refusal by his fiancee to go through with the marriage. Still in his bachelor state, he was forced to return to Montreal while Miss Zdroubou remained in Roumania.

Canadian Tourist Trade Increases

Incoming Rush Over Border At Fort Erie to Create All-time Record

FORT ERIE, Ont.—"We have never experienced anything like this before," Dugald H. McIntyre, director of the Ontario Tourist Bureau here, said in regard to record movement of tourists now under way at this border point.

"One noteworthy feature is hundreds of parties are crossing here on recommendation of friends who preceded them," he said. In steel centres in Ohio and Pennsylvania many firms are giving employees fortnight vacations, and large groups of them are crossing to fish in Northern Ontario. Interest in bass and pickerel fishing is especially strong. Early predictions made at this bureau that tourist traffic would exceed last year by 25 per cent. are being shattered. Movement this month is really nearer 50 per cent greater than last year."

"If provincial government continues its present re-stocking of northern streams there is no reason why next year's movement of fishermen will not exceed present record-breaking influx."

"No Matter How Thin You Slice It — It's Still Baloney"

Mr. Sopwith, in making the statement that he intended again challenging for the America's Mug — which statement can be regarded as either a threat or a promise — says that he has thoroughly enjoyed his summer on this side.

Some folks have queer ideas of what constitutes an enjoyable time, and if Sopwith takes pleasure from a protracted view of Mike Vanderbilt's rear — well, we suppose it is no particular buttons off our vest.

Maybe he is something like the slightly dizzy one who was discovered tapping himself severely on the conk with a hammer. Asked his reason, if any, for such procedure, he answered, "Gee, it feels so good when I leave off doing it."

The biggest news that has come out of wrestling circles in some time is the return of Jimmy Londos to the canvas-crashing wars. If anybody can supply the much-needed blood transfusion to the very sick wrestling game, it is the Golden Greek.

Personally, we could never get very hot about Mr. Londos, as he did considerably too much posing to suit our depraved tastes. If we have to look at living statuary we prefer it of the opposite sex.

But Jimmy could really wrestle. In spite of the widely-held belief that he was only kept on top because of his drawing powers at the box office, when it came to a real "shooting match," he was among the first four or five.

And the public went for him in a large manner, and he could pack a joint with a bout which — if it had been anybody else but Londos — would have been playing to empty pews.

He was — and doubtless still is — an excellent business man too, and although most wrestlers are fairly thrifty, Londos was in a class by himself at surrounding every available dollar and hanging on to it after surrounded.

While he was taking his preliminary bows so gracefully, the smart Greek could "count the house" to within a very small margin of exactly how much was in the till — and he got his proper cut down to the very last nickel.

In a game famous for its double-crossing and chiselling — all in a spirit of good clean fun, of course — Londos more than held his own, and the number of promoters who ever out-smarted him could probably be counted on the toes of Long John Silver's timber peg.

In fact, from what we have heard of his shrewdness in business matters, he reminds us of the one about the two Scots named McKenzie and Kerr. The former ran a well stocked trading post up in the wilds somewheres, and one day in walks Mr. Kerr.

His canoe had been upset in a nearby rapids and he had lost practically everything he possessed. All he owned, when he arrived at McKenzie's store was a sheath knife.

After Kerr had been dried out and fed — the two of them got to trading. They bargained all through the night and on into the dawn.

When daylight arrived, it found McKenzie owning the sheath knife — while Kerr was the possessor of the entire trading post — stock, shack and everything. Later somebody asked McKenzie just what had happened.

With a slightly dazed expression still on his pan, Mac replied — "Yon was a very intelligent pairson."

And that just about describes Jimmy Londos — a very intelligent pairson; and it wouldn't surprise us too much to see him hailed, in the near future, as once more Chompeen of the World.

Foundation Complete For Largest Telescope

MT. PELOMAR, Calif. — A squat mass of steel 135 feet wide huddles atop Mt. Palomar waiting to receive a 200-inch glass eye that will reveal to man more than eight times as much of the universe as he has ever seen before.

It is the turntable foundation for what is to be the world's greatest telescope. For 14 months scientists at the California Institute of Technology at Pasadena have been grinding the great reflecting mirror—200 inches, or almost 17 feet, wide—that will rest in the bottom of a 60-foot tube to be mounted on the steel base.

The tube is nearing completion in Philadelphia and soon will be shipped here.

California technicians are now boring 36 holes in the bottom of the mirror. Base supports will fit into the holes.

When that task is finished, they will start the tedious process of making the flat surface concave so that it will centre its view of the heavens into the telescope's eyepiece. Seven smaller mirrors will aid this process.

The large mirror is expected to be finished and installed in 1939. It will weigh 20 tons.

The mirror, tube—all material used in the observatory—must be hauled by truck up this 5,600-foot mountain, 50 miles northeast of San Diego and 150 miles south of Pasadena.

Cattle Exports To U.S. Total 109,919 Head

WASHINGTON. — The Commissioner of United States Customs announced this week cattle imports from Canada and Mexico from Jan. 1 to July 31 totalled 134,097 head, or 86.1 per cent. of the total allowance quota provision of the Canadian trade agreement. Cattle weighing 700 lbs. or more imported from Canada totalled 109,919 head. Imports from Mexico, which comes under the Canadian agreement, were 24,178 head.

THE OPEN COLUMN

The idea of township school boards has become increasingly popular during the past few years. Prominent educationalists are beginning to realize that a central administration for each township would render much more efficient service than the present localized trustee boards. The prime motive in such a change is to give the teacher "a square deal". Unfortunately, since the foundation of our present sytem of education, incompetent trustees have been chosen to fulfil the all-important duty of selecting competent teachers. A large percentage of the trustees on rural boards left school before reaching the third grade. This does not mean that they are not intelligent individuals. The majority of them have achieved outstanding succes jn their chosen occupation. The fact remains, however, that they are wholly incapable of selecting teachers, if they haven't an understanding of what is being taught.

A certain teacher remarked to me not so long ago that "he couldn't get down to the level of his school board to argue with them"—he should have added "on educational matters." No doubt the school master in question would enjoy a very interesting conversation. discussing some topic on which both parties were well versed. On the other hand, how could this particular board pass conclusive judgment on the teacher without knowledge of his methods, or of the material which he presented to his class from day to day. This forms the basis of the gross injustice accorded the teacher.

Since our present system is unsatisfactory, how could a township board remedy the situation? In the first place, the board would be a select group of men, representative of each section in the township. These individuals could be selected by the eligible voters of each school section in conjunction with the annual municipal poll. Before applying for a position on the board, each member should be required to exhibit a certain amount of knowledge on details relating to education. A reasonable, stipulated amount could be paid each member as an added inducement to increase their knowledge, after accepting the position. This, of course, is only a suggestion and might be subjected to much adverse criticism by the smaller school sections, who already consider their taxation much too high. The amount, which each section would pay, naturally, would be directly proportional to the assessment of that particular section.

A further objection, which has been raised in opposition to township boards, is the loss of local control, especially with regards to expenditures. A more efficient administration would more than counter-balance this loss. Localized control could still be maintained by having equal representation from all sections.

No individual could hope to have a very exact knowledge of the manufacturing process of any article, or could hope to get a true insight of any business, without personal experience. Neither can our present sample of trustees capably select or judge a teacher without a detailed understanding of modernized methods. The sooner the ratepayer realizes that education no longer consists merely of 'readin', 'writin' and 'rithmetic, but is a scientific, complex, profession, the sooner will they demand and obtain township school administration.

ROWE'S VIEW IS SENSIBLE ONE

From the Ottawa Citizen (Ind.).

In a nutshell, Mr. Rowe's attitude towards the C.I.O. is that it may organize in Ontario so long as it observes the law and behaves itself. That is a sensible view to take, and while the Citizen is under no delusions regarding the Ontario Liberal - Conservative record in the past, it feels that Mr. Rowe's stand on labour is superior

ONTARIO

A Statement by the Ontario Department of Health on

POLIOMYELITIS

("INFANTILE PARALYSIS")

In view of the prevalence of "infantile paralysis" in Ontario at the present time, and in recognition of the deep concern felt by parents over the protection of their children, the Provincial Department of Health is issuing the following statement concerning the nature of the disease and the question of what can be done to reduce the danger of infection.

Nature of the Disease

Like measles and scarlet fever, "infantile paralysis" is a communicable or "catching" disease. Like them also, it is mainly a disease of childhood. Yet the term "infantile" is apt to be misleading. While it is true that the majority of cases occur among children under ten years of age, the disease does occur, especially in rural districts, among older children and young adults.

The term "paralysis" is likewise misleading since it conveys the impression that some loss of muscular function is characteristic of every case of the disease. This is not true. It is now known that only a small proportion of those who contract the disease actually develop paralysis.

Since the disease is not limited to infants and since paralysis does not occur in all cases the name "infantile paralysis" is now regarded as a misnomer. The correct name for the disease is "polio-myel-itis", which simply means acute inflammation ("itis") of the grey matter ("polio") of special portions of the spinal cord which control movement of the muscles. This inflammation is believed to be due to a special sort of infection which probably gains entrance to the nervous system through the upper part of the nose and throat.

Cause of the Disease

Poliomyelitis has been definitely recognized as a communicable disease since 1909 when investigators succeeded in securing from humans, ill with the disease, a minute living substance called a "virus" which was found to be capable of producing poliomyelitis in monkeys.

Much remains to be discovered about the nature of this virus but a good deal has already been learned. In size, it has been found to be less than one millicnth of an inch in diameter. The virus is present in the nervous tissue of humans who have died from the disease. It is also found in the nose and throat, not only of persons ill with the disease, but also of persons who have been in contact with the disease.

How the Disease Spreads

The exact manner in which the disease is transmitted from one person to another is not known. However, the disease does not arise spontaneously. The source of infection is a human being who is carrying the virus. Such a person need not necessarily be suffering from the disease. Yet the mere presence of the virus in the nose and throat affords ample opportunity for spread of infection. In such cases minute particles are given off by coughing, sneezing and talking. Fingers are constantly being carried to and from the mouth and nose and in this way articles, such as improperly washed eating and drinking utensils, common towels, children's toys, etc., may become contaminated.

Any set of circumstances which permits the frequent and rapid transfer of nose and throat secretions from one person to another increases the possibility of infection.

There is no evidence that flies or other insects play an important part in the spread of poliomyelitis.

Chlorination of municipal water supplies as now practised, and the proper pasteurization of milk have eliminated water and milk as possible sources of infection.

Signs and Symptoms of the Disease

The early symptoms of poliomyelitis are neither constant nor regular in their appearance, but certain of them are sufficiently suggestive to warrant the summoning of the family physician.

The onset is usually sudden, with rapidly rising TEMPERATURE, fluctuating between 101-103 degrees. HEADACHE is another common symptom. The young child is apt to appear irritable and cries easily when disturbed. The patient is usually willing to stay in bed, appears drowsy and takes little interest in his surroundings.

VOMITING is fairly characteristic. Constipation is often present. whereas diarrhoea is unusual. Food is refused.

Often the characteristic symptoms of COLD or SORE THROAT are present.

SORENESS IN THE MUSCLES of the back and STIFFNESS and pain in the joints of the arms and legs may occur.

In many cases of poliomyelitis the condition does not go beyond this stage, and terminates after four to ten days' illness.

However, in other cases, the disease proceeds into a second stage, in which the elevation of temperature and rapid pulse are accompanied by marked irritability and drowsiness. The patient becomes mentally disturbed and takes on an anxious, frightened expression. Sleep may be disturbed by twitching and the hands may shake and tremble.

The following specific signs are of particular importance:

STIFFNESS OF THE SPINE. The head may be bent on the neck but efforts to bend the neck on the shoulders cause pain and are resisted. The child is unable, while sitting up in bed, to bend his head down to touch the knees. If he bends at all, it is at the hips with the back held rigid.

PECULIAR SITTING POSTURE. When he sits up he props himself behind with extended arms supporting a tender or painful spine.

Preventive Measures

The precautionary measure of first importance is to protect the child from contact with infection. Since other human beings are the primary source of infection, then children, who are evidently much more susceptible than adults, should be protected as far as is reasonably possible from contact with people.

"Keep your child in your own yard" is a wise precaution. In crowded stores, street cars, motion picture theatres, bathing pools, picnics,—in fact, in any setting where there is a large number of people, the chances of exposure to possible infection are tremendously increased.

Of equal importance for the protection of children is the prompt calling of a physician if the child shows the indications of illness described above.

Convalescent Serum

Medical opinion is divided concerning the effectiveness of the so-called "Convalescent Serum" in poliomyelitis. In the absence of conclusive evidence, the Department is continuing to supply this serum to physicians on request. Owing to the limited supply available, its use must of necessity be limited to cases suffering an attack of the disease.

Nasal Spray

Based on the assumption that the virus enters the body through the upper part of the nose, attempts are being made to prevent its entrance by spraying the nasal passages with certain chemicals. Since this method is still entirely in the experimental stage, it is not one which can be recommended for general use.

Precautions in the Care of Those Ill

When a diagnosis of poliomyelitis has been made, the patient must be isolated for a period of at least three weeks. Since other members of the family are likely to be carriers of the virus, the protection of the community requires that they be quarantined until the danger of further spread has been eliminated. Care should be taken to see that articles which may have become contaminated by the patient are disinfected or burned. Special precautions should be taken in regard to the disposal of nasal and alimentary discharges. Those who are handling the patient should exercise special care regarding their hands and person before coming in contact with other people.

And Hepburn said:

"NO—MR. FARMER"

"YES—SIR JAMES"

What has happened to the promises Hepburn made to the farmers of Ontario before he was elected?

Hepburn Promised the Farmers:
A special session of the legislature to deal with farm relief problems immediately after the election.

What Hepburn Did:
Nothing! He said: "The farmers must stand on their own feet."

Hepburn Promised the Farmers:
Help in improving livestock, grants to help agriculture.

What Hepburn Did:
He wiped out the Farm Loan Board — stopped bonuses for pure bred sires and grants to junior judging competitions — cut off $300,000 in grants made by the previous government to aid the farmer.

Hepburn Promised the Farmers:
Wider markets and better marketing facilities.

What Hepburn Did:
He closed the marketing agencies at Montreal, Winnipeg and in the Maritimes—closed Ontario House in London, England, which had created markets thereby increasing Ontario farmers' annual income by $10,000,000.

Hepburn Promised the Farmers:
A string of cold storage warehouses across Ontario, for the benefit of the farmer.

What Hepburn Did:
Nothing!

Hepburn Promised the Farmers:
Reduced taxation.

What Hepburn Did:
He collected in taxation 80% more than was collected in the last year of the Conservative Government, of which the farmers paid their share.

What is Sauce for the Goose ... Is Sauce for the Gander

BUT—while Mr. Hepburn was saying to the farmer "you must stand on your own feet" and was cutting off $300,000 in agricultural bonuses, he was passing on a bonus to Sir James Dunn of the Algoma Steel Corporation of almost a like amount of the taxpayers' money.

Agriculture and industry are both vitally necessary to the prosperity and welfare of the Canadian people. The farmer says, however, that "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander — why take away our bonus to bonus Sir James Dunn?"

Early History Halton County

By SANDY

When in 1793 Governor Simcoe, with his company of Grenadiers cut Dundas street through the wilderness, he found his greatest engineering difficulties in the district since called Halton county. Where this great military highway crossed Sixteen-Mile Creek (three and a half miles north of Oakville) he found a gorge of surpassing beauty. It was over one hundred feet deep, with almost perpendicular sides and was one thousand feet wide. To bridge this, was beyond the engineering skill of the day, so long detours were made along the face of the banks, where a narrow roadway was dug with labor incessant from the hard red clay and stones forming the banks. Along these roads for a century and a third the travellers have clung antlike. The number of needless miles travelled and the time consumed all these years reached unbelievable figures.

At twelve-Mile Creek, three and one half miles above Bronte, (Tansley), another gorge was encountered, 95 feet deep and 542 feet wide. Here another detour was made and the creek crossed by a bridge 60 feet long. The grade here was too deep for the stage coach from Dundas to Toronto and with 25 or 30 passengers could not be hauled up the grade with four blood horses. So the government erected a wooden bridge 50-ft. high and 250-ft. long, thus reducing the hills to such an extent that the stage could make the grade and farmers' teams could haul a couple of tons up it. When, later, the municipalities had been organized, Nelson township was responsible for the bridge. It became dilapidated and was unsafe for traffic. To build another was beyond the resources of the township, so it waas abandoned and the old trail around this was taken and for over half a century the people painfully climbed the old hills. When the autos came, these hills were intolerable and many accidents occurred, and some deaths. Something had to be done. In 1918, Halton induced the government to make Dundas street a provincial road, and a high level bridge was completed in 1919. It is 542 feet long, 92 feet high and 20 feet wide.

Then looking for fresh worlds to conquer, the Halton council travelled three and a half miles eastward to the Sixteen-Mile Creek and took the biggest bridge problem ever attempted in Ontario. In 1920 the bridge being built has nine spans, eight being 105 feet long and one 66 feet long, 1930 feet in length, 115 feet high, and 20 feet wide. There were 60 men employed and it was opened for traffic that year. The company had a comfortable dining hall and sleeping quarters for the men, and labor troubles were non-existant. Down in the ravine, where the old road crossed the river, the bridge was 88 feet long and was erected in 1885, and was the first steel bridge built in the county. Dr. Buck, then reeve, did the engineering himself, and every day superintended the abutments of dressed stone, that after 35 years were as solid as ever. The bridge was the longest span in the county, 88 feet, and Dr. Buck said at the opening that after every person there was dead, this bridge would be substantial and carrying traffic. It was still strong, but had to give way to modern rush and ideas. The valley spanned by the new monster bridge has a unique history. This was one of the first spots settled in the district. A Mr. Chambers, early in the last century, built a dam in the hollow, the power being utilized to operate a saw and grist mill. He, for a number of years, represented the old Gore district in parliament. On being defeated, he became despondent and shot himself. Now came the golden days of the valley. John Proudfoot came and everything boomed. The dam was strengthened, and the saw and grist mill were run day and night. A tannery, carding mill, stave and barrel factory, distillery, where whisky, "the pure quill", was sold at 15 cents a gallon, and a brewery was started. Stores, tailor shop, blacksmith and waggon shops, boot-making establishment were started also.

A large hotel was built with twenty bedrooms, where the stage coach passengers got splendid accommodation. There was a spacious bar-room where the questions of the day were discussed. The place was a hive of industry, teams coming with logs, wheat, wool and other commodities, others going away with lumber and flour. Bran at that time was thought to be of no value and was dumped into the river with the sawdust. This place was called Broudfoot Hollow, and while the spot where Oakville now stands was still an Indian reserve, not a tree being cut. Proudfoot Hollow was the leading place of the district. A thriving town of workers' houses arose, gardens and orchards were planted, and many hoped it would develop into a city. The Great Western Railway was built and the stage coach ran no more. Oakville had for years been sapping the Hollow's industrial strength, and business began to lag. The last building completely disappeared over a quarter of a century ago, and not one stone remains upon another of all the former buildings. Only the remnants of some former apple orchards, and here and there a struggling rose bush gives mute testimony of the home-making instinct of the people of long ago. Visitors walk over the scenes of all this former activity and view the mill-race where the waters of the river, which turned the wheels of industry once, turn them no more.

I KILLED A MAN

(From Scribner's Magazine)

In the records of the courts and insurance companies, it was pretty much the same old story. While driving home early one evening, I rounded a familiar curve and faced a pair of glaring headlights. On the right of the road, a millworker was on his way to work on the night shift. He became confused and jumped the wrong way. The impact threw me a little forward in my seat. The millworker's body slid flat on the pavement for perhaps fifty feet, rolled over, jerked, and lay still. The dinner pail he had carried under his arm rattled along the pavement for another twenty feet, then all was quiet. When we got to him, we saw there would be no hurry about taking him to the hospital. He was dead.

During the long court ordeal afterward, it was established beyond all doubt that the accident was unavoidable. I am a free man; free to lie in bed on Sunday mornings, stretching and yawning; free to eat when I am hungry and drink deep when I am thirsty; free to feel the wind and sun on my face, to know the four seasons, to love.

But I cannot forget that because of me a man will never see the white sparks from molten steel again, or smell the hot metal in the molds, or feel the satisfying tug of his muscles against a heavy crane, or peer out of a factory window into a moonlight night, or open his dinner pail with the keen appetite of a labouring man. Because of me a mother will never again hear a familiar footfall when work is done, and she will have things to explain to her babies that will break her heart.

I know all this is not my fault—a court of law has told me so—but I cannot stop thinking how different things would have been if I had started just half a minute sooner or later, or if I had been going just a little slower or faster, or if, in that split second, my skill had been just a little greater or my brakes a little better, or if I had thought in advance of all the possible circumstances that might have been waiting for me around that curve. It has been two years since it happened, yet these thoughts go round and round in my mind continually. Nothing can make me forget that I am still walking this earth, and that because of me another man is not. I cannot forget that a combination of factors—factors that could so easily have been just a little different—happened to work out with lethal precision, and I killed a man.

NOTICE TO GENERAL CONTRACTORS and HEATING, PLUMBING and ELECTRICAL CONTRACTORS

Same Couple Thrice Married and Divorced

WORCESTER, Mass.—There was quite a bit of "maybe" about Mrs. Mae M. Hall. She divorced and married the same man three times within 10 years.

Her first divorce was granted eight years ago. She remarried her former husband.

In 1931 she was divorced, and two years later Hall again "popped" the question.

Mrs. Hall says that the last time he married her for "spite" and she divorced him again.

HAVE YOU HEARD

No man is so ignorant that he doesn't know what he would do if he were in your place.

Friend—"See that fellow giving imitations over there? What does he always remind you of?"

Man—"The $10 I owe him."

A free country is one that doesn't let any political or social group have things entirely its own way.

Harris—"When the house-wreckers tore down Brown's house they found a collar button he had lost twelve years ago."

Kramer—"I'd think it would have been cheaper for him to have bought another collar button.

If you would know the value of health go try to buy yourself some.

A visitor at the insane asylum was watching one of the inmates pushing a wheelbarrow upside down.

Visitor—"That's not the way to push that thing. You've got it upside down."

Lunatic—"Oh, have I? I used to push it the other way, and they put bricks in it."

There are people in every community that would get a monopoly on air if they could.

Mrs. A.—"Jimmie has been in the third grade for two years. I wonder how he will ever get ahead?"

Mr. A.—"Don't know. If he wasn't born with one, he never will."

We'd rather listen to the story of a public hanging than hear the details of an unsuccessful speculation in real estate.

A Prayer!

"May every soul that touches mine,
Be it the slightest contact,
Get therefrom some good,
Some little grace, one kindly thought,
One aspiration yet unfelt, one bit of courage
For the darkening sky, one gleam of faith
To brace the thickening ills of life.
One glimpse of brighter sky beyond the gathering mist,
To make this life worth while,
And heaven a heritage."

Mrs. Robert Katz telephoned her husband that she would call for him at the office. Not finding him there, she looked in at the barber's shop on the floor beneath.

"Bob Katz here?" she asked.

"No, madam," replied the indignant barber. "We certainly do not bob cats here."

It is because there are so many fools in the world that the wise man gets an occasional break.

Mr. Wise was evidently not feeling in the jolliest of moods. "Just look at that notice," he said, indicating the words "Post No Bills" on a blank wall, near the business section of his good city. "What is the use of sticking that up there?" he continued. "Why don't they put these things in the right place?"

"Where would you put it?" asked his friend.

"Over every letter box in the country," was the candid reply.

New Rail Route In Selkirk Range

Shortly to be Opened—Will Put An End to Loss of Lives on Dangerous Stretch of Track.

DOWNIE, B.C.—As an aim to greater safety two and a half miles of railway line near this station high in the Selkirk Range of the Rocky Mountains is going to be abandoned this fall.

Before the snow begins to fly trains will be travelling over a new route which is now nearing completion. This new route is expected to cost the Canadian Pacific Railway more than $250,000—but they think it will be well worth it.

For over that 2½ mile stretch at least 22 lives have been lost in recent years and thousands of dollars have been spent in clearing away rock and snow slides and in repairing trackage damaged by them.

The new track commences half a mile from Alberta Canyon Gorge, about 25 miles east of Revelstoke. At the gorge trains regularly stop to give passengers a chance to view the magnificent scenery and the 200-foot decline to the course of the small mountain stream.

Where 17 Were Killed

It was on the doomed stretch that 17 men were killed a year and a half ago while they were clearing a snow cut. The tender of a railway engine broke away, hurtled into the cut, and smashed them like flies against the towering banks of snow. Single and double accidents have added the others to the toll.

But now, the rumble of trucks — the first heard in these mountain fastnesses—is paving the way for the new route, moving material for a huge "fill" at the west end. It is a far cry from the equipment used when the original route was built.

Spurring the workmen to their tasks is Mervin "Red" Dutton, the famous hockey player who now manages New York Americans of the National League. Dutton is one of the partners in the Winnipeg contracting firm (Dutton and Company) which has charge of the work.

Problem Child

"Red," whose hockey club last year became the N.H.L.'s "problem child," has found plenty of difficulties to overcome—but he has proved a match for them. He has had to pitch his tenacity against the determination of the roaring Illecillewaet river, battle with the crumbling shale and tussle with the smaller mountain freshets that nibbled at his big fill.

The huge expenditure is the second taken by the railway in a diversion to eliminate slide conditions. The first was the construction of the lengthy Connaught tunnel, a step that allowed the railway to skip the hazardous Rogers Pass route. On that stretch 67 men lost their lives on March 4, 1910.

Primitive Diet Urged For Moderns

NEW YORK— Dr. Weston E. Price, Cleveland diet specialist, returning this week from two months' studying of Indians in Peru said modern civilization is slipping largely because people don't eat the right foods.

The specialist analyzed foods eaten by pure-blooded and half-breed Indians and said those who have retained their primitive manners of diet are splendid physical specimens while those who have gained the habits of Europeans have deteriorated physically and mentally.

Poem Warns Long Speakers

Used as Prank on Mayor of Wallaceburg Who Takes Hint

Maybe the following little four-line song, introduced last evening at Wallaceburg at the testimonial banquet tendered to Donald Lamont, Canada's oldest active employee of the glass industry, is appropriate at election time:

"Give us a speech, make it peach;
Let it be brief brother, let it be bright.
But be a sport, and cut it short;
Tomorrow we work, we must sleep tonight."

Set to the tune of "Here Comes the Bride," this little songlet was first used just prior to calling on Mayor E. U. Dickerson, who appreciated the joke on himself. The song is a composition of Song-Leader Harold Frost, and so well was it received that subsequent speakers of the evening will be greeted by it, and guided by it.—Windsor Daily Star.

Modern Bagpipe Music

The initiative is being taken by a well-known London Highlander and exponent of the bagpipes to interest enthusiasts for the pipes in the publication of modern bagpipe compositions. Many new piping tunes are composed by pipers in all parts of England as well as Scotland, but they are not published or collected and made available to exponents of the pipes generally. The Scottish Piping Society of London has many members who compose original tunes, and they exchange them among members of their own society. It has not yet reached the stage when it can afford the funds to print new pipe music, a list of the compositions set in the last few years in this country would make up many volumes. Many of the marches and other tunes are dedicated to individuals, and are only heard at the Scottish Society gatherings from the composer himself. It is felt that modern music ought to be given in competitions at Highland gatherings in preference to the older tunes. — Edinburgh Scotsman.

"No Matter How Thin You Slice It — It's Still Boloney"

What seems to be the crying need in sports circles at the moment would seem to be some sort of a school or educational course for boxfight judges and referees so that there could be a little more close harmony in their decisions.

When, in an important tangle like the Farr-Louis affair you find the referee scoring only two rounds for the Welshman, while other alleged experts gave him as many as six or seven, it would certainly seem as if they hadn't all learned out of the same book.

We don't think that Farr won the fight—his own manager's admission that Louis had been the better being pretty conclusive; but if Clem McCarthy's vision doesn't need plenty of sharpening, it certainly was a whole lot closer than any thirteen to two.

However, Mr. Farr did real well for himself—much better than was expected by anybody excepting, possibly, himself. He is in a similar position to the lucky gent who fell down the sewer and came up with a gold watch and chain; and if he only watches his step does not need to worry about ever having to go back to the mines or the tent shows either.

If Tommy only packed a wallop in keeping with his moxie and fighting spirit he would be champion of the world right now and they would probably be trying to prove that he was really an Irisher, as seems to be the custom when a new champion is crowned; although, as far as we know, nobody has yet tried to claim that Joe Louis has any Harp blood for some reason or other.

But Farr seems to lack that old lethal larrup wth either fist, which seems a pity, although it is perhaps too much to expect real perfection from any mortal.

Like the ancient one about the two street sweepers who were standing talking about one of their former confreres who had recently passed on to his reward.

"Poor Mike," sighed one. "'Tis certainly a pity. He sure used to swing a mean broom."

"He did that," replied the other. "And yet, do you know, I sometimes thought that Mike's technique was just a bit faulty around he lamp-posts."

As far as the great election brawl is concerned—well, the general feeling seems to be to echo the one President Roosevelt borrowed from the Immortal William—"a plague on both your houses."

It's too hot and there are too many other things to worry about for most people to bother their heads over an election which nobody can see any real reason for holding; and the electors appear to be taking the atttude of strict impartiality shown by the dame who was watching her husband fighting a bead. "Go it husband—go it b'ar."

But from the financial statistics being published and broadcast by both sides it would seem as if there was still a lot of truth in the old saying, "Figures don't lie—but some liars certainly do figure."

Postcard Delivery Took 26 Years

BRANTFORD, Ont.— A postcard mailed here 26 years ago was delivered in Cleveland two weeks ago, according to Mrs. Charles Norris, of Brantford. There was no indication on the card why it was delayed so long.

The card was addressed to Mrs. W. C. Penfold, Cleveland, who died four years ago. An alert postman recalled the dead woman had a daughter residing in the city. The card finally was delivered to Mrs. Julius Eastman.

Veteran Locomotive Valuable

GANANOQUE, Ont.—The 55-year-old locomotive of the Thousand Islands Railway Company has been sold to a Kingston firm, for scrap. Number 44—out of commission for several years—will be dismantled where she stands and carried ignominiously to Kingston by truck.

CANADA

Action Must Follow

The Royal Commission on public finance and provincial relations, headed by Hon. N. W. Rowell, will probably bring down a valuable report. But its value to the country will depend on what action is taken on it. The people, we feel, are rather tired of that evasiveness in facing big issues which has marked the treatment of the railway and other problems.—Financial Times.

Real Forest Folk Wanted

The Premier of Quebec declares that he wants a forestry population, people who live and grow up in the forests in contrast to the exploiters of forest wealth. It is a statesmanlike conception, the cornerstone of prosperity and stability.—St. Catharines Standard.

Achievement

When a country with not more than 11,000,000 population exports its products to the tune of almost $100,000,000 in a single month it seems to us that this can be considered something of an achievement. Think of what Canada would be accomplishing, at home and abroad, if our population were somewhere nearer what it should be—say 30,000,000.—Windsor Star.

It Takes Time

To most Canadians, the formula for creating a dictator requires only an armed uprising, a march on Rome or a beer-cellar putsch. Actually, these things are merely the climax of a long preparatory period of secret plotting and chicanery, a covert seige of buying off and promising, of dodging and playing with loopholes in the constitutional law.—Vancouver Sun.

Wants Scientific Investigation

The East is ready to make any reasonable contribution to a scheme which will aid Canada as a whole. It has all kinds of sympathy for the West in its present difficult circumstances, but surely no part of Canada would seriously consider embarking again on the wild and uncharted ocean of extravagance in view of the sad lessons of the past. There is no objection to treating the drought problem on a grand scale, for it is a huge problem. But it is imperative that scientific investigation and caution rather than mere enthusiasm be the basis for action—London Free Press.

Ontario's Wild Asses

When pursued by men in an automobile a wild ass of the Gobi desert maintained an average speed of 30 miles an hour for 16 miles. In Ontario the wild asses do better than this but they use motor cars. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Maple Products Down

Production in Canada is generally increasing this year, but there is one sad exception, the lowest production in ten years of maple syrup and maple sugar.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Mental Tests for Drivers

Lots of people wouldn't be driving cars on the highways if they had to pass mental tests, too. — Stratford Beacon-Herald.

A Let-Down Coming

Colonel Drew's warning that Canada should prepare now for the end of the armament race is not the voice of a lone prophet. Men of vision are looking ahead to count the cost, realizing that fictitious prosperity invariably brings retribution. There is no cause for alarm in the suggestion that when the vast expenditures on armaments cease there may be a let-down in general employment and production, but there is real reason for anticipating such an outcome.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

Native Fruit

It seems that the invasion of Canada's hinterlands by Baron Tweedsmuir, the Governor General, has opened his eyes to one thing, the wonders of the Canadian blueberry and the glories of blueberry pie.

There is, indeed, something peculiarly fascinating about the blueberry, whose blueness is never so strikingly realized as when one stands knee-deep in the bushes with a sea of the most lovely blue extending all around.

There is another of our native fruits which is worthy of more consideration than it gets. That is the Saskatoon berry, which is found in more or less abundance all through northern Canada and grows on higher land than the blueberry. This wild berry is not so plentiful as the blueberry and requires more time and labor to pick.—Fort William Times-Journal.

A Needed Enquiry

For year, the necessity of such an inquiry (on Dominion and provincial relations) has been seen. There has been steadily pressing need of bringing up to date the financial and administrative arrangements between the partners to Confederation. There have been repeated increases in the subsidies to individual provinces. In the Maritimes and the West there has been complaint of the incidence of taxation, tariff and otherwise. The financial difficulties of the Western provinces became so great in recent years that they were quite unable to carry on without aid from the Dominion. The business of this country has been hampered by uncertainly as to delimitation of Federal and Provincial jurisdictions. And the general desire for certain measures of social reform has been largely frustrated by difficulties over jurisdiction. The time was more than due when the country should squarely face this whole situation and make those readjustments which are urgently required in view of the economic transformation of Canada in the last seventy years, the vast expansion of provincial services and the necessity of dealing with social problems as they have already been dealt with by many other countries.—Winnipeg Free Press.

THE EMPIRE

Changing China

A mighty spiritual revival, more than anything else in my opinion, is drawing the people of China closer and closed together in the great cause of a united and unified nation. In every school, college and university; in every factory and business house; in the villages and in the great cities, the gospel of the New Life Movement is being preached with a fervour and persistency which has reached the apex of a grand crusade for China's national renaissance. It is a movement unique in the history of the world; it constitutes an inspiring example to the materialistic West. That is one of the many lessons which China can teach the world. — Hong Kong Press.

Up to the Individual

Road casualty lists are remorseless seers. It is forecast that in the coming holiday week at least 160 people will be killed on the roads of Great Britain. More than 5,000 will be injured. These were the figures for the same week last year. It is unhappily probable that this week they will be equalled, if not exceeded. New regulations and safer roads may or may not in the future check this grim figure, but the problem will be tackled with success only if every man and woman contributes personally in caution to the joint efforts that are being made. If you knew that in the coming week a major disaster which was to cost 150 lives was regarded as inevitable, you would ask why someone was not doing something about it. What are you doing about road accidents? Be extra careful yourself. You cannot have a spectacular result for your efforts, but you will have the satisfaction of knowing that each day you are doing your best to save those 150 lives that are menaced. After all, one might be your own.—London Sunday Dispatch.

Outstanding Golf Stylist Entered

Canadian Open Championship Tournament to be Exciting Event

Ed. Dudley

The entry of one of the outstanding stylists of golf, Big Ed. Dudley, has been received for the Canadian Open Championship, and the news that the Georgian will be among those present in the 72-hole struggle for the Seagram Gold Cup at St. Andrew's on September 9, 10, and 11, will be most welcome to those who like to see low scoring with the minimum of effort. During the winter months Dudley is pro at the Augusta National Links, where the annual Masters' tourney is played, while in the summer he is at the Philadelphia Country Club and this year he has the job of being captain of the P.G.A. and chairman of the committee that makes the selection of the international teams. He represented the U.S.P.G.A. in the negotiations for the international team match at St Andrew's on Sept. 7th.

He does not compete in as many tournaments as most of the other leading pros., but whenever he tees off he is classed among those to beat for the laurels and lucre. In the recent U.S. open he tied for the lead at the end of the first and second rounds and was setting the pace after 54 holes, but he broke at the 8th in the final round and finished fifth. He was third in the Masters' tourney, behind Byron Nelson and Ralph Guldahl. By his fellow pros. he is classed as the most under rated pro. in the big time and is long over due to win a big championship. He is generally in the prize money and if he devoted more time to tournament play and less to club duties, he would be among the biggest money winners of any season.

He first made his appearance in the Canadian open in 1930, when he finished ninth and since then he has placed in the money four times, sixth in 1931, fourth in 1932, third in 1935, and seventh last year. He is older than most of his rivals, but can be included in the half dozen or so favored to win the Seagram gold cup.

Wet Weather For West In 1938?

Scientist Bases Promise on Study Of Records

WASHINGTON.—If cyclic changes in weather which have prevailed in the past continue, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, said there should be wetter weather next year, in the Canadian West.

The Smithsonian secretary, who has specialized in observations and delicate measurements of solar radiation and its effects on earthly weather for many years, declared that two approaches to the problem led him to the same conclusion regarding weather in that area.

"A lengthy study of the levels of water in the Great Lakes shows a cyclic change varying over a period of 46 years," he said. "My impression is that the lakes will begin to recover from a low level in 1939, which would mean that precipitation in the area draining into them should increase in 1938."

On the other hand, he added, a study of weather records from a large number of stations for the past 70 to 80 years revealed a 23-year and 46-year variation in precipitation "and this study also leads me to the same impression that a recovery from dry conditions in the Canadian area should begin in 1938."

Dr. Abbot added that his predictions "cannot yet be regarded as the basis for establishing specific programs, but they do indicate in general the character of weather conditions which should prevail."

Canadian Trees Are Weapons of Death In China

Sulphite Pulp From Spruce And Balsam Used In Japanese Bombs

Canadian spruce and balsam trees are being used to bring death and destruction on Shanghai streets, says the Montreal Star.

The idea seems fantastic but science has made it possible and wartime needs make it necessary if Japan is to wage war successfully during the coming months.

The man on the street became familiar with the word "gun-cotton" during the war. Not so many know that this same gun-cotton has been manufactured out of the cellulose in trees.

Japan has been importing tremendous quantities of sulphite pulp. Something like 250,000 tons a year. It is estimated that approximately 40 per cent. of this sulphite pulp was obtained in Canada. Much of it has been used in the making of artificial silks.

Explosive manufacturers would preferably manufacture gun-cotton from cotton but it is easily possible when imported cotton supplies run short, according to experts in the Pulp and Paper Research Institute at McGill University, to make gun-cotton out of sulphite pulp. Germany did it during the Great War.

For High Explosives

It is anticipated that Japan, if she has not already done so, will use great imported supplies of sulphite pulp to manufacture high explosives. This is done through purification of the pulp and treatment with nitric and sulphuric acids.

The resultant product is a vicious killer. One Canadian spruce tree, it is estimated, would make enough explosive to blow up a city block and kill hundreds of people in a crowded section.

Cotton is preferable in the making of gun-cotton as the cellulose, which becomes nitro-cellulose during the manufacturing process, is in a more pure form in cotton. But cotton is costly and, where it has to be imported, doubly so. This factor makes sulphite pulp, which is comparatively cheap, a desirable substitute.

Nudists Wear Hats

MAYS LANDING N.J. — It was too hot for nudism at the National Sun Bathing Association convention this week. Most of the 800 attending wore hats.

GREENSBURG, Pa.— Mrs. Elizabeth Mink, who gave her age as 88, applied for a license to wed Harry Davis, 63-year-old mechanic. Mrs. Mink's first husband died in 1886.

August Heat Sets Record

TORONTO. — Weather statistics show that the past month was the most consistently hot August here since 1900, and breaks the all-time heat record set away back in 1841. The mean temperature for last month was 72.5, whereas the previous record set in 1841 and equalled in 1900 was 72.4. It was 6.2 degrees above normal.

Rest Prescribed for Louis

DETROIT.—A defence of the heavyweight title against Max Schmeling this fall has been announced as definitely out of the picture for Joe Louis.

A rest of two months, possibly six, was recommended for Louis by physicians who studied X-ray photographs of the hands he injured in defending his title against Tommy Farr in New York.

No fracture was disclosed but the X-rays showed badly bruised muscles and tendons around the knuckles of the right hand and slightly less serious bruises on the left.

Mussolini May Visit Hitler

BERLIN.—The long-expected visit of Premier Mussolini to Chancellor Hitler seems definitely set for the latter part of September. From all appearances, the date actually has been set, but no German official will say what it is. The chances are the Italian Premier will come after midmonth, following the Nuremberg Nazi party congress, and will accompany Hitler to Northern Germany for the Autumn army manoeuvres.

New French Minister to Canada

PARIS.—Count Robert de Dampierre, recently replaced as minister to Yugoslavia by Raymond Brugere, this week was appointed French Minister to Canada, Brugere's previous post.

Bequests Will Benefit Canadians

LONDON, Ont.—The University of Western Ontario and University of Toronto are two of four public institutions to share to the extent of approximately $55,000 in the estate of Sir Charles Edward Saunders, noted scientist and developer of Marquis wheat.

The universities' portion will be approximately $16,500, but the payment will not be made during the life-time of four friends of Sir Charles.

Sir Charles left $132,648. After making a few comparatively small bequests, his will directs that the bulk of the estate be divided into two equal portions. One of the halves provides a life income for four friends and eventually goes to public institutions; the other half goes to the relatives of the noted one-time Londoner.

Movie Actor Mobbed

LONDON.—Robert Taylor was hustled into a milk elevator to escape 2,000 female admirers milling about Waterloo Station for their first glimpse of the Hollywood film star as he arrived in England.

Cholera In Shanghai

SHANGHAI.—Cholera has broken out in Shanghai's French Concession. French Concession authorities are taking every measure to halt its spread. Cholera is a deadly intestinal disease which yearly takes its toll in underfed Asiatics.

An outbreak of the black (Bubonic) plague in native areas was also rumored.

More People See Quints

NORTH BAY.—Despite a falling off in attendance in the last week of August, about 19,000 more persons saw the Quintuplets in that month than in July, figures released by Dr. A. R. Dafoe, showed.

During August, 138,660 persons saw the quintuplets compared to 119,700 in July. These came in 34,662 automobiles, 93 buses and 278 trailers. In July 29,926 cars, 84 buses and 310 trailers were parked on the grounds.

New Typing Speed Record

TORONTO. — George L. Hossfield, West Englewood, N.J., set a new speed record in winning the international typewriting competition at the Canadian National Exhibition. His speed of 139 words a minute for an hour's typing exceeds all former marks for speed under international competition rules.

Grace Phelan, Etna, Pa., captured the world's amateur contest with a new world's record of 129 words a minute.

Three Dead In Train Accident

CAPETOWN, South Africa.—Three railway employees were killed and six others seriously injured here when an electric train broke through a wall at the end of the tracks in the station and plunged over thirty feet into the Administrative Building. No passengers were aboard.

British Ships Bombed

ST. JEAN DE LUZ, Franco-Spanish Frontier. — Three British merchant ships were bombed and damaged by Spanish war-planes this week off the Asturian port of Gijon on the Biscay Coast, British Consular officials announced.

The British ships were attacked less than twenty-four hours after Great Britain served a stern warning on the Spanish nationalists that attacks on British shipping must cease immediately or the Admiralty would "take such action as the occasion demands."

On Outstanding Events of the Week

France Ready For Mobilization

France this week achieved the nationalization of six large private railroad systems, which with two other lines already under control, will form a network providing for mobilization of the entire French army, including six million reserves, within forty-eight hours. The Government has also bought up munitions plants, airplane factories, and controls the Bank of France, so that in the eventuality of war, general mobilization of the entire resources of the country may be brought about in the shortest possible time.

New Pact With United Kingdom

The new trade agreement made in February between Canada and the United Kingdom went into force this week. By it, British exporters benefit by tariff reductions on 179 items including textiles, iron and steel, machinery, electrical goods, etc. Guarantees to Canada on a number of preference margins were made. These embraced lumber, canned salmon, apples, dairy products, tobacco and patent leather. Easier trading between the two countries is expected as a result.

Arms Program More Expensive

Under Britain's new rearmament program more than four million dollars a day are being spent on military preparedness. Battleships are being built and airplanes turned out by the score. Industry is gradually being mobilized until by the time five years have passed and the program is complete, Britain will be what is known as "ready". By comparison, the net cost of the Great War to Britain, during a period of four years and eight months, is estimated at slightly less than the total amount to be spent during the five years of rearmament. Some authorities believe that action has come too late, others think that war has been pushed back five years by British rearmament. It remains to be seen.

French-Canadian Population Parity

Speaking at the Canadian Institute on Economics and Politics, Jean St. Germain, Montreal lawyer, drew attention to the fact that the French-Canadian population is likely soon to be on a parity with the Anglo-Saxon in Canada, so rapidly is it growing.

Such a population equality, he said, would tend more than anything else to unite both races.

Discussing another phase of the French-Canadian position in Canada, M. St. German spoke of the theory that French-Canadians stand today in Canada as the bulwark against subversive theories. "An intense individualist, who will not be drawn into other people's affairs, very conservative, with a love for the land of his forefathers, the French-Canadian is rather apt to be a follower than a pioneer," he said.

"Although of French descent, we have nothing in common with France today. The French-Canadians are, too, a static-minded people, as opposed to the dynamic thought of the Americans."

Impasse In Alberta

Defying the Federal Government's power to veto, Premier Aberhart of Alberta intends to put into immediate effect the banking legislation passed at the recent provincial session. He declares that Alberta has investigated and found the Dominion Government at present did not have authority to disallow Provincial legislation.

"Consequently our legislation is still law and will remain law until declared 'ultra vires' by the courts."

The Alberta banks are up in arms over the proposed restrictions to be placed on them and the Boards of Trade in the province are planning to take action. Meantime the Federal Government has not the slightest intention of retreating from the position it has taken. If the Alberta Government fails to publish in the official Gazette the proclamation of Lieutenant-Governor Bowen of Alberta to the effect that the invalid Alberta banking legislation has been vetoed by the Federal Government, the necessary proclamation over the signature of the Lieutenant-Governor will be published in the Canada Gazette.

Canada In Peculiar Position

Should Britain choose to withdraw her representative from Japan after the shooting of Ambassador Sir Hughe Knatchbulle-Hugessen, Canada could be left in a very peculiar position. The Canadian Minister to Japan would in that case be the nearest in line of representation to King George VI. When asked if the Canadian Minister to Japan would be withdrawn in the event the British Ambassador at Tokio were recalled as a result of the present situation, Prime Minister MacKenzie King replied "We will consider that when the occasion arises." The Minister is now on vacation in Canada but may leave for his post in Japan next week.

Prince Nicholas Returns

VIENNA. — Revolution is reported brewing in Rumania with the return from exile of Prince Nicholas, banished brother of King Carol, to lead the Nazi Iron Guard in a coup d'etat which might make him dictator.

Diplomats said Nicholas' surprise flight to Bucharest from Italy—officially denied by King Carol's Government in fear of an uprising—was engineered by the Iron Guard, which has sought since 1933 to drive Carol from the throne because of his extramarital romance with red-headed Magda Lupescu.

Minister of War C. Angelescu was reported to have resigned and to have been replaced temporarily by Minister of Navy N. N. Iremescu.

Ambassador Is Recovering

SHANGHAI. — Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, British Ambassador to China, should recover completely in six or seven weeks from the serious wounds inflicted on him by machine-gun bullets from a Japanese plane, Dr. E. M. Gauntlett of London, chief of the physicians attending the envoy, told the North China Daily News.

Sir Hughe was able to read the messages of sympathy sent to him and even to answer some of them, it was learned. His condition appeared to be improving steadily.

Makes Motorboat Speed Record

LOCARNO, Switzerland.—Sir Malcolm Campbell, famed British sportsman, has added the world's motorboat speed record to his international automobile speed standard.

The 52-year-old Briton piloted his 23-foot speed boat, Bluebird, over Lake Maggiore's smooth waters at a rate of 125.795 miles per hour to eclipse Gar Wood's 5-year-old mark of 124.86 m. p. h.

Sir Malcolm already holds the world automobile record of 301.33 m. p. h., set at Bonneville salt flats in Utah in 1935.

Sir Malcolm's aquatic Bluebird — his record-smashing automobile was called by the same name—was powered by a Rolls Royce aero engine, and travelled over the measured mile course in smooth and effortless fashion.

Plane Kills Farmer

STRATHROY — Death rode the wings of a barnstorming plane that came to Bethesda near here to pick up passengers from a church picnic.

On its first trip of the day the plane crashed into the crowd. Twenty-eight-year-old Stewart James Sullivan, local farmer, was struck by the wings, and hurled to the ground with a fatal fracture of the skull. His cousin, Fred Sullivan, aged 35, was caught in the plane's path, and had two ribs broken.

As others scrambled madly to safety the plane plunged on for seventy-five feet, teetered and tipped tail up, to rest on its nose.

The pilot, Frank Smale, of London, and his lone passenger, 16-year-old Marguerite Brooks, were practically unhurt. They suffered some shock and minor abrasions, but their safety belts had saved them from serious injury.

Wins Cattle Prizes

Olympics In Jeopardy

TOKYO. — Faced with increasing foreign complications as a result of her undeclared war on China, Japan decided to prepare for a long struggle of three years or more and probably to cancel the 1940 Olympic Games which were to have been held in this city.

Belgian Bank Scandal

BRUSSELS. — The cabinet met to consider the calling of parliament to deal with what the Fascist Opposition calls a National Bank scandal. It involves the payment of secret bank funds bonuses to Premier Paul Van Zeeland while he was vice-governor of the bank.

Van Zeeland said he made sure the money drawn from the special fund did not represent salary for vice-governorship of the bank because he was then holding ministerial office.

"As to the question of the amount I have drawn from the special fund and what I did with the money—that is my own business," the Premier said.

Refuses $57,000 For Crop

GRETNA, Man.—James Handlan, of Kane, Man., forty-nine miles southwest of Winnipeg, threshed 950 acres of Thatcher rust-resistant wheat which yielded forty bushels to the acre, but refused $57,000 cash for the 38,000-bushel crop. He said he wanted his grain to go to prairie farmers as seed and turned down the outside offer.

CROWN POINT, Ind.—Thirty-two years after they were divorced, Rufus Young, 66, and Laura Young, 60, both of Maywood, Ill., decided it was all a mistake. So they were remarried.

Funeral of Mrs. Chester

The funeral of the late Mrs. Mary Chester took place last Saturday afternoon from her late home in this village. The service was held in Trinity Anglican Church, which she had attended for so many years, and some of the hymns which deceased had loved so well, were sung. The Rector, Rev. E.S.Ottley, spoke very nicely of Mrs. Chester, of her faith in God and her many good qualities She was a wonderful woman and was blessed with a life of over four score years and ten, the length of which only the few are privileged to enjoy. Rev. R.J. W. Perry, a former rector, read the lesson, and the choir assisted in the singing.

The remains were then conveyed to the beautiful cemetery beside the United Church at Britannia and placed beside those of her husband amid a profusion of lovely floral tributes, and before a large number of sorrowing relatives and sympathizing friends.

Pall bearers were: Messrs. Pearson of Weston; J. A. Hammond, James E. Bailey, H. Hisey, W.McClintock and O.R.Church

Among those present at the funeral of the late Mrs. Chester, on Saturday were the Rev. J. Hughes-Jones, who was Rector of Trinity Church from 1894 to 1903, and Mrs. Jones

ARE YOU A RECKLESS DRIVER?

How would you like to be one of the victims in this horrible smash? How would you like to be strapped to a cot in some emergency hospital ward — writhing, half out of your mind with pain. These ghastly tragedies are caused by those of you who drive recklessly—who take chances—without regard for the safety of others! You know in your own heart whether or not you are a reckless driver. If you are

DECIDE NOW TO DRIVE WITH CARE

Stop cutting in, passing on hills or curves, taking chances of any kind. Settle down to safe, sane driving—and avoid trouble. You know the rules for safe driving. Stick to them — or run the risk of having your license suspended or cancelled. We are going to put reckless drivers off the road and keep them off.

Ontario Motorists will Co-operate

When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place, and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders!

CLARKSON

A quick-thinking woman put two thugs to flight here early Sunday morning and foiled their attempt to rob the summer home of W. F. Oliver, prominent Toronto business man, near the Lakeshore Golf Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver were asleep on the verandah of their residence when they were awakened by the sound of hammering on the door. When Mr. Oliver arose to investigate, his approach was discovered by the burglars, who had partly succeeded in wrenching the door from its hinges. One of the men turned the beam of a flashlight into Mr. Oliver's face and warned him not to move.

In the meantime, however, Mrs. Oliver had fully taken in the situation. Quietly making her way behind the pair, she managed to reach the damaged door. Groping in the dark, she found the handle and slammed the door with a bang.

Without a glance over their shoulders, the startled thugs leaped outside, jumped into an automobile and sped away toward the golf course. So hurried was their flight that they took a short cut cross one of the greens to reach the highway.

When Mrs. Oliver attempted to phone the police she found that both Hydro and telephone wires had been cut. The call was finally placed from a near-by residence.

OBITUARY

Emma Copeland Fuller, died at Brampton on Sept. 2nd, in her 88th year. Interment took place in Brampton cemetery.

John Thomas Crawford, passed away at Brampton, on Sept. 5th, in his 82nd year, and was buried in Brampton Cemetery.

William D. Manes, passed away at the home of his son, O. W. Manes, Lot 2, Con. 10, Trafalgar, on Sept. 4th, in his 64th year, and the funeral took place to Brampton cemetery. Deceased was twice married, his first wife being Miss L. Cantelon, and his second, Miss Sadie Leslie. The family formerly lived on the fourth line, West, Toronto Township, north of Streetsville.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

The Toronto West Presbytery of the United Church of Canada is being held in the United Church, Streetsville, next Tuesday, commencing at 10 a.m. In the morning the general business will be transacted and in the afternoon a period will be spent in a picnic. In the evening there will be a public meeting of general interest dealing with Rural Life problems.

About seventy or eighty members are expected to be present. Visitors who wish to see a Presbytery at work may attend any session.

The Rev. L. I. Hunter, B.A., B.D., of Westmoreland Church, Toronto, is the Chairman of the Presbytery and the Rev. George Barker is the Secretary.

The Presbytery usually meets in the City, but a number of the men have felt for some time that the City problems are so acute that they dominate the general business of Presbytery gatherings and that some time ought to be given to a constructive study of the Rural life problems within the bounds of the Presbytery. The Committee responsible for the program is headed by the Rev. J. A. C. Kell, B.A., B.D., of Toronto.

STREETSVILLE UNITED CHURCH

The Rev. T. D. Jones returned Saturday evening from his vacation, the last week of which was spent in a retreat for clergymen held at Camp "Onawa" near Huntsville.

This retreat was originally held in Sandridge, but with the death of Dr. McTavish, a change was made necessary. Camp Onawa is a lovely spot and the owner, Miss Govern, places the whole property, boats, lodge, buildings, etc., at the service of the ministers during their stay there. There are canoes, rowing boats, sailing boats, etc. About 40 registered for the week.

The theme for the service next Sunday evening covers a subject of vast importance to every patriot lover of Canada. In a bi-weekly magazine an article is this month devoted to its discussion and the fear is expressed that in a little time the Anglo-Saxon will have lost his majority and will thus cease to be a dominant figure in the direction of Canadian life. Mr. Jones served for several years at Lamont, right on the edge of the Ukrainian colony in Northern Alberta and studied the life of the immigrant people there, for as Chairman of the Lamont District for three years he was asked to supervise the work among these interesting and progressive people.

The Rev. William Buchanan, spending his summer as usual at Wasaga Beach, asked to be remembered to his many friends in Streetsville and district. Mr. Buchanan is well over eighty years of age but seems hale and hearty.

SNIDER'S

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Post entertained on Wednesday, Sept. 1st, at a weiner roast for their son and daughter, (Maurice and Miss Dorothy). Twenty of the junior members of the community enjoyed a wonderful time in the early hours of the evening around the campfire roasting weiners and marshmallows. Before leaving, Miss Peggy Cross, who has recently returned from a motor trip with her father to the Cross Roads Gold Mine, Quebec, gave an interesting talk of her trip via Kirkland Lake and of the many road improvements in the district which had been made since she lived there eighteen years ago.

Among the family friends who attended the birthday dinner on Saturday evening of Mrs. Charles Irvine, Trafalgar Township, was Mrs. Jeremiah Pickering, sister-in-law, Brampton, who recently celebrated her 89th birthday. During the reception in the afternoon and evening, 100 visitors called to extend Mrs. Irvine best wishes on attaining her 82nd birthday. Mrs. (Rev.) J. Y. Fraser, Streetsville, was among those pouring tea. Mrs. Victor Lawrence and Mrs. Charles Morden assisted Mr. Ernest and Miss Mary Irvine in arranging for the entertainment of Mrs. Irvine's many guests.

Mr. Murray Holmes, Toronto, has been appointed vocal instructor for Snider's School, replacing Mr. Ralph Kidd, Port Credit, who resigned in June.

Two descendants of pioneer families of Snider's, Mr. Edmund Chamberlain, Oakville, and Miss Ruby Albertson, West Erindale, were united in marriage on Wednesday, September 1st, at the home of the bride, Rev. H. S. Lovering, minister of Wesley Church, Snider's, officiating. The best wishes of the community are extended to this well-known young couple.

Mrs. Wilson G. Duke, Mono Mills, is visiting at the home of her father, F. A. Forster, and sister, Mrs. C. N. Fish.

Former pupils of Snider's school commenced their High School career on Sept. 1st: Phyllis Fish and Wallace Pickering are attending Oakville high school and Warren Clifton is going to Port Credit high school.

ENGAGEMENTS

The Reverend George C. Pidgeon and Mrs. Pidgeon announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen Campbell, to Dr. Cameron Hull Caesar of Sarnia, son of Professor Lawson Caesar and Mrs. Caesar of Guelph. The marriage to take place at Bloor Street United Church, Toronto, on Saturday, Sept. 11, at 1 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Workman observed their 55th wedding anniversary on Monday, Sept. 6th. The event was recognized by members of Streetsville United Church, and Rev. T. D. Jones, the pastor, presented them with a token of remembrance.

Mr. Robert Jones of Elmvale spent the week-end at the United Church parsonage.

"INFANTILE PARALYSIS"
(POLIOMYELITIS)

The Department of Health has a sufficient supply of Convalescent Serum for present demands. This serum is obtained from persons who have previously suffered from an attack of "infantile paralysis".

In anticipation of further requirements the Department now requests that persons who are willing to provide blood for this purpose (donors) register with the medical officer of health in their district.

The Department remunerates donors on the basis of Ten Dollars for 100 cubic centimeters; the usual amount withdrawn from one donor is 200 cubic centimeters. This can be readily obtained without discomfort or ill effects to the donor.

Children under fourteen years of age are not eligible. Persons who have suffered an attack of the disease during the present year are also not eligible. Those persons fourteen years of age and over who have suffered an attack within the past twenty-five years and who show some definite evidence of resulting paralysis, are requested to provide the medical officer of health with their name and address.

Those who have already acted as donors need not register again.

When a clinic is to be held, donors will be notified through their medical officer of health.

OBITUARY

Cyrus Brown

William Cyrus Brown, life-long resident of the Meadowvale district, died at the Peel Memorial Hospital on Friday, Sept. 3rd, in his 89th year, following a lengthy illness. Mr. Brown was born near Meadowvale, son of the late Samuel Brown, who came to Canada from the United States in 1822. As a boy he suffered an illness which left him permanently lame, but refused to give up the prospect of becoming a farmer, and in spite of his handicap, which increased as he grew older, he operated one of the finest farms of the district.

He was a member of the official Board of Meadowvale United Church and was a director of the Toronto Township Agricultural Society. For many years an exhibitor at the Canadian National Exhibition, he won many prizes with horses bred on his farm. Mrs. Brown predeceased him some years ago.

The funeral took place Sunday afternoon. Service was conducted at the home by his pastor, Rev. G. M. Chidley, assisted by a nephew, Rev. Geo. G. Treanor.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. Interment took place in Britannia cemetery. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. J. Gardner, W. Gooderham, W. Lambe, S. Reeve, J. Pearson, L. Davidson.

Streetsville Fall Fair

The Streetsville Fair prize list is in the printer's hands and ought to be ready for distribution shortly. There are several added features this year.

There will be two classes, according to age, for boys or girls, in a kite-fly competition.

There are also three classes for the best Essay. Subject: "The purposes and benefits of our Fair."

Two of these classes are for pupils of different ages and the third class is for adults.

The essays must have over 400 words and not more than 1000. Entries must be made by Saturday night preceding the Fair. Fair dates Oct. 8th and 9th.

The special prize list is very large this year.

In domestic science, fruit and vegetable classes there are over 60 specials, while in other classes there are a goodly number.

Everything points toward a most successful Fair. Remember the dates, Oct. 8th and 9th.

TORY PLATFORM OF 12 POINTS

Labor Rights, Hydro, Civil Service, Marketing and Courts Are Included.

Beaverton, August 28.—Explaining that he spoke on his own responsibility, Russell Nesbitt, M.P.P. (Toronto-Bracondale), outlined to Muskoka-Ontario Conservatives, in convention here, twelve points in the party's campaign platform. These were:

Maintain the rights of the laboring man in accordance with the practice of British people and in the traditions of the Conservative party.

Restoration to municipalities who own Hydro of their representation on the commission.

Reaffirm and carry out the policy of Whitney that license holders shall keep hotel and observe the law; continue policy initiated by the late Hon. W. J. Hanna in connection with prison reform.

Refuse to neglect essential services of government in the interest of humanity for the purpose of balancing a budget; end the bedevilment of the civil service, and re-establish permanency, stability and efficiency.

Re-open Ontario House in London, establishing a market for farmers' produce in the world's greatest market. Restore grants to farmers and assist them with agricultural loans.

Re-establish the party's humane social service policy and provide essential services to the underprivileged and to unorganized territories; establish and maintain institutions to take care of all mentally ill; return to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind manufacture of brooms and brushes in order that blinded soldiers may receive employment.

Reaffirm the principle that it is the function of a legislature to pass laws, but the duty of a court to interpret them.

Fond Farewell Father Egan

Sunshine and shadow, sorrow and joy, are so closely united that in the midst of joy we are looking for some sorrow. But we always need the shadow to get the high view of the sunshine. And in St. Joseph's Parish Hall, Sept. 3rd, 1937, reminiscence of the happy past scenes that brought many pleasant memories to the congregation in the eighteen years, the chapter in this church life just closed were recalled. What joy it must have given to their great sky pilot, Father Egan, to see his congregation and others so anxious to show him honor for his untiring labor for the good of the members of the church. He never seemed to get weary in well doing. The past and the present chased away any gloom that the future had in store for them without their beloved guide, Rev. Father Egan, and a most enjoyable time was spent by all at this presentation.

Mr. Victor Johnston made an excellent chairman, and after many complimentary remarks about Father Egan, he acted on Mr. Frank O'Connor to read the following address:

Rev. Father Sheridan, of Port Credit, and Rev. Father Ingoldsby, Saint Augustine Seminary, were on the platform with Father Egan.

Streetsville, Ont.,
Sept. 3rd, 1937.

Rev. J. T. Egan, P.P.
Dear Rev. Father:

It is with feelings of genuine sorrow and regret that we, the people of St. Joseph's church, Streetsville, have learned that you are about to depart from amongst us. It is with heavy hearts that we gather here this evening to express to you our appreciation of the splendid work you have done for us and our gratitude for the self-sacrificing spirit manifested in the performance of all your priestly duties during all the years of your pastorate among us. By your executive ability and untiring energy, you have very much improved our church and grounds and made many necessary and permanent improvements. Our cemetery, where lies the dust of our sainted dead, had long been neglected before your coming; under your administrative care it has been made a place of beauty, a veritable God's Acre, and a suitable shrine for the remains of those whose bodies were once the temples of the Holy Ghost.

You have constructed for us this beautiful Parish Hall to serve as a place of pure, innocent enjoyment, where young and old may meet in friendly intercourse and social enjoyment. On your wisdom you knew that one of the causes of depopulation of our country parishes was the isolation and loneliness of farm life. To remedy this condition you set to work with a will and an energy all your own to provide for us this place of entertainment so that our young men and women, having this opportunity of social enjoyment, might be more contented with their life on the farm. We wish to assure you, Dear Father, that your object in this respect has been fully achieved. And all this you have done without friction or inconveniencing any individual.

On the material side of your pastoral work you have proved yourself to be possessed of superior tact and financial ability of a high order. But it's as a spiritual guide you have shone most resplendent. Like a true spiritual shepherd you have watched over your flock, daily spending yourself and being spent in seeking out the lost sheep, bringing consolation to the aged, the sick and the dying, and religious instruction to the little ones of the fold. Your kind exhortations and practical instructions cannot fail to have lasting results. The patience and zeal with which you performed the daily duties of your sacred calling, especially in the care and instruction of our children, have stamped you for ever on our hearts as the perfect example of the true priest of God.

It is no wonder then that our hearts are heavy and sad at the thought of parting with you. Bonds of affection have been strongly cemented, and our relations with you have ever been so pleasant that the thought of separation from you brings a pang of sorrow to our hearts. But it is a consolation to know that your priestly ministrations will be continued in another part of the Archdiocese, and we trust with equal success. "Those who cannot sacrifice cannot love." Therefore for your sake we make the sacrifice, and wish you a long life, happiness and success in your work for the glory of God and the salvation of souls in the larger field of labor upon which you are now about to enter. May we also assure you that we will keep you constantly in our prayers, and we humbly beg that you will remember us in yours, especially at the Holy Altar of God.

In conclusion we ask you to accept this purse as a token of our affection and esteem.

Signd on behalf of the congregation:
J. J. FARRELL
F. H. O'CONNOR

The presentation was made by Mr. J. J. Farrell.

The address was so real, reviewing the incessant labor done by Father Egan, it was just a plain, true statement of facts known by everyone. That Father Egan's address in reply was rather misleading, he just making himself a co-worker in everything, and not the great leader that he was. So if he will excuse us we will not repeat his words, but will give our own version of some of the labor not required of him, but done for his love of doing good. And he has left behind him monuments of virtue the storms of life will never destroy. When Father Egan, in a vision, saw this beautiful hall we were in that night, standing where a homely hill faced the road, he often wondered if it could not be converted into some service for his congregation. Many days and nights he spent in mental figuring about the cost and labor of this enterprize. He knew there was no reserve fund to fall back on and the work and the cost would require a great deal of engineering skill. Then he asked Vic Johnston, a contractor, to figure on the probable cost. The result was the work was soon on the way and this beautiful hall is almost finished, and best of all, free from any debt, and many pleasant social nights are spent in it. But the good Father did not tell us how many times he came from Brampton to oversee the work, and how much work he did himself with pick and shovel, often using more energy than he could spare, sometimes the supply was nearly exhausted and he often returned to Brampton worn and weary. He did not tell us how much labor and time he spent in beautifying God's Acre. He did not tell us how much cold he suffered going over snowbanks that were almost impossible to go over, and many hardships to fill his appointments. Father Egan just sees the sunshine and misses the shadows.

Both Father Sheridan and Father Ingoldsby were generous in their compliments in the affection and esteem Father Egan was held in by his colleagues and by his congregation.

Miss Beatrice Farrell spoke on behalf of the ladies. Almost all of the men had something pleasant to say about their beloved "Father".

One of the outside friends, D. McGregor thanked the community for the invitation to be present at this entertainment to honor Father Egan, for they considered him one of their best friends. They had often been with him in times of sorrow and in times of rejoicing, and found in him a man who just fits in. One particular social event in which Father Egan took a prominent part was a school reunion in School Section No. 10, Trafalgar, one of the greatest celebrations held in that district for many years. The people had gathered from lands far distant, and from the surrounding villages and towns. Father Egan's speech that day was one of the greatest contributions to the success of that re-union. It was a country school, where country girls and boys brought up on a farm, had attended, and where they met that day. Father Egan was born and brought up on a farm, and he painted to us the beauties of farm life, and country school life. He had helped to plow and sow and reap on the farm as the seasons come and go. He said any one brought up on a farm, "nature's garden", was in possession of the greatest heritage anyone could desire, and almost all at that reunion had started their life on a farm.

The speaker said he hoped their family's sincere wish would be recorded with this congregation for a long prosperous and happy life to Father Egan and the people he is going to minister to, will love and appreciate him like the people he is leaving.

A lovely lunch was then served.

Letter from Laurence Dolby

Kandale—Kwange
Congo Belge, Afrique
June 19, 1937.

Dear Co-workers across the sea:

"What then? notwithstanding every way . . . . Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice." Phil. 1: 18.

God has given each one of us some work to do in His Kingdom. In doing this work let us not seek "self" but the glory of God. Our Saviour must be magnified before the world. He must increase, but we must decrease, and let us not be envious when we see others apparently are meeting with greater success than we. Let it be our greatest joy that many are led to Christ. To Him therefore be all glory, praise, and honour.

Since last we wrote, many miles have been traversed while carrying out the King's business. We shall try to impart to you in word pictures some episodes and experiences that were ours. If you can stretch your imagination perhaps in a small way you can picture how we started out on May the fourth with our caravan, which consisted of thirty-three men who carried our food, bedding, ourselves, and other necessary utensils that go to make up our home while travelling in this manner. We had never travelled in this section of the country before and thus we enjoyed the changing scenery and varied experiences. We travelled over rolling plains that were being parched by the intense heat and dry weather but as we journeyed further south nature had not been treated so cruelly as yet and our eyes were refreshed to see everything so green. Besides rolling plains, our path led through a dense forest, in fact we slept and travelled five days in it. Usually we arose and started to travel about three a.m., as it is nice and cool (cold) then, but especially on one occasion we were advised not to start out in the dark on account of the elephants. We gladly took their advice and started in the daylight. You know elephants may be short-sighted but have a powerful scent. Where they go through the forest they just crash down the trees no matter what size.

While travelling through this forest we came across a fetish village. On inquiring, we were told it was a place where the spirits that caused sickness lived and people of the surrounding villages had built their dwelling in the forest so they would give their sicknesses to the wild animals instead of them.

We generally laid our heads to rest in sombolos (bamboo houses) but on two occasions we had to use our tent and both nights were interesting. The first night the wind blew, the rain came, the lightning flashed and thunder rolled. One would be of the impression that all the elements were let loose to test our tent but it stood the strain and in the morning the sun came up bright and clear as if to greet us after a victory had been won.

On the other occasion we landed in a village where the sombolo had been burned on account of ticks. We had completed our days travel, our men were tired and foot sore from the hot sand, thus we had to pitch our tent. A suitable location was hard to find but at last we noticed a fairly good clearing and proceeded to go to work. Much to our amazement the village people came in swarms, excited and all talking at once, protesting our pitching our tent on our chosen site. After enquiring why all the excitement we found that our place of choosing was the village graveyard. To satisfy their fear we set up our over-night house a few feet away where we enjoyed a good nights sleep.

We wish that our co-workers at home could pay us a visit and go with us to hold services in these many villages. We are sure you would be as thrilled as we are. When entering a village a host of people come cheering and singing a welcome. It does not take long for the news to spread, that you have come to tell them of the affairs of God.

As the sun shows signs of fading away in the West and one can hear the village women pounding their soka to make flour from which they make their staple food "musa", then is the time to have our service. We walk up and down the village blowing our whistle and calling the people to come and listen to the precious word. From all parts of the village you would see women and children running and the men strolling along in their easy way. A large circle is made in the sand and the women and children squat on their knees while the men stand around to complete the circle. Within the circle we have our organ. Our boys and porters make up our choir. How these people love to sing! Usually also sitting or standing in the centre we have the chief of the village. Do you see the mental picture, this circle of raw heathen, that have their lives steeped in sin and fetish worship, but to no avail. The expressions on their faces speak that they long for something. Within the circle the living Word of God is being proclaimed—that something which they are longing for. Oh! if they could only realize that sins forgiven and eternal life was being offered free to them. It is hard to get through the surface of these people because they have lived so long in heathenism, but we shall keep drilling and by and by the diamonds will appear. As the service is going on you note the sun is sinking in the west. One can not help but be deeply impressed with the thought that time is fast slipping away; sunset of life will soon be approaching and our Lord's return draws night.

"Our God shall come," the silence shall be broken,
Which long has reigned o'er this sin-stricken world;
The saints of every name and tongue shall gather
Beneath His banner which shall be unfurled.

"Our God shall come," earth's Babel and confusion
Shall all be hushed when His great voice is heard;
Faces shall pale, and be upturned with terror,
Those who have hated and despised His Word.

"Ohr God shall come," to scatter all oppressors,
For He the Righteous Judge shall fill the throne;
No longer shall the tyrant have dominion,
No longer shall the helpless captive groan.

"Our God shall come," according to His promise,
To dry the tears, and bind each bleeding heart;
To bring about the saints' eternal meeting.
Where sin and death shall never, never part.

"Our God shall come," the Father of the orphaned,
The widow's Friend—The Saviour of the lost;
tempted,
The Rock of Ages for the tried and
The Lifeboat and the Shelter for the teased.

H. BUNN, D.D.

In His care we will be confident.

REACHING THE GOAL

Consumption, as tuberculosis of the lungs is commonly called, is a wasting ailment; stubborn to master, requiring treatment and care over a long period of time. It can seldom be cured at home. Then, too, it is a communicable disease, especially dangerous to young children.

This was fully realized by the founders of the National Sanitarium Association, when forty years ago they erected the first hospital in Canada for the treatment of this disease.

This venture met with much opposition and even ridicule, for at that time it was firmly believed that tuberculosis was incurable. It was just one of those things which had to be, so why bother about it.

However, it was not long before the regimen of this small hospital began to show results—people were actually being cured—going home and talking about it.

Such was the small beginning of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives, which now provide for more than one thousand patients.

The progress made and the change in outlook is reflected by these and the many other fine sanatoria throughout the Dominion, and by the large number of public and private organizations which to-day are sparing no effort to overcome tuberculosis.

The results have been that thousands upon thousands have been given a chance to get well, who but for hospital treatment, would have been left without hope, and the mortality from this disease has been reduced by 75%.

With tuberculosis ousted from the premier position to seventh place as the cause of death, there is cause for congratulation, but there is also the danger of the feeling of self complacency and the slackening of effort. With the goal in sight, this would indeed be a calamity, for tuberculosis will not halt its advance unless it is forced to do so. This can only be accomplished with the continued co-operation of the public at large.

The Trustees of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives are determined that, so far as lies within their power, no one who suffers from tuberculosis shall be denied a chance to get well. If you would help in this great life saving work, please send a gift to National Sanitarium Association, 229 College Street, Toronto.

THE OPEN COLUMN

To the Editor of The Review

In your last two issues the Open Column has made an attack on the Hon. Duncan Marshall. This column has the place and appearance of an editorial and, if not, it should be signed by the writer when he attacks the member for Peel. I have met many who have long known Mr. Marshall both here and in the west and never yet have I heard any of them speak in anything but the highest terms of him as a private citizen or in public life. Everyone has a right to his political opinions and the fact the Federal and Provincial Members are now Liberals and have in the past been Conservative would indicate that both parties are well represented, but anonymous abuse of the elected representative of the people is poor stuff.

Possibly, I was brought up differently when I had the text held up before me "Thou shalt not speak evil of the rulers of thy people." It is rather curious to sneer at Mr. Marshall for his teetotalism. I feel quite proud to know that there are thousands of teetotalers in Peel, and I always found The Review in the past on that side. As to saying that The Star will not print Mr. Marshall's name, that is not correct as I have read it there as often as one would expect. We need in politics free discussion and open—minded criticism, but ridicule and sneers are usually the refuge of those who have either no case or a poor one.

WILLIAM KEMP

Editor's Note—The Open Column is not written by the Editor. We have warned persons contributing to this column not to write anything objectionable. It is not necessary for contributors to have their name appear in print, but we must know who they are. If any person takes offense at any item or article in this paper and demands to know the name of the writer, we will gladly divulge it. We are not taking sides in any political campaign, and never did. We will accept 'paid' advertising from all political parties, but it must be paid for. Yes, we always did use our paper in the cause of temperance, and always will. We give a man credit for being a teetotaler, and that's just what we are: We have no use for liquor, and hope that beverage rooms will never become legalized in the banner county of Peel.—(Editor)

Streetsville Men Are Good Judges

The forty who entered into the Globe and Mail Doubles contest at the C.N.E. on Tuesday evening for the Bette Davis resemblance contest had to face seven critical judges, two of the judges being Streetsville residents, in the persons of H.Q.Burns and Len Lee. While we were aware of the capability in this direction of the president of our Bowling Club, it had never been revealed to us of the ability of our popular young bachelor

Any girls with Hollywood or matrimonial ambitions had better watch their step in the presence of these local experts

They had the most difficult task of any set of judges of this daily contest up to date. While it was no beauty contest it could have been easily turned into such, both as regards the girl contestants and the men judges

A NATION NEEDS RELIGIOUS HOMES

(Deuteronomy 6: 1—9; 11: 18—25.)
Printed Text—Deuteronomy 6:4, 5; 11: 18—25.
Golden Text—Train up a child in the way he should go, And even when he is old he will not depart from it. Prov. 22: 6.

The Lesson In Its Setting

Place—All the early chapters of Deuteronomy record discourses given by Moses on the east side of the Jordan River where the Israelites were encamped in what are known as the plains of Moab (see Deut. 1: 1).

Time—B.C. 1459.

"Hear, O Israel: Jehovah our God is one Jehovah. And thou shalt love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might."—There is hardly a greater passage in all the Old Testament than this, recognized by the Jews as "the great commandment in the law," "the first of all commandments," and called by the Lord Jesus himself "the great and first commandment" (Matt. 22: 36, 37; Mark. 12: 29; Luke 10: 27).

"Therefore shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul."—Solomon well said:— "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life" (Prov. 4: 23). Our Lord said that "out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh." "The good man out of his good treasure bringeth forth good things, and the evil man out of his evil treasure, bringeth forth evil things" (Matt. 12: 35). If we lay up the words of God in our heart and soul, then the fountain of our life will be holy, for the word of God is holy; our heart will be right, for the word of God is right (119: 75, Authorized Version). As David himself said: "Thy word have I laid up in my heart, that I might not sin against thee" (Ps. 119: 11). "Blessed are they that are perfect in the way, who walk in the law of Jehovah. Blessed are they that keep his testimonies, that seek him with the whole heart" (Ps. 119: 1,2).

Arm and Forehead

"And ye shall bind them for a sign upon your hand, and they shall be for frontlets between your eyes."—The Jews took these verses quite literally. The passages (Ex. 13: 1—16; Deut. 6: 4—9; 11: 13—21) were written on parchment rolls and placed in cases, so that they could be bound on the arm and forehead during morning prayer. These were called phylacteries. The phylactery was a leather box, cube-shaped, closed by an attached flap and bound to the person by a leather band. It was bound to the inner side of the left arm and near the elbow, so that with the bending of the arm, it would rest over the heart, the end of the string or band firmly wound around the middle finger of the hand as a "sign upon thy hand." They were to be worn by every male over 13 years of age at the time of morning prayer, except on Sabbaths and festal days, such days being in themselves sufficient reminders of the laws of God (see Matt. 23: 5). The phylactery for the forehead was bound on after the one bound upon the arm. The typical significance of all of this was that the hand should do nothing contrary to the law of God, and the mind should never contemplate anything except what was in accord with the law of God.

"And ye shall teach them your children, talking of them, when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up."—As the family is the most intimate bond of fellowship among men, it is of the utmost importance that it should be hallowed by religion. All the relations of parents, children, and domestics are purified and are strengthened when the whole household is statedly assembled, morning, and evening, for the worship of God. The character of the church and of the state depends on the character of the family. If religion dies out in the family, it cannot elsewhere be maintained. A man's responsibility to his children, as well as to God, binds him to make his house a Bethel. If not a Bethel, it will be a dwelling place of evil spirits.

Significance of Home

We hear a great deal these days about the loss, in modern life, of a real appreciation of the value and significance of home. The toil of every day, and attendance at school, keep the members of our modern home apart through the day; attendance at the movies, or driving out in our automobiles in the evening, more and more is depriving our children of the privileges of fellowship with their parents at home. What we need today, for the strengthening of the church, for keeping our children from ultimate disaster, as far as we are able, for building up a mighty wall against the waves of atheism that are coming to us with increasing force, for saving our nation from an utter dissolution of moral integrity and uprightness, is a return to the sacred precepts here laid down by God himself regarding the teaching concerning God and the word of God at the hearthside of our own homes. Nothing can ever take the place of this.

"And thou shalt write them upon the door-posts of thy house, and upon thy gates."—The word here translated "door-posts" is, in the Hebrew, the word "mezuzah," and this very word is the name of the little case or glass tube which is nailed to the door-posts of the house, and in which a piece of parchment is folded, on which is inscribed on one side the verses found in Deut. 6: 4—9 and 11: 13—21, and, on the other the name for God, Shaddai. On leaving or entering the house, a pious Jew touches the mezuzah with his finger, and puts the finger to his lips, repeating the words of Ps. 121: 8.

"That your days may be multiplied and the days of your children, in the land which Jehovah sware unto your fathers to give them, as the days of the heavens above the earth. For if ye shall diligently keep all this commandment which I command you, to do it, to love Jehovah your God, to walk in all his ways, and to cleave unto him; Then will Jehovah drive out all these nations from before you and ye shall dispossess nations greater and mightier than yourselves."—To fulfill this promise to Israel, God promises that he himself will drive out the nations possessing the country which he intends Israel to have.

Israel's Tragedy

"Every place whereon the sole of your foot shall tread shall be yours: from the wilderness, and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the hinder sea shall be your border. There shall no man be able to stand before you: Jehovah your God shall lay the fear of you and the dread of you upon all the land that ye shall tread upon, as he hath spoken unto you."—If the Israelites would be faithful to God, God would faithfully fulfill his promise to them, and no power on earth would ever be able to keep the Israelites from the blessings which were in the heart of God to bestow upon them. The great tragedy was that Israel did not keep these commandments, and consequently she never fully subdued the pagan and idolatrous people whom she found inhabiting Palestine upon her entrance into that land under Joshua.

Judge Pays Fine Himself

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb.— B. M. Dierks, acting county judge, tempered justice with mercy in the case of Sol Lesser, charged with fishing without a license. "I understand the extenuating circumstances in this case," said the judge. "I know you have been doing your level best to get along without going on relief. But you must buy a license." Judge Dierks fined Sol $8.30 and then paid the fine himself.

RADIO HEADLINERS OF THE WEEK

G. C. MURRAY

The annual Canadian Golf Championship matches at St. Andrew's, on September 9th, 10th, and 11th, will have two or three broadcasts daily from the course which will keep fans who are unable to attend, posted with the latest happenings. On the final day there will be a broadcast of the final scores and the presentation of the Seagram Gold Cup, and the prize money of $1,000 to the winner.

To Start New CBS Show

Starting Friday, September 10th, a smart 45-minute musical variety show will be aired from 10 to 10.45 p.m. The show, "Coca-Cola Presents the Songship," will have the charming Kitty Carlisle, lyric soprano of stage and screen, as its star. Frank Crumit will act as Master of Ceremonies. Reed Kennedy, baritone, and Alice Cornett, rhythm singer, will also be heard. The widely known Songsmiths Quartette were re-christened "The Songshop Quartet" for this series and a 22-voice glee club under the direction of Kenneth Christie, accompanied by a 47-piece orchestra with Gustav Haenschen wielding the baton will be something to listen to. In our opinion, this series should be one of the radio highlights each week. 92 Columbia Stations will carry this series.

Jolson Back With Larger Show

Al Jolson returned to the Columbia network Tuesday September 7th, with an enlarged musical variety program. The time is the same as in the past — 8.30 to 9.00 p.m. In addition to Martha Raye, Parkyakarkus, and Victor Young's big orchestra, the programs in this series boast the appearance every other week of a prominent guest star from the entertainment world. When no guest stars will be on the program, Jolson will present a series of fast-moving dramatic skits, in which the "Mammy Singer" will take the leading role.

Cantor To Start New Schedule

Eddie Cantor, the banjo-eyed comedian and his company consisting of Deanna Durbin, Pinky Tomlin, "Saymore Saymore" who is called Helen Troy by her friends, Jacques Renard and his orchestra with announcer Jimmy Wallington, will return to the airwaves of the CBS on Wednesdays, instead of Sundays, starting September 29th, from 8.30 to 9.00 p.m.

Local Programmes

We certainly think that the weekly amateur show heard on C F R B and other Ontario stations is getting really 'corny." It sounds like bad production. ..... The travelogue broadcast heard on C F R B Tuesdays and Thursdays at 2.00 p.m. is nicely done. The organ music in the background adds a touch of finesse to the program ..... That two-piano team of Snider and Ross presented over the CBC network are doing some fine work.

HOSTAGE HEIRESS

CHAPTER 1

"Oh, Janet!" Gregory Gason beckoned to Janet Duane as she lingered at the top of the yacht's ladder, bidding farewell to her guests embarking for shore in the sleek motor launch. Gregory was older than Janet and her set and, in her eyes, was "thrillingly sophisticated."

"Come on, or we'll be stranded on board," she told him gaily.

"Why not?" He took Janet's arm and smiled down into her eager face. "I've made certain arrangements..." The tips of his fingers caressed her arm and set Janet's pulse beating a little faster.

"Arrangements?" she questioned.

"Exactly."

He knew precisely the right moment to release her arm and light a cigarette nonchalantly. They were alone now upon the deck of the Fleetwing, her father's palatial yacht. A silver moon rode overhead, and the smooth waters of Biscayne Bay glimmered softly.

Janet shivered a little as Gregory's gray eyes met hers. She felt poised upon the horizon of adventure. It was a night of enchantment.

The spell was suddenly broken by a swift roar from the motor of the launch. Janet ran to the rail with a little startled cry. Gregory followed her slowly, smiling with satisfaction.

"They've gone off and left us!" Janet cried.

"Isn't that too bad!" Gregory said calmly.

"It's not funny!" she stormed at him. "I told you we shouldn't linger here. They've all drunk so much champagne that they don't realize they've left us behind. We can't swim ashore!"

He shrugged. "I've been trying to arrange a moment alone with you for the last two weeks. But you're always surrounded by that crowd, who never seem to stop for breath."

"But we're absolutely marooned!" she wailed. "And there's no one else aboard except the crippled watchman."

"Quite true." Gregory flipped his cigarette into the water and turned to her with a faint smile. "I mentioned certain arrangements."

She stared at him. "You mean . . . you planned this?"

"Exactly," he told her urbanely. "The launch man was quite amenable to reason . . . in the form of a cash consideration. You've been avoiding me," he complained. "So I decided to take matters into my own hands."

Janet faced him in angry indecision. She was frightened—and yet, she was thrilled. Perhaps she had avoided being alone with him. Why? She knew the answer in her heart. He was different from the gilded youths with whom she had danced and played in New York and Miami. Much older, and with an air of mystery which youth always finds intriguing. She knew she had avoided him because she feared him.

"Most interesting," she said icily. "Is it your idea of good form to kidnap the hostess?"

"Oh, come," he murmured. "Kidnapping is hardly the word. You're aboard your father's yacht, you know. I assure you my intentions are strictly honorable. You forced me to this course as the only possible way of arranging a tete-a-tete."

"Tete-a-tete is a mild way of expressing it!" she retorted.

"I'm sorry," he said gently. "I've been a brute to tease you like this. As a matter of fact," he lied swiftly, "the launch will return for us as soon as the others are put ashore. Everyone will think we were simply carelessly left behind. And in the meantime . . . we'll have an opportunity for a little chat in the lounge." He smiled convincingly.

"Oh!" Janet breathed in quick relief. "The launch will really come back?"

"Of course," he reassured her.

Time enough, he thought, for her to worry when the launch, following his instructions, did not return. He took her arm, leading her toward the lounge.

He opened the door with a flourish and motioned for her to enter. Glancing back, Janet saw the shrunken form of the watchman on deck as he went about the task of turning out all illumination excepting the riding lights fore and aft.

Then, Gregory softly closed the door, and they were alone in the snug lounge.

The Fleetwing was Cyrus Dunne's pride and joy. Equipped with powerful engines, she was fast as a racing craft; and, designed by a famous firm of shipbuilders, she was a veritable floating mansion.

A curious strain of circumstances had served to anchor her in Biscayne Bay, unmanned, at the beginning of the winter season. Cyrus Duane was a hard man. Captain Coleman, master of the Fleetwing since the day she was launched, had discovered in his employer a man more stubborn than himself. There had been friction between master and owner on several occasions. A few weeks previously, this friction had developed into a bitter quarrel, and Captain Coleman had departed from the yacht, swearing he would never set foot on her deck again. The crew, loyal to their chief, had followed the captain ashore en masse. Cyrus Duane, in New York, had cursed roundly at the telegraphed news, but had delayed seeking a new master and crew until he could come to Miami and [illegible] matter personally.

Janet, visiting Miami, had commandeered the yacht for this night's party, employing a local firm of caterers to arrange all details of refreshments, music, and so forth.

Now, she sank into a deeply cushioned chair and breathed a tired little sigh. The party had been a grand success, but she was glad it was over. This was her first season, and already she was beginning to feel apathetic about parties. Life had proved desperately disappointing up to now. The endless round of social gaiety seemed unimportant somehow.

She wanted to live vividly. There must be much more to living, she thought, than she had discovered thus far. Sometimes she lay awake at night and longed for an opportunity to do something reckless; dreaming chaotic dreams of one day emerging into a world where she might live dangerously—love daringly.

She gazed at Gregory Gason speculatively. Her sense of inner excitement grew stronger. He sank into a chair before her. A little silence fell between them.

Gregory lit a cigarette. He must be very cautious—very careful not to frighten her. So much depended upon lulling her into a sense of false security, so that she would not immediately note the swift passage of time.

When she realized that the launch would not return, he hoped it would be too late for her to upset his carefully laid plans. He was a patient man. He had planned this coup patiently. Biding his time until circumstances conspired to aid his ends.

He congratulated himself, now, as he swiftly reviewed the perfection of his plot. It would be several hours, at least, before Janet would be missed. Morning, probably, before anyone would think to come to the yacht in search of her. And that would be too late. Who would believe her story? The launch tender was prepared to swear it was Janet who ordered him not to return.

Quite damaging enough evidence, Gregory reflected, to force a very handsome cash settlement from the millionaire, Cyrus Duane, to keep the matter quiet. Blackmail? Perhaps. But he was fully prepared to marry Janet, he reminded himself, should Cyrus feel his daughter's honor demanded such reparation. Of course he would marry her! Why not? She was the heiress to many millions, and undeniably attractive, besides.

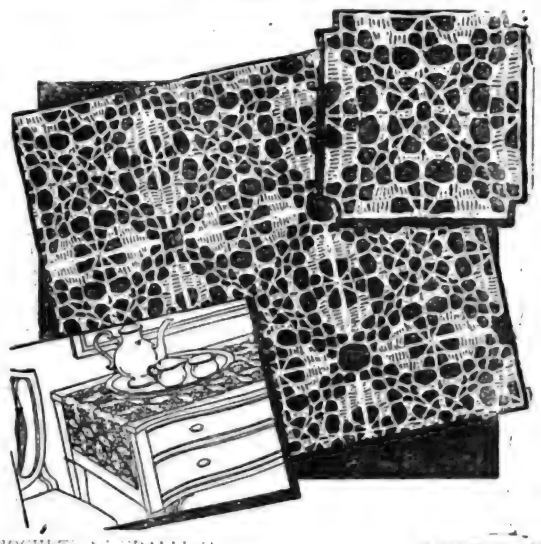
Police May Adopt Homespun Dress



QUEBEC—Snappy homespun uniforms may replace the traditional blue serge which has garbed Quebec City policemen for generations, if a suggestion made by Quebec Mayor, J. E. Gregoire, is acted upon.

His Worship feels that the grey homespun uniforms would not only provide a decided contrast to the ordinary order of things, but would also encourage French-Canadian industry. There is a possibility of the law also being adorned with colorful woollen belts, such as those worn by snowshoers and "Coureurs des Bois" centuries ago. This is suggested as a tourist attraction.

Single Hair Often Sends Murderers To Gallows

Evidence of Sir Bernard Salisbury, Famous Pathologist, Feared; Makes No Mistakes.

LONDON.—Drop in at the Old Bailey, most dreary and historic of all London's famous courts, and they will whisper to you that the person in the witness box giving evidence on behalf of the prosecution in a sensational murder trial can hang you with a single hair.

They will also tell you that, next to the gallows, murderers fear him more than anything on earth for it is a matter of record that at least a score of notorious murderers have paid the extreme penalty as a direct result of his evidence.

You can see for yourself that despite his 58 years he well deserves the reputation of being one of England's handsomest men. Furthermore, he is one of England's busiest men because they still murder people in this country; have very gruesome murders in fact, even though they have no gangster warfare as in the United States. Instead of shooting his victim down in broad daylight, the English murderer inclines towards more stealth and usually endeavors to conceal his crime.

An Exact Science

This is where the man in the witness box comes into the picture. He is Sir Bernard Spilsbury, government pathologist, who has made detection of crime an exact science. When he tells the judge and jury that a certain individual was murdered in a certain particular manner there are not "ifs" attached because, in his own estimation, Sir Bernard is always right.

Uncanny Accuracy

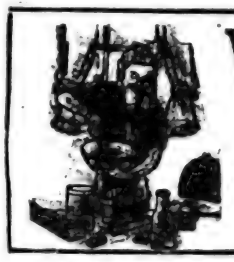
It is for this very reason that Sir Bernard is not exactly popular with barristers whose business it is to defend accused persons. Let Sir Bernard tell a jury how a crime was committed and if his evidence is against the accused the unfortunate person is as good as hanged. Only a few days ago an eminent lawyer protested that Sir Bernard is "almost a god in these courts, because no one is ever allowed to disbelieve what he says."

But Sir Bernard has an easy conscience for he has yet to be found in a mistake and has again and again demonstrated the uncanny accuracy of his work, as in the case of a young woman by the name of Molly Phillips who was found dead in Exmoor in 1931.

There was some doubt as to how she died, the body being found in a marsh with one arm missing, and nearby a hair was picked up. Sir Bernard concluded that the hair belonged to Mollie Phillips because it matched hair found on a brush she used the day before her disappearance.

But there were no roots attached to this particular hair, so Bernard concluded that it had been bitten off by an animal and similarly accounted for the missing arm, and established that she had fallen over a boulder face downward and been smothered. In this case, with a single hair he cleared everybody of suspicion; but there are cases in which he has figured where hair has identified the murderer.

Sealed Doom of Fox



It was Sir Bernard's evidence which sealed the doom of Sidney Albert Fox, who was hanged for murder of his 63-year-old mother in a Margate hotel bedroom after he had insured her life for £1,000. Sir Bernard exploded something of a bombshell when he told the court that the woman had died from strangulation, even though no outward evidence was available.

Fox had taken great pains to cover up his nefarious deed. He had set fire to the room and the defence was confident of an acquittal because there was no external marks of violence.

But they had not reckoned on Sir Bernard. First, his investigation revealed no trace of soot in the dead woman's windpipe, nor was there any carbon monoxide in her blood, proof positive that she had died before the fire started. Then, he discovered tiny bruises inside, the grim tale of how pressure had been applied until life was extinct.

YOUR FAVORITE DESSERT — ICE CREAM — EASILY MADE

Ask any Canadian what his favorite dessert is and the answer will be "ice cream." Some may say ice cream and cake, others ice cream and apple pie, but ice cream is the favorite throughout the country.

You all remember the old methods of making ice cream. You cooked the custard foundation, boiled the sugar, melted marshmallows and did a whole lot of tedious tasks to get a quart of the family's favorite dish. In fact, we know of one "horse and buggy" era recipe which required 14 different steps. But that is all over and hundreds of housewives are getting a big thrill out of the ice cream powder which can be purchased so cheaply and easily now. There are all kinds of flavors and even one unflavored powder which gives you the chance of adding your own favorite flavor. From ice cream powder you can now make delicious desserts in a few easy steps.

When serving ice cream let your imagination do the decorating. There are many tricks that add novelty and finer flavor to this old favorite. Sauces, for instance, are particularly good to pep up ice cream and either chocolate or butterscotch is always popular. Maple syrup, nuts, coconut and whipped cream will enable you to make very professional looking sundaes right at home.

Here are a few recipes using the new ice cream powder and we'll guarantee that you and your family will be more than pleased with the results.

COFFEE CARAMEL ICE CREAM

4 tablespoons sugar
½ cup strong coffee
½ cup milk
½ package (scant 1-3 cup) unflavored ice cream powder.
1 cup cream whipped.

Caramelize sugar until golden brown. Add coffee gradually and stir until dissolved. Add milk very gradually to ice cream powder, stirring until dissolved, then add coffee-caramel mixture. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into freezing tray of automatic refrigerator and freeze as rapidly as possible. Stir when frozen ¼ inch thick on sides and twice more at 20-minute intervals. Freezing time: about 3 hours. Makes ¾ quart.

For 1½ quarts, double the recipe above, using full contents of package. Freeze in one or two trays 3 to 6 hours.

RASPBERRY SHERBET

2 cups crushed red raspberries
1 cup sugar
6 tablespoons lemon juice
1 package strawberry flavored ice cream powder.

Force berries through sieve; add sugar and lemon juice. Measure and add enough water to make 5 cups. Add this mixture very gradually to ice cream powder, stirring until dissolved. Freeze in freezer. Makes 2 quarts sherbet.

Baked Alaska is the last word in fancy ice cream deiserts, but you can get the same effect with a lot less effort by placing small squares of cake on a board, top with ice cream and mask with meringue. Place the board in hottest oven to brown the meringue quickly and serve at once. This dessert will call forth cheers from the family and because it is so quickly and easily made, it can be served often.

The Open Column

Mr. Hepburn, we think, has provided something of a problem for serious thinkers by offering, on the eve of election, a $2,500,000 rebate on motor car licenses. This step was not without precedent, of course. Mr. Ferguson handed us back $5 apiece in 1926. But the side of the rebate that leaves us puzzled is this: Mr. Hepburn is promising more and bigger highway construction. If the assumption of county roads as provincial highways has been carried out in other counties on as large as scale as has been the case in Peel, we would think that Mr. Hepburn would need this $2,500,000 which he promises motorists of the province to contruct the highways he has promised. Remember, in 1925, counties were still paying a considerable proportion of the cost of constructing provincial highways. Now Mr. Hepburn is going to build these highways entirely from the gas tax receipts and the residue of the motor license fees. If it can be done, Mr. Hepburn is a better financier than his predecessors. If it cannot be done, Mr. Hepburn has offered voters of the province a straight bribe.

The town of Georgetown has just completed the old home week celebration which was to have been a chief feature of the town's centennary, and, for some reason or other, the old home week was a decided flop, frost, or failure. The attendance at the various meetings of the old home week were far below the optimistic estimates advanced to press representatives by the committeemen who had charge of the arrangements for the old home week, and, we must add, the programs provided at the various gatherings of the returning old boys and girls, were very much less interesting and complete than they might have been. In short, we did not like Georgetown's old home week.

The fault of the failure might be laid upon the committee in charge. Organization work was not carried out with any degree of thoroughness, possibly because one or two men were expected to do all the work. Or the fault might be upon the town for not providing more funds for the celebration. But one thing was readily apparent. The community spirit of Georgetown must be at a very low ebb, at the present time, to allow the celebration to fall to such a low standard. We have seen some very fine entertainments of one sort and another in Georgetown, and we received the impression, from last week's fiasco, that there were not enough men in the district who cared enough about their home town to take hold of the old home week, and make a real job of it.

Weekly papers in this district have been publishing, for several weeks, an open letter to motorists, indicating that the motorist is a hog who is eternally trying to put one over on the humble pedestrian. No doubt there are a few motorists who lack courtesy to pedestrians, or to other motorists, for that matter. There is also a class of pedestrian who likes to walk across streets against traffic lights and make approaching drivers slam on their brakes to save the life of a congenital idiot; who likes to stroll along a provincial highway with his or her back to traffic, well out in the traffic lane; who saunters into the roadway from behind a parked car; who likes to dare the motorist to hit him, or her, for that matter.

The pedestrian is less limited in his or her method of using the public highways. The pedestrian can walk on either side of the road, may cross a street against traffic lights without being given a summons to court, even if life is endangered by the act, and pays no license fee for the use of the public roads. The motorist pays a license fee, pays gasoline tax, must use the right side of the road, may not go against traffic lights, and must bear the onus of proof should his car cut down a foolhardy pedestrian. Yet the author of the bitter little epistle to the papers would have us believe that the motorist is always wrong.

The Ontario Department of Health

Presents a Statement by

The Academy of Medicine, Toronto, on

"INFANTILE PARALYSIS"

(POLIOMYELITIS)

Realizing the anxiety which exists in the public mind today with respect to the increased prevalence of Poliomyelitis ("Infantile Paralysis") in Toronto and other parts of the province, the Academy of Medicine of Toronto, which represents more than one thousand physicians, called a special meeting of its Council, September 1st, to review the whole situation. To this meeting were invited representatives from all departments of medicine interested in this subject.

At the conclusion of the conference, during which time all of the pertinent facts of the present situation were presented and discussed, it was felt that, in fairness to the public, an official statement should be made to set forth the facts exactly as they exist. To this end, a committee was appointed to prepare and issue an official statement, which follows:

Poliomyelitis ("Infantile Paralysis") is a communicable disease. It is definitely known that it is caused by the entrance into the body of a minute form of life known as a virus. It is known also that this virus enters commonly through the upper part of the nasal tract. There is no evidence that the disease is conveyed by flies or domestic animals.

When an outbreak of the disease occurs, healthy persons as well as those ill with the disease are found to harbour the virus in the secretions of the nose and throat. The disease is, therefore, spread through the contact of persons one with another.

Usually the virus occasions only a mild illness but sometimes the virus enters the central nervous system, which may result in paralysis. The majority of adults are not susceptible to the disease.

Present Situation

While the number of cases reported in Toronto is greater than in any previous outbreak of this disease, and there is no reason to presume that the incidence rate is likely to decline within the next two or three weeks, it must be borne in mind that not 25% of these cases show any evidence whatever of paralysis. Furthermore, among those developing paralysis, the majority eventually will recover complete use of their paralysed limbs. It would appear, therefore, that while there is every reason for the public to view the present situation with concern, there is no justification for undue alarm or hysterical behaviour.

According to figures computed by the Department of Health, Ontario, to date, there are estimated to be 750 cases in Ontario, of which 285 have occurred in the City of Toronto. Of this number, 212 cases have been admitted to the Riverdale Isolation Hospital, only 54 of whom developed some degree of paralysis. There were 11 deaths in this group. Statistics of a similar nature apply to the Hospital for Sick Children, which has received its cases not only from Toronto but from other parts of the province.

Control Measures

These include the strict isolation of all persons ill with the disease and the quarantine of those who have been in immediate contact.

In as much as it is not known who are or are not carriers of this disease, it is advisable to reduce to a minimum, contact with other people. In other words, keep out of crowds. As children are particularly susceptible, it is most important that they be kept as far as possible from mingling with other persons. For this reason, the opening of the schools of Toronto has been deferred and the Department of Health of the Province of Ontario has recommended to parents that they see to it that their children avoid attendance at theatres, playgrounds, bathing pools and beaches and other places of amusement where children congregate. The Academy agrees with the provincial and municipal health authorities that the responsibility for the control of the activities of children is primarily the duty of the parents.

The Department of Health of Ontario has completed within its own organization plans whereby serum for the treatment of this disease is available in any part of the province upon the request of the attending physician.

Nasal Spray

Experimental work with animals indicates that Poliomyelitis can be prevented by spraying the extreme upper part of the inside of the nose with a harmless solution of zinc sulphate. This was discovered during the past year. To date, its value in the prevention of Poliomyelitis in humans is not known. To be in any degree effective, the spray must be applied high up inside the nose. This can only be done with a specially constructed atomizer and by a physician thoroughly familiar with this type of work. The application of this or any other spray by an ordinary atomizer or to the lower part of the nose is quite useless. The possible value of the nasal spray properly administered is being determined at the present time in Toronto.

The Council of the Academy of Medicine of Toronto endorses the attitude adopted by the provincial Department of Health and the local Board of Health in respect to measures designed to control the present situation. We would respectfully suggest that the general public will best serve its own interests by endeavoring to follow the advice which is being given by these health authorities.

MR. AND MRS. FRASER HONORED

On Tuesday evening, the congregation of Knox church, Sixteen, assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. McLean to honor Rev. Mr. Fraser and his wife, before Mr. Fraser's retirement as their minister. A short program of vocal and instrumental music was given by Miss J. Jamieson and Miss M. Peacock, followed by a contest in which all joined. On behalf of the congregation, Mr. Alex. Porter, senior elder, expressed their appreciation of Mr. and Mrs. Fraser's work in behalf of the church and the love they had for them, and called on them to accept a gift of a dinner wagon of burl walnut which was presented by Mrs. G. H. King, president of the Ladies' Aid Society. Mr. Fraser expressed thanks with much feeling. Earlier in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Fraser were guests at dinner of Mr. and Mrs. McLean. Other guests were the elders of the church, which included Mr. Porter, with Mrs. Porter, Mr. Frank Ford, with Mrs. Ford and Mr. J. McPherson and sister, Mrs. J. McKay.

Sixteen, Trafalgar, correspondent in The Oakville Record—Star.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee, Brampton, announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Irene, to Mr. George Elmer Morrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Morrison, of Woodhill, the marriage to toke place early in October.

The engagement is announced of Margaret Anne, daughter of Rev. John McKenzie, to Robert W. Lindsay, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Lindsay, the marriage to take place quietly early in October.

OBITUARY

Mrs. J. Noble, aged 48, of Port Credit, died in St. Joseph's Hospital early Monday as the result of injuries received when she was struck by an auto on Lakeshore road while waiting to board a street car Sunday night.

According to police, Mrs. Noble had her left leg nearly torn off and lost a considerable quantity of blood. Mrs. Noble also had her left arm fractured and suffered severe head injuries.

The accident occurred shortly after 11 o'clock, and the woman remained unidentified for nearly two hours as Long Branch police sought to locate relatives or friends.

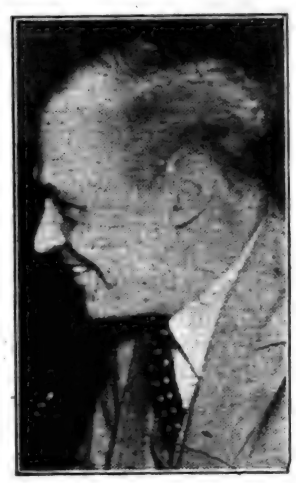
Chief R. W. Smythe and Constable W. Maloney, who investigated, stated that the woman, according to eye-witnesses, was standing near the street car tracks on the roadway preparing to board an eastbound street car when she was struck. The auto was in charge of Alvin Myles of New Toronto. Baycroft's ambulance took the injured woman to the hospital.

Mrs. Noble was a daughter of the late Arthur J. Carrington, Streetsville. Interment took place in Erindale cemetery.

LET US SMILE

The big railway terminal was crowded when a shabby individual approached a wicket and peered inquiringly at the young woman on duty behind it.

"Excuse me, miss," he apologized, "but do you represent the Travellers' Aid Society?"



"Yes," she replied.

"Den where's de freight yards, please?"

The Open Column

Mr. William Kemp, we note, objects to references to Hon. Duncan Marshall in the Open Column. To dispell any misapprehension which Mr. Kemp may have derived from his reading of articles in that column of the Review, we wish to say that, should anyone consider that the reference to Mr. Marshall's "teetotalism" constituted a sneer, we are profoundly sorry, and tender an apology to Mr. Marshall, Mr. Kemp, and anyone else who didn't like the reference. The adoption of a flippant tone in discussing subjects with a possible political application often leads to misunderstanding, it would appear. Although the writer does not necessarily subscribe to the principle of total abstinence, he has a healthy respect for any man who does so subscribe, and who has the intellectual stamina to maintain such a stand.

Another point to which Mr. Kemp took exception was the statement that The Toronto Star would not mention Mr. Marshall's name. Here, however, we were right, although, unfortunately, we cannot give Mr. Kemp exact information as to how long a period Mr. Marshall's name was omitted from Star reports. If Mr. Kemp is acquainted with Mr. Marshall, he will know that that honorable gentleman possesses a sharp temper, and sometimes, under provocation, loses that temper. He lost it, one day, on conversation with a higher official of The Star, and, for some time thereafter, was referred to, simply, as the minister of agriculture. Mr. Marshall was mentioned by name before that occurrence, and will be again, no doubt, if The Star has not already reconsidered its stand.

However, the point on which Mr. Kemp is chiefly incensed, we believe, is that the Review, many years an advocate of temperance, should be allowed by its editor, who is a personal believer in total abstinence, should tolerate the suggestion that beverage rooms should be opened in the county of Peel. The writer of the Open Column, as has already been pointed out, does not subscribe to total abstinence. But neither does he advocate the opening of beverage rooms in Peel, if Mr. Kemp will read the article to which he objects.

The point of the matter under discussion, as far as we are concerned, is that there exist in Peel three different types of legislation relating to alcoholic beverages, a condition that, in our opinion, should be remedied for the good of every faction concerned with the distribution or prohibition of the distribution of liquor.

For the information of our readers, let us enumerate them. First of all, there was local option. Several of the municipalities adopted local option years ago. Then it was found that residents of these municipalities went to hotels in adjoining municipalities of the county to drink. The Canada Temperance Act was put in force in Peel to remedy this condition, and, to the best of our knowledge, there was no further action on liquor legislation relating directly to Peel until, about two years ago, a Toronto man openly drank a glass of whiskey in a hotel at Cooksville.

He was arrested by provincial police who had been notified of his intentions, and the case was tried in police court at Brampton, and the drinker fined for illegal consumption of liquor, and, if we remember correctly, for illegal possession of liquor. The case was appealed and the judgment of the magistrate upheld by Judge Trevor H. Grout, thus making the Liquor Control Act operative in Peel County unless an appeal against Judge Grout was sustained. No such appeal was made, and nominally, the Liquor Control Act is operative in the county, to the best of our understanding of legal precedent.

Such being the case, it would seem only fair, until further legal interpretation of the situation is obtained, that hotels in municipalities not under local option should be given authorities to dispense malt beverages. Particularly so when one club located within a local option area has an authority to vend beers and ales to its membership.

Hon. Duncan Marshall has taken time from his administration of the department of agriculture to obtain provincial highways for Peel, and to assist in obtaining improvement of the Port Credit harbor, according to the statements to the Peel Gazette, so that, if there is any one man in Ontario who is in a position to move the provincial government to a solution of the liquor legislation pertaining to Peel, he is the man. The writer has no personal interest in disposition of the situation by Mr. Marshall or anyone else, but merely a desire to see some final settlement of a question that has been in a state of suspension since the introduction of beverage rooms in this province.

We trust that the foregoing paragraphs will satisfy Mr. Kemp and any other readers who suspected personal animus and interest in the articles appearing in the Open Column that there is no attempt being made on the part of the writer to embarrass Mr. Marshall, but simply that the writer desired the solution of a peculiarly involved problem. We are, also, we must admit, somewhat elated that our articles have drawn the attention of Mr. Kemp, who is a frequent contributor of letters to the Toronto papers, we are informed. In fact, if he'd like to pick a subject outside of the somewhat unsettled arena of politics, we'd like very much to debate it with him through the columns of the Review. Now isn't that fair enough?

The annual Rally Day for the Sunday School will be held on Sunday morning next at 10.15 standard time.

Snider's School re-opened on Monday. School was held for two days at the beginning of the term and was then closed by the trustees as a safety measure, although no cases of infantile paralysis were in the community.

Early History Halton County

By SANDY

ESQUESING

In 1818-19 a vast trek of settlers from the British Isles came to central Ontario. They seemed to settle in droves. The people from a certain locality in the old land would settle close to each other in the new. Thus we see a band of Irish Catholics from Armagh County, Ireland, settling in Trafalgar East, earning for the section the name of "the Catholic swamp", a nickname that sticks to it until the present day. Just one mile to the east of them there came to the "Town Line" the Cookes, Coles, Cantelons and Sparlings. These were from Tipperary and Limerick and were enthusiastic Orangemen, starting the first Orange Lodge in the vicinity of Harry Cole's house. These men, under the leadership of Harry Cole, became known as "The Town Line Blasers." In one part of Esquesing a number of English settled and were known as "The English Block". At the same time there came to concession three, fifth sideroad, a detachment of settlers from "Bonnie Scotland". Among them were the Shortreeds, Peter Scott, Chisholms, David Knight, Sandy May, Robert Murry, James Stark, John Stewart, J. Sproat, James Laidlaw, Robert McPherson and many others. The large section, known as the "Scotch Block" was drawn exclusively by Scotchmen with the exception of one lot, that was drawn by an Irishman, but even he did not locate on the land.

The land was densely timbered with some of the finest pine on the continent. This at first, however, was worse than valueless as there was no market for it and it had to be chopped and burned before anything could be grown on the land. A derrick was erected on the farm of John Shortreed, where, with labor incesent, the lumber for finishing the first crude log cabin was cut with a whip saw. Men today can hardly conceive the patience of men that, one above and one below, worked for hours cutting one board. In the old land the newcomers had all secured an excellent education in the well-equipped schools of Scotland.

In their modest log cabins the stork was constantly arriving and the saptroughs that served as cradles were constantly rocking. Thus the first problem that faced them as a public duty was to provide education for their children. On a bright day in May, 1822, the Scotchmen assembled on the roadway of lot 2, third concession. They erected a log building to serve as a school. Some of the men felled the trees in the adjacent forest, others trimmed them and cut the logs into proper lengths, and others brought their ox teams and snaked them to the site of the building where a number of others raised them into position, four of the most skilful taking a corner each and with keen axes dove-tailed the corners to fit snugly. The crevices were filled with moss and mud, making a comfortable building when finished. Here, on wooden benches, 60 and 70 pupils were well-grounded in the "Three R's". Another log school was built on lot 12, concession three. This served for a number of years. The first teachers were paid a small amount of cash and boarded 'round among the people, the number of days spent at each place being guided by the percentage of pupils attending from each home.

Bears and wolves and other wild animals were very plentiful about this time. The children were often in great danger, especially from wolves coming to and going from school.

In the days of Wm. Lyon McKenzie feelings ran high in this section. Mr. McDonald was a school teacher in 1836. He was an ardent patriot and one day got a copy of "The Colonial Advocate", McKenzie paper, to which Hugh Black of the Block was a valued and able contributor. So engrossed was he in reading the paper that it was the evening before he got started at the lessons. In order to finish he had to throw cedar splinters on the fireplace to make a light. The children had to go home in the dark and were terrified by the howling of the wolves.

Then the Church came. Everything was Scotch. Gaelic was constantly heard. People did business in Gaelic, sang in Gaelic, read in Gaelic, and the young couples courted in Gaelic. A piper, named McWhillan, who worked at Laidlaw's, cheered the homesick hearts to the skirl of the pipes. To the music the people danced the Scotch Reel, the Trallock Reel, Highland Fling and other dances. But what their hearts hungered most for was a Presbyterian Church, where they could sing the Psalms and worship God. Services were held in the school house, but, in 1825, a mighty effort was made and a splendid frame church, 40 x 30, was erected. It was tastefully finished and had a gallery. The whole community helped to build it, and it was supposed to be open to service of any denomination. Here services would be held at 11 o'clock on Sunday forenoon. About 1 o'clock there would be an intermission for about an hour. People would take their lunch and go to a spring on Mr. Shortreed's farm, where a serviceable picnic would be held. Then worship would be resumed, continuing most of the afternoon. These were before the days of the twenty minute sermons. Preachers believed the Bible to be God's Word. They believed in sin, also in salvation. Sermons two hours in length on justification by faith, election, predestination and other heavy subjects were not only listened to but enjoyed by the sermon-testers of long ago. Sometimes one service would be conducted in Gaelic, thus being much enjoyed by the old-timers.

Streetsville Fall Fair

The Streetsville Fair prize list is in the printer's hands and ought to be ready for distribution shortly. There are several added features this year.

There will be two classes, according to age, for boys or girls, in a kite-fly competition.

There are also three classes for the best Essay. Subject: "The purposes and benefits of our Fair."

Two of these classes are for pupils of different ages and the third class is for adults.

The essays must have over 400 words and not more than 1000. Entries must be made by Saturday night preceeding the Fair. Fair dates Oct. 8th and 9th.

The special prize list is very large this year.

In domestic science, fruit and vegetable classes there are over 60 specials, while in other classes there are a goodly number.

Everything points toward a most successful Fair. Remember the dates, Oct. 8th and 9th.

PERSONALS

Mrs. Walter Buck entertained friends from Buffalo this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Farrell observed the 35th anniversary of their wedding on Sept. 10th.

Dr. S. H. Smith motored to Napanee this week to visit his sister, who is quite ill.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Sibbald of Burford township visited friends in Streetsville on Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Neade, of St. Catharines, visited with Mr. and Mrs. Shell Rice last week. Her family has quite a military history. Her uncle was imprisoned by Federal troops from William Lyon McKenzie's army during the rebellion of 1837, in St. Catharines, and was granted relief by Lord Durham, Governor-General of Canada.

Miss Elizabeth Bailey has started to train as a nurse at the Women's Cottage Hospital, Toronto.

The employees of C. C. Meredith & Co. gave a shower for Miss Reta Russell, bride-to-be, last week, and presented her with a beautiful floor lamp.

Miss Ora Watson gave a miscellaneous shower for Miss Rita Russell, bride-to-be, Monday evening, when about thirty young ladies were present. She was presented with a number of lovely presents.

OBITUARY

Gordon Guthrie, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Guthrie, passed away at Dixie on Sept. 9th and was buried in Clarkson cemetery.

Mrs. Rufus Garbutt passed away at her home at Summerville on Sept. 8th and was buried at Islington.

Mrs. R. F. Sanderson passed away at Oakville, on Sept. 11th. Interment took place at Greenock, in Bruce County. Besides her husband, two daughters survive.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Streetsville High School commenced the fall and winter term on Monday morning. The school was addressed by the chairman, O. R. Church, and the new staff, Mr. A. E. Buckle, principal, and Miss Eva Henry, Toronto, and Miss Irene Bonham, Streetsville, assistants, were welcomed to the school. Dr. G. A. Montemurro, M.O.H., also gave an address. Forty-two pupils were enrolled the first day, and many more are expected as soon as the paralysis epidemic clears up.

Catharine Patricia, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Belford, Port Credit, passed away in Toronto on Sept. 10th, and was buried in Clarkson cemetery.

A number of Streetsville Oddfellows motored to Toronto Sunday evening to attend church service.

Judge Archibald Cochrane presided at the revising of the Voters List in Streetsville last Friday, when about eighty names were added to the list.

"SALADA" BRO

GREEN TEA

HOSTAGE HEIRESS

By DAVID DRESSER

Janet Duane, millionaire's daughter, gives a party one night aboard her father's palatial yacht, anchored off Miami. Gregory Gason tricks her into being left behind with him when the guests are taken ashore. He pays the launch tender not to come back for them. As far as he knows, no one else but a crippled watchman is left aboard.

CHAPTER II

Gregory Gason was a thorough rogue. Confidence games, card-sharping, and discreet blackmail had provided him with funds for years. He had waited a long time for an opportunity such as this. He knew Cyrus Duane would be eager to pay any sum to keep his daughter's name from the mouths of gossip-mongers. With only the crippled watchman aboard, the situation was sufficiently compromising to make the millionaire submit to blackmail rather than let it become known.

Thus ran Gregory's thoughts as he sat with Janet in the yacht's lounge. He would have been much disconcerted had he been able to see through the bulkhead separating the lounge from the adjoining cabin, where Fandella, Janet's Negro maid, crouched on the floor, her ear pressed tightly against the wall.

Fandella was fervently devoted to her mistress. Janet had brought her aboard to assist the guests at the party, and Fandella had stayed aboard secretly because she had seen Gregory pass a bill to the launch tender earlier in the evening, and because her intuition had warned her that Gregory was a "bad un."

She was shaking now with fright and suspense. She had been lurking in the cabin doorway when Gregory and Janet had entered the lounge, and she was somberly positive that Gregory meant the girl no good.

These four aboard, and the Fleetwing riding serenely at anchor. Here and there, dotting the surface of the bay, glimmered the red and green lights of other anchored yachts. A silence enshrouding the scene. The glow of moonlight upon the water rendering the dark hulks of the yachts indistinctly visible.

The silence was softly broken by the muffled chug-chug of a squat tugboat nosing in through the channel. Four men were standing in the cockpit. A fifth figure stood before the wheel and expertly guided The Bat between the channel markers. The men were silent, and The Bat's lights were carefully dimmed to make her as inconspicuous as possible.

The man at the wheel was broad-shouldered. His face was pock-marked and cruel. Cap'n Jud and The Bat were known from Tampico to Bimini as a pair ready to be hired for any clandestine enterprise requiring the service of a seagoing tug.

Two of the group in the cockpit were unimportant. They were oil-stained dungarees and were indistinguishable from a thousand of their fellows who minister to the needs of engine-driven craft upon the seas.

"Dusty" Lanion and "Snifter" Scanlon completed the group that stood silent while Cap'n Jud steered toward the Fleetwing. Snifter was short, wiry, nervous. His face was thin and sallow. His eyes were disproportionately large, and were glazed with a peculiar smoky hue. A rat-like killer who drew courage from a white powder which he sniffed from a twisted paper in times of stress.

Dusty had a whole-souled contempt for human off-scourings such as Snifter. But Snifter had courage of a sort, and could be depended upon as long as he received regular rations of the white powder. It didn't pay to be squeamish, Dusty had found, when one was bent upon an undertaking of this magnitude.

Dusty was tall and slim-waisted. When he moved, it was with a peculiar lithe grace which caused men to underestimate his strength. His face was stern and deeply tanned.

The war had done queer things to Dusty. A quiet, dreamy stripling, thrust into the man-made inferno, he had emerged grim and embittered. Somehow, he had found he could not return home after his discharge in 1919. He had drifted to Mexico with a construction company. There, adventure had claimed him. A revolutionary faction had needed men. Dusty had volunteered.

Thus, fifteen years previously, had begun the career of Dusty Lanion, Soldier of fortune. Reckless adventurer. A name to be emblazoned in a thousand headlines for a thousand foolhardy exploits. Dusty Lanion! A name to conjure with wherever adventures congregate.

Now, Dusty needed a boat. There was a cargo of arms and ammunition cached near a little cove on the Keys south of Miami. Revolutionists in Cuba had offered a large sum of cash for the safe unloading of that cargo on the Cuban shore. Gun-running was no new game to Dusty. But his last boat had been sunk off the coast of Honduras some months previously.

Perhaps Dusty had had some hand in the wholesale desertion of the Fleetwing's crew. Perhaps not. But he had marked the Fleetwing as fair prey since that occurrence. His plans were carefully laid.

The crippled watchman was ready when The Bat crept almost soundlessly under the bow of the yacht. A heaving line whistled athwart the cockpit. Stout arms dragged a towline aboard the tug and it was made secure.

Dusty slipped into the trailing tender and rowed cautiously fore and aft to slash the yacht's mooring ropes. He came aboard again as the powerful engine of the tug throbbed mightily. So imperceptibly did the Fleetwing gather way that three persons aboard were unaware of the transition from anchorage to gentle movement.

Only the watchman, standing on the [illegible] knew that the yacht was [illegible] towed out into the open sea and that Dusty Lanion, soldier of fortune, was in charge of the tugboat which was straining against the stout hawser.

"What'm I doin?" Cap'n Jud spun the wheel easily and grinned at Dusty. "Everything looks sweet." Dusty's face was calm, though there was a glint of excitement in his eyes.

"We've pulled it slick as a whistle," Cap'n Jud boasted. "Right under thuh Coast Guard's nose, too." He gestured expressively toward the Municipal Dock, where they knew a Coast Guard cruiser was moored.

"Looks good so far," Dusty admitted cautiously. "What I'm worried about is the lookouts on some of these other yachts. They might get suspicious . . . seeing the Fleetwing towed off in the dark of night . . . with dimmed lights and muffled engine."

"Naw," Cap'n Jud spat over the side and swung the wheel to straighten The Bat into the channel leading to the open sea. "And they wouldn't believe they was seein' right if they did make us out. Nobody'd figure there was a man big enuff fool tuh snatch a million-dollar yacht outta Biscayne Bay."

Dusty's lips set grimly as he glanced back at the yacht.

"I guess everything's all right. We're almost in the clear. I'll go back. Start easing off when you pass the point. We'll drop back and go aboard. Then you come alongside and take Otto off." Dusty spoke decisively.

"Ain't yuh forgettin' somethin'?"

"Oh, yes." Dusty took a roll of bills from his pocket and counted them ruefully. "There you are." He handed the roll to Cap'n Jud. "That's the last pay-off. You come high, but you're worth it."

He clapped Cap'n Jud on the shoulder, then hurried to the cockpit, where the three men awaited him.

"Let's go," he said impatiently. "We'll be past the point in a few minutes. We've got to be aboard and get the yacht's engines started before she begins to drift."

Siam Retains Oriental Tradition

Is Most Oriental of All Far Eastern Islands

Both white elephants and Siamese cats are virtually extinct in Siam, but the country is the most Oriental of all Far Eastern islands.

The temples of Siam are as munificently dazzling as any dream of the Orient could be. Outside they tower impressively in multi-colored grandeur and inside there is every storied tribute to Buddha that the devout and imaginative Siamese can devise. In Siam one finds Buddhism in its most flourishing present form, and the Temple of the Emerald Buddha in Bangkok—with its eight vividly polychromatic towers, symbolizing the Eight-Fold Path of the Gautama — is the most striking shrine of this religion extant with the possible exception of the Shwe Dagon Pagoda in Rangoon.

In atmosphere, too, Siam conforms to occidental notions of what the East should be. There is an attitude of lotus-eating languor, and any show of zeal in work that may be observed is by Chinese immigrants. The Siamese viewpoint, expressed in one old proverb, is that "in the water there is fish and in the ground there is rice" — which with the sparse population means that not much industry and no worry are required for their simple wants. So they take life easily—and smilingly.

Girl First to Scale Mount Stupendous

Vancouver Girl Climbs Peak Named by Alexander Mackenzie

VANCOUVER. — A 'teen-aged girl has scaled the towering mountain which Alexander Mackenzie, first white man to cross the North American Continent north of Mexico, named "Stupendous," in 1793.

Edith Munday, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Munday, Vancouver, was the first person to mount the peak towering 9,000 feet above the floor of Bella Coola Valley, B.C., when she joined her parents and Henry S. Hall, Jr., Boston secretary of the American Alpine Club, on a mountaineering trip, recently, it was reported here this week.

Fighting floods, avalanches and snow squalls, the party ascended Mt. Stupendous, 250 miles north of Vancouver, completing the final climb from their base camp in 11 hours.

Perversity

Strange, that in summer when the roses blow,
I seem to see my garden deep in snow;
With brown and leafless seed-stakes springing tall,
And scarlet rose-hips clustered on the wall.

And then in winter, when the snow is thick,
I seem to see beneath it grass-grown brick,
With hollyhocks in bloom, serene and tall,
And crimson ramblers swaying on the wall.

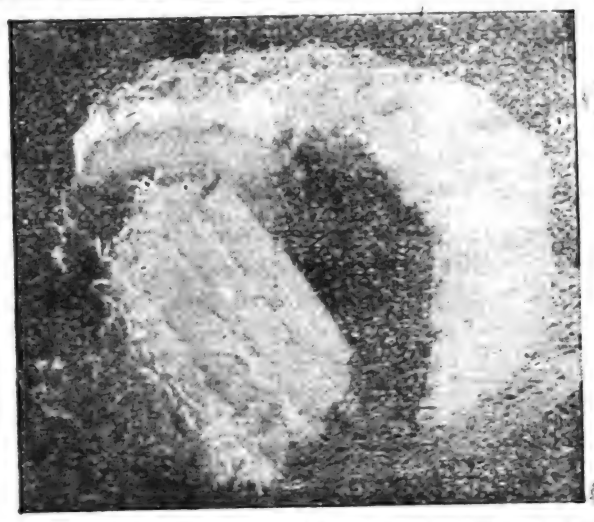
No Certified Copy Of B.N.A. Act Here

CALGARY.—There is not a single certified copy of the British North America Act in Canada, C. E. Johnson, Social Credit member of Parliament for Bow River, told a party rally here this week.

Mr. Johnson said he had hunted in vain through the libraries of the House of Commons and the Senate in Ottawa for a certified copy of the Act. The parliamentary librarian, he said, was unable to direct him to where he could find such a copy in Canada.

"I am confident there is not a certified copy of the Act in Canada," he declared.

NATURE SAYS CHEW!



KEEPS TEETH SPARKLING

Woman's World

By Mair M. Morgan

If you lived along the Caribbean, one of the joys of your life would be sampling the freshly-picked coconuts brought to you by little native boys, who would obligingly hack open the shells and let you scoop out the fresh, tender meat—rich, moist in its own sweet milk. Delicious—but not half so delicious as coconut, you can have right here at home, thousands of miles from a palm tree!

For now, Caribbean coconuts are shredded, sweetened and packed, still creamy and moist, into air-tight tins and come to you as fresh as the day they were picked. These tender, curling shreds of marvelous goodness, give exciting new flavor to cakes, cookies, and pies.

Especially good is this plain white cake with a Seven-Minute Coconut Frosting.

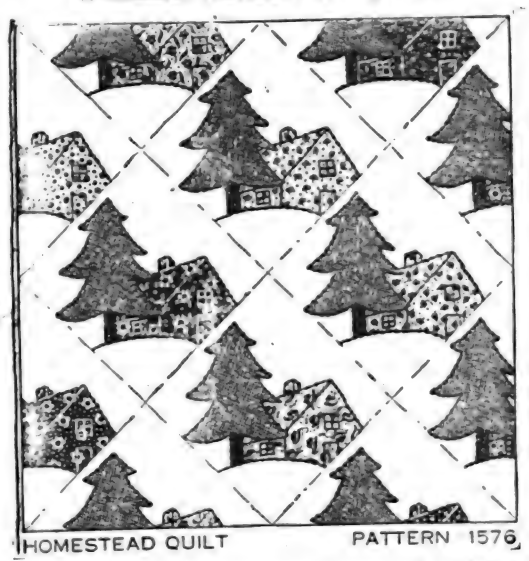
COCONUT LAYER CAKE

2 cups finely sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2-3 cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
3 eggs, unbeaten
1-3 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating well after each addition. Add vanilla. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in a moderate oven (375 Deg. F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Spread Coconut Seven-Minute Frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake.

COCONUT SEVEN-MINUTE FROSTING

2 egg whites, unbeaten
1½ cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
5 tablespoons water
1½ teaspoons light corn syrup.



Combine egg whites, sugar, water, and corn syrup in top of a double boiler, beating with rotary egg beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water, beat constantly with rotary egg beater, and cook 7 minutes, or until frosting will stand in peaks. Remove from boiling water; add vanilla and beat until thick enough to spread. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of two 9-inch layers, or top and sides of 8 x 8 x 2 inch cake, or about 2 dozen cup cakes.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn.—A couple entered the emergency hospital with a barking dog.

"He barks all the time and we can't sleep," they explained to a physician. "We want you to give him a sleeping powder."

The physician couldn't see it as an emergency, and the couple left with the dog—still barking.

YOU'LL BE THRILLED WITH THIS LAURA WHEELER HOMESTEAD QUILT

Trim [illegible] enchanting "Homestead" quilt! See, but three simple patterns go to make up its quaint applique pattern. Do the houses in scraps of material but keep the pine trees uniform throughout. You'll have a colorful quilt. And why not make a matching pillow of one of the 8 inch blocks! Pattern 1576 contains complete, and simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with the yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Twice-Budded Trees

"Double-working" apple trees is a horticultural practice which has not been used to any extent in Canada but is employed generally in the United States, Poland, Germany, and Holland. "Double-working" simply means that trees are twice budded or grafted, in contrast to the one operation in standard nursery trees. A pamphlet showing how the method of "double-working" is carried out has been prepared and may be obtained on request from the Publicity and Extension Branch of the Department at Ottawa.

Students Interested In Social Problems

Ninety-nine international student conferences took place in Europe this Summer, ranging from those of the extreme right to those of the extreme left, but mainly consisting of neutrals. The agenda generally demonstrated the growing concern among students with social and political problems.

Most important from an international viewpoint have been the meetings of six organizations representing 2,000,000 students; the World Student Association; Pax Romana, the Catholic peace organization; the World Youth Congress student camp at La Corneuve near Paris, which conducted the International Youth Peace Day activities on Aug. 15; the International University Federation for the League of Nations, meeting at Budapest; the International Student Service at Nice, and the Confederation Internationale des Etudiants at Paris.

Passenger Service May Begin in 1939

LONDON,—It is confidently expected in authoritative circles that the regular trans-atlantic air passenger service will be inaugurated in the summer of 1939. The single fare is expected to be in the neighborhood of 60 pounds sterling (about $300.)

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON XII
CHOICES AND THEIR CONSEQUENCES IN A NATION'S LIFE
Deuteronomy 11: 8-12, 26-32
GOLDEN TEXT—Choose you this day who ye will serve. Joshua 24: 15.

The Lesson in Its Setting

Place:—All the early chapters of Deuteronomy record discourses given by Moses on the east side of the Jordan River where the Israelites were encamped in what are known as the plains of Moab (see Deut. 1: 1).

"Therefore shall ye keep all the commandment which I command thee this day."

Happy is the man who has discovered that he is not meant to be a moral inventor, a maker of morals—that he has to accept a revealed morality and an offered righteousness; that God has been so kind to him as to arrange the whole way of life, so that the wayfaring man need not lose the path. This down-letting of a moral revelation is an aspect of the grace of God. "That ye may be strong, and go in and possess the land, whither ye go over to possess it." Strength here probably has a double significance—obedience to the laws of God will make for both physical strength and spiritual strength. The apostle John, speaking particularly to young men, expresses the same truth when he says: "Ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the evil one" (I John 2: 14). Living selfish, indulgent lives inevitably results in physical, mental, moral and spiritual weakness. Israel would need strength for possession of the land which God had given her, and God graciously revealed to them how they should live day by day that such strength might be their abiding possession.

"And that ye may prolong your days in the land, which Jehovah sware unto your fathers to give unto them and to their seed, a land flowing with milk and money." (See Josh. 1: 6, 7.) It is quite remarkable to notice here, as in verse 21, that the fathers of Israel, who were now dead, are mentioned as those whom God promised would some day possess the land of Canaan, and, as an ancient Jewish commentator says: "Hence we find the resurrection of the dead taught in the Law."

Rain From Heaven

"For the land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs." "But the land, whither ye go over to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven." Egypt was famous throughout the ancient world for its fertility, and we are told that when Lot lifted up his eyes and saw the plain of the Jordan, he saw a land so rich and fertile that the narrator could only speak of it as "a land like the garden of Jehovah, like the land of Egypt" (Gen. 13: 10). Moreover, the land of Goshen, in which Israel lived throughout the centuries of her sojourn in Egypt, is called "the best of the land" (Gen. 47: 6). Yet Israel was to have a more wonderfully fertile land than even Egypt, for, whereas the fertility of Egypt depended upon the annual overflow of the Nile River, the fertility of Palestine was dependent upon rain from heaven.

"A land which Jehovah thy God careth for: the eyes of Jehovah thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year." It is difficult not to think of the better land in this description, and of our Saviour's promise, "I go to prepare a place for you." There "the poor and needy" shall not "seek water," for "he shall lead them to living fountains of water." "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more."

"Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse." "The blessing, if ye shall hearken unto the commandments of Jehovah your God, which I command you this day." We cannot but think of two other occasions in Israel's history when similar opportunities for choosing right from wrong were presented to her. In this very same year, at the end of his life, his voice vibrating with love, and longing for their welfare, Moses said to the children of Israel: "See, I have set before thee this day, life and good, and death and evil; in that I command thee this day to love Jehovah thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments and his statutes and his ordinances that thou mayest live and multiply, and that Jehovah thy God may bless thee in the land whither thou goest in to possess it . . . I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day that I have set before thee life and death, the blessing and the curse: therefore choose life, that thou mayest live, thou and thy seed" (Deut. 30: 15, 16, 19). Less than a quarter of a century later, as Israel had come into the Land of Promise, Joshua, in his farewell address, once more pleaded with the people to make a definite, deliberate choice of God and of good.

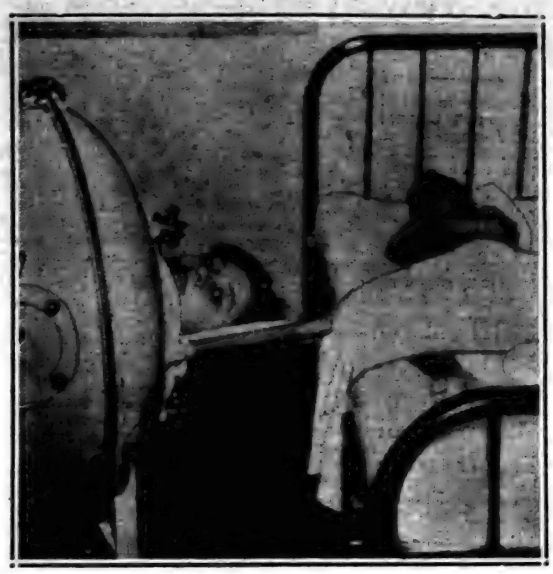
"And the curse, if ye shall not hearken unto the commandments of Jehovah your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known." To choose to obey the commandments of God does not have negative results, but positive results.

The Sacred Mountains

"And it shall come to pass, when Jehovah thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, that thou shalt set the blessing upon Mount Gerizim, and the curse upon Mount Ebal." Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal stand on the southern and northern sides, respectively, of the narrow pass which cuts through the mountain range, opening a way from the sea to the Jordan, about 35 miles north of Jerusalem, at the city of Cychar, and near the city of Samaria. At the foot of Mount Gerizim lies the town of Nablus, the ancient city of Shechem. Here Abraham camped at the oak of Moreh (Gen. 12: 6). The Samaritans believe that it was on this mountain that Abraham prepared to offer his son Isaac in sacrifice. These are the two sacred mountains of the Samaritans.

While these mountains are never mentioned again after the book of Judges, it is certainly to Mount Gerizim that the Samaritan woman in John 4: 20 points when she says: "Our fathers worshipped in this mountain."

"Are they not beyond the Jordan, behind the way of the going down of the sun, in the land of the Canaanites that dwell in the Arabah, over against Gilgal, beside the oaks of Moreh?



The word Arabah refers to that portion of the land on the west side of the Jordan River stretching out before the eyes of the Israelites who were encamped on the hills of Moab, or, in other words, southwestern Palestine.

"For ye are to pass over the Jordan to go in to possess the land which Jehovah your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein." "In the place of Shechem by the oak of Moreh, the Lord had appeared to Abraham and promised him this very land of Palestine. It is the first recorded promise given to the patriarch that his seed should inherit that particular country."—(Cf. Deut. 4: 5, 6.)

"And ye shall observe to do all the statutes and the ordinances which I set before you this day." The last words of Moses in this paragraph show us that new situations do not necessitate new morals. Morals do not change. Methods change, systems vary, theology readjusts its statements, and retranslates itself into the growing language of a growing civilization—all that is true, but the abiding quantity is the law, the revelation of God in Christ—Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today, and forever.

Death Follows On Controversy

General Crozier Whose Book "Men I Killed," Caused a Furore, Has Passed Away.

Brigadier-General Frank Percy Crozier, whose book "The Men I Killed" precipitated a recent international controversy died this week at his home at Walton-on-Thames, England.

A veteran of the South African and Great Wars, he made his experiences the subject of considerable writing. He was 58 years old.

The controversy over "The Men I killed" was capped by a Lisbon newspaper's urging of the Portuguese government to make an official inquiry into Crozier's statement he had ordered his troops to shoot many Portuguese fleeing their positions in the Great War.

The newspaper, Diario de Noticias, declared that Portugal should obtain complete reparation.

Around The Dial

RADIO HEADLINERS OF THE WEEK

G. C. MURRAY

Barbara Luddy, leading woman of the "First Nighter," wears a bracelet with a bell on it. Consequently it has to be removed before she can go on the air. Attached to it is a "Bachelor Girl's Club" pin, a Phi Beta Kappa key, a "bag of gold" given her by a women's club, a question mark from a quizzical friend, a tiny thimble given by her mother because she likes to sew, a little piece of wood so she can "knock on wood," a microscopic postcard from friends "back home" and a microphone donated by her production director.

On advice of numerologists, Donna Creade, NBC dramatic artist will henceforth be tagged Donna Reade . . . . Gale Page, contralto comedienne, is sure it's a case of "like coats. Such sartorial splendor, incidentally, is topped off with a collection of hundreds of neckties from all over the world, plus 155 shirts and four or five dozen pairs of spats. The singer has clothes for every occasion—a morning suit, full dress and tuxedo, several yachting and riding outfits, and, no doubt, a bathing suit or two. . . .

To Swing Or Not To Swing

By way of Indian runner and pony express: word has reached us from Huntington, Calif., that a band of hardy pioneers actually have organized a society for the suppression of swing music. And the name of this outfit very appropriately, is The Society for the Suppression of Swing . . . This Huntington group has distributed circulars and has embarked upon an intensive mail campaign summoning all true music lovers to enlist under their banner. "Swing," say the members of this hardy group of pioneers, "is a scurrilous craze completely misrepresenting present-day civilization and distorting the musical tastes of the younger generation." Maybe there's something in what our friend says. At any rate, down in Newport, R.I., the town fathers haven't any use for swing music. They have ruled that the taverns must not allow swing music to be played. The classics, however, are O.K.

Just about the best judges of swing music, one would think, are the dance orchestra leaders themselves. Hal Kemp says: "There are still lots of swing addicts who never tire of this type of syncopation. It looks as though they never will, either." Then, there's Don Bestor: "According to my observations," says Don, "swing definitely is on the skids. Most people prefer sweet music." And then there is the No. 1 orchestra leader who played at our Exhibition, Guy Lombardo, and his say is short but straight to the point: "Sorry but we can't see swing at all." And that is that. But Mark Warnow says: "It will never die out completely; its popularity will come in cycles." So that is that, again; so we will let you readers be the judge; some like it; others don't, but at the present its having its "swing" and, like all other forms, we think will soon be discarded for some other brand which will be made popular when a new form of dance comes into vogue. . . .

And About Hockey

Just how the radio stations could get interested in hockey in this weather is one of those things. The fact remains, however, that practically all arrangements have been completed between Maple Leaf Gardens and broadcasting officials for the airing of descriptions of all sports activities for this coming winter . . . It's on the books that Foster Hewitt, assisted by commentators as yet to be named, will handle all the home games of the Maple Leafs, as well as senior and mother like son," now that her five-year-old Fritz has appeared as an angel in his kindergarten version of "Hansel and Gretel" . . .

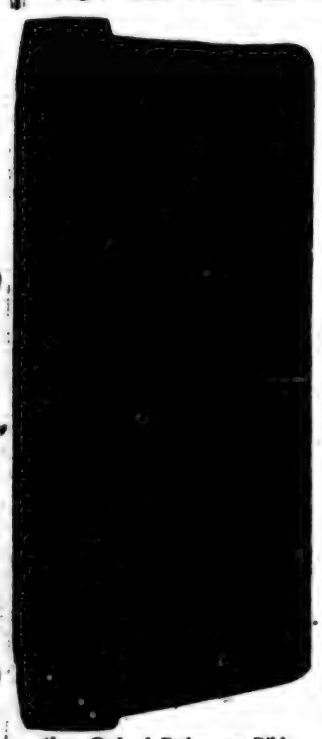
Radio's Dapper Dan

Down in li'l ol' New York it's being bruited about that radio's best dressed man with nary a doubt, is handsome James Melton, the tenor. The Melton wardrobe, we have it on reliable authority, contains no less than 48 suits, 39 pairs of shoes, 32 hats, eight overcoats and six top-junior O.H.A. fixtures, as well as the wrestling bouts, boxing bouts, etc. . . .

I wonder how many of you readers have listened to the conversations carried on between the ground and the air at the Exhibition, and in hearing have just passed it up as another publicity stunt; but it is not so—this daily broadcast was put on to show the public just how much the radio industry has advanced in the past few years. There is a great deal of equipment required for these broadcasts and their value runs up into the thousands of dollars. For example, in the plane there is a special generator to run the radio transmitter which is a specially built job for planes, a special microphone which does not pick up the tremendous noise in the ship itself, and a regular broadcast receiver to pick up the ground station; then on ground there is the short wave receiver to pick up the transmission from the plane and the regular broadcast transmitter. This does not include, however, the instruments required at the Press building where the broadcast originates. It may be just another of those things to most people—but to engineers who put their plans and brains to work, it is another step towards the goal of universal radio and we think they are doing an excellent job, don't you?

Ford Sunday Hour Returns

Commencing Sunday, September 12th, from 9.00 to 10.00 p.m., daylight saving time, the Ford Sunday Hour is being heard over 97 Columbia stations from coast to coast. A brilliant array of world-famous musical talent will be the highlight of the 1937-38 season. Jose Iturbi, noted pianist-conductor, will direct the 75-piece Ford Symphony Orchestra. He will conduct for the first eight weeks, the next eight weeks by Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, and Alexander Smallens will then take the baton, to be followed by Fritz Reiner. The guest stars will appear in the following order:— John Charles Thomas, Amparo Iturbi, Richard Crooks, Kirsten Flagsted, Lucrezia Bori, Lauritz Melchoir, Lottie Lehman, Bidu Sayao and Jascha Heifetz. This will be the fourth season for the Ford Sunday Evening Hour.



Football Review Series

Eddie Dooley, widely known sports writer, commentator and former all-American quarterback, from Dartmouth, will broadcast a semi-weekly series of football forecasts for Chesterfield Cigarettes each Thursday and Saturday for 15 minutes: 6.30 to 6.45 p.m., starting September 16th. The program will feature as guests many of the major football coaches.

Henry "Hot Lips" Busse, ace trumpetter, and his music will be heard each Sunday at 11.45 a.m., over the NBC-Red Network, beginning September 26th. The reason Busse is able to bring forth unusually rich and melodious tones from his trumpet is that he had the instrument made according to his own specifications. The changed tubing and his ingenious manipulation of the mutes gives his trumpet the personality for which it is famous.

Fond Farewell for Rev. Fraser

The same tongue in the old church bell in St. Andrew's Church, Streetsville, called the congregation together on Sept. 12th, 1937, that had called them together three years and four months before, to welcome Rev. Mr. Fraser on the threshhold of his life's work, his first charge. Mr. Fraser was fresh from college, where they get most of their education from books. From the beginning he knew he must study and minister to men and women who were bearing burdens and grappling with problems almost greater than any in the past. There were modern wrongs to right, modern falsities to rebuke, modern sorrows to alleviate. But the task set before him was not greater than he could bear, for he came armed with the living gospel of Jesus Christ, that is not something remote, but touches every side of life today. And in reviewing the past this Sabbath morning we are reminded how faithful he has been in the discharge of all this great mission entrusted to him. How often we were disappointed on a Sabbath morning or evening, when he was absent. We would be disappointed but not displeased, for we were delighted to think we had a minister whose services were sought after on so many occasions at special anniversary services at so many churches.

The evening service was largely attended. The United Church cancelled their service to be present at Mr. Fraser's farewell address. And the Anglicans would have joined also, only for a pre-arranged harvest home service in their own church. The harmony in the three churches is so pleasant. Rev. Mr. Jones assisted in the service. Mrs. Greig's solo, "The Ninety and Nine," was beautiful. The choir had special music for the occasion. Mr. Fraser's subject was "My Debt to St. Andrew's Church and to Streetsville." The elders, managers, members of the congregation and sermon-tasters were recipients of an immense contribution of praise for their loyalty, love and assistance, always ending each year with a clear sheet. And to some who were not members who had rendered such valuable assistance. Special mention was made about the free advertising given by The Streetsville Review to the churches. It was a great pleasure for him to take an active part in the business of the village, on the High School Board, on the Library Board, and everything connected with the welfare of the village.

A delightful time was spent in the Sunday School room of Old St. Andrew's, Sept. 14th. A large number were present, consisting of the old, middle-aged, and youth of the congregation, and many friends. It was a farewell and presentation to Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Fraser. Rev. Mr. McFaul, B.A., from Milton Presbyterian church, was chairman. He almost made us jealous when, in his introductory remarks, he described to us the splendid reception given to the Frasers when Mr. Fraser was inducted in his new charge, Victoria Church, Toronto, on Monday, 13th of September. We know what our loss is for everyone dearly loved both Mr. and Mrs. Fraser. All the speakers, Mr. Couse, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Marlatt, had many pleasant reminiscences of the past. In times of enjoyment they were the life of the company, and when sickness or sorrow would come, they both were the soul's physician. One particular scene in Miss Weylie's address was when her father was passing away, Mr. Weylie was the ruling elder in the church and his death was a great loss to the church. Mr. Fraser was such a comfort to him on his death bed, it almost seemed as though he went with him on his journey to the gates of the celestial city. Beautiful solos were rendered by Miss Fenwick, Mrs. Greig, and Mr. Beatty, which were much appreciated. Then D. McGregor read the following address, Miss Reid and Mrs. Tisdale making the presentation of a clock and silver tray.

Streetsville Sept. 14, 1937

Dear Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Fraser

Three years ago when you accepted the unanimous call to Old St. Andrew's historical Church, Streetsville, you both had the love and admiration of all the old and young of the congregation, and were favorite mixers in the joys and sorrows of everyone you came in contact with.

But from the beginning we knew a hawk was hovering in the sky. Whenever a stranger heard you preach we were always treated to this prophecy ; you will not be able to keep the Frasers long in Streetsville ; a larger church will soon claim him. We are indebted to you for the three years you have been with us. Our love and loyalty to you has been cemented stronger every year. A larger church may have a stronger claim in numbers, but not in loyalty, esteem and love than the old and young in the Streetsville Church have. How we did value your strong and forceful personality. You had the glow and fervor of a typical Highlander and yet a nature tender and sympathetic. You had the Celtic love of battle and found joy in wielding the sword against wrong. You were a strong and instructive preacher and your message was always characterized by an evangelistic note. You were faithful in your pastoral ministrations

And your going away leaves genuine sorrow in the congregation and in the community. Our parting wish is, God bless you and keep you and so Good-bye.

We ask you, dear friends, to accept this clock and silver tray as a slight token of our affection and for a reminder of a happy past spent together. This clock is always going into the future, so we ask you not to follow the clock's example by always looking to the future, but let your memory wander back to the past, your first charge in Streetsville Presbyterian Church. — And all this, the beautiful picture that comes to us—Two earnest young sowers sent forth to sow, and this is the great mission entrusted to them.

Ye sons of earth, prepare the plow
Break up the fallow ground,
Two sowers are sent forth to sow
And scatter blessings 'round.

From the Congregation

Mr. Fraser's reply was filled with past joys and past sorrows, and thanks for the co-operation he received from so many, and particularly from the Women's Association. Then all joined in "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." The meeting was started by singing "The Lord is My Shepherd" and closed with prayer. A lovely lunch was then served. It was a real banquet and how we did enjoy it.

Everything in the past was pleasant,
Not a ruffle on life's stream,
With the minister and his helpmate,
The past was like a grand sweet dream.

Will the coming generation
Be as faithful in life's test,
To old St. Andrew's and their leader,
When the present workers pass to rest?

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SEEING THINGS AT NIGHT

Photographing lightning presents no problem other than patiently waiting for the flash with the lens open, the camera stationary. At the top—A night picture made with an exposure of 25 minutes at f.8 on chrome type film. It's probable that a shorter exposure would have sufficed.

OUTDOORS at night you will find many a good, perfectly "get-table" shot. Lightning, for example, takes its own picture very neatly. And the procedure is simple.

As a lightning storm approaches, place the camera (even a simple box type outfit will do) on a window sill or some other convenient perch, aim it at the storm center, open the shutter for a time exposure—and then wait for things to happen.

If you are lucky, a bolt of lightning will soon come within the ken of your camera. Then close the shutter, wind the film to the next number, and try again. Lightning pictures are doubly effective if they include nearby buildings or trees.

Picturing illuminated buildings, electric signs, and other night-blooming subjects is simply a matter of time exposure. The camera, of course, must be stationary. Length of exposure depends on the amount and color of light on your subject, and the kind of film used. The chrome type of film is excellent for outdoor night time exposures, as it minimizes flare from strong, exposed lights. Usually, you'll find exposures of from two to five minutes adequate (unless you stop the lens 'way down; then you'll need longer time). And if your subject is bathed in colored lights, especially any reddish hue, give it about double the time you would otherwise use.

Real moonlight pictures are something to point to with pride. Moonlight will make pictures just as sunlight does, but being many times weaker, exposures must be very considerably increased. The simplest way to calculate a moonlight exposure is to give 25 minutes for each 1/100-second exposure that would be given the same scene in sunlight. Suppose it is a landscape with a dark-toned object in the immediate foreground. The sunlight exposure would be 1/25 at f.11. Then by the light of a full moon with sky clear throughout, it would be 100 minutes at the same stop. This could be cut down to 50 minutes with stop f.8. Without nearby dark-toned object, the exposure can be cut down to 25 minutes at f.8; for distant landscapes, to 10 or 15 minutes.

If a sort of daylight effect is desired, then exposures must be multiplied by four.

Warning: Don't include the moon itself in your picture unless you want it to show a nice bright "baloney" sausage hanging in the sky. Like the sun, the moon "do" move.

TWO VIEWS ON THE LIQUOR QUESTION

"THE PROFIT"—says Mr. Hepburn

"THE PEOPLE"—says Mr. Rowe

FOR three years the liquor problem has been out of control in Ontario. Mr. Hepburn, worried by the rising tide of public indignation, now tacitly admits the fact. In acknowledgment of the situation, he makes another typical last-minute, pre-election promise.

But Ontario voters are not going to be fooled again.

"Revenue First"—Hepburn

"Profit" has been Mr. Hepburn's liquor policy ever since he took office. Here are his own words as quoted in the Border Cities Star, Windsor, October 26, 1934:-

"Another thing that the Province requires is revenue. I am informed that since Mr. Odette took office, he has turned over to the Treasury $2,800,000. Let these people point out some other source of revenue. Do they want higher gasoline or corporation tax? Do they want a Provincial Income Tax? It is obvious that if we lose the revenue from the Liquor Control Board, we will have to get it elsewhere."

"People First"—Rowe

Contrast this "liquor for profit" policy with Mr. Rowe's clean-cut stand in the interest of the people.

Mr. Rowe has pledged himself: "I will return to a policy of control by a responsible board, free from political patronage. A survey will be made by the new board of all licensed hotels. I promise you that these mushroom dives which have sprung up and flourished under Hepburn will be closed—and stay closed."

The Conservative Party takes the position that public revenue should not be gained at the expense of decency.

No More Mushroom Dives

When Mr. Rowe is elected, beverage rooms will be confined to standard hotels which respect the law and give adequate service to the public.

Restaurants, taxi offices, rooming houses and hot dog stands will not, by means of a few "jerry-built" changes in construction, be able to qualify as standard hotels.

Beverage rooms will not be forced on communities where they are not wanted. Nor will such places flourish in the shadow of the churches of the Province.

Non-Political Control

Under Conservative administration, by means of a responsible non-political control body, beverage rooms will be so regulated that they will cease to be a blot on the social and moral life of Ontario.

A vote for the Conservative candidate is a vote for this policy of control.

Toronto West Presbytery of the United Church

The Presbytery met in Streetsville on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock with Rev. L.I. Hunter, B A., in the chair with about60 members present
The morning was given to routine work and the afternoon largely devoted to a study of rural life problems and work.
Two addresses by Rev. Professor Dickenson of West China University were illuminating and revealed unsuspected activities of the men who have gone to the various countries in the name of Christ. Prof. Dickenson for years has given considerable time to the spread of better stock, grains, poultry, fruit etc through West China. He said that last year from apple tree grafts he had first tested and proven satisfactory for the climate and land over 60,000 appletrees had been sold by Chinese nurserymen. The Cow was found to be a 14 cup cow and milking was discouraging, for the animal was not a self-starter. A calf had to be used to provide a start even for this small quantity. By introducing stock from other lands, importing bulls from prize herds and breeding scrub stock of West China the flow of milk has been trebled. The speaker said that for ages there had been a feeling of division between the Chinese and the people who lived in the very west borders of the land. These 15 million people were different from the Chinese. Statesmen and leaders had, for centuries tried to create a better feeling between themselves and these people. Every approach was turned aside coldly until a few years ago from West China went a young bull and some grafts into the area and what statecraft could not do this evident token of interest did. The feeling has grown friendly and a different spirit pervades the land.
In the afternoon three addresses were given upon various topics of interest to rural churches. The address by the Rev. D. H. Gallagher of Oakville on Eldership and the Rural Church, was specially interesting.
Considerable interest was taken by the delegates who remained for the evening session in a bowling game. The local Green was made available to the Presbytery, a privilege deeply appreciated, and the games were thoroughly enjoyed. One spectator was heard to remark "I had to see the ministers play to get a real kick out of the game." Some played with quiet dignity, each bowl was a work of art, (probably) but others cast aside dignity, so serious, and returned to boyhood with zest
"The best Presbytery ever," said several of the men, and Streetsville looks forward to entertaining such a fine group of church workers and ministers. A vote of thanks to the ladies of the local church for the entertainment given the Presbytery was carried with enthusiasm; also a vote of thanks to the Board for the courtesy extended so generously in the accommodation of the Presbytery

Pipeless Organ at CN Ex. Bandshell

AT THIS year's Canadian National Exhibition one of the outstanding attractions was the daily public concert from the new Bandshell in the centre of the grounds where the Northern-Hammond Organ, an entirely new kind of organ using electrical impulses with no pipes or reeds, was featured; thus proving the organ now has other fields than churches and auditoriums or the home. This new instrument which is not affected by heat, cold or dampness, is the latest product of the Northern Electric Company's plant in Montreal.

"No News" To Be Feared

Anything in the nature of a major or a prolonged war affects deeply every part of civilization and the eagerness with which news is sought is largely activated by fear. It is the fear that at some point, a point quite unpredictable, there will leap into being some circumstance of the war, however bizarre or unthinkable, that will affect or even destroy something in which the reader is deeply concerned, something that will affect his own life, his own family, his own country. This becomes evident when we consider the effect upon humanity of "no news". The literature of the Napoleonic period abounds in evidences of this fear being carried to the point of frenzy. Thus we may see that war news, so far from inflaming primordial ferocities among people not involved must have a reassuring value.—Victoria Times.

The Only Cure

There is considerable criticism of the slow automobile driver, but there is this to be said for him, he never kills anybody. It wasn't slow driving that caused the tragedy that snuffed out the life of a Detroit nurse near Talbotville on Saturday. It was outrageously fast driving, the only adequate punishment for which is a jail term and life-time withdrawal of license to drive.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Press Is Not Bought

Once every so often, maybe a couple of times a year, somebody wants to get a police court item left out of the paper and offers payment for the accommodation. The city editor gets red in the face, takes a grip on himself and as civilly as possible informs the visitor that sort of thing isn't done; the news columns are not for sale. Perhaps he tells it later to the staff, as a sort of embarrassing joke that people should imagine a newspaper could be muzzled for a dollar or two.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

When Prices Soar

When prices soar too high consumer resistance begins to assert itself, and the increase is brought to an end by what might be called natural means. Cattle sold as high as $17.90 per cwt. in Chicago, and that makes beef-steak available only to millionaires and those who never pay their bills. — Farmer's Advocate.

An Eye to Future

An English journalist predicts that Toronto will be the future capital of the British Empire. Torontonians with an eye to the future will begin now to make the most of every little fog that comes their way.—Windsor Star.

Raps Beauty Contests

It is to be hoped that before long public opinion will have so definitely expressed itself that these imbecile exhibitions (beauty contests) will be as extinct as the dodo. They are a menace to morals and a disgrace to the community in which they are held. —Kitchener Record.

The Mayor Cuts Down

A recent mayor of Philadelphia found that during his first two years of office he attended an average of 640 dinners and banquets a year, not including less formal luncheons.

No busy man could stand that strain indefinitely. In self-defence the mayor of Philadelphia adopted the practice of refusing to eat at banquets. He merely attended for sufficient time to extend the official glad hand and do the usual honors expected of him. In cases where his official presence might fairly be expected, this would seem to have been a reasonable compromise. —Winnipeg Tribune.

National Transport Control

So long as nine provinces make the regulations that govern motor vehicles in the public transport business we cannot hope for much progress towards uniformity—and the provinces show little inclination towards any surrender of their rights in this connection. It is apparent, we think, that the national interest would best be served if road transport as well as rail were in the hands of the Dominion Railway Board, but that condition seems far from attainment.—Ottawa Journal.

THE EMPIRE

New Chapters In Human Achievement

It is a far cry indeed from those days, so near and yet so remote, when the Pole was the objective of infinitely laborious and painful exertions, when many months had to be spent in transporting men and material by ship and sleigh across lonely inhospitable wastes, and when the expedition once launched might become lost for years, if not for ever, to human ken. Those were days which called forth the highest qualities of heroism and endurance and devotion, for which those who displayed them—the Franklins and the Scotts and the Shackletons—will be remembered as long as the tale of human achievement is told. It is of the same stuff that these Russian airmen are made, but thanks to the machine, they are enabled with incomparably less privations to attain incomparably greater results. Applied science is at their disposal to a degree undreamed of by their predecessors. They inherit the cumulative results of the collaboration of innumerable minds, and their achievement is an epitome rather of co-operative than of individual endeavour. Yet they, too, are pioneers within the conditions of initiative which their age permits, and it is feats such as theirs which serve to keep alive our faculty of wonder.—London Morning Post.

Japanese Have Weak Spots

As imperialists the Japanese lack two qualities — imagination, and the capacity to make those whom they conquer trust them; this deficiency represents perhaps their greatest difficulty on the Asiatic mainland. Already Peking is being administered by Chinese puppets with Japanese advisers, and things may go smoothly for a while. But it is not so long since the Japanese supposed General Sung Cheh-Yuan to be their complaisant tool; nor is it without significance that the massacre of Japanese and Koreans at Tungchow was carried out by troops who formed part of the bogus East Hopei regime and were almost certainly in Japanese pay. Japan's real difficulties in North China will begin when the "Cease Fire" is sounded.—London Times.

England Can Pacify World

Sir Samuel Joseph Visiting Here Says Britain Ready To Fight

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's government can pacify the world, but in the event of war Great Britain is ready to fight, Sir Samuel Joseph, director of a large English construction firm, assured American newspapermen this week.

"The public is solidly behind our huge rearmament program," said Sir Samuel. "With the proper armaments there is a feeling of security, every Englishman thinks. As a nation we are opposed to fighting for fighting's sake, but if the fighting is pushed on to us we will figl ."

Sir Samuel served during the war with the Royal Irish Regiment and is a past president of the British Legion. At present, he sits as an alderman for the city of London and eventually will move up to the Lord Mayor's chair.

The "magnificence" of Detroit amazed Sir Samuel who said that he expected only to find industries on a large scale. But he had one complaint.

"Such activity, such speed, but such noisy trams," complained the city's guest. "Your motor cars are so quiet and smooth that it seems funny to hear the noise of the trams downtown."

Brazilian Family Life Is Simple

Members Exhibit Sense of Responsibility

NEW YORK.—A curious blending of the simple and the formal characterizes the life of Brazil in general, and that of Rio de Janeiro in particular. In their homes the residents of Rio are a charming people because they believe in simplicity. They like visitors in the home, and pay them the honor of being natural and unpretentious. Hosts are likely as not to ask one to take potluck, and many Brazilians keep practically open house.

Girls in Rio enjoy a great deal of freedom, and in this Latin country one will see them on the fine beaches each morning, quite as anxious for a swim and exercise as American girls are. In many ways, however, family life varies much from that of the United States. For one thing the family is a much closer unit. Family get-togethers are the usual thing and are even carried so far that there are often set days in each month for them. Members of Brazilian families also feel a great personal responsibility for one another. When someone is in trouble the head of the family comes to his aid at once, for not to do so would be disgraceful.

Jap Air Raids

TOKIO. — Japanese aeroplanes carried their message of death to several Chinese fronts, while artillery and infantry units clashed with Chinese forces around Shanghai.

Japanese bombed and destroyed a military arsenal at Hangchow southwest of Shanghai, an airfield at Kashing and a Chinese military barracks at Kwangteh. Over Soochow, they shot down five Chinese Curtiss Hawk aeroplanes.

Some 300 Chinese were killed and 400 wounded this week when the Japanese aeroplanes bombed a crowded refugee train as it was entering the Sungkiang station. 30 miles from Shanghai.

To Foil Aberhart

OTTAWA. — Dr. J. F. Kenney, Acting Dominion Archivist, will send to London, England, for a certified manuscript copy of Canada's Constitution, the British North America Act.

His action is in reply to Premier Aberhart's statement that "nowhere can there be found the original copy of the British Noth Ameica ETAO OA of the British North America Act."

Russian Army Ready

MOSCOW. — Izvestia, the Soviet Government's official mouthpiece, has wirned that war threatens Europe, but that Russia will be able to "defend herself against the Italian pirates and aggressors."

The warlike announcement was backed up by a statement from the Red Army—1,300,000 men forming the largest standing army in the world—that it was ready "to meet with a decisive, merciless blow any attempt to hinder our peaceful pursuits."

No 'Phone No School No Water

People of English Village Have Also to Travel on Foot

MANCHESTER. — Struggling in a rural valley within ten miles of Manchester lies one of the most unsophisticated villages in England.

It is called Hattersley and has a population of little more than 200.

Hattersley has no water, gas or electricity. It is also without such institutions as schools, churches, or telephones.

If the villagers of Hattersley want to travel they must first walk three miles to a bus route or hire a car.

Anyway they are used to walking.

After they reach the age of four, Hattersley children walk three miles to school every morning and three miles back again at night.

Mr. Robert Poultney, a Scot and a newcomer to Hattersley, is now agitating for better conditions in the village. Already he has protested to the Ministry of Health.

"This village is still in the dark ages," he said to me. "On every side of us there is light and water in abundance. All that the council do for the rates we pay is to empty the ash-bins."

Sporting Comment

By KEN EDWARDS

Sir Malcolm Campbell seems determined to be "tops" in the speed world on water as well as on land. In the speedboat, "Bluebird," which he is now trying out on Lago Maggiore in the Alps to break Gar Wood's world record of 124.91 miles an hour.

Life is like that isn't it?

Bill Terry of the New York Giants is their brand new manager and receives $40,000 a year under his new contract while Tommy Farr, the sensational English battler who just recently set the boxing world agog in his bout with Joe Louis, has had a row with his manager, Ted Broadribb, and refuses to fight under him in the future.

A new one-mile Canadian swim record has just been set by Ralph Flanagan of Florida. He was clocked at 21.34. The former record was 21.57.

Will Fight Extortionists

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — Wallace Beery, film actor, has obtained a special Deputy Sherriff's commission and a pistol-carrying permit, so he will be prepared, he said, to deal with extortionists.

Beery and his 8-year-old adopted daughter, Carol Ann Beery, appeared at the Sheriff's office and were fingerprinted. The actor received a letter two weeks ago, threatening death for Carol Ann unless $10,000 was paid.

2000 Undergo Treatment

GUELPH. — All pupils of Victory School are under strict quarantine and the school itself has been closed for ten days. A six-year-old boy attending the school contracted infantile paralysis. Guelph's first case, and authorities immediately instituted sweeping measures to prevent its spread.

All wards of the Children's Shelter attend the school and are being kept under close observation.

The entire student body was marched to the city hall to receive nasal spray. Clinics were opened to give the having now undergone treatment.

A Commentary

On Outstanding Events of the Week

Central Bureau of Education

Suggested at the opening meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce at Vancouver was the establishment of a central bureau of educational research for Canada. The speaker, Hon. R. C. Matthews, advocated following the example of Australia and South Africa in setting up a Chamber of Education, whose duties would be to gather information about education in every province, conduct educational surveys, hold yearly conferences on general problems. He recommended that "each individual member of this Chamber should make it his concern, so far as his sphere of influence extends, to study how far school and college today are giving the future citizen of Canada the elementary intellectual and moral equipment which he must have if he is to act justly and intelligently on all the manifold issues which will be presented for his decision at the polls."

International Incidents Increase

These are days that see international crises precipitated hourly. In the Far East the situation is gravely dangerous, not only in the case of the Sino-Japanese conflict, but a break between Japan and Britain has been narrowly missed, following on the shooting of the British Ambassador; in the Mediterranean, Russian and British ships are being menaced by the "pirate" ships of other nations. A snarling Italian answer has come to Russia's formal protest, accusing Mussolini's submarines of waging Mediterranean terrorism, after two Soviet ships were sunk. Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler of Germany, backs Italy in the Mediterranean and Japan in the East, "in a defensive fight," so he declared at the Nazi Party congress, "against Bolshevism."

Youth Training Has Begun

With the transference of 350 young Ontario men, ranging in age from 18 to 25, to training camps in Northern Ontario, the new National Youth Program has been inaugurated under the leadership of the Dept. of Mines and Forests. Ten or more boys are appointed to each of the 31 camps where they will be taught use of the compass, timber cruising and scaling, telephone line construction and maintenance, activities connected with the pulp and paper industry.

In the mining district, a maximum of 50 young men will be given a technical course sufficient to qualify as assistants to mine surveyors, assayors, and mineralogists. The Provincial Department of Mines expects to have positions for these young men when fully trained.

Canada's Arms Contracts

The Minister of Defence, Hon. Ian Mackenzie, has announced that over $9,000,000 worth of national defense contracts have been placed in Canada, with construction now in progress. Ninety per cent of the program will be taken care of inside the country. Over 100 airplanes are included and four mine-sweepers. The militia is being reorganized and it is expected that the entire program will be completed within a year.

Japan Finds Credit

American and British banks are extending credit to help finance Japan's undeclared war on China, even as the American and British Governments are bending every effort to halt or minimize the conflict, a reliably informed source disclosed this week.

Search Continues

Sir Hubert Wilkins' party which set off by plane in search of the six Soviet Polar fliers have as yet found no trace of the men, missing on their flight from Moscow to Fairbanks, Alaska, August 13. The search over the Arctic ice fields will continue until the freeze-up. The rescue party are located on Baillie Island in the Mackenzie River Delta.

Seaway Negotiations

Prime Minister Mackenzie King has announced that unless the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec give their approval, the Federal Government will not go ahead with negotiations for the construction of the St. Lawrence seaway. The power development scheme embraced in the waterway plan would cost Ontario more than $100,000,000. There have been no recent developments in the waterways discussion, the Prime Minister assures. In any case, the treaty has yet to be ratified by the United States Senate which has several times rejected it.

Canadians Lose Jobs

WINDSOR. — Almost 20 Canadians have lost their jobs and 60 more face unemployment because a law passed by United States Congress, requiring 75 per cent of U. S. boat crews must be American citizens, has been applied to ferries plying the Detroit River.

Flying Boat Damaged

TORONTO. — The flying boat Cambria and her crew will be guests of Toronto for a few more days, as parts necessary to repair the big trans-atlantic ship will have to be sent from England. The machine was damaged while landing off the Exhibition waterfront.

Alice Marble Defeated

FOREST HILLS, L.I. — While the gallery sat in awed silence, Miss Alice Marble, blonde queen of lawn tennis, was driven out of her own championship in a dramatic quarter-final round match by Dorothy May Bundy, herself the daughter of tennis royalty.

The scores were 1-6, 7-5, 6-1. Miss Bundy rallying beautifully from a disastrous first set and from being down at match point in the second to come on, carry the fight into the champion's court and finally to pull the match out.

Death Drivers Snore In Peace

Alarm Raised as Passing Motorist Takes a Look at Their Cars

LEAMINGTON — "There's been an accident on No. 3 highway, about three miles west of town. Two cars are badly damaged and two men are lying in a field. They look as if they're either hurt or dead," a motorist reported to Provincial Traffic Officer J. D. Bennett here.

Investigation revealed that the badly damaged cars belonged to a trio of barnstorming "hell drivers." The two men in the field were just catching up on some sleep. A woman was doing likewise in the front seat of one of the ill-treated cars.

The troupe, known as Capt. F. F. Frakes' "Death Fighters," were on their way through to Buffalo, where they are scheduled to stage a display of roller-coaster tactics with their cars.

They were too sleepy to even get a kick out of the excitement they had caused.

Shark Drowns Three Persons

Leap From Water Upsets Small Sailboat; Two Are Rescued

KINTYRE, Argyleshire. — Three men drowned and two persons were rescued this week when a basking shark leaped from waters of Carradale Bay and upset their small sailboat.

Captain Angus Brown, his brother, Robert, and his son, Neil, lost their lives.

Captain Brown's 12-year-old daughter, Jessie, clung to the side of the boat, holding her father's body, until rescuers reached her and the fifth member of the party, Donald McDonald.

Basking sharks, so called from their habit of lying in surface waters, are common to the Firth of Clyde. Generally considered harmless, they are rarely known to attack humans.

Scenes Like This Common During Shanghai Air Raids

...rious with war fever, bombing planes unleashed cargo of death and destruction in form of aerial bombs while flying over Shanghai, raining death on non-combatants in streets below, in first Sino-Jap war outrage to shock entire world. Here's wreckage outside Cathay Hotel.

SHE WAS X-RAYED 12 TIMES

Tried Electric Treatment For Rheumatism

To suffer for five years with pains in the back . . . to be X-rayed 12 times . . . to undergo electric treatment for three years . . . and then to find that Kruschen was what she really needed to get relief—that was this woman's experience:—

"Five years ago, I was taken ill with pains in my back. After three weeks in bed I was sent to hospital. At first, spine trouble was suspected, but after 12 X-rays I was found to have serious lumbar rheumatism. For over three years, I was given electrical treatment three times a week. Last year, I tried Kruschen Salts and it has done wonders. I have discontinued hospital treatment, and last winter, the first for five years, I was free from pain. My friends are amazed to see me so well." (Mrs.) E.P.

In a good many cases, rheumatism cannot resist the action of Kruschen Salts, which dissolve the painful crystals of uric acid—often the cause of those aches and pains—and assist the kidneys to eliminate the poison through the natural channels.

I Killed a Man

(From Scribner's Magazine)

In the records of the courts and insurance companies, it was pretty much the same old story. While driving home early one evening, I rounded a familiar curve and faced a pair of glaring headlights. On the right of the road, a millworker was on his way to work on the night shift. He became confused and jumped the wrong way. The impact threw me a little forward in my seat. The millworker's body slid flat on the pavement for perhaps 50 feet, rolled over, jerked, and lay still. The dinner pail he had carried under his arm rattled along the pavement for another 20 feet, then all was quiet. When we got to him, we saw there would be no hurry about taking him to the hospital. He was dead.

During the long court ordeal afterward, it was established beyond all doubt that the accident was unavoidable. I am a free man; free to lie in bed on Sunday mornings, stretching and yawning; free to eat when I am hungry and drink deep when I am thirsty; free to feel the wind and sun on my face, to know the four seasons, to love.

But I cannot forget that because of me a man will never see the white sparks from molten steel again, or smell the hot metal in the molds, or feel the satisfying tug of his muscles against a heavy crane, or peer out of a factory window into a moonlit night, or open his dinner pail with the keen appetite of a laboring man. Because of me a mother will never again hear a familiar footfall when work is done, and she will have things to explain to her babies that will break her heart.

I know all this is not my fault—a court of law has told me so—but I cannot stop thinking how different things would have been if I had started just half a minute sooner or later, or if I had been going just a little slower or faster, or if, in that split second, my skill had been just a little greater or my brakes a little better, or if I had thought in advance of all the possible circumstances that might have been waiting for me around that curve. It has been two years since it happened, yet these thoughts go round and round in my mind continually. Nothing can make me forget that I am still walking this earth, and that because of me another man is not. I cannot forget that a combination of factors—factors that could so easily have been just a little different — happened to work out with lethal precision, and I killed a man.

Copper Can Be Tempered

One of the Arts, accredited to the ancient Egyptians and thought to have been lost to modern science, is that of tempering copper. Scientists believe that the Egyptian legend is true only to the extent that the ancients hardened this copper by hammering. It is now claimed that by the addition of 2% of a metal called Beryllium to copper, the alloy can be tempered to a hardness that will even cut steel. The vast possibilities that this new alloy offers to modern industry has stimulated the search all over the world for deposits of the mineral Beryl, from which the metal Beryllium is extracted. Geologists agree that Canada offers the best hunting ground and it is expected that large deposits of the mineral will be found in this country.

The reason there are so many dog lovers in this world is because almost everybody is important in the eyes of a dog.

SLICED VERY THIN

By Sixbits

"No Matter How Thin You Slice It — It's Still Baloney"

The election campaign [illegible] warming up very nicely, thank you, is to say on the part of [illegible]ch and Earl and others vitally interested, although it must be confessed that he general public still continues to take a regretably apathetic view of the noble efforts of all these great patriots to save us from a fate worse than death, or something.

However the boys are doing the best they can, under the circumstances, and already have accused the other side of everything from plain lying to attempted mayhem and threats of kidnapping.

• • •

In another couple of weeks we may expect them to be letting down their back hair and really starting to call names.

Which is, of course, a good excuse for dragging in the old ones about the two large and angry coster ladies who were pictured engaged in a very heated altercation. Tugging at the apron strings of one of them was a darling little thing about six or seven years of age. "Muvver," she was saying to her maternal parent, "Muvver, don't forget to call 'er a bleedin' old cow before she remembers to call you one."

The constant back-biting, recriminations, threats of splits, and general atmosphere of an alley brawl which from the first have surrounded the Tommy Farr camp—as compared to the peace and quietness of that of Joe Louis—would make us prouder than ever of belonging to the superior white race. They should indeed.

• • •

Mr. Farr made himself, overnight, one of the most popular figures in the fistic world—a popularity he should be able to cash in for large bundles of coarse money. But if somebody doesn't take the Welshman to one side, and tell him to pipe down and wash the dirty linen in privacy, we fear that the next time he gets into an American ring the large majority of pew-holders will be hollering for somebody to knock his block off.

• • •

Mr. Broadribb may lack a lot in smoothness, culture and several other desirable qualities; but as we see it, he stuck to Mr. Farr when the going was rocky, and meals few and far between—and now it would appear as if Tommy was trying to ditch the man who helped a lot to make him.

The chisel artists—of whom there is never a dearth around boxing circles—have undoubtedly got in some of their fine work on Farr, some of them being real geniuses at making a fighter discontented with his present management and painting rosy pictures of what would happen if he only hooked up with somebody that knew how to get the real dough.

We have said before, and will probably say again, that there is nothing wrong with the boxing game—but only with people mixed up in it. And that by no means refers to the boys who actually do the pitching and the catching.

However, it is probably no particular mud in our eye what Farr and Broadribb do to one another — only we fear that Tommy will live to regret the split.

• • •

For there was once a very popular fighter by the name of Jack Dempsey who, for one reason or another, finally split out with his long-time manager Jack Kearns.

• • •

And, strangely enough, Mr. Dempsey—if we remember correctly—never won another championship bout after the break. And one of the most certain things in sport—or most anything else—is that what has happened before can happen again.

Canadian Pacific President Tours Ontario

"Ontario on the whole is enjoying an excellent year. Beginning with agriculture and ending with industry progress has been greater than in the past seven years," Sir Edward Beatty, G.B.E., K.C., LL.D., Chairman and President, Canadian Pacific Railway, stated after a recent inspection of the Company's properties and of agriculture and business generally throughout the province. Sir Edward, and the members of his party, were everywhere welcomed by representative citizens, and are here shown on the station platform at Sudbury after being received by W. E. Mason, president of the Sudbury Board of Trade; J. H. Simpson, acting mayor of Sudbury, and Mayor E. A. Collins, Copper Cliff. In the picture are seen from left to right: L. B. Unwin, vice-president of finance and treasurer; Aitken Walker, general freight agent; George Stephen, vice-president of traffic; Mayor Collins; Sir Edward Beatty; H. J. Humphrey, vice-president and general manager, eastern lines; Thomas Hambley, North Bay general superintendent; Mr. Simpson, Mr. Mason, and B. J. Quilty, superintendent Sudbury division.

Return Him as PREMIER

TODAY you have reason to rejoice that you voted Henry out and Hepburn in. The Hepburn administration has replaced mismanagement with good management, extravagance with economy. It has replaced the unbalanced budget with a balanced budget, changed the chronic yearly deficit to a surplus of over 9 million dollars. It has relieved the drain and strain on taxpayers' pocketbooks in many ways. In the year that ended March 31st, 1937, it reduced Ontario's gross debt by $33,098,165.39.

How You Have Profited by Hepburn's Policies

1. Grant, equal to one mill on the dollar, from the Province to every Municipality, has relieved Municipal taxpayers to the extent of $3,000,000.
2. Cancellation of the amusement tax will save patrons of the theatre, sports and other amusements $3,000,000 a year.
3. Ontario is granting a $5 reduction in Motor Car rates that will save motorists $2,500,000 a year.
4. The Province has cancelled the 20 per cent. levy formerly made upon the Counties toward the cost of King's Highways, a saving to Municipalities of over $2,700,000 to date, and a further saving this year of $2,000,000.
5. Township Road subsidy was increased to 50 per cent., a saving to townships of $400,000 per year.
6. Entire cost of Mothers' Allowances was assumed by the Province, a saving to the Municipal Taxpayers of over $2,100,000 a year.
7. Municipalities' share of Old Age Pensions was taken over by the Province, saving over $1,000,000 a year.
8. Payment of Pensions to the Blind of $300,000.
9. Abolition of the Students' examination fees of $170,000 is another worth-while saving that Mothers and Fathers appreciate.
10. Rates for Hydro-Electric Power have been reduced to users to the extent of $4,800,000.
11. The Hepburn Government paid relief charges out of current revenue instead of adding them to the Public Debt to be paid for by increased taxes in the future, as was the policy of the former Government.

More Sunshine Budgets

On October 6th, you will have the opportunity of showing Mitchell F. Hepburn how much you appreciate his handling of the Province's finances and the administration of its government. Mark your ballot for the Liberal Candidate in your constituency and work to elect him by a safe majority. That's the way to show Mr. Hepburn you want him to "Carry On" with his program of tax reductions. He promises another "Sunshine Budget" this year—and you know he keeps his promises. Be kind to your own pocketbook—Vote Liberal.

Carry On, Hepburn!

LET US SMILE

"P'taters is good this morning, madam," said the market gardener, making his usual weekly call.
"Oh, are they?" retorted the customer. "That reminds me. How is it that those you sold me last week were so much smaller at the bottom of the basket than the top?"
"Well," replied the old man, "p'taters is growin' so fast now, by the time I get a basketful dug, the last ones is about twice the size of the first."

The Open Column

Hardly a citizen of the Dominion, it would seem, has refused to accept at least temporarily, at one time or another since the stock-market panic of 1929, and the resultant flood of unemployment, the statement "We are over-governed". To citizens of a sparsely populated country such as the Dominion of Canada, the compulsory payment of taxes for four forms of government has proven increasingly irksome since the bursting of the financial bubble which marked the beginning of the depression in trade. The commonalty is becoming convinced that there is too much legislative machinery needing the lubrication of taxes and levies, and that, in the very near future something must be done to lighten the burden carried by the working man, before the back of his pocket book succumbs to the strain.

But, the question arises, where could a beginning be made in reducing the administrative forces of the country? The most pertinent suggestion offered up to the present moment is that of disbanding of the third legislative bodies of the Dominion, the county councils. Powers of the county councils in Ontario at the present time, are being rapidly removed to the administration of the Provincial Legislature and its attendant permanent departments.

It is fairly obvious that the central government of the Dominion, the House of Parliament and its administrative bodies could hardly be abandoned, although, if rumors from Quebec and the eastern Provinces are to be credited, there is a movement afoot to divide the Dominion by the secession of at least the Province of Quebec, and establish a government separate from that of Ontario and the western provinces over the French-Canadian population.

This feeling in the east would automatically preclude the dissolution of the Provincial Legislatures of the several Provinces, and the government of the Dominion by a single legislative body. The French-Canadians would not abandon their nationalistic movement and submit to a government composed largely of Anglo-Saxon representatives.

Yet if the French-Canadians would accept the plan of abandoning their Provincial Legislature, and joining with the other Provinces in a single government for the whole of Canada, the solution of problems now confronting the Dominion would become greatly simplified. Legislators of the past decade have turned uneasy eyes upon the establishment of minimum wage laws, particularly for men. The passing of a minimum wage law in Ontario would put the Ontario manufacturer at a serious disadvantage in competition with manufacturers in Quebec, where, at this time, wages are markedly lower than in Ontario. Another approaching problem, that of sterilization of the mentally unfit, could be more ably handled by Dominion authority than by Provincial administrators.

Assuming the foregoing conclusions to be correct, the Dominion administration must remain. For the retention of Provincial Legislature, however, there would appear to be only one argument of major importance, namely, the almost certain refusal of the French-Canadian population to give up its individual administration. Otherwise, there would not appear to be any legislative problems arising in the various provinces which could not be more readily handled by representatives of the Dominion as a whole, and it would also appear reasonably certain that there would be a more stable balance to the legislative efforts of a central government, insofar as more general representation would either defeat or place upon a more practical basis such experiments in economics as the Social Credit plan upon which Premier Aberhart gained office.

Expansion of the departments of the Dominion government would provide sufficient administrative strength to collect the levies now in the powers of the Provincial Legislatures and expend them as efficiently as they are at present distributed through Dominion agencies staffed with civil servants who had received their training in provincial departments.

At least some saving would be effected in this way, if only by the elimination of the payment of indemnities to Provincial members. It would also be reasonable to assume that, by the elimination of duplication of services, the total personnel of the administrative departments of the country could be reduced.

A much simpler problem would be found in the dissolution of county councils by reason of the fact that many of the duties of the county councils, at least in Ontario, have now been taken into the hands of the Provincial administration. A division of the powers of the county councils between the Province and the township councils would not be difficult, although, in all probability, the representatives themselves would raise at least a mild protest, possibly on the grounds that one of the chief functions of the county council is the more equitable division of assessment between richer and poorer municipalities. With the supervision of trunk road systems in the hands of the Province, however, a large part of the necessity for equalization would be removed.

Lastly, it would be somewhat difficult to dissolve the primary municipal legislative body, the village, town, township or city council, but not by any means impossible, assuming that the civil service of either Dominion or Provincial administration was sufficiently expanded to appoint a commission in each municipality to assume the duties of town council or town manager. The municipal council, however, could not be disbanded with the same ease as the county body, because it is, first of all, a collective agency, which the county council is not, save in special instances, and an entirely new machinery of collection would have to be installed if the powers of the municipal council were handed over to any other body.

Apparently, then, the county council will have to be the first to go, should public opinion gain enough unanimity to force action upon one of the higher legislative bodies, presumably upon the Provincial Legislatures. But even the dissolution of one of the Dominion's four forms of government should provide a little welcome relief to the taxpayer.

IT MIGHT BE YOU!

Take a good "look" at this picture—it's a verbal one, but it tells the story just the same. Even though you won't like it, still it is something you must face if Ontario's annual highway slaughter is to be stamped out.

It is a gruesome picture—and one that happens every day on our streets and highways. This accident happened because the driver was careless. He died—his face a grotesque caricature with his skull split open like a coconut, his chest a gaping hole where he had been stabbed by the jagged steering column.

His wife was less fortunate—she lived But every time she looks into a mirror she wishes she had died, too. Modern plastic surgery can perform miracles but it has its limitations. When she looks at herself in the mirror with the eye that isn't glass she still shudders, even though the accident happened three long years ago.

Their five-year-old daughter lived, too. But she doesn't realize it. Her skull was fractured and her brain injured. It's much more difficult to rebuild a brain than a face.

Don't say it can't happen to you—because it can and you know it! Today's headlines of dead, dying and injured people may be telling a story about you in tomorrow's papers. But you can help to protect yourself. How? DEMAND SANE AND CAREFUL DRIVING FROM EVERY MOTORIST. Report those you see driving dangerously. And more important—drive sanely and carefully yourself.

Local News

Mrs. Jean Scruton has returned to Streetsville on a short visit with friends.

The marriage took place recently of Miss Nora Burns, R.N., daughter of William J. Burns and the late Mrs. Burns, Bolton, formerly of Streetsville, to Dr. Robert Male of Tottenham. They will reside at Tottenham.

It is just forty years since William Walter MacWherrall murdered the old Williams couple on the Middle Road, Toronto Township, relatives of the Moody family.

Peel County Fall Fair will be held at Brampton Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 27-28-29.

Members of Streetsville Post, Canadian Legion, went to Brampton on Sunday to join the Post there in their decoration service at Brampton cemetery.

Headquarters of Miss Mary Turner, recently appointed Red Cross and community nurse for Port Credit and Toronto township, are located in the township offices at Cooksville and anyone needing her services are asked to telephone Cooksville 101 or Port Credit 649.

Port Credit Baseball team went to Brantford on Saturday for the Intermediate play-downs and lost by a score of 9-2.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pallett, Dixie, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Dorothy Evelyn, to Andrew Soulsby, son of Jane Oliver Soulsby, and the late William Soulsby, Toronto. The marriage to take place the latter part of September.

Mrs. Clarence Allison, Brampton, announces the engagement of her daughter, Velma Coulter, to Harold C. Brindle, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Brindle, of Toronto. The marriage to take place October 16th at 4 p. m., St. Paul's United Church, Brampton, Ontario.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Maria Irvine

Streetsville has lost one of its oldest and highly esteemed residents by the death of Mrs. Maria Irvine, wife of the late James Irvine, at the ripe age of 86 years and four months. Born on the 5th line, Peel County, she was the second daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Adam Cook, and after her marriage 54 years ago she moved to Streetsville and had lived in the same house for almost half a century. Her husband predeceased her 31 years ago.

Although confined to her home for the past few years, she retained all her faculties until the last and passed peacefully away in her sleep early Thursday morning, Sept. 16, 1937. She reared her own monument while she lived in the hearts of all who knew her and great masses of flowers about the casket gave evidence of the love and esteem in which she was held in the community.

Those left to mourn the passing of a mother well beloved are three daughters, Mrs. J. A. Hammond, Ada at home, who was constantly with her, Mrs. W. D. Goddard, Dixie, and one son, Harold, at home. Two sons predeceased her, William, 16 years, and Austin, who passed away 6 years ago. There are also two grand-daughters, Mrs. R. J. Richardson, Islington, and Miss Jean Hammond, of Streetsville.

In active life she attended Trinity Anglican church and was a member of the Woman's Auxiliary and Willing Workers.

The funeral took place Sunday afternoon and was very largely attended. Service was conducted at the home by the Rev. E. S. Ottley, the rector of Trinity church, assisted by Rev. T. O. Curliss, of Toronto, and Rev. R. J. W. Perry, Islington, two former rectors of the church. Rev. Mr. Banks, of Erindale, unable to be present, called in the morning and spoke kind words of comfort to the bereaved family; also Rev. Mr. Jones, of Weston, another former rector, sent his deepest regrets being unable to attend.

Among the numerous beautiful floral tributes to one who was a lover of flowers was a spray from the Willing Workers, Post 139, Streetsville Legion, Dixie Women's Institute, Mr. and Mrs. C. Ritchie, Mr. E. Hammond and Mrs. E. Newman, the Le Maistre family, Mrs. D. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Church, Dr. and Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Jas. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. R. Dixon, Miss Nellie Cowdery, and grand-daughters; wreaths from Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Nelson and the boys of the town; baskets from Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Nelson, the Gill family, the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Cook, the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Irvine, Mr. Roy Cooke, and a pillow from the family.

The flower bearers were young men of the district.

The pall-bearers were three nephews, A. J. Nelson, A. M. Cook, A. Irvine, and H. S. Cantelon, F. Wrigglesworth and J. W. Cantelon.

Interment was made in Streetsville cemetery.

She bade no one a last farewell,
She said good-bye to none,
Her spirit fled before we knew,
That she from us had gone.

MARRIAGES

Elderfield—Russell

Decorated with baskets of late summer flowers, Streetsville United Church was the scene of a charming wedding Saturday, when Miss Reta Mary Russell, of Streetsville, became the bride of Frederick James Elderfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Elderfield, of Streetsville.

Rev. T. D. Jones, pastor of the church, officiated.

The wedding music was played by Herbert Falconer, and, during the signing of the register, Allan Heatley, of Brampton, sang "Because."

The bride, given in marriage by her brother Norman, was gowned in white ivory satin, cut on princess lines, with tight-fitting bodice, and finger-tip veil caught with a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of red roses and baby's breath. Miss Thora Elderfield, sister of the groom, was maid of honor, wearing a gown of forget-me-not blue taffeta, and silk net bandeau. Her bouquet was of Talisman roses. Joseph Russell, brother of the bride, attended the groom.

At a reception held in the Russell home, Mrs. Russell presided in plum crepe with black accessories, and corsage of Talisman roses, assisted by Mrs. Elderfield, who wore brown crepe with white accessories, and corsage of red rosebuds. On a honeymoon by motor through the Northern States, the bride travelled in a rust sports suit with brown gloves, shoes and hat. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Elderfield will make their home in Streetsville.

ARMSTRONG—THORNTON: On Saturday, September 18, at Rogers Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Ross K. Cameron, Ethel Alice Thornton, daughter of Mr. T. P. Thornton and the late Mrs. Thornton, to John Alan Armstrong, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Armstrong, of Oakville.

'SALADA' TEA is delicious

HOSTAGE HEIRESS

By DAVID DRESSER

Janet Duane, millionaire's daughter, gives a party one night aboard her father's palatial yacht, anchored off Miami. Gregory Gason tricks her into being left behind with him when the guests are taken ashore. The only other persons aboard are a crippled watchman and Janet's Negro maid. Meanwhile, "Dusty" Lanion, lawless adventurer, has laid plans to seize the yacht to carry arms and ammunition to Cuban revolutionists. Believing the boat to be deserted, except for the watchman, who has been bribed, Dusty and his men are about to board her.

CHAPTER III

Snifter detained Dusty with a claw-like hand on his arm.

"What do we do if there's anyone aboard, boss?" he muttered.

"There's no one aboard but Otto, the watchman. And he's coming off as soon as we go aboard."

"But supposing there's someone else? Supposing some of them society dames are still aboard?"

"Then they're in for a little voyage," Dusty said shortly. "Come on."

He moved toward the rear of the tug, where the other men had already climbed into the trailing rowboat. He shoved Snifter into the boat, then followed him and cast the tender loose.

In a moment they were alongside the Fleetwing. A sense of excitement gripped Dusty as he whistled shrilly, the signal for Otto to drop the Jacob's ladder over the bow.

He didn't consider it piracy, this snatching of a millionaire's plaything from anchorage. A peculiar quirk in his make-up had long ago so distorted right and wrong that he was no longer able clearly to differentiate between the two. He needed a boat desperately. Much more than Cyrus Duane needed the Fleetwing. Therefore, his reason told him, it was right that he should seize the yacht.

He laughed exultantly as the rope ladder dangled over the side in easy reach. It was the laugh of one wholly reckless of consequences. He caught at the ladder. He laughed again as he swung lithely up the side to stand upon the deck of his new command. The others followed.

Janet opened her eyes with a little start, and looked about the lounge in bewilderment. She had fallen asleep—had dreamed that she was at sea upon an endless voyage. She rubbed her eyes. For a moment, she couldn't remember what had happened. What was she doing here?

Then she saw Gregory slumped in another deep chair. He, too, had fallen asleep. Janet looked at him critically. He wasn't pretty, asleep like this. His jaw sagged open. Janet wondered how she could have considered him attractive.

A breeze must be blowing up, she decided drowsily. The yacht seemed to be swaying a great deal for a boat at anchorage.

She drew herself erect and looked at her wrist watch. Her eyes widened. Had she been asleep for an hour? What about the launch? She jumped up and shook Gregory's shoulder.

"Ugh! What is it?" He started up, staring at her.

Even her worry couldn't keep her from giggling at his evident fright.

"It's only me,' she assured him.

"Oh, yes. Of course." He smothered a yawn. "I must have dropped off."

"We've both been asleep for over an hour." Janet bit her lip and frowned. "What about the launch? It must be waiting for us over the side Come on." She moved toward the door.

"Don't," Gregory said smoothly. He was fully awake now. "It can't have returned yet. We would have heard it."

"But it's been over an hour!"

Gregory smiled. He got up and took her hand.

"Lets not wor'ry about the launch. What do we care about the launch. I hope it never comes."

"I care about it!" Janet drew back from him angrily.

* * *

Suddenly she saw him as he really was. His touch and his smile were loathsome. She felt trapped.

"I'm going out on deck." She seized the doorknob.

"You're going to stay here." His voice was no longer suave. He snatched at her arm and pulled her hand off the knob.

"How dare you!" She whirled on him with blazing eyes.

"Why not?" He smiled mockingly, and his grip on her arm tightened. "After all. . . you chose to stay here with me. You can't lead one on, you know, and then change your mind on the spur of the moment."

Her face went white with rage. Then a spot of red blazed in each cheek, and her blue eyes turned a deeper hue. She struck at him desperately with her free hand until he imprisoned it also and drew her closer.

His lips smiled, though his eyes were cold and merciless as he held her thus. Janet strained back from him, but she was no match for his strength.

Then—both heard the sound at the same instant. The dull, heavy throb of the engines! A quiver passed over the Fleetwing from prow to stern.

Gregory released Janet. His jaw sagged.

Janet reacted more swiftly than he. She jerked the door open, and slammed it shut behind her as she fled up the companionway.

On deck, her startled eyes swung from port to starboard in growing dismay and fright. The mainland had vanished. There was only the open sea on all sides. The familiar lights of anchored yachts had vanished.

She stood on the deck and confusedly tried to think things out. She felt as though she were caught in the grip of a monstrous nightmare. She repressed a desire to scream frantically. This could not be. But it was.

Some of the deck lights were on, and the wheelhouse was brilliantly lighted. She moved haltingly toward it.

She stopped in the doorway and gazed at the broad back of the man at the wheel. She felt faint, and gripped the door jamb for support.

"Who are you?" she demanded.

Dusty whirled. "What the devil?" His gray eyes flickered over her unbelievably.

"Who are you?" she repeated.

"Dusty Lanion." He spoke the words without realizing the absurdity of telling this frightened girl his name.

"What—are you doing here?"

"I'm in command." Dusty snapped. "Who the devil are you?"

"I'm—just the owner's daughter." Janet tried to smile at her own jest. It was a pitiable smile. Then she slumped forward on the deck in a dead faint.

Isolate Toxin Of Rheumatism

Doctors See Great Possibilities for Research Into the Causes of Disease

Hope of a revolutionary method in the treatment of rheumatism has been aroused in the British medical profession by the discovery and isolation of the toxin of rheumatism by research workers at the Lister Institute, London. The announcement is made in The Lancet.

Specimens of fluid from the interior of joints, portions of rheumatic joints and drops of fluid from around the heart and around the brain have been subjected to the most modern type of high-speed centrifugation, being spun at speeds of 14,000 revolutions a minute. In this way the virus has been concentrated and studied under the microscope after being magnified 1,000 times.

Beginning Can Be Made

The medical correspondent of The Morning Post comments.

"This is a well-recognized test for the identification of a disease-producing microbe or similar organism, and such tests have shown that not only do rheumatic patients contain such substances in their blood, but these are absent from patients suffering from other disorders. This means that the rheumatic virus must be regarded as occurring only in the fluid from rheumatic patients.

"These results open up great possibilities as regards further investigation into the causation of rheumatism of all types. If the part played by the virus can be established, the way will then be opened for new methods of treatment, probably by means of special serums and chemicals to which the virus is susceptible. Such susceptibility remains to be tested, but the beginning of such work can now be made."

Experts Repairing Shattered Faces

Plastic Surgeons Begin Mission of Mercy In Spain

An expert Anglo-American team in plastic surgery, Dr. Robert McIntosh and Dr. Eastman Sheehan, began a mission of mercy this week through insurgent Spain to repair the shattered faces of thousands of men.

The surgeons—McIntosh is professor of anaesthesia at Oxford University and Sheehan professor of plastic surgery at Polyclinic Medical School, New York—have a distressing assignment.

Medical aides to General Franco say there are as many mutilated faces in the insurgent army today as in the British army at the end of the Great War.

The doctors said "thousands" suffered such terrible face wounds that their features are almost obliterated and their constant agony can be relieved only by narcotics.

Many of Franco's soldiers in most urgent need of plastic surgery were wounded in hand-to-hand fighting.

There has been more personal combat, with slashing knives and bayonets, in the more than a year of Spanish strife than in most modern wars, military experts say.

Film Star Has Private Army

Victor McLaglen Maintains Force of 700 Men

Film stars have many ways of spending money, but the strangest—and perhaps the most useful—is surely that adopted by Victor McLaglen, famous for his tough, he-man roles. He has invested $150,000 of his fortune in maintaining a private army.

Seven hundred strong, the force is highly organized, and has been in existence for three years. It has all types of units, including a horse brigade 250 strong, and an air force of 30 machines for which there are 15 qualified pilots.

The only things the army does not possess are guns, yet the organization is run on strict military lines. Every member, on joining, pays an entrance fee of $60, and has to provide his own horse, aeroplane, or motor-cycle, according to the unit.

The uniform is a gay one of light blue, and when the army carries out route marches through Hollywood, all the young women turn out to see the troops swing past, with McLaglen, on a magnificent horse, at their head. He is the army's colonel-in-chief.

An American magazine recently aroused the army's wrath by describing it as a Fascist organization. It is nothing of the sort, its leader declares. It is non-political and non-sectarian. The only oath its members take is to uphold the American Constitution, and to be prepared to support the authorities in the event of large fires or floods.

Most Beautiful Building Is a Coal Plant

LONDON.—Britain's best building in 1936 was a coal preparation plant, according to Prof. S. H. Reilly in his annual article in the Architects' Journal.

The plant, at the Rising Sun colliery at Wallsend, Northumberland, was designed by Prof. R. A. Cordingley of Manchester University.

After an exhaustive survey of many buildings, Professor Reilly writes: "The Wallsend new colliery preparation plant structure, white and clean, and carefully arranged by Prof. R. A. Cordingley to express its functions and do its work well and economically, is the best building of 1936—cathedrals, churches, hospitals, cinemas, schools, flats, and country houses, King's or otherwise, notwithstanding."

3 To 1 Chance That Flyers Still Alive

Viljalmur Stefanson, Noted Explorer, Holds Out Hope for Russian Aviators

Chances are about 3 to 1 the lost Russian trans-Polar flyers are still alive, Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Arctic explorer, said this week as he rushed additional purchases of silk tents and concentrated foods from New York for Sir Hubert Wilkins' rescue expedition.

Weather reports prepared by Stroker Storkenson, a member of Stefansson's 1913-18 Arctic expedition, while drifting on ice in the Arctic ocean at this time of year, have been telegraphed in summary to Fairbanks, Alaska, for the use of the rescue pilots, he said.

"The Russians are believed to be in the neighborhood of 82 or 83 degrees north latitude and 146 west longitude," said the explorer.

Provided They Landed Safely

"The chances they are alive are good provided they made a safe landing.

"North of 80 degrees, where the flyers were last heard from on their flight from Russia to the United States, the ice at this time of year is fairly level, whereas south of that latitude a landing would be difficult, the ice being furrowed by channels of rain water and by thawing."

Fog Was Too Thick

Stefansson said Sir Hubert's search party passed close to the spot where Sigismund Levanefisky and his five companions were believed to have been forced down. He reached longitude 92.10 north and latitude 145 west but fog was so thick nothing could be seen. Sir Hubert is now waiting for favorable weather before taking off again.

The Russians should have no difficulty in finding food, Stefansson said, the Polar bears, which can smell a camp at a distance of 12 or more miles, would come to investigate. Seals also should be obtainable, while the sea beneath the ice is full of marine life, such as shrimps.

In mid-Winter of 1918 Strokerson made a journey north from the Alaskan coast by dog sled and drifted on the ice for about six months. During September and October he drifted along a line about 450 miles south of the point where the Russians are believed to be.

Stefansson obtained a copy of Storkerson's weather observations from the Canadian Department of Mines and Resources at Ottawa and forwarded a summary to the rescue expedition.

Dressed Up Fruit

At this time of the year your family will want fresh fruits morning, noon and night. Between meals and for breakfast they will want it plain and unadorned, but at dinner and supper time they want it in desserts that looked "dressed up."

There are a variety of ways in which you can serve the fresh fruits that are so plentiful right now and one of the simplest is by combining them with jelly. It is easy to use and you can make inspired desserts in a few minutes. Another advantage of combining fresh fruits with jelly is that sometimes you get a batch of fruit that is not as flavoury as usual but the fresh, fruity flavour of the jelly will liven up the fruit and make a tasty dessert combination. Besides accentuating the flavour of fruits, jelly adds rare and beautiful colors to desserts as well.

The following dishes are party looking concoctions made out of simple things. The children love them because they are so pretty and you will love them because they are so good for the children.

Two of these desserts are fluffy, pastel colored moulds in lovely shapes and two are clear, colorful and jewel-like-plain jelly powder combined with fruits in out-of-the-ordinary, attractive ways. Fresh Plum Snow, Pear Whip, Peach Nests and Apple Cider Tang, — tempting names and the desserts are just as tempting as they sound.

Fresh Plum Snow

1 package raspberry jelly powder.
1 pint boiling water.
1 cup plum pulp, slightly crushed.
¼ cup powdered sugar.
2 egg whites, unbeaten.

Dissolve jelly in boiling water. Chill. Combine plum pulp and sugar. When jelly is cold and syrupy, place in a bowl of cracked ice or ice water, add egg whites, and beat with rotary egg beater until fluffy. Add plum pulp, folding gently, and let stand until slightly thickened. Pour into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold. Garnish with whipped cream, if desired. Serves 8.

Peach Nests

1 package lime jelly powder.
1 pint boiling water.
3 fresh peaches.

Dissolve jelly in boiling water. Cool slightly. Pour part of jelly mixture in to 6 sherbert glasses, filling each ¼ full. Chill until firm. Pour remaining jelly into shallow pan and chill until firm. Slice peaches onto firm jelly in sherbert glasses. Cover with remaining jelly, cut in cubes. Serves 6.

Pear Whip

1 package strawberry jelly powder.
1 pint boiling water.
1 cup pear pulp.

Dissolve jelly in boiling water. Chill until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Fold in the pear pulp. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serve with whipped cream, if desired. Serves 6.

Apple Cider Tang

1 package lemon jelly powder.
1 cup warm water.
1 cup sweet cider.
1½ cups red apples, cut in matchstick pieces.

Dissolve jelly in warm water; add cider. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in apples. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serves 6.

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON XIII.
GOD IN THE MAKING OF A NATION
(Deuteronomy 8: 11—20.)

GOLDEN TEXT:—Beware lest thou forget the Lord thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his ordinances, and his statutes, which I command thee this day.—Deuteronomy 8: 11.

The Lesson in its Setting

Place:— All the early chapters of Deuteronomy record discourses given by Moses on the east side of the Jordan River where the Israelites were encamped in what are known as the plains of Moab (see Deut. 1: 1.)

Time:—B.C. 1459.

The word "Deuteronomy" means the "second law," and, in this book, as the title would indicate, there is a summing up of all the laws and regulations which God had given to Moses in the forty years of Israel's wandering in the wilderness.

For a proper understanding of this lesson, one should read the first ten verses of the chapter, which are not assigned in the lesson itself. Four great benefits are, in these opening verses, said to have come to Israel from the hands of their gracious God; by him they were guided for forty years in the wilderness; in all of their suffering and hardships, God had a gracious purpose toward them —that they might come to know him better; the Lord had preserved them during all their forty years of wandering; and Jehovah their God was now to bring them into "a good land" where water abounded, where cereals and fruit could be grown in abundance, and in whose hills valuable metals would be found. This beautiful description of God's graciousness to Israel concludes with this admonition: "And thou shalt eat and be full, and thou shalt bless Jehovah thy God, for the good land which he hath given thee."

Needed a Warning

"Beware lest thou forget Jehovah thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his ordinances, and his statutes, which I command thee this day." (See also Deut. 4: 9, 23, 31; 6: 12.) —That Israel greatly needed such warning as this, her later history sadly proved. In the early days of the judges, we read that "the children of Israel did that which was evil in the sight of Jehovah and forgot Jehovah their God." (Judges 3: 7). Notice carefully how Moses particularizes this sin of Israel. She revealed she was forgetting God by not keeping God's commandments. One cannot forget what one does not know. To be ignorant of God is a tragedy, but to forget God is a double sin. Forgetting God, i.e., leaving God out of our life, not reckoning with him, or considering his will in our plans and purposes, and pleasures, is expressed in the New Testament by the significant word "ungodly."

"Lest, when thou hast eaten and art full, and hast built goodly houses and dwelt therein; and when thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied; then thy heart be lifted up, and thou forget Jehovah thy God, who brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." — Moses exposes, in these three years, the deepest, most frequent cause for men's forgetting God who, themselves, have been the recipients of his gifts of love. That condition which is most conducive to making the thought of God vague in the mind, and obedience to God something almost never considered, in other words, living day by day without God, is what we might sum up in one phrase as a gratification of all one's fundamental material desires, i.e., abundance of food, delightful homes, comparative security from disaster, sufficient wealth to relieve one of worry, a good standing in the community, a lovely family, a large library, leisure and means for sport, an automobile, two or three club memberships, the opportunity for travel, the ability to perform whatever task one earnestly undertakes, etc. When a man has these things, he seems to possess all that he needs. That which would drive a man to God is, most of all, need, and the most powerful needs, though a sad commentary on human nature, are those that have to do with our material well-being. By nature a man will hasten to God if he is in the midst of great trouble, or fears a tragedy, or a loved one is desperately ill. What Moses wants the Israelites to know is that, in a time when they do not have much to ask for, they should, nevertheless, seek fellowship with God, if not in their petition, then in their thanksgiving and love for him.

Why Israel Should Remember

"Who led thee through the great and terrible wilderness, wherein were fiery serpents and scorpions, and thirsty ground where was no water; who brought thee forth water out of the rock of flint; Who fed thee in the wilderness with manna, which thy fathers knew not."—The warning against forgetting God is both preceded and followed by a setting forth of powerful reasons why the Israelites should forever remember God, proving clearly that they had no excuse whatever for forgetting him. In these two verses, God is once again set forth as the one who had graciously brought them forth out of Egypt.

"That he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, to do thee good at thy latter end: And lest thou say in thy heart, My power and the might of my hand hath got'n me this wealth. But thou shalt remember Jehovah thy God, for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth; that he may establish his covenant which he sware unto thy fathers, as at this day"—A deep conviction of this fact would turn human history into a sacrament. Receive into the mind the full impression of this doctrine, and you will find yourself working side by side with God, in the field, the warehouse, the bank, the shop, the office, the pulpit. When a young man receives the first payment of his industry, he is to remember that the Lord his God gave him power to get wealth. Thus the getting of money becomes a sacred act. Money is a mighty power; wealth occupies a proud position in all the parliament of civilization. Trade thus becomes a means of grace and commerce an ally of religion. In one word, the true appreciation of this doctrine would restore every act of life to its direct and vital relation to the living God.

Our Dependent Strength

"And it shall be, if thou shalt forget Jehovah thy God, and walk after other gods, and serve them, and worship them, I testify against you this day that ye shall surely perish." — Men must have a god or gods to worship. If they do not have the true God, they will have false gods. If men allow themselves to forget what the true God has done for them, they will soon come to the place where they will begin to doubt if this God whom they have never seen can do anything for them, and they will turn to visible, but dead deities, made of wood, stone, gold, and silver.

"As the nations that Jehovah maketh to perish before you, so shall ye perish; because ye would not hearken unto the voice of Jehovah, your God."— For God's gracious promise to Israel if she would obey him, see Deut. 7: 12—16. Israel's security demanded upon her relationship to God. We may not believe it, but the security, welfare, and the strength of our nation are equally dependent upon our obedience to the commandments of the Lord. God's laws are reasonable, always for the welfare of men, and in obedience to them, men keep their strength and prolong their life.

Forgetting God, who is our strength, is synonymous with worshipping the idols of man's creation, which always have and always will weaken men morally, mentally, and physically. To forget God is to curse one's self. If Canada is determined to continue more and more to forget God, and give herself to the things of this world, it would be a real blessing to our nation, if we should be brought, by the hand of God, into times of great suffering and distress, as well as great danger, if it only made us realize our utter impotency, the absolute insufficiency of man, as man, to live without God, and bring us, as a nation, on our knees, to the throne of grace, confessing our sins, imploring the forgiveness of God, and acknowledging that we are, at least, willing to live righteously and soberly in this present life, walking worthy of his name, in the light of his countenance.

See Deer Grazing Along With Horses

Farmers coming to Welland market to the Welland market this week from Wainfleet Township, told of seeing a full grown deer grazing with horses on a farm owned by Charles Sider, Perry Station.

They watched the sight until the deer suddenly looked up, leaped over a five-foot wire fence and trotted along Wabash Railway tracks until it reached another field where horses were grazing. The animal leaped another fence gracefully and resumed grazing.

New Series of 'Your News Parade'

Edwin C. Hill, ace reporter and news commentator, has been signed for a new series of his world events summaries "Your News Parade" to be inaugurated over seventy-five Columbia stations, commencing, Monday, September 27. This programme will be heard Mondays through Friday, 12.15 to 12.30 p.m. standard time. Lucky Strike Cigarettes bring you this programme. Hill's vivid style and flair for interpreting the real stories behind the happenings of the day are reflected in his radio work. He made his debut before the microphone in 1932 as a play reviewer and his Human Side Of The News programs started in 1933 and revived in 1935. His reporting career started in Indianapolis. Known as the best dressed reporter in New York for nearly 25 years, he was the ace reporter of one of New York's leading dailies. His assignments have taken him all over the world and he has been the friend and confidant of presidents and kings. It is from this wealth of personal experiences that his individual interpretation of the news is drawn.

They are particularly noted for the crazy titles of the numbers the yplay, all written by their leader-composer-arranger, Raymond Scott. Scott's most popular tune is "Powerhouse." Three recent additions are Shine on Harvesting Machine, Perilous Ride on a Running Board with two Broken Legs, and The Mad Waffle Eater.

Marion Talley Returns

Signing a 52-week contract, Marion Talley will return to the NBC networks Sunday, September 26 to star in the new Ry-Krisp program from Hollywood. Miss Talley achieved success as an opera singer at the age of 17 and then retired, attaining stardom years later in movies and radio. She will be heard Sundays from 5.00 to 5.30 p.m. over the Red Network. The program will include many popular and operatic stars, the Paul Taylor Choristers and Ken Carpenter as announcer. Miss Talley is a former Kansas City girl, who trained for the Metropolitan Opera with funds raised by popular subscription among her townspeople. At the height of her career she startled the musical world by announcing her retirement. The rather plump prima donnas were still in fashion, but Miss Talley went on a strict diet and emerged a few years later at the film capital as a trim and chic young woman weighing 105 pounds.

Lucky 13

When her Goldbergs returned to the air Monday, September 13, Gertrude Berg, authoress, producer and main character of the series added another link to the amazing chain of 13's which are woven into the pattern of her career. Mrs. Berg was first signed by N.B.C. on November 13, 1929, and "The Rise of the Goldbergs" was introduced to the nation's dialers. Several months of sustaining, the serial was first presented as a sponsored program— on July 13, 1930. Four years later on July 13, 1934, to be exact, the Goldbergs began a personal appearance tour of vaudeville houses in key cities. Mrs. Berg wrote a new series, The House of Glass, which was sold on April 13, 1935. In answer to an avalanche of requests, the Goldbergs were brought to the air again on January 13, 1936, and continued until June 13 of that year. After a year's vacation, Mrs. Berg was signed to write a screen vehicle for Bobby Breen "Make a Wish," which was completed on July 13, 1937, at which time she was signed to write another "Streets of New York". On August 13, 1937, she was signed a contract calling for a five year radio run of "The Goldbergs," which started September 13. We wonder what would happen if a black cat crossed Mrs. Berg's path on a Friday, the thirteenth.

Col. Kennedy Speaks in Streetsville

Col. Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Peel's Conservative candidate in the present provincial election, had a good meeting here last night. Mr. Hugh Burns occupied the chair. The Hall was nicely decorated and the meeting was opened and closed with the National Anthem. Besides the candidate those who spoke were: Gordon Graydon, M.P. and Merrill DesBrisay. The addresses were interesting and the speakers gave good reasons why "Tom" Kennedy should be returned to office on Oct 6 The Col. dwelt at length on closing Ontario House in England and showed why its closing was a distinct loss to the people of this province.

Peel Tories are quite confident that Col. Kennedy will be their next member at Toronto

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

For the next few Sunday evenings the Rector will preach a series of sermons entitled, "Modern By words." There are a number of trite and pithy sayings current among us, passing for truth and sounding quite plausible. Nevertheless each of them is only a partial truth and quite inadequate for life. The first of these sayings, "When in Rome do as the Romans do," will be dealt with this Sunday evening.

Young people, in particular, may find this series of Modern Bywords helpful and interesting.

THIS GHASTLY TRAGEDY COULD HAVE BEEN AVOIDED!

If it hadn't been for a foolhardy, reckless, criminal driver this accident would have been avoided. As it is, one victim was taken direct to an undertaker's parlours and two to a hospital. The driver who caused it is hopelessly crippled for the rest of his life.

YOU'LL BE IN TROUBLE IF YOU DISREGARD THE LAWS

If you are a reckless driver travelling the Ontario highways, cutting in, passing on curves and hills, endangering the lives of others, you will find yourself in serious trouble. The appalling death toll must stop—and you who are responsible for it will be put off the road! A thousand eyes are watching you; so be forewarned!

Ontario Motorists Will Co-operate

When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place, and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders.

To Save Ontario Motorists Time and Money

1938 Motor Vehicle Permits Are Now Available

DUE to the advance in the new car purchasing season and the fact that increasingly large numbers of used cars and trucks are now purchased at this time of year and following the practice established last year which met with such favourable reception on the part of the motoring public, 1938 Motor Vehicle Permits and Operators' Licenses are being made available in advance of the date of expiration of 1937 permits.

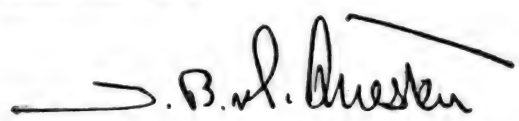
1938 Permits (now available) save the purchaser of a new car or truck the expense of 1937 registration.

They save the purchaser of a used car or truck the fee for transferring the 1937 registration (1938 Permit can be procured without transfer fee).

As indicated in the Budget Address delivered on March 9th of this year, the Government is able to announce a downward revision in the fees for the registration of Motor Vehicles.

PASSENGER CAR REGISTRATION FEES	1937 Fee	1938 Fee
4 cylinders	$ 7.00	$ 2.00
6 cylinders, up to and including 28 horse power	12.00	7.00
6 cylinders, over 28 horse power	15.00	10.00
8 cylinders, up to and including 35 horse power	15.00	10.00
8 cylinders, over 35 horse power	20.00	15.00
12 cylinders	30.00	25.00
16 cylinders	40.00	35.00

(S.A.E. rating of horse power shall be used)



All Commercial Motor Vehicles and Trailers have been reduced 25% from the 1937 rate.

The Fee for the registration of a change of ownership has been reduced from $2.00 to $1.00.

Fee for the Registration of a Motor Cycle has been reduced from $3.00 to $1.00.

CHANGE OF LICENSE YEAR

The Government having decided to change the license year to coincide with its fiscal year, 1938 permits and licenses will be valid to March 31st, 1939.

Expenses of Peace

Britain is spending more on her five-year rearmament plan than she spent during the four years and eight months of the Great War. If it costs that much to keep peace what would war cost under present-day conditions.—London Free Press.

Ex-Prisoner's Problem

The problem of the recidivist is largely a problem of the after-treatment of the prisoner. It is not enough to give a man convicted of crime a prison term and turn him loose again. The paroled or discharged convict is at a decided disadvantage when he emerges from the shadow of the prison's walls. He has been sheltered while in prison; now he is thrown on his own resources. It is not easy for a man who has once gone wrong to go straight. The world seems against him. He is regarded as a jail-bird and doors are closed to him. The easy thing is to drift to his old haunts and back into crime again.—Vancouver Province.

Shot In "Mistake"

The shooting of the British Ambassador to China by Japanese airmen is characterized as a mistake. The killing of hundreds of people in the International Settlements of Shanghai by Chinese airmen has been explained as an "unfortunate mistake." In recent days it is reported that quite a number of persons executed in Russia by order of the ruling class in the last five or six years were shot in mistake. All these things indicate the seriousness of shooting to kill. There seems to be too much shooting and killing before a situation has been clarified. The dead are not brought to life by explanation that the shooting was a "mistake." We prefer the Canadian system of doing a good deal of thinking before shooting. — Regina Leader-Post.

What Is Wrong?

E. V. Hale has written a letter to the Boston Herald asking what is wrong with Canada, this neighbor to the north about which he has read so much lately. It leads the world in wheat and is the chief source of pulpwood. It has almost a monopoly of nickel. Gold production is exceedingly high. All records are being broken in nickel, lead, zinc, platinum, asbestos and salt production and there are yet great untapped resources. Then there are fruit, cattle, dairying and coal. What is wrong, he asks Canadians to tell him, with this fertile land that is a tourists' paradise, with a very practical earthly revenue therefrom, that has bounteous fisheries, that is apparently in the forefront in social legislation, yet is deserted by thousands who seek a livelihood in other lands. . . . There is, however, a certain amount of confusion between the past and present in Mr. Hale's attitude. The thriving production, for instance, that he mentions belongs to the present, while the exodus was largely in the past.—Moncton Transcript.

Canada's Growth

Most Canadians do not pause often enough to consider the amazing growth of their country since Confederation—70 astounding years. With the lifetime of many living citizens, the enterprise and resourcefulness of men and women have made the first skimpy returns of trade and commerce into an annual flood of commodities and goods of every kind. Study the record of development.

The output of manufacturing has grown from less than $250,000,000 to more than $2,800,000,000. In the same period, agricultural production has increased in value from $125,000,000 to more than $1,000,000,000 per year; mining has soared from an annual income of less than $25,000,000 to $350,000,000. These are the big three in Canadian production. And if any further evidence of growth were needed, look at the export figures: in 1867 Canada's export trade was less than $100,000,000, today it stands at nearly 11 times that figure.

These, in round numbers, tell an amazing story, a story of which every Canadian may be proud. Small in numbers we may be, but great in performance. Fifth among the trading nations of the world, our record of growth is first. And the future is bright.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Wanted: Lovers of Men

Animal lovers are starting a crusade to abolish the use of the horse in warfare. So now all we need is that lovers of men shall start a crusade, too.—London Punch.

The Roar In The Air

Many people will approve of the action taken by the Blackpool Council in forbidding "joy riding" from its aerodrome. It is the first sign of a revolt against the growing nuisance of noise from the air, superimposed upon all the rattling and braying and roaring that come from our modern surface traffic. The noise of a low-flying airplane can be not only distressing but terrifying. Too much of this is already imposed upon our ears and nerves by commercial airplanes and Air Force machines. If the private airplane becomes popular the racket and clouding overhead will reach the limit of human endurance.—Manchester Guardian

Brothers Under the Skin

Hitler is a silly man to maintain his Nazi Party organization in London and encourage it to do its little bits of spying and badgering and intriguing. It irritates the whole British people. And it makes it difficult to meet the most innocent German tourist and visitor without wondering what he may be up to. This is a pity, because there is much to be said for an exchange of non-propaganda visits between individuals of different countries. It performs the immense service of demonstrating one simple fact which is always in danger of being clouded over in times of international suspicion and fear; the fact that the average Frenchman, the average Russian, the average German and the average Englishman are much the same sort of human beings. And the more people there are in every country who know that to be true, the more difficult it is to whip up war fever and war-like hatreds.

More Males Die Violent Deaths

Women Appear To Be the Tougher of the Species

Violent deaths remove twice as many males as females from the population in the course of a year. Prof. F. A. Crew, president of the zoology section, told the British Association for the Advancement of Science meeting at Nottingham, Eng.

The result is a distortion of the sex ratio among certain age groups, the professor said. Prof. Crew presented a surprising picture of the alteration of the ratio of males and females in a population over a period of 80 years.

Actually, he said, more baby boys are born alive than girls. For instance, in England and Wales in 1935 the ratio was 105:6 boys to every 100 girl babies born alive.

But by the time a year's crop of children attain the ages from 15 to 19 years the preponderance of males gives way to equality in numbers of boys and girls.

Among the 20 to 24-year-olds the females actually begin to outnumber the males.

"Thereafter," the professor said, "as age group succeeds age group, this female numerical ascendency progressively increases until, among the 85's and over, there are more than twice as many women as men."

More Dangerous Adventure

Mortality tables make it clear that at all ages relatively more males are removed from the population by death. Among these 75 and over, actually more women than men die for the simple reason that there are more females who reach those ages.

"It would appear from these figures alone that to be born is a more dangerous adventure for the male than for the female, and that there is a sexually selective mortality which not only operates at all ages after birth to the disadvantage of the male, but which acts possibly equally strong pre-natally as well," stated Prof. Crew.

Stored-up legacy money often disintegrates when exposed to the light.

Canada's Three Best Customers

More Canadian Goods Bought by United States, United Kingdom and Australia

For three years Canada's best customers have been the United States, United Kingdom and Australia in that order. Four years ago the United Kingdom bought more of our goods than the States did, and the Netherlands were in third place (now ninth).

The two leading countries so far outdo all others in their purchases from Canada that they are in a class by themselves. In the fiscal year 1937 which ended last March, for example, the United States bought 435 million dollars worth, the United Kingdom nearly 408 million dollars worth, and Australia, next on the list, less than $27,000,000 worth.

Among Canada's chief exports to the United States are: Newsprint, 89 millions; wood pulp, over 28½ millions; wheat, over 21½ millions; whiskey, nearly 21½ millions; nickel (fine), 21 millions. The Dominion sells the United Kingdom wheat to the extent of 153 millions; bacon and hams, over 27¾ millions; copper and products, 25½ millions; planks and boards, 20¾ millions.

Including all markets, Canada's greatest export is wheat, nearly 223½ millions; then newsprint, over 110 millions; non-monetary gold bullion, over 76½ millions; nickel, over 45¾ millions. Thus a farm product leads a manufactured forest product, second, and mine products third and fourth. There is no marine product until ninth place is reached: fish, 25 millions. In the last fiscal year Canada sold more whiskey than automobiles abroad: 21¾ compared with 19½ millions.

Soviet Hollywood Is Under Attack

MOSCOW—Russia's movie makers were attacked this week in Izvestia, official government newspaper, both for the quality and quantity of their work. As it did earlier this month, most of Izvestia's anger fell on Boris Shumiatsky, head of the industry, who has been blamed for extravagance, misleading reports on production and mediocre films. The film industry's plan for a Russian Hollywood also drew fire. Izvestia declared it would be a waste because there are inadequate facilities and too few directors to fill the production schedules that such an investment's success would demand.

Bell Keeps Ringing For 97 Years

Ringing away merrily to itself, tucked away beneath a glass case in an Oxford museum, is the strangest bell in the world. It has no battery, is connected with no outside mains, and is never wound up—yet it has been ringing for just on 97 years.

Made as an experiment in 1840, and set in motion, it rang for 20 years before anyone really took any notice of it; then it was installed at Oxford, where it is to be seen today. Some thousands of copper and paper discs store its motive power, and a steady chemical reaction rations out what little electrical current it needs to keep it going.

No one can tell how much energy remains in its cells. It may stop tomorrow, or it may ring out another century, even as it has rung out the life of its maker—and who he was nobody knows.

Mounties Get Crime Bureau

Scientific Gadgets Replace Horses And Guns In Their Work

The grand old days of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police when a scarlet coated Mountie kept law and order in a few thousand square miles of territory with a six-shooter and a horse, are about over.

Most of the horses are gone and now the Mounties are investing $10,000 in scientific gadgets to help them catch their man. They are building a crime-detection laboratory, complete with microscopes, ballistic guages and cameras and the time may come when Mounties will carry magnifying glasses instead of guns.

Assistant Commissioner S. T. Wood, when he was in Europe with the Coronation troop of Mounties, studied the scientific methods of Scotland Yard and the French Surete and the laboratory is being patterned after them.

Another Insurgent Drive

MADRID.—The thunder of a fresh insurgent attempt to smash into Madrid, this time through the south-western suburbs, rolled over this war-tired, war-bored metropolis this week. Defense commanders shrugged and commented: "No substantial gains."

Strike Ended

CORNWALL.—Settled as suddenly as it started, the strike at Cornwall Pants and Prince Clothing Company, involving 285 workers, ended this week when representatives of the men and Mayor Aaron Horovitz, president of the company, reached a satisfactory agreement.

Plead for Innocents

SHANGHAI.—Naval commanders of the United States and four other western powers demanded this week that both Chinese and Japanese anti-aircraft gunners take immediate steps to spare the lives of "innocent non-combatants."

The urgent request of American Admiral Harry E. Yarnell and the other neutral naval commanders went forward while Chinese, facing wave after wave of Japanese attackers, stood fast on their new inland positions stretching 20 miles from Chapei to Liuho, north and west of International Shanghai.

Trees for Prairies

OTTAWA.—During the present year 2,000,000 trees will be planted in the three Prairie Provinces under the farm rehabilitation program, and 4,000,000 trees will be distributed through the ordinary channels. This afforestation is part of the large, long-range plan for checking the ravages of soil drifting and helping to conserve moisture.

Championship Golf Tournament

The all-Canadian part of the twentieth annual championship tournament of the Canadian Seniors' Golf Association wound up this week with R. M. Gray, Toronto Rosedale Club star, who will be 50 years old in December, successfully defending his title in downright easy manner. It was almost a case of Gray first, the rest nowhere, as Bob carded a 36-hold gross of 148, a 16-stroke edge over his closest rival.

Japan Threatens

GENEVA. — Japan will withdraw from all League of Nations collaboration and will strengthen her ties with Italy and Germany if the League takes any "positive action" on China's appeal for intervention in the Far East conflict, a Japanese spokesman said this week.

German Plane Lands

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. — The German seaplane Nordwind, with which the Reich is blazing a commercial aviation trail across the Atlantic, alighted at this Long Island airport this week after a flight from Horta in the Azores. Captain Walter Diele was in command of the ship and its crew of three.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE NEWS

A Commentary
By ELIZABETH EEDY

On Outstanding Events of the Week

Eyes on Czechoslovakia

One of the last strongholds of democracy in Europe, Czechoslovakia, occupies a doubly strategic position. Nazi Germany would be blind any moment to swallow this little country whose geographical outlines cut a neat slice out of the south-eastern German States. (More than two-thirds of Czechoslovakia's present population of 15,000,000 is concentrated in this western half in the highly industrialized provinces of Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia, right on the doorstep of Germany.) The Czechs live in mortal fear of the Hitler regime but feel temporarily secure under the military protection of Soviet Russia. At this moment in Europe's history, Czechoslovakia is very important.

Front Page News

The Spanish Civil War had the front pages of our daily newspapers all to itself for a good many months of this year and last, sharing honors occasionally with a particularly horrible murder, car accident or earthquake fatality. With the advent of the Sino-Japanese conflict, however, it was transferred to page 3 or even page 5. In August, 1937, the front page headlines screamed Jap bombings at us, and talked in bold type of the grave international crisis in the Far East. The Sino-Jap situation is just now possibly as grave as it ever was, but as a front page story it has given place to the Mediterranean embroglio and the danger of war in Europe. There is a war going on in Spain, and a war going on in China, just the same.

Need Bigger Population

With one-sixteenth of the cultivatable land in the world and more than that fraction of the world's natural resources, Canada has only one half of one percent. of the earth's population. It is the contention of Dr. W. J. Black, who addressed the annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce at Vancouver, that Canada must have more population if it is to fulfill the destiny that nature intended for it. More people must be brought in from outside through immigration, he said, if the country is to keep going ahead. An influx of farming families would aid development, he believes.

To Make Peace With Ireland

The economic "war" between the United Kingdo mand the Irish Free State is believed to be nearing its end. Of several years' duration the conflict began when President Eamon de Valera refused to transfer the Irish land annuities to the British Government. The United Kingdom, as guarantor of the loans, had to meet the interest charges. To recoup herself, she clapped special duties on imports from the Irish Free State. The Irish Free State retaliated. But now de Valera has gone to Switzerland where he is meeting Dominions Secretary Malcolm MacDonald at Geneva to discuss differences between the two countries and bring about an economic reconciliation.

Want Uniform Administration

Amendments to Workmen's Compensation Acts throughout Canada that would give 100 per cent. compensation were recommended by the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress in session at Ottawa. It was voted also that the full cost of administration be placed on industry. The administration of the Ontario Compensation Act as it affected those employed in the mining and lumbering industry was termed a "disgrace," since it has become a practice, it was said, for operators to minimize the number of reported accidents, lower their contribution to the Compensation Board and increase their profits at the expense of the workers. The Congress is pressing to make the Acts more efficient and to have them uniform throughout the country.

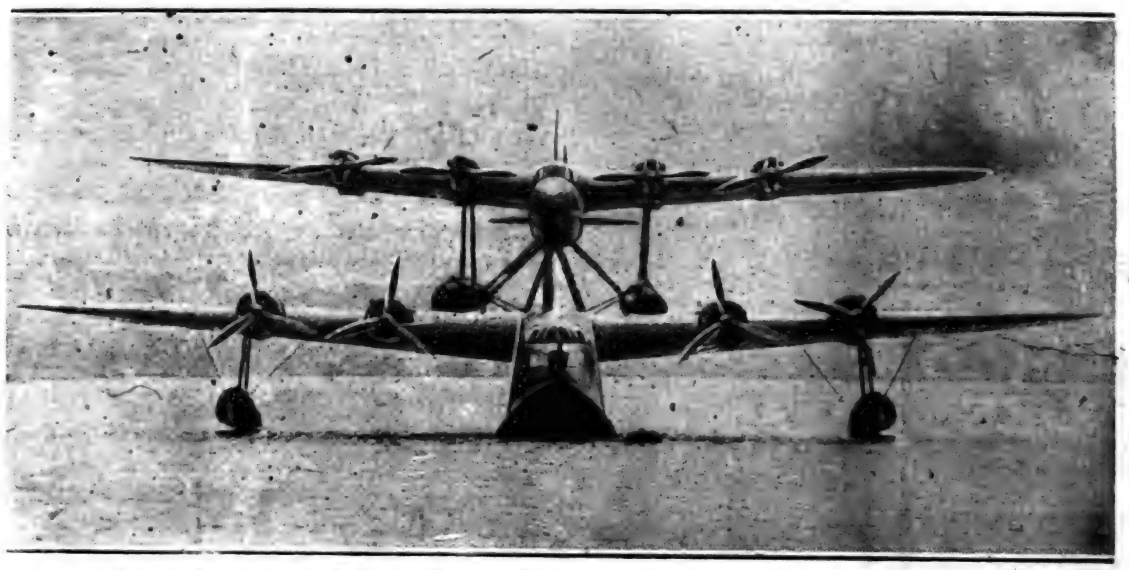
Italy Backs Out

Demanding full equality with the other European powers in patrolling the Mediterranean, Italy has rejected the Anglo-French invitation to join with the nine countries in a war against submarine piracy. Mussolini's ministers had previously accepted, so that when his consent was suddenly withdrawn, it was thought that Germany had influenced him to a reversal of decision. Nevertheless the agreement entered into at Nyon, Switzerland, against "piracy" will be put into operation immediately, with or without Italian participation.

"We Are Not Involved"

Prime Minister Mackenzie King assured the country this week that "Canada has no ships in the Mediterranean, and Canadian commerce is not involved in the policies being adopted by the nine-power conference." He also observed that Canada had not taken any part in activities of the non-intervention committee nor had there been any invitation to take part in the war on "piracy."

Roosevelt and Lewis Confer



WASHINGTON. — President Roosevelt and his generous political ally in 1936, C.I.O. Chieftain John L. Lewis, conferred for the first time in months this week, but neither would say whether they had composed their recent differences.

Both the White House and Lewis made non-committal statements after the fifteen-minute conference, but it was indicated that the split which occurred when Mr. Roosevelt wished a "plague on both your houses" during the C.I.O. strike in "Little Steel" was discussed.

Demand Radium, Nickel Control

OTTAWA.—Demand that the Government assume monopolistic control of radium and nickel was made this week in two resolutions adopted by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada as that workers' Parliament reached the half-way mark in its fifty-third annual convention.

How Composite Aircraft Will Appear

The two components of the Mayo composite aircraft (designed to overcome the difficulty in launching a heavy-laden transatlantic plane) have made individual flights over Messrs. Short's yard, in Rochester, England, where they were built, and preparations are now nearly complete for the crucial combined test flight, when the vital release mechanism freeing the upper monoplane from the big parent hull will be put to the test. Our picture shows a composite picture, made from two original photographs taken during the individual tests, showing the composite aircraft as it will appear when assembled for the combined test.

HAVE YOU HEARD

It may be cowardly to kick a man when he is down, but it is sometimes necessary to get him up.

Florence — "Darling, I wish I could feel perfectly certain that I am the only girl you have ever loved."

Clarence — "So do I, dear."

No man is perfect — only the women.

A prominent official of the telephone company was rudely aroused from his slumbers by the insistent ringing of the telephone. After bruising his toe on a chair and "seeing the stars" he reached the telephone.

Official (growling) — "Hello!"

Loud Masculine Voice — "Are you an official of the telephone company?"

Official — "Yes. What can I do for you?"

Voice — "Tell me, how do you like getting out of bed at two o'clock in the morning to answer a wrong number call?"

Some men don't know the first thing about hard times until the wife loses her job.

SLICED VERY THIN

By Sixbits

"No Matter How Thin You Slice It — It's Still Baloney"

Carry on Hepburn! Carry on Rowe! For your carryings-on are giving the populace many a laugh, at a time when such are very welcome, even if they are not adding very greatly to the dignity of public affairs.

For when these lads get up on the public platform and start hurling adjectives, adverbs and other parts of speech around, they really let themselves go, and don't hold anything in reserve.

They are something like the large colored lady who went into the general store and proceeded to order full mourning in honor of her husband who had just got the worst of a cutting affair.

After she had ordered a black dress, ditto shoes, stockings, hat and so forth, she asked to be shown some all-black underwear—and was informed that the store didn't carry any of such bric-a-brac.

"But," said the clerk helpfully, "it doesn't make any difference. It wouldn't be seen anyway."

"Deanie," replied the relict with a sad shake of her head. "You-all don't know what I is like. When I mourns, I really mourns."

That must have been a highly exciting and rib-raising series between the Orillia Terriers and Mimico Mountaineers—but, not for the first time, we put in with our worthy friend Ted Reeve in his statement that, wherever it is, it isn't lacrosse.

Tweny—thirty—or more goals per game may satisfy the desire of the modern spectator for swift action and frequent changes in the scoring—but those of us ancient enough to remember the glorious days of old, when a guy had to really earn a goal before he got one, simply cannot get very warm about such doings.

To us, the sticks these modern players carry look more like kiddies' toys—in fact, up around Elora, Fergus and those parts when we were young, little toddlers would have disdained to carry them.

Of course, any kind of lacrosse is better than none at all—and if they keep even this ghost of the game going, to ever-rising enthusiasm—every place except Toronto, it seems—perhaps there will come a day when the grand old sport will come out into the sunshine, on the green grass, where it belongs—and a lacrosse addict, asked how he was going to send a Saturday afternoon, First of July or Civic Holiday will look at his questioner with the same disgusted amazement as a good Orangeman would wear if queries as to his intentions for the Glorious Twelfth.

But even if today's lacrossists don't run as far, check as closely, or play as prettily as their fathers there is one thing you have to hand them—they wear the same old scars, bruises and contusions—and with, apparently, as little regard for same.

Injuries that would put followers of any other sport in the hospital seem to be like water on a duck's back—to coin a phrase—and only seem to spur them to greater efforts; just as it was back in the times when wives and sweeties of players starting off to visit St. Catharines, Brantford, and other hard-hitting hotbeds would take long lingering looks at them before they climbed on the train.

For they knew that, even if they did come back, they weren't going to appear nearly the same.

Young Man — "I'm thinking of asking some girl to marry me. What do you think of the idea?"

Sweet Young Thing — "It's a great idea, if you ask me!"

Opportunity does not always knock at the door any more. Sometimes it sits at the curb and honks.

Friend — "Gosh, I need five bucks and I don't know where to get it."

Man — "I'm glad of that. I was afraid you thought you could get it from me."

The attic is a place where we store things we don't need until it comes time to throw them away.

Tired Traveller — "Can I get anything to eat in this dirty dump?"

Negro Waiter — "Yas, suh, you kin."

Traveller — "Such as what?"

Negro Waiter — "Such as it is, sah!"

Professor's Wife — "Did you know, dear, that it is 11 years today since we became engaged?"

Professor (preoccupied) — Oh, my dear, its high time we were getting married."

READ IT OR NOT:—

Charles Courtney, master locksmith of New York city, has travelled as far as Bombay, India, and Moscow, Russia, to open "unopenable" safes and trunks.

The new farm laborer was sent to milk the cow, but as he was such a long time gone the farmer went to see what was delaying him. He found him feeding the cow with milk.

Farmer — "Here, I said milk the cow — not feed it."

New Laborer — "Well, I thought it came out a bit thin, so I am putting it through again."

Women might be able to understand each other better over the telephone if they would talk one at a time.

Man — "Has your wife changed very much since you married her?"

Friend — "Yes, my habits, my own friends, and my hours."

The pumpkins are reported in fine shape to welcome the early frosts.

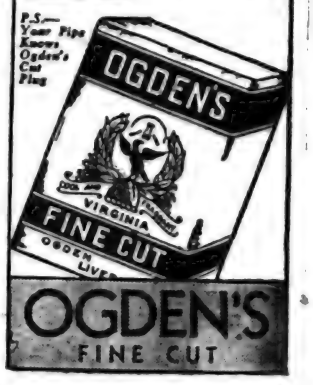
Cost of Dying Comes Too High

Herman Levy, exiled German, who is one of Great Britain's leading economists, told the British Association for the Advancement of Science, meeting at Nottingham, England, that "the high cost of dying is exorbitant in Britain, and should be controlled by the state."

He pointed to Switzerland as a country where the entire cost of burials is state-controlled and said that "there a banker lies next a laborer in an unostentatious grave and no man worries about the possibility of going to a pauper's cemetery."

Recommends Survey

Levy recommended a Government survey of the burial problem with a view to eventual adoption of the Swiss control system.



Under present conditions he said "a man must have almost $100 or $125 in order to consider dying."

Quintuplet Calves

Farmer Hiram Long reported this week quintuplet calves were born to Spot, his Guernsey-shorthorn cow.

Long, who lost one of the calves before he could summon aid, exclaimed:—

"You can imagine how a man feels when he goes out expecting one calf and finds the ground covered with them."

"Never," said C. C. Hisel, state veterinarian, "have I heard of or read of such a thing."

A letter written by a Peebles man to the town clerk of his home town has just been delivered after a double crossing of the Atlantic. A Canadian found it wedged in the wrapper of a newspaper from Scotland.

Dad — "My shaving brush is very stiff. I wonder what's wrong with it?"

Wifey — "I don't know. It was nice and soft when I painted the bird cage yesterday."

Rev. H. Pawson, of Weston, conducted Harvest Home services at Burnhamthorpe United Church last Sunday.

John Towers, of Toronto, was instantly killed on Sunday afternoon, on the Centre Road, Britannia, between Cooksville and Brampton, when his motorcycle crashed through the guard rails and dropped into the ditch below. Kenneth Jarvis, riding in the side-car, was badly injured and taken to Peel Memorial Hospital. An inquest will be held.

More than 2000 persons in Canada have been stricken by infantile paralysis since the epidemic started last June, and there have been over 70 deaths. There have been twelve cases in Brampton.

Albert D'Andrea, Toronto, was seriously injured while testing a midget racing car on Cooksville Fair grounds on Saturday afternoon, and taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto, for treatment.

"The morality of an action depends upon the motive from which we act."—Johnson.

"Men are more accountable for their motives than for anything else; and primarily, morality, consists in the motives, that is in the affections."—Archibald Alexander.

THE PEST OF AN EDITOR'S LIFE

The newspaper is deluged every week with numerous "news" letters. Did we say letters? Well, a few of them are, and contain good stuff, but the large majority are nothing more than someone wanting us to boost their proposition, their business, their products, and this is advertising. Advertising is just like sugar, tea, or coffee on the merchant's shelves. They ask a price for it. If they give it away they'd soon be out of business. Advertising is worth a price. It is our commercial commodity. We can not give it away. If we did this community would no longer have a newspaper. Advertising brings you value received. Its publishers would work everyday in the week, sometimes long hours, to give you the news of your community. It boosts everything that is good for the community. It boosts everything that is good for the farmers. We must hold our news columns for news and paid advertising. Therefore, we fill our waste basket every week with the requests for free advertising and turn down numerous appeals, not in any spirit of antagonism, but unfairness to ourselves and our patrons. Just step into any grocery store and ask for a dollar's worth of sugar, free, and see what answer you get. Try it once.—Bowmanville Statesman.

1938 MOTOR PERMITS NOW AVAILABLE

No Special Numbers for 1938

Toronto, September 20, 1937—Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, announced today that 1938 Motor Vehicle Permits and Operators' Licenses will go on sale throughout the Province immediately. Agents in the larger centres are already supplied, and shipments of supplies are being made daily to the smaller points.

The Highways Department is making 1938 Permits available at this time so that purchasers of new 1938 cars and trucks will not be obliged to pay for 1937 registration and so that the increasingly large number of autumn purchasers of used cars and trucks will not have to pay the usual transfer fee with only three months of the year remaining.

The advance sale of 1938 Permits is also designed to alleviate the usual last minute rush when 1937 Permits expire at the end of the year.

The new plates are of an exceptionally attractive design this year, with Crown and Orange figures on Blue background. There will be no letter prefixes. The series letter will come in the second, third or fourth position between the numerals, and each plate will have only one series letter.

Reduction in Rates

A substantial reduction in rates is announced, which will be welcome news to motorists and owners of commercial vehicles.

The Government having decided to change the license year to coincide with its fiscal year, 1938 permits and licenses will be valid until March 31st, 1939.

In announcing the advance sale of 1938 Permits Mr. McQuesten stated that the Department will be unable to consider requests for special arrangements of numbers or special series letters. This has occasioned considerable extra work in the past and the Minister hopes, by its discontinuance to save the expense this extra work involved and at the same time increase the efficiency of the service given to all motorists.

Over one hundred issuing offices are located at convenient points throughout the Province. As formerly, those living in districts remote from issuing offices can procure their permits and licenses by mail, direct from the Department of Highways, Motor Vehicles Branch, Queen's Park, Toronto.

SNIDER'S

Mrs. C. N. Fish entertained the members of Wesley W.M.S. on Thursday of last week. The hostess arranged the program, her father, Mr. F. A. Forster, assisting with it. Arrangements were made to send vegetables and clothing to the West when a car goes from Oakville.

Miss Alice Maxwell, teacher of Snider's School, is ill in Hamilton hospital. We trust her health will soon improve.

Miss Edna Greensides is visiting friends in Acton.

Rally Day for the Sunday School was held on Sunday morning at Wesley Church. The superintendent, Mr. C. N. Fish, conducted the service and Rev. Mr. Lovering gave the address. Louise Dunn, Peggy Cross, Eleanor Hutton, Phyllis Fish and Willard Fish assisted with the service.

Election Oct. 6, 1937

The Open Column

Democracy, to our way of thinking, is a flat failure, at least as it is practiced in the present day and age. The premise on which democracy is founded, that "all men are born free and equal", is absolutely false. There could be no greater folly than to assume that the child born of moronic, diseased parents has as great an opportunity in life as the child of healthy, intelligent citizens who were prepared, before their child came, to pay the cost of bringing it into the world, and of caring for it, educating it and giving their boy or girl an adequate start in the world.

None of us are born into the world free, whatever our claims to equality with the rest of humanity may be. We are obliged to keep the laws democracy has set down for us, and, when we become self-supporting, tax bills will soon convince us that we have no freedom unless we are to join the lower strata of democratic society, who are too lazy, or have not sufficient intelligence to earn their own keep, and are therefore, not worth taxing. Some of us, perhaps, may be sufficiently clever to evade paying taxes, but that is not a democratic position to assume.

Chiefly, democracy, as practiced on the North American continent, seems to consist of squabbling about purely artificial problems. Few of us have been fortunate enough to have failed to hear politicians shout from their stumps: "We must return to first principles". If we returned to first principles, there would be no politicians. First principles, strangely enough, produce the results sought by the most artificial form of financial legislation yet attempted on this continent, to wit, Social Credit.

The first principle is apparent to anyone who will look for it. It is the most universally observed of all principles: there is air; let us breath it. If we abandoned that principle, we would all fall dead. Yet it is ignored as being a first principle. First principles deal with involved mazes of figures, in the minds of our political leaders. They have even involved this simple matter in the political tangle of affairs. We must pay a tax for the privilege of breathing.

The second principle is that, if we are hungry or thirsty, we must eat and drink. Again, because of artificial restrain imposed by supposedly democratic principles of government, we are taxed through the things that we must eat to live. There have been taxes on sugar and other foodstuffs, to support the top-heavy democracy of the times.

The third principle is that we must have somewhere to sleep, to keep ourselves safe from the depredations of wild animals and wild climates. And here, because we cannot, like the snail, pick up our homes and move off with them, the democratic administration of our affairs really has us by the throat in levying taxes.

The above argument is far from flawless, we admit. We must pay taxes for the maintenance of our public services, roads, water, electricity. We also pay heavily for the administration of these services, which brings us to the point of our argument, that a sound dictatorship would be a great improvement on democratic government, aside from the improvement of the personnel of our population, as we have previously suggested.

A dictatorship would erase the necessity of paying members of parliament, of provincial legislature, and, to a certain extent, of members of local councils. Actually, under our present system, by far the greater percentage of the administration of our affairs, or at least the actual work concerned in this administration, is performed by paid employes.

In the county of Peel, for instance, we have, as leading officials, a clerk, treasurer and engineer. Their total salaries, it would be fair to assume, do not amount to $5,000 a year. They have an inside knowledge of the doings of the citizens of the county, and are, presumably, on hand the year round to attend to county business. Then we have, doing none of the actual work, a warden and council directing these men, receiving, at a conservative estimate, a total of $3,000 a year. The actual situation is that, many times, the permanent officials have directed the council through administrative difficulties in which the councillors floundered.

Under a complete dictatorship, the directive bodies would not be needed. One man would say "This is my policy". His inspectors would examine the actions of administrative units throughout the country, and promptly hail before the dictator's justices the man who was contravening the policy of the dictator. We would get along without a great deal of our governmental machinery.

At the same time it must be admitted that a dictator with military aspirations akin to those of Hitler and Mussolini would waste a great deal more than our present democratic government. It is all too obvious that a dictatorship, to establish a sound system of economy, would have to control the entire world and the people thereof.

A universal dictatorship, we aver, would dispense with much of the nonproductive nonsense of democracy. State operation of industry would dispense with industrial gambling on stocks and bonds and mines. We would struggle along without artificial civil services such as customs and immigration administrations. One central government with world-wide ramifications would control production and consumption. It is even thinkable that, some day, we would manage to get along without money. We would produce the things demanded of us, and, in return, be assured of the things we needed, and be assured of security in our old age.

Democracy, through the medium of the old age pension, has taken steps towards the latter form of security, and has decreed that no man may starve. The doll, or relief, is given those who are unable to find means of being self-supporting. But relief, in too many cases, has been given without exacting a return for subsistence, producing an entirely artificial situation, for the second principle of existence is somewhat compounded by the necessity of catching meat, or tilling the soil to produce food.

Assuming that all this premise is correct, what of the men thrown out of the civil services, out of armies and governments? The answer to that question is simple. In the Canadian West is a rapidly growing desert. There are deserts all over the world. Just apply the principle of democracy, "all men are born free and equal". It would be no violation of that principle to place a shovel in their respective hands, and lead them gently to a spot devastated by ignorance of natural process, and let them go to work at rebuilding the world.

MUNN'S CORNERS

In the year 1804 King Henry Munn walked through three or four miles of as dense a forest as any in Canada, north from the shores of Lake Ontario, and picked on the spot of his future home. This farm is now the east corner of what is known as Munn's Corners.

There were probably not a dozen white people in Trafalgar at this time. Where Oakville has since been built was then an Indian Reserve, and a vast number of the tribe, the Mississauga, roamed over the whole district. The Sixteen-Mile Creek was then a much more ambitious stream than it is today, and hunting and fishing, as well as the red men with their canoes, made the river lively. In the summer time large numbers camped in the beautiful spot known as Camp Hallow, afterwards called Drumquin. Influenced by their chief, Joseph Brant, they were orderly and regarded the white man with no special disfavor. After Mr. Munn located in 1804 a large number of people settled on what was afterwards known as Dundas Street. Sovereigns, Proudfoots, Kailtings, Biggars, Mulhollands, Kenneys, Chambers, Albertsons, Chisholms, Sproats, Browns and Hagars, were among the first. The first school at Munn's corners was built in 1809, being the first in the Township, one of the three that were in the township in 1812. It was built on the corner of Mr. Munn's farm, since turned into a cemetery. It was a substantial log building and served the people until 1852. Here, although the appliances were crude, good work was done and a great multitude of men and women fitted for the battle of life. These were the times of the good old-fashioned families, and in the winter season, when grown men and women attended, often as many as seventy pupils occupied the long benches.

This building also served as a church until 1844 and many good sermons were heard there, when earnest men railed at the evils of the day. A new brick building, with cottage roof, was erected in 1852. This school had the dignity of having a bell, and served until 1901, when the present modern structure was built. The first church, a large frame building, was built and was dedicated on Oct. 14, 1844. This building was taken down on April 8th, 1898. K. H. Munn was at the raising of the building, and also at the taking down. In 1823 Mr. McGiffin built a large frame hotel on the south corner of Munn's Corners. The house was roomy and comfortable, the stable and sheds capable of housing a large number of horses, but the bar was considered to be the most important part, and it needed extensive capacity to cater to the great crowd of customers. Here as whiskey, strong and pure, could be bought at 15c a gallon wholesale, it was sold over the bar at four cents a mug, or ten or twelve for a quarter. Glasses were unknown in these early days, mugs and bowls of different sizes were placed along the bar, the whiskey handed out in large jugs, the customer allowed to choose his own mug and fill it himself. For a number of years this hotel played a most important part in the history of the township. Assessors, tax-gatherers, pathmasters, poundkeepers, as well as councillors, were elected by a vote of the people. On a large verandah of the hotel the township clerk would stand and ask for nominations for any office. If several were nominated for any office he would ask the immense crowd that always was present, to vote on the different nominations. All in favor of Smith would be asked to stand in one place, all for Jones in another, those for Brown in another. In case of a close vote any doubting Thomas would be liable to be almost torn to pieces by the contending parties trying to pull him into different crowds. The clerk announced which one he considered elected but any other candidate could demand a poll. As the poll was kept open for three days, and whiskey was strong and cheap, many small riots occurred and numerous soreheads went home from the election. For years also the courts of the district were held in the hotel. The county judges came several times a year to dispense justice in the large dining room. The south corner having the bar and the law-making and law-administering power; the north corner, the school and church, old-timers said; the south for legislation and damnation; the north for education and salvation.

The first store at Munn's Corners was built by Terry Balmer, at R. A. Fleming's gate. This business only lasted for a short time and the building was moved and used as a residence by George Long. In 1818 Ephraim Post built a hotel at the corner of the seventh line, then called Post's Corners, now Postville. In 1820 Trafalgar post office was started here. This was the first office in the county, and for many years were the only one. Mr. Proudfoot was postmaster. It was for a time the only post office between Toronto and Dundas. For years Mr. McColl, father of the McColls of Esquesing, carried the mail from Trafalgar to that part of the country. The mail was carried from Toronto to Niagara on horseback and between the dangers of fording unbridged creeks, plunging through miles of deep untrodden snow and taking chances of wolves and bears, beside Indians, His Majesty's servants, the mail carriers, had not a bed of roses.

Post's Inn became a centre in the old stage coach days. Two stages each day ran between Toronto and Dundas. And one stage each day ran between Oakville and Georgetown, there connecting with the routes to Erin and Guelph. As each stage had four horses, Postville was a changing station and a large stable was required for the many horses. Mr. Post built one on the north corner, opposite the hotel, capable of stabling fifty horses. This building was later moved down on McGowan's farm and used as a barn. The arrival of the different stages, each with 25 or 30 passengers, was always an event of great importance and each day was sure to bring a large crowd of spectators. To care for all these horses, and feed and house all the travellers, was a work of great importance, but to supply the wants of the inner cronies was more important still. The hotel was kept for a time by Hiram Post, and by Albert Post for a time as a temperance house, for many years by the Baker family, and by Sam Lever as a temperance house. The first store at Postville was built by James Appleby, who was afterwards township clerk.

He was followed by his son, John K. Appleby, who ran the store and acted as township clerk until 1896, when he was succeeded by Charles Hall. In 1847 Obadiah Marlatt built a brick store on the east corner. In 1880 this was bought by the township for a municipal hall. Mr. Marlatt also ran a steam sawmill in McLean's field. Here a lot of planks, used for planking the Seventh line, were sawn. Jonathan Pellet, and John L. Biggs also kept a store for some time. Two brick yards were in full blast at Postville at one time. James Rolston also operated one at Munn's Corners.

Religion was not neglected. A great religious event of the time was the annual camp meeting at Munholland's bush. The meeting would be held in June, and would last for over two weeks. Drunkenness and evil was common and open, but the preaching and exortation in this grove was vigorous, too. Richard Jones, Alexander, T. Green, Thomas Campbell, John Borland, James Gray, and T. M. Jeffreys would make the woods ring with their denunciation of sin. The sincerity and fire of the preachers, no doubt, did immense good, and many young people had their foot firmly established in safe paths.

In the stirring days of 1837, W. L. MacKenzie had many sympathizers in the district. At one time when a price was on his head he sought refuge in a house of Squire Trillers, just east of the Sixteen Hollow. A company of soldiers came to the house to search for him, but Mr. Triller, having seven comely daughters, entertained the soldiers to a dainty lunch, and so charmed the young men that they never searched the house, MacKenzie all the time being in an inner room. After this he found refuge in the White homestead, escaping from these on one of their thorough-bred horses. He was hidden for a time by a Scotchman named Black, on the Sixth line above Drumquin, ina potato pit. While MacKenzie's friends were enthusiastic, the Loyalists were also, and many hot encounters were held along old Dundas Street.

HOSTAGE HEIRESS

By DAVID DRESSER

Janet Duane, millionaire's daughter, gives a party one night aboard her father's palatial yacht, anchored off Miami. Gregory Gason tricks her into being left behind with him when the guests are taken ashore. The only other persons aboard are a crippled watchman and Janet's Negro maid. Meanwhile, "Dusty" Lanion, lawless adventurer, has laid plans to seize the yacht to carry arms and ammunition to Cuban revolutionists. Believing the boat to be deserted, except for the watchman, who has been bribed, Dusty and his men are about to board her.

CHAPTER IV

Dusty swore softly as he lashed the wheel. What a mess! Just when he thought everything was going perfectly, to find the Duane heiress aboard! And he couldn't turn back now.

Excited voices came to him from outside the wheelhouse as he knelt by Janet. He looked to see Snifter vainly trying to hold back a huge negress. A torrent of words poured from her lips.

Dusty drew back from Janet as Fandella barged into the wheelhouse.

"I'se comin', honey! I'se comin.' Ain' no man gonna hol' me back, honey lamb. Oh, my goodness, chile!" she wailed as she dropped to her knees beside Janet and touched her face fearfully, "What's dey done to you?"

"She's just fainted," Dusty grunted. "Take her down to the lounge."

He turned back to the wheel as Fandella gathered Janet up in her arms, crooning to her gently as she carried her away.

Dawn was just breaking when Dusty wearily manoeuvred the Fleetwing into a small cove on the mainland south of Miami. Ragged palmettos grew along the little arm which stretched out to form the cove, rising higher than the deck of the Fleetwing and hiding her from any prying gaze. Dusty knew he would be safe here—unless airplanes were called into the search.

Everything had worked out on schedule. Everything, he amended, except the circumstance of having three passengers aboard. His face hardened as he considered the situation briefly.

Janet hadn't reappeared since Fandella had carried her from the bridge but Snifter had brought him word that she was fully recovered. He scowled as he tried to fit Gregory Gason into the picture. A skunk, if ever there was one, he decided. Gregory had attempted some smirking explanation of his presence when he found Dusty in command of the vessel, but Dusty had cut him short peremptorily.

The vision of the girl as she had faced him in the doorway had remained with Dusty through the hours as he had guided the Fleetwing on to this cove. Every detail of her face and her bearing was etched in his memory. She didn't seem the sort that would have anything to do with a snake like Gregory.

He stepped out to the deck. Then his lips set in a grim line as he turned down the companionway. This thing would have to be talked out some time. Might as well come to an understanding at once.

She Receives a Visitor

Janet's voice answered his knock on the door of the lounge.

"May I come in?" he called.

"Why not—whoever you are?" Janet's voice was strained.

Dusty opened the door abruptly. Fandella, seated on a couch, gazed at him angrily. His eyes swiftly swept the lounge. He was conscious of a queer relief to find that Gregory was not there.

"I don't like to disturb you—" Dusty began.

"Why not? Having stolen the ship and kidnapped us, I shouldn't think you'd hesitate about disturbing us," Janet said bitterly.

Dusty closed the door carefully behind him.

"I've borrowed the Fleetwing. And your presence aboard was an accident. You know that. I'm just as sorry as you are."

Janet flung herself into a chair and regarded him with dangerous calm.

"Borrowing wouldn't be my name for it."

Dusty made a helpless gesture. "I think you deserve to know the truth." He met her smouldering gaze squarely. "We're anchored in a cove down the coast from Miami. We'll stay here today. A truck is due here this evening with a crew of men to load arms and ammunition that I'm going to run to Cuba tonight. Since you are here, you'll have to stay on board until the job is done. That's all there is to it. Make yourselves as comfortable as possible. I give you my word you'll not be molested in any way."

"Your word?" she gibed. "The word of a boat thief and a gun-runner?"

Anger glinted from his eyes. "My word," he said softly, "which has never been broken."

Can't Be "Caught"

A strange emotion surged over Janet. Suddenly, she felt strong. It was in her power to wound this tall stranger who stole boats, and ran guns with cool audacity, yet flinched when his honor was questioned. What manner of man was he? She studied him curiously.

He seemed wholly at ease under her searching gaze. Arrogantly sure of himself. Janet was accustomed to homage and flattery from all men. This adventurer gave her neither.

"You'll be caught," she said sullenly. "My father will move heaven and earth to find me . . . and the Fleetwing."

He shrugged. "My dear lady. I've been running guns, and making and breaking governments for 15 years. So far I haven't been 'caught,' as you put it."

"I demand that you put us ashore immediately."

"That's hardly practicable," he told her gently, as though she were an unreasonable child. "It's 20 miles of swamp and jungle before you'd reach civilization. No." He shook his head. "You're in this with me—whether you like it or not."

He hesitated a moment, then opened the door, and went out without a backward glance.

"Dat man," Fandella said, with deep conviction, "he sho mean what he say. He gonna git what he go after. An' right now, Miz Janet, I'se tellin' yo' he don' mean half de ha'm dat Mistuh Gason mean. Yo' ma'k mah wo'ds. Dat Mistuh Gason am de real bad un."

* * *

Janet stood on the deck as dusk crept over the cove, and surveyed the group of men ashore. All afternoon they had toiled under Dusty's directions, bringing cases and boxes down to the water's edge from the cache in the underbrush.

All was serenity as the twilight deepened. Gregory was sulking in his cabin, and Janet stood alone by the rail, amazed at her placid acceptance of this strange situation.

Then the serenity of the evening was broken by the harsh roar of a truck lumbering along the rutted road. It halted near the shore.

Janet saw the figure of a woman leap from the front seat and run to meet Dusty. It was too dark to see her face, but a sudden disturbing premonition gripped Janet.

Canada Needs More People

C. N. R. Official Says Development Tied up With Immigration

That Canada must have more population if it is to fulfill the destiny that nature intended for it, was the contention before the annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce meeting in Vancouver, of Dr. W. J. Black, Director of Colonization and Agriculture for the Canadian National Railways.

With one-sixteenth of the cultivable land in the world and more than that fraction of the world's natural resources, Canada nevertheless had only half of one per cent of the population. Canada's development is, and always has been, tied up with immigration, he said.

Farming Families Wanted

To the criticism that immigration would take away the opportunities of the younger generation, Dr. Black replied no part of Canada has had less immigration the past 25 years than the Maritimes, yet the movement during this period to the United States and elsewhere had been perhaps heavier than for any other part of the Dominion. The Maritimes had not benefited by it and there were many today who believed an influx of farming families would have good effect.

Looking at the drought areas on the Prairies, Dr. Black said the sad difficulties there still did not justify the lack of settlement in areas where families can succeed. He believed some of the perplexities of the past few years were due to rural population attracted to industry by high wages prevailing during the good years unable to find its way back to the farm without funds.

Economical Grape Preserves

There will be just time, if you get busy now, to put up to good use, the last of the grape crop. You may be a little weary by this time of making jams and jellies but it will prove well worth your while to make a last effort and store up for winter use, these luscious products of the vineyard.

By making grape jelly and using the pulp to make grape butter, you can get two kinds of conserves which you must admit is very practical and economical.

It may sound like a long, messy job but it is really very simple when you use bottled fruit pectin. It was a red-letter day for jelly makers when the Douglas brothers discovered how to extract pectin from fruits that had plenty of it and to make it available for fruits that were lacking in it. The pectin you purchase in bottled form is refined and concentrated to a definite jellying strength, and thus you are assured of perfect texture in your jellies when you use it.

Ripe Grape Jelly

4 cups (2 pounds) juice.
7½ cups (3¼ lbs.) sugar.
½ bottle (½ cup) bottled fruit pectin

To prepare the juice, stem about 7 pounds full ripe grapes, and crush thoroughly. Add half cup water, cover, and simmer 5 minutes. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag. Drip until 4 cups juice have run through. Measure sugar and juice as prepared above, into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil, boil hard ½ min. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 11 eight-ounce glasses.

Ripe Grape Butter

4½ cups (2¼ lbs.) prepared pulp.
7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar.
½ bottle (½ cup bottled fruit pectin.

Measure sugar and prepared pulp, as repared above, into large kettle, mix well, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot butter at once. Makes about 11 eight-ounce glasses.

FOR THE EPICURE
Eggplant Au Gratin

1 medium-sized eggplant.
3 tablespoons bacon fat
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 "Oxo" cube
1 cup boiling water
½ cup stewed strained tomato.
½ teaspoon salt
1-6 teaspoon pepper
1 cup grated cheese
2 tablespoons buttered crumbs.

Peel the eggplant and cut into large dice. Dust with flour and saute in the bacon fat until golden brown. Make a sauce by blending the butter and flour, adding the tomato, "Oxo" cube dissolved in water, and seasonings. Fill a baking dish with alternate layers of eggplant, sauce, and cheese. Sprinkle with the buttered crumbs and bake twenty minutes in a moderately hot oven—350 to 375 degrees F.

Journey Towards "Island In Sky"

Scientists Climb up to Plateau a Mile and a Half High

A party of scientists winged across Grand Canyon of Arizona this week on the first leg of a perilous journey to an "Island in the Sky" they hope will take them 35,000 years back into history.

They plan to begin a gruelling climb up Shiva's Temple, a mile and a half high plateau that juts straight up from the gorge's floor.

What they will find atop this wooded relic of that ancient time when receding glaciers cut away the soil around it and left stranded all the creatures that inhabited it they do not know. Not in the memory of man has anyone scaled the temple.

Creatures 35,000 Years Old

How the descendants of those marooned creatures—probably only spruce squirrels—have survived the ages is what the scientists headed by Dr. Harold E. Anthony of the American Museum of Natural History, and Edwin D. McKee, chief naturalist of Grand Canyon National Park, seek to learn.

They will set traps and, returning with their specimens, compare them with their cousins — descendants of those beasts fortunate enough to escape isolation when the glacier glided by. By this means they hope to learn important facts concerning the effect of environment on species.

Dr. Anthony and his aids will main on the temple indefinitely.

After spending a short time on the plateau, half of the party will return to the north rim to find a means of scaling Wotan's Throne, a towering formation similar to Shiva's Temple but even more formidable.

Supplies by Parachute

Supplies will be dropped to the scientists by parachute. The top of the temple is so densely covered with forest that landing a plane would be impossible.

The party will communicate with the outside world by short wave radio.

Calls Banking Boring Business

Cashier Claims it Can Turn a Person Into a Cabbage

Banking is the most monotonous work that a man can do. It will turn him into a "cabbage" if he has no outside interests as well. You can take that from W. G. Bryant, a London cashier, looking back meditatively at 47 years in the Bank of England. The oldest member of the staff, he retires.

Mr. Bryant has seen a new Bank of England built up, all except the 100-year-old outer wall. He has seen women workers invade the city; they outnumber men now.

He has seen the free-and-easy vogue grow.

Some of these changes this great Victorian regrets. But a change that pleases him—he helped to fight for it—is the introduction of the "human touch" into the Bank of England.

He laughed when he was asked if the governor, Montagu Norman, was a mysterious, aloof person. 'The most human man I ever knew," he said.

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON I.
CHRISTIAN SONSHIP
(1 John, Chapter 3.)
Printed Text—1 John 3: 1—6, 18—24.
GOLDEN TEXT— But as many as received him, to them gave he the right to become children of God, even to them that believe on his name. John 1: 12.

The Lesson in its Setting

Time. — The first Epistle of John was written about A.D. 90.

Place. — We do not know exactly where this epistle was written, but probably in the City of Ephesus, where it is thought John lived for the greater part of his life after the ascension of Christ.

The first epistle of John is nothing less than a love letter, a letter revealing the wonderful love of God to his children, written only for the family of God. Its author was, most appropriately, the apostle John, "the one whom Jesus loved." and the one whose Gospel the love of Christ is most frequently spoken of. The very vocabulary of this epistle unmistakably identifies it as an epistle to those who are in God's family.

The Scriptures teach that all who believe on Christ unto salvation are sons of God; not on the ground of their first or natural birth into the Adamic family, but on the ground of their second or spiritual birth into the family of God (John 1: 12; Gal. 3: 26; Eph. 2: 19; 3: 15; 5: 1).

We See God's Love

"Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called children of God" —It is a very interesting point that almost everywhere in the New Testament where the love of God is spoken of, it is immediately related to the sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Christ, God's son, on Calvary. It is in that sacrifice for us that we most clearly see God's love for us. John 3: 16 is the great statement of this marvelous truth. Now the apostle goes on to tell us that not only has the Lord Jesus Christ saved us, by his death for us, but that God has become to us our Father in Heaven, and that we are made the children of God.

"Beloved, now are we children of God, and it is not yet made manifest what we shall be. We know that, if he shall be manifested."— The person here referred to is, of course, the Lord Jesus Christ. His home always was in Heaven, but once, nineteen hundred years ago, he was "manifested." i.e., he revealed himself to men on earth (John 1: 31; 1 Tim. 3: 16; 2 Tim. 1: 10; 1 Pet. 1: 20; 1 John 1: 2; 3: 5, 8; he will be manifested once again, when he comes back to earth the second time, to take his church up to glory where he is. "We shall be like him; for we shall see him even as he is."—We cannot here help thinking of the words of the apostle Paul—"For now we see in a mirror, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know fully, even as also I was fully known" (1 Cor. 13: 12). We will have greater powers for apprehending spiritual truth when we are in our new spiritual bodies, and then we shall see Christ in all of his glory (see John 17: 24), in all of his love, in all of his infinite power and wisdom.

Hope of His Return

"And every one that hath this hope set on him purifieth himself, even as he is pure."—The hope here spoken of is, of course, the hope of our Lord's return, and the hope of seeing him again face to face. The effect of the hope of the return of the Lord Jesus upon us is to be likened to the effect upon us of a letter we receive from our dearest loved one who has been away, saying that he or she will be back again in the home on a certain day—everything in the home is made ready, and the very heart of the waiting loved one is also made ready, and all its thoughts and longings are toward the one returning.

"Every one that doeth sin doeth also lawlessness; and sin is lawlessness."

"And ye know that he was manifested to take away sins; and in him is no sin."—Two glorious things are here said about the Lord Jesus Christ. In the first place, he came to take away our sins. Every man has sinned. Sin shuts us away from God and merits the wrath of God. If we are to be the children of God, our sins must be dwelt with. We could not deal with them ourselves, we cannot cleanse ourselves from sin, we cannot pay the debts they incur, we cannot blot them out. If sin is to be put away, another must do it, and that must be one who has no sins of his own, for if he had his own sins to atone for, he could never atone for the sins of others. And so we read of the One who came to take away our sins that "in him is no sin.

"Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not: whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither knoweth him."—No one can abide in the Lord Jesus Christ who is not first a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, and a member of his body; or, as the Lord himself said, he is the vine, and we are the branches (John 15: 4—10) If we abide in Christ, we shall keep the commandments of Christ, i.e., we shall do the things that please him.

Love For One Another

The apostle, while he has often before spoken of love for one another, now returns to the subject, presenting it in its practical aspects. Love for one another is not a new message but is involved in the whole gospel story, and indeed, is an Old Testament revelation (Lev. 19: 18, 34; Matt. 5: 43, 44; 19: 19; 22: 39; John 13: 34; 15: 12). Love is the antithesis, the enemy, and the death of hatred.

The great supreme incentive to love, and the perfect ideal for of love for others, is found in the very life and death of the Lord Jesus Christ, who laid down his life because he loved us.

Though the apostle John is called the great mystic of the New Testament, though he writes concerning the loftiest themes that can ever engage the attention of men, and though at times he seems to speak to us from the very heights of Heaven, nevertheless he is exceedingly practical, and, in this very discussion regarding the necessity of love in our life, he points out how that no man possesses this world's goods and refuses to share them with his brother who is in need can ever claim to have the love of God in him.

"My little children, let us not love in word, neither with the tongue; but in deed and truth."—Love is dutiful in thought and deed. A little child who was asked what it meant, replied: "Love means doing errands."

"Hereby shall we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our heart before him. Because if our heart condemn us, God, is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things."—We shall know we are of the truth, i.e., that we are in God, and that we are his children, and our hearts will have assurance in his very presence of our own intimate relationship with him, if we love in deed and in truth. A man will certainly know if he loves, or if he hates his fellow-men, and, if his heart is possessed with true love, it strengthens his confidence in his conviction that he is a child of God.

"Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, we have boldness toward God." —Just as a sense of sin separates us from God, a consciousness of life in his will, every stain cleansed by the blood of his Son, gives us boldness to approach him. "And whatsoever we ask we receive of him, because we keep his commandments and do the things that are pleasing in his sight."—This promise has reference to our prayer life.

"And this is his commandment, that we should believe in the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, even as he gave us commandment."—In a preceding section, we notice that the commandment emphasized had reference to our relationship to others, namely that we should love one another. Here the commandment has reference to our relationship to God and to his Son, Jesus Christ, emphasizing our belief in him.

"And he that keepeth his commandments abideth in him, and he in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he gave us."

Powerful Lamp Visible Six Miles

If an automobile driver is not blind, temporarily or otherwise, he should be able to see the new headlight being tried by the Chicago & Northwestern on its high speed train between Chicago and St. Paul.

The lamp throws a 2,500,000-candle-power beam that gyrates continually in the pattern of a figure eight about 800 feet in diameter. Thus it sends its warnings straight ahead, to both sides of the right-of-way, and high enough to appear as an approaching pillar of light. A reflector moved by a motor oscillates the beam.

Tests show that at times the light is visible for as much as six miles at night and three miles by day. The plan is to operate it by day as well as by night to emphasize its function as a light that distinguishes an unusually fast train.

New Eddy Duchin Program

Commencing Wednesday September 29 at 8 p.m., the new Elizabeth Arden radio show will be heard over the N B C Blue network. The program will feature Eddy Duchin, famous piano playing maestro of the networks. Duchin, originally a Bostonian, was brought to New York by Leo Reisman, and his romantic style of music made him an immediate favorite of New York Society. Duchin is 27 years old; son of the owner of a drug store chain. Eddy studied to follow in the footsteps of his father, when a vacation changed his course. While working as a waiter in a boys' camp one summer, he became interested in orchestras and formed a 8-piece band, playing jazz improvisations of Bach and Beethoven. Earning extra money playing at local dances, he gave up pills and powders upon his graduation to follow a musical career.

"Grand Central Station"

This new series has its setting in Grand Central Station in New York, the gateway to the nation. Starting Tuesday, Sept. 28, over the NBC Blue network, and titled Grand Central Station, the program will be heard weekly at 9:30 p.m. The sponsors of the program feel that the station with its thousands of hurrying commuters mixed with other thousands of travellers bound for points west offers an unusual setting for the series. Each play, complete in itself, will begin with a scene in the station, where so many dramatic welcomes and partings and accidental meetings take place each day.

Kostelametz on the Air

Chesterfield Cigarettes are presenting Andre Kostelanetz and his 45 piece orchestra each Wednesday from 8:00 to 9:30 starting September 29 over the entire Columbia web. Deems Taylor, music critic and composer serves as commentator and master of ceremonies, and Paul Douglas announces. A galaxy of famous operatic and concert stars will be brought before the microphone as guests of the program.

Joe Penner Returns

Carrying on with the same theme which was such a comedy success last season, Joe Penner, the throaty-voiced comedian of the airlanes will return to the Columbia network Sunday October third, from 6:00 to 6:30. The entire cast of last season's show will return with the exception of Joy Hodges who will be replaced by the "Mystery Singer," a newcomer to radio.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Orphan Annie's Seventh Year

Little Orphan Annie returned to the N B C Ret Network Monday September 27, and is heard at 5:45 and 6:45 standard time. This makes it the seventh year for this radio feature. The script is edited by Dr. John J. B. Morgan, eminent child psychologist of Northwestern University.

Tom Mix Is Back

Tom Mix and his Ralston Straight Shooters, thrilling radio adventure series based on the career of the famous cowboy actor, returned to the air for the fifth season on Monday, September 27 at 5:45 p.m. over the N B C Blue Network. A series of new episodes from the colorful cowboy's experiences as U. S. Marshal, Texas Ranger, Sheriff and Movie Star are being dramatized. The part of Tom Mix is again played by Jack Holden. Percy Temus, veteran Broadway character actor, returns as the "Old Wrangler".

Jack Armstrong Carries On

Jack Armstrong, the All American Boy returned to the N B C Red Network on Monday September 27 at 5::3:0: :p::.::m:. his celebrated juv- 5.30 p.m. His celebrated juvenile program based on the adventures of Armstrong is heard daily at the same time.

CORONATION, Alta.— Miss Alice Cline, daughter of a dairy farmer, is seeking replacement of a cheque. The cheque, payment for cream, was attached to cans when returned to the Cline farm. A calf ate the cheque and only the stump was left when Miss Cline caught it.

French Colony Called Inferno

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad.—Fearing a rumored decision of the government to deport them by steamship from this West Indian Island would result in their finding themselves once more in dreaded Cayenne, three of six French fugitives who landed in Trinidad were preparing to make a voluntary dash in an open boat for Haiti, 750 miles away.

Raymond Vaude, leader of the trio, said: "I shudder at the thought of going back to Cayenne and I prefer to risk the dangers of an open-boat flight to Haiti.

"I know nobody there, but of this I am certain—Haiti is a free country. I hope to earn my living there as a steward. I held that post for two years when I was with the French Marines."

Vaude, who is 35 years old, was sentenced to a five-year term with hard labor for larceny and robbery.

A MAN HONORED IN HIS OWN COUNTRY

Fellow citizens of Gwillimbury Township, who know Earl Rowe best, are enthusiastic admirers of his sterling character and gift for leadership

A Public Servant For 22 Years!

If you had a large scale map of Ontario, you would find Gwillimbury Township marked in the County of Simcoe. But you would have to possess a very large scale map indeed, to locate the town of Newton Robinson.

This little dot of a town is beginning to find itself in print frequently these days. The citizens feel that this is only to be expected because one of their own boys, Earl Rowe, is going to be, they are confident, Premier-Elect of Ontario the night of October 6th.

Some of the old-time proverbs are wearing a little thin these modern days, and that well-known one—"A prophet is not without honor save in his own country" means nothing, simply nothing, to these sturdy citizens of Gwillimbury. They honor Earl Rowe because they know and admire him; the oldsters have been watching him for twenty-two years, ever since he was elected a Township Councillor on his 21st birthday.

Reaches Cabinet Rank

They start them young in public service in these Ontario towns but only one in ten thousand forges ahead to the Provincial Legislature—only one in a hundred thousand keeps going until he reaches Cabinet rank at Ottawa. Such a man is Earl Rowe —and Gwillimbury Township has followed, with pride, every step of his progress.

The most important events in this young man's twenty-two years of public service can be briefly summarized:

1915—Elected to Council of Gwillimbury Township.
1916—Elected Reeve — re-elected each year for five years.
1923—Elected to Ontario Legislature.
1925—Elected to Federal Parliament.
1930—Re-elected.
1935—Promoted to the Cabinet by Honourable R. B. Bennett, then Prime Minister. Re-elected to Federal Parliament.
1936—Unanimously selected as leader of the Ontario Liberal-Conservative Party.

A Happy Family

Earl Rowe, whenever his public duties will permit, hurries back to Newton Robinson. For there he finds awaiting him his sturdy red brick house—his wife and three fine children—his 225 acres of farm land—his pure-bred Yorkshire swine, Durham cattle, registered Clydesdales—his old Township friends.

One cannot hope to understand a public man solely by observing him in the midst of public affairs in Toronto or Ottawa. Follow Earl Rowe back to Newton Robinson—have a meal with him in his big kitchen—walk with him over his fertile acres—see him feeding his swine and his cattle — talk with his aged parents, who live across the road. Then you would realize even more fully than ever before how completely this man possesses that something without which all else is so much chaff—and that something is CHARACTER.

Heredity must get some of the credit. The Conservative leader comes from old British stock which settled in Simcoe County many, many years ago. His father, still active at 88 and his mother, eight years younger, were farm folk, and Earl Rowe, when little more than a youngster, bought his farm from his father on credit and paid every cent of his debt from his profits as a young farmer.

Virtues of the Soil

On his typical Ontario farm—in his typical rural Ontario residence—Earl Rowe leads the regular routine of a farmer when his Parliamentary work does not call him to the cities. His is a friendly home—made happy by the presence of his wife, and his children, Jean aged 17, Bill aged 13 and Lennox aged 8. Here are enshrined the homely virtues of the soil — those virtues which since earliest days have given strength of character to so many of Canada's greatest public servants.

HON. EARL ROWE

A Warm Personality

This has been written of Earl Rowe by a long-time associate:

"The warmth of his personality is contagious. One cannot come into his presence without feeling his force and sincerity, tempered by a natural kindliness and interest in his fellow-men and their problems. With his splendid ideals, backed by long and honourable Parliamentary experience, he is uniquely equipped to make a great contribution to the public life of Ontario."

Newton Robinson isn't seeing much of Earl Rowe these days. It is a blessing that he is still in the prime of life and health, for he has mapped out a speaking program which will keep him moving back and forth throughout Ontario until the eve of October 6th. His friends are glad of this because they know that every man or woman who sees and hears Earl Rowe, who shakes his hand, who comes under the influence of his warm personality, will say, "This is the type of leader Ontario needs." For that's the kind of man Earl Rowe is—likeable, sincere, earnest — a statesman whose good character and good judgment are written indelibly in the record of his twenty-two years of public service.

OUR MANITOBA LETTER

285 Langside St., Winnipeg, Man.
Sept. 22, 1937.

Dear Editor:

Near the end of September, harvest and threshing over for another year—and Manitoba as a whole has much to be thankful for. Clanwilliam harvested a bountiful crop, and as a large number of farmers had Thatcher wheat, and Anthony oats, rust resisting grain, the turn-out and quality was excellent. Mr. Alex. Madill's Thatcher turned out fifty-one bushels to the acre, and sixty-three pounds to the bushel, so now prices are fair, many farmers will be greatly helped. So far we have enjoyed a beautiful fall, no frost, but leaves are falling off the trees, dying a natural death.

I am glad to say Mrs. Alex. Madill has quite recovered from her accident of broken ribs.

Mrs. Carnes Wilson, a resident of Empire, passed away the 23rd August. She died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Carter. She had been in poor health for a number of years. She leaves her husband and two sons, Stanley and Raymond, to mourn her loss. She was an old timer.

A very sad accident occurred at Clanwilliam last week. Little Barry Leigh, son of the Clanwilliam post master, only three years old, in some manner climbed on the wheel of a grain waggon, fell off, and the wheel passed over him, killing him instantly. Roy Hutton the man driving the team, has gone out of his mind. Everyone was greatly shocked, the Leigh's are old timers.

Mr. Sam Madill from Nanaimo, B.C., came down to visit his mother, so a reunion of the Madill family was planned to go to Riding Mountain Park, August 12. There were five sons, one daughter and a number of grandchildren gathered. One more son was not able to attend on account of sickness. The first time their mother had been to the park, I am sure she would enjoy her sons' and daughters' company very much. She is eighty-eight and smarter than many women of sixty.

You will see we are back in the city again for the winter and at the same address. Everything looks much the same, although these seems more men at work. A number of families have come from the dried-out parts of Saskatchewan and have found work.

I was at a missionary meeting the other night. Two missionaries from Africa, spoke and showed slides of their work amongst the Africans; simply marvelous the change they have made in hundreds of lives. One of them had been away for years and he said the first station he got off at, arriving as he thought into civilization, the first woman he saw, her mouth a bright red and other face make-up and, as he thought, blood flowing down her finger nails, he wondered if he had left civilisation and arrived amongst barbarians. I had the same experience here. I was in a 5 and 10 cent store, and the clerk handing me back change, I thought it was blood running down her fingers. I drew back my hand for a second, I thought how dreadful spoiling beautiful finger nails with dye.

I must tell you I am the great grandmother of two pair of twin boys. One pair is 4 months old and doing well, the other pair just arrived the 12th of this month. Mrs. Tom Smith (nee Rose Shaver) is the mother.

Prairie Rose.

Local News

Miss Alice Steen has been holidaying in Detroit.

W. T. Powell and Dorothy Agnes Bridle, both of Brampton, were married by Rev. R. W. Allen on Sept. 18th.

Mr. and Mrs. Alan McLean, Brampton, celebrated the 53rd anniversary of their wedding on Sept. 28th.

The house and contents of W. O. Dennis, Trafalgar township, was destroyed by fire on Sept. 25th. Loss is $2,000.

Mrs. W. C. Poole passed away at Cooksville on Sept. 27th, in her 48th year. Besides her husband, she leaves one son, Morris Poole, who drives one of the Gray Coach buses which pass through Streetsville every day.

October 3 to 9 will be fire prevention week, and all citizens are requested to do all in their power to prevent waste by fire.

Remember the dates of Streetsville Fair, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 8 and 9. Get your entries in now.

Three highway workmen—Arthur Leaver, 23, Port Credit; Bruce Laidlaw, Streetsville, and George Jones, Long Branch, were injured on Monday, when hit by a truck on the Etobicoke bridge, on the new Middle Road.

The driver of the truck was arrested and allowed out on bail of $3,000. The three injured men were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto. The accident was investigated by several Provincial officers.

Merchants are reminded that they art liable to a fine of $100.00 for selling cigarettes to a boy or girl under sixteen years of age unless they have a written order from the parents.

Come to the dance in the Veterans' Hall, Streetsville, Friday, Oct. 1st, and have a good time.

R. M. Pearson, Atwood, received three broken ribs in a collision between two light trucks at Cooksville, last week. After attention by Dr. J. F. Cantelon he was able to return home.

The funeral of the late Samuel Walter Perry, who died in Toronto, on Sept. 27th, took place to Brampton cemetery.

CALL TO REV. ROSS K. CAMERON.

A citation from Toronto Presbytery asking the congregation to name a delegation to attend the next meeting at Knox church on the morning of Oct. 5, was read by W. H. Grimbleby, clerk of session of Rogers Memorial Presbyterian Church.

At that meeting a call to Rev. Ross K. Cameron, M.A., minister of Rogers church, from First Presbyterian church, Edmonton will be considered.

It has been known for some time that Mr. Cameron had received the call, and while he has refused to discuss the matter, it is understood that he intends to accept.

One of the city's most popular young ministers, Mr. Cameron has during his pastorate at Rogers church made a host of friends outside of his own congregation and his departure will be generally regretted.

It is understood that the Edmonton charge is one of the most important in that city and offers a stipend almost double that received here.

Walter John Morris, insurance agent, died at his home, R.R. 1, Oakville, on Sept. 22, aged 67 years. Cremated in Toronto Crematorium.

ROBBERS' CAR FOUND AT LORNE PARK

While police continued search for two men who robbed a Waterdown bank of between $6,000 and $7,000 on Saturday, a late model coupe believed used by the robbers, was found in a gully at Lorne Park.

Stolen from J. W. Berman, dance hall manager, the car was discovered by Det.-Sergt. Norman Tinsley, Toronto; Inspector Lougheed of the provincial police, and Chief Constable Telfer Wilson of Port Credit.

On Saturday afternoon Mrs. Bert Brading reported she had talked with two men who had presumably left the stolen car where it was found. When she asked what were they doing, she said the men replied they were looking for some real estate.

On the same afternoon Fred Denny, another nearby resident, saw two men in a car make a wrong turn. They were in a hurry, Denny stated, and seemed to be lost.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The annual meeting of the North Trafalgar Community Club was held at the home of Mrs. Campbell on Wednesday, Sept. 15th. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. W. Leslie.

The minutes of the last meeting were read. The secretary reported that during the past year there were 23 meetings held with an average attendance of 17 members. 12 social events were held during the year, and a bale of clothing was sent to Western Ontario.

The club is also endowing a cot in Peel Memorial Hospital.

The treasurer reported a very favourable year. Miss Louise Bonham was then appointed to take charge of the meeting for the election of officers

The officers for the following year are as follows: President, Mrs. Cliff May; 1st vice president, Mrs. A. May; 2nd vice- president, Mrs. J. Miller; Secretary, Mrs. E. McDowell; treasurer, Mrs. W. Atkinson; reporter, Mrs. D. Dowling; pianist, Mrs. W. Hamilton.

Mrs. Anderson May read a very pleasing address for the past president, Mrs. Will Leslie, who was presented with a lovely table lamp by Mrs. Cliff May.

After the meeting was closed, the Hostess served a very dainty lunch.

The design of the 1938 registration plates is exceptionally attractive with Crown and Orange figures on Blue background.

To Save Ontario Motorists Time and Money

1938 Motor Vehicle Permits Are Now Available

DUE to the advance in the new car purchasing season and the fact that increasingly large numbers of used cars and trucks are now purchased at this time of year and following the practice established last year which met with such favourable reception on the part of the motoring public, 1938 Motor Vehicle Permits and Operators' Licenses are being made available in advance of the date of expiration of 1937 permits.

1938 Permits (now available) save the purchaser of a new car or truck the expense of 1937 registration.

They save the purchaser of a used car or truck the fee for transferring the 1937 registration (1938 Permit can be procured without transfer fee).

As indicated in the Budget Address delivered on March 9th of this year, the Government is able to announce a downward revision in the fees for the registration of Motor Vehicles.

PASSENGER CAR REGISTRATION FEES	1937 Fee	1938 Fee
4 cylinders	$ 7.00	$ 2.00
6 cylinders, up to and including 28 horse power	12.00	7.00
6 cylinders, over 28 horse power	15.00	10.00
8 cylinders, up to and including 35 horse power	15.00	10.00
8 cylinders, over 35 horse power	20.00	15.00
12 cylinders	30.00	25.00
16 cylinders	40.00	35.00

(S.A.E. rating of horse power shall be used)

All Commercial Motor Vehicles and Trailers have been reduced 25% from the 1937 rate.

The Fee for the registration of a change of ownership has been reduced from $2.00 to $1.00.

Fee for the Registration of a Motor Cycle has been reduced from $3.00 to $1.00.

CHANGE OF LICENSE YEAR

The Government having decided to change the license year to coincide with its fiscal year, 1938 permits and licenses will be valid to March 31st, 1939.

Snider's

Miss Grace Fish, of Wesley Church, who is taking a special course at the Thistletown Convalescent Hospital for Children was remembered in absentia by the Trafalgar Circuit Y.P.U. with a writing portfolio, at a social evening held at the home of Miss Evelyn Savage. Willard Fish accepted the gift for his sister. Another member of the Y.P.U., Miss Dorothy Speck, Sheridan, was the "raison-d'etre" for the gathering on the eve of her departure to enter the Western Hospital Training School for Nurses, Toronto, and was also given a writing portfolio, both presentations being made by Rev. H. S. Lovering in the absence of the president, Mr. Robert Kelly.

On Wednesday evening, Sept. 22nd, members of Snider's community and Wesley church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Thomas, prior to their leaving for their new home in Scarboro where Mr. Thomas will engage in gardening. An address expressive of the appreciation the community and the church had for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and family since their eighteen months' residence here, was read by Mrs. Roy Fish, who asked Mrs. Thomas to accept a gift of a casserole which was presented by Mrs. Cecil Fish. Mr. Thomas thanked the friends for their remembrance to them and said they had received every kindness from every one since coming to live amongst them. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas will be missed by Wesley Church and Sunday School and the public school, to which they and members of their family had been of great assistance. The farm (formerly Secord farm) has been sold to Mr. Victor Faulks and brother, of Toronto, who with their families expect to take possession in two weeks.

We are pleased to report that Mr. Usher Stevenson, who was seriously ill last week is now recovering.

On Sunday, October 3rd, Wesley Church will revert to afternoon service at 2.30, with Sunday School session at 1.30.

Miss A. Maxwell has recovered sufficiently from her recent illness to be able to resume teaching at Snider's School. We trust that she will soon regain her health.

Rev. W. R. Archer, of Lowville and Rev. H. S. Lovering, of Wesley church, are exchanging pulpits for anniversary services on October 10th. Mr. Archer will be remembered by older members of the former seven appointment Trafalgar Circuit, when he was probationer minister. The circuit then included Hornby and Bethel, and the now closed church of Bowes, McCurdy's and, Omagh, the last two not at present in existence.

Mr. Earl Albertson was appointed to act as representative for Wesley Church on the committee for National Relief for the West which convenes in the Presbyterian church, Oakville, on Wednesday, the 29th. Mr. Cecil Fish was appointed alternate.

Mr. and Mrs. Wells were callers on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon E. Post. They called to offer congratulations on the arrival of the new daughter, Mary Isabel.

STREETSVILLE BOYS IN CAR SMASH

Last Friday evening four Streetsville young men, Bruce Rundle, Jack Rice, Geo. Schnurr, and Eugene Gerhart drove to Caledon, where they attended a dance. Coming home they met with an accident. Bruce was driving and the road was rough. The car was hard to handle and it ran into a cliff. Jack was in the front seat. The force of the impact threw Jack through the windshield. One arm was broken and he received chest injuries as well. He was taken to the General Hospital, and his wounds were so bad he could not be operated on for several days. The other lads were more or less injured, but were able to come home. The car is a total wreck.

Nominations

The nomination meeting for the Ontario Election in Peel County at Brampton yesterday was very quiet, and the attendance was not so large because yesterday was the big day of Brampton Fair. Mr. Kenneth McIlwrick, Returning Officer, was in charge. The following gentlemen were nominated : Col. Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy, Conservative: the Hon. Duncan Marshall, Reformer, and Mr. Russell Pawley, C.C.F. Those are the names that will be on the ballott when you vote next Wednesday—and they will appear in the same order. Be sure to go out and use your franchise—and vote RIGHT

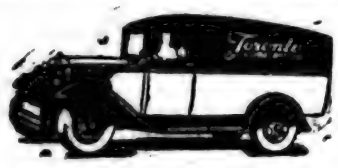
TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"I had to tell you right away!"

Bob Watson came home bursting with the news. The big break had come at last. He was now Department Manager at a big increase in salary. "Your Father will be delighted!" beamed Muriel, his wife. "Why not call him up?" "I certainly will — news like this demands Long Distance. And while I'm about it, I'll call Aunt Mary, too!"



The Watson family have found that to spread good news or in emergency, Long Distance is indispensable. Are you making best use of all that Long Distance offers?

Those Stripe-Drivers

Maybe it would help if the highways department would try painting a stripe near the edge of the road, for the benefit of those who insist on driving on a stripe.—Guelph Mercury.

Buying Trouble

Italy spent 600 million dollars to buy a lot of trouble in Ethiopia. Now Japan is borrowing 580 millions in her search for trouble in China. When will the nations grow up?—Toronto Star.

The Hecklers Help

After all, what would a general election be without the persistent hecklers? These liven up an audience and give a clever speaker a better chance to bring out his points.—Toronto Globe & Mail.

Plague Menace Diminished

It is a far cry from these times back through the generations to the old night of scourge and plague. Think of that record—not a single case of smallpox amid London, England's teeming millions in the past three years!—Halifax Herald.

Broken Relations

But if Portugal is breaking off diplomatic relations with Czechoslovakia without fighting, it must be remembered that China and Japan are staging a fair-sized war without having broken off relations. One is driven to speculate on what Czechoslovakia can have done to Portugal which does more to justify breaking diplomatic relations than an armed invasion.—London Free Press.

Down With "Canned" Music

The average radio listener, sitting contemplatively before a loud-speaker, is only barely conscious, if he notices it at all, of those frequently repeated words, "We will now listen to an electrical transcription . . . " Every time those words come over the air, the listener is getting not only music by a phonograph rtcord, but also, right along with it, a concrete example of technological unemployment. The American Federation of Musicians considers the playing over the air of recordings so serious a threat to the employment of its members that it has threatened a strike.—Vancouver Sun.

Expect Better Times

There are good grounds for optimism regarding 1938. As a matter of fact, the total rainfall this Summer throughout practically the whole drought district has been greater than it was in 1936. The trouble was that it did not come in time.

This fact, taken together with the rising level of the Lake of the Woods, the [illegible] enough rain and grew a better-than-average crop, and the fact that the drought broke this year south of the international border, are the best possible indications that a period of normal rainfall is beginning.—Winnipeg Tribune.

Helping the Helpless

The late George A. Quance of Middleton Township set a very fine example in making a bequest of $5,000 to the North General Hospital. This institution depends to a large extent on public support for its financial welfare and contributions are particularly welcome at this time when a big expansion program is in progress. It is sincerely hoped that other citizens will follow Mr. Quance's example and make provision in their wills for the care of the sick and injured people. The hospital takes care of a large number of indigent patients every year, on whom a very substantial loss is sustained. Only through generous donations and bequests on the part of citizens in comfortable circumstances can this be offset.—Simcoe Reformer.

Canada In The Air

Lord Tweedsmuir hands out the dictum—and far be it from us to contradict him!—that the future of the Northwest Territories is vested in the aeroplane. Recently he drew a picture of the Canadian northland as a region of comparatively small industrial centres, of stretches of land which are seasonally highly fertile, of small communities, unconnected by roads or railway with the outside world, yet by no means isolated. He predicted, as others have done, of course, that in a short time aerial transportation would become cheaper, and no less efficient. Lord Tweedsmuir, most modern of His Majesty's representatives to Canada, can see more clearly than most the straws in the wind.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE EMPIRE

Dots On Dancing

Undoubtedly for the younger generation dancing is the best form of sociability, and Scottish societies who have realized this are finding that their membership is well sustained by recruits from the rising generation. Young Scots down in London, like all young people everywhere want dancing more than any other form of entertainment and the Societies are finding that where a dinner or whist drive almost invariably ends in a small loss a dance almost as invariably comes out on the right financial side. Scottish reels are popular features of all dance programs and there is an increasing vogue for dance bands composed of violins and melodeons.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Colonization Is Costly

Italy has won her empire. The League cannot take it from her, nor can the Abyssinians. But winning an empire and enjoying it are two different things—as Italy is finding. So far, the Italians have no more than scratched the surface of Abyssinia. Beyond the parts they occupy lie vast tracts of hills and forests which have still to be penetrated against hostile tribes. Military penetration or conciliation will take years; commercial exploitation may take generations. To make Abyssinia a home for Italy's surplus millions, a source of raw materials for Italian industry, and a market for Italian manufactures is a task that must absorb Italian energy and wealth for a long time to come. If Italy is to do it she would be wise to still the Mediterranean storm and to stabilize, by the "Rome-Berlin axis" or otherwise, the peace of her part of Europe.—Glasgow Herald.

British Drinking, Smoking Increase

People of Great Britain Are Busier Than Ever Before In Their History

Britain is busier than she has ever been in history—and is drinking and smoking more. The volume of industrial production in the second quarter of 1937 was the greatest ever recorded.

The Board of Trade Journal stated that industrial activity in the June quarter was 2.3 per cent. greater than in the first quarter of 1937, and 9.1 per cent. greater than in the second quarter of 1936.

Most important increases in the manufacturing industries in the June quarter, as compared with the corresponding quarter of 1936 were:

Engineering and shipbuilding (12½ per cent.) due to the improvement in shipbuilding and greater activity in electrical engineering;

Iron and Steel (11 per cent.), there being a substantial increase in the output of coated plates and sheets in particular, partly due to the improvement in exports;

Chemicals and Oils (9½ per cent.); and

Textiles (8 per cent.), to which each of the industries included in this group contributed.

Greater Output

Pig iron output in July (729,300 tons) reached the highest monthly figure since September, 1920. Crude steel production (1,059,200 tons) was less than in June, but compared with 974,100 tons a year earlier.

There was a rise of 18½ per cent. in the non-ferrous metals.

Output of coal was about 13½ per cent. greater in the June quarter than a year earlier. Increase in the first six months as compared with the same period of 1936 was 5½ per cent.

Boys Back From Trip To Alaska By Canoe

A pair of bronzed ex-bookkeepers are back in New York, 18 months after they forsook their ledgers to travel the waterways of Canada and the United States on the first recorded canoe trip from New York to Nome, Alaska.

The 25-year-old adventurers, Sheldon Taylor and Geoffrey Pope, said they had the time of their lives.

The two canoeists, who brought home a two-months-old malemute puppy named Simia, plan to write a book about their adventures on the 7,165-mile voyage.

They said they never would forget the time near Forth Smith, N.W.T., when, during a wild buffalo hunt, a wounded bull charged Taylor and was killed by the canoeist when he fired while lying almost under the animal's hooves.

Another time the boys' canoe got caught in a stampede of white whales in Bering Sea. They said they suffered numerous ducklngs before the voyage was completed Aug. 11 at Nome.

Paralysis Patients' Mentality Improves

Dr. D. E. Robertson Never Feels Anxiety About Mental Outlook In "Polio" Cases; After Care Most Important.

"I never feel any anxiety about the mental outlook of a 'polio' case; they are far more likely to make a success in life than most other people," said Dr. D. E. Robertson, surgeon-in-chief at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, discussing the future of victims of the current infantile paralysis epidemic.

"No experience cannot be written on the asset side of life," he continued. "Even unfortunate experience is better than none, and it stands to reason that infantile paralysis victims, forced to abandon the physical competition of life, turn to the mental side. It is not hard to imagine a boy with little ambition being guided to some very useful walk of life by just such an intervention as 'polio'.

Absolute Quiet Needed

"After-care is terribly important," Dr. Robertson added. "After 'polio' children must be kept absolutely quiet for a minimum of six months. They do not need any interference; they must be allowed to rest, and serious cases may run into 18 months, before it is safe to allow them up."

President Roosevelt was an infantile paralysis case in his late thirties. He still wears braces on his legs. Bernard Leibel, of the Banting Intitute, inventor of the "Leibel lung," although one of the worst infantile paralysis cases on record, is perfectly healthy today, and engaged in important research work, at the age of 22.

Says Canada Will Have Prosperity For Many Years

British Newspaper Magnate Says Country Has Economic Future

Confidence in the economic future of Canada was expressed at Halifax this week by Lord Rothermere, British newspaper magnate, on a holiday visit to Nova Scotia.

"If there is no serious international disturbance," he said in an interview, "Canada is set for prosperity for a number of years to come.

Asserting that was "no business significance whatsoever in my visit to Halifax," Lord Rothermere refused to comment on the European political situation and confined his remarks to local conditions.

He had a word of cheer for Nova Scotia's harassed apple growers who in the last few weeks have seen as much as 50 per cent. of one of the best crops in years destroyed by two violent storms.

"The fruit growers need not worry about the destruction wrought by the storm on their crop," he said. "I am a small grower of apples in the Old Country. The English crop this year is bad and Nova Scotia apples should fetch a good price there."

Beauties of Maritimes

Owner of a wide chain of newspapers in Great Britain, controller of newsprint manufacturing plants in Newfoundland and Canada, a former cabinet minister in the imperial government, and one of the most influential men in the Old Country, Lord Rothermere was taking time off from his tasks to motor through the Maritime Provinces.

"There is absolutely no business significance whatsoever in my visit to Halifax," he said. "We have a newsprint business in the Gaspe Peninsula. As the outcome of a visit there, I have come to see the beauties of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick which I have not visited for 35 years."

Industrial Accidents Up

Accidents reported to the Workmen's Compensation Board during August totalled 6,799 as compared with 6,763 during July, and 5,515 during August a year ago, figures released today reveal.

Canadian Business Continues Gaining

Expansion In Productive Operations, and Rising Commodity Prices Regarded as Bright Spots; Crop Failures In Sections of West Offset by Gains Elsewhere.

The Dominion bureau of statistics reports that practically all business factors showed increases during the seven months ending July 31 over the same period of 1936.

Principal element in the continued betterment of economic conditions was the expansion maintained in productive operations coupled with advances in commodity prices. Crop failures in sections of the prairie provinces were more than offset by good crops and expanding trade in other areas.

The index of the physical volume of business in the seven months, on the base 1926 equals 100, averaged 121.3 per cent. compared with 107.9 in the same period the previous year.

Mineral Production Up

Volume of mineral production was more than 15 per cent. greater than the first seven months of 1936. Nickel exports were up 27 per cent., copper exports 7.5 per cent., and zinc 5.1 per cent.

Official index for manufacturing operations, based on 30 factors, was 121.4 in the seven months period against 106.1 the year before.

News In Review

Inquest Adjourned

LONDON, Ont.—After a brief few minutes' session the inquest into the mysterious death of Miss Mary Wilkinson, 37-year-old public school teacher, was adjourned sine die.

For basically the reason that the inquest did not proceed is that two men are charged with murder in the case. They are the widely known, 70-year-old Dr. Charles A. Cline Sr. and 50-year-old Lauchlin J. Robertson.

Scurvy In Drought Belt

OTTAWA.—Scurvy, the dread disease which results from malnutrition, has appeared in the prairie drought belt, Agriculture Minister Gardiner said this week, and the Government will combat it by shipping carloads of fresh fruits, vegetables and other commodities to the suffering areas.

"A Closed Incident"

LONDON.—Great Britain has informed Japan she considers the airplane machine-gunning of British Ambassador Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen a closed incident.

The British announcement, which followed twenty-four hours of new consultations and communications between Tokio and London, was regarded as ending what might have developed into a serious international situation. Japan admitted guilt, voiced regret.

Triple Jap Offensive

NANKING—Chinese resistance remained firm this week in the face of a mass air raid and a Japanese offensive on three fronts. The populations of Nanking and Canton quailed under merciless bombings.

Canton Bombed

HONG KONG.—Japanese bombers soared over Canton, dumping tons of explosives on the city this week in the worst air raid the South China metropolis has experienced since the Chinese war started.

Despatches said the Cantonese were panic-stricken, with hundreds of homes and buildings afire.

Nine grey bombing planes appeared over Canton shortly after dawn, convoyed by a fleet of pursuit planes. Chinese fliers immediately took the air to give battle, but the pursuit planes engaged them in dogfights while the bombers unloaded their explosives.

Scores of incendiary bombs were dropped, creating terrific havoc in the area around the Canton-Hankow Railway Station, one of the principal Japanese objectives.

Philippine Women Enfranchised

MANILA.—Philipine women were enfranchised this week when the National Assembly in special session approved a new election law.

The Assembly provided men and women may be identified at polling booths by birth or baptismal certificates or a sworn statement of identity.

Under the new law each person will thumb-mark his ballot when he votes. This is for identification of contested ballots.

Saskatchewan Forest Fires Worst In History

REGINA.—Forest fires in Northern Saskatchewan are beyond control, Hon. T. C. Davis, Acting Minister of Natural Resources, said this week.

"The whole north is ablaze," the Minister said. "The fires are the worst in the Province's history and there is little hope for thousands of acres of timber unless rain comes immediately."

Kitchener's New Post Office

OTTAWA.—Kitchener, Ont., is to have a new public building to house its post office, customs, national revenue and other federal government offices, it was learned this week. Contract has been awarded to Ball Brothers, Kitchener, whose tender was $229,000. Provision for the building was contained in the parliamentary estimates for the current fiscal year.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE NEWS

A Commentary
By ELIZABETH EEDY

On Outstanding Events of the Week

Poland Strikes at Jews

The world was startled not long ago to learn that a letter written by the great Polish pianist and patriot, I. J. Paderewski, to his people, had been suppressed. The message he wished to convey was that Poland should not give way to civil strife and lose all that the country has gained of democracy in the years since the war. The Nazi hold on Poland seems to be increasing and the freedom of its private citizens in jeopardy. A campaign of discrimination against Jews is in progress and scenes of violence are hourly occurrences in the streets of Polish towns.

Canada May Balance Budget

Coming from unexpectedly increased revenues a balance may be achieved next year of the Canadian budget. For the first five months of the current fiscal year, every kind of revenue has shown an expansion with the income tax and the sales tax being the leaders. Customs and excise duties, post office receipts follow close behind. To nullify some of the prospective increases will be a considerable rise in expenditures before the end of 1937, chiefly because of relief works and the completion of the National Defense program, but this is not expected to hold back to any great extent our steady progress towards a balanced budget.

Says British Aim Is Peace

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden this week advised the world that Great Britain is committed irrevocably to a policy of rearmament unless other nations cease competing for supremacy at arms.

Speaking before a hushed League of Nations assembly, Mr. Eden struck a note of mingled hope and pessimism. Despite the dark picture he painted and his implied rebukes of Germany and Italy, he emphasized Britain's determination still to strive for peace.

"One pledge I can give unequivocally to this assembly," he said, "is that the Government I represent will spare no endeavor to prevent war from engulfing Europe."

His pledge of Britain's peaceful purposes was coupled with his statement of willingness to agree to reduction and limitation of armaments.

Drought Farmers Move Out

Into a small Ontario town last week poured three truck-loads of families from the drought areas of Saskatchewan who had come east, financed by their government, to found new homes. The Provincial Government of Saskatchewan allotted to each family two freight cars for transportation to Ontario of their livestock, implements and household goods; and into the bargain has agreed to pay an entire year's rent wherever they might happen to locate.

Censorship In Japan

Although we are three or four thousand miles from the scene of the Sino-Jap conflict, we hear of its progress every hour of the day, over the air, in the newspapers. But the people of Japan are not so fortunate. They see their sons, brothers, lovers go off towards China, into the unknown. News of the war percolates back to Japan through very uncertain channels, as the government is a rigid censor. We hear one story of a lady missionary to China who stopped off in the Land of the Rising Sun on her way home to Canada. The war began while she was there. The only way she could find out what was going on in China was to get in touch with her people here and ask them to send news of the war back over the Pacific.

Women Voters In Quebec

Quebec women have the right to vote in Dominion, but not in Provincial elections. The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada meeting last week passed a resolution asking that the Quebec executive demand from the provincial government the right for women to exercise the franchise in provincial campaigns as well.

Drama For Rural Ontario

Steps are being taken in response to demands from rural amateur actors to establish a series of drama institutes this fall and winter in rural Ontario. Arts and crafts of the theatre will be studied at the institutes which will be held for five-day periods at many centres. The work will be done under the auspices of the Community Welfare Council of Ontario.

Motorists Can Save Hundreds

Hazards Listed by Ontario Government Official

Six hundred Ontario men, women or children are doomed to death in the coming year from motor accidents unless careless motorists change their ways, G. A. Hodgson, Ontario Department of Highways, warned.

But five hundred and forty of these or 90 per cent., need not die if drivers would only "stop and think," he told the Toronto-York Division of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association at the Embassy Hotel.

Particular hazards mentioned by Mr. Hodgson were the thoughtlessness of men and women who resume driving, without further tuition, after a lapse of several years; issuance of driving licenses to employees for firm cars, many of whom were unqualified to drive; unnecessary indulgence in tooting auto horns and disregard for the rights of pedestrians, especially children.

Better Off Without Horn

He suggested that if the horn were left off motor vehicles there would be a decrease overnight of 50 per cent. of accidents. The horn should be reserved for emergencies only, he declared. All drivers were urged to familiarize themselves with traffic regulations and to "drive as if the child were your own, when you see one in your path."

Motor accidents in Ontario advanced 32.7 per cent. during the first three months of 1937 over the same period the previous year, he said.

Of the 2,446 accidents reported during the first quarter this year, 1 were fatal, he declared, compared with 64 fatalities and 1,956 other accidents during the same period in 1936.

Increase of 37.9 Per Cent.

The total of 829 collisions of motor vehicles with pedestrians showed an increase of 37.9 per cent.; 944 collisions between motor vehicles, an increase of 24 per cent.; 172 crashes with bicycles, 41.2 per cent., and collisions with fixed objects, 70.3 per cent.

Clothes Should Suit Personality

There are no Rules in Fashion World, but Women Should Dress to Suit Figure and Type

Monsieur Lucien Lelong, whose Paris dress creations are copied the world over and who prefers to be called just plain "Mister" bluntly told interviewers today there are no rules for fashion.

And then the designer elaborated: "What is right for one may not be right for another. Clothes should be chosen to enhance the beauty of the individual. Women should dress to suit their figure and type."

EVERY WOMAN, PERFECTION

There is no Venus, or ideally proportioned figure as far as fashions are concerned, he said, but with a characteristic note of chivalry added, "Every woman is perfection at one time in her life" — some at 16, some at 30, others at 50."

Mention of a short-skirted dinner dress, "which is being talked about consistently," made his eyes sparkle. "I see no reason why women should go trailing around in long skirts for restaurant dinging and other informal affairs," he said. "Let them save these for formal occasions."

Canada is Becoming License - Conscious

Distinct Increase Seen in Number of Radio Licenses Taken Out

Canada is either becoming radio-minded or developing a license conscience, judging by the increase in radio permits which have been taken out. By the end of the year it is expected there will be 1,125,000 licensed sets in the country, compared with 1,038,000 last year.

Quebec is showing the greatest promptitude in taking out licenses with 90 per cent of last year's total already paid. Ontario has paid up 80 per cent.

October will be the time of reckoning. The department will then start to clean up all arrears for licenses, bringing before the courts those who are in default.

Generally, but on increased lines, the ratio of licenses by provinces is being maintained. Last year Ontario topped the list with 424,000; Quebec being second with 240,000 and British Columbia third with 91,000.

The revenue from radio licenses is $2 per set and thus the total will run around $2,250,000.

Alleged WIT

Teacher — "How old is your father?"

Tommy — "Thirty-eight, sir."

Teacher — "Well, I must set you homework more suited to his age."

A very small boy was waiting to cross a busy road. A kindly stranger spoke to him.

"You must be very careful with all this traffic about," he said.

"Oh, I'm all right," replied the child cheerily. "I always wait for the empty space to come by."

The tailor was selling his best friend a new suit. He was raving all about the garment.

"I'm telling you, Harry," he said, "that even your best friend won't recognize you in that suit. Just take a walk outside for a minute and get the feel of the garment."

Harry went out and returned a moment later. The proprietor rushed up to him with a happy smile.

"Good morninng, stranger," he beamed. "What can I do for you?"

"Have you told Mr. Smith that he is the father of triplets."

"Not yet, doctor, he's shaving."

First Firemen — "There were sixteen firemen at my wedding."

Second Firemen — "Yes, but no escape."

A woman went into a bank to cash a cheque. The cashier asked her to endorse it, but she did not know what he meant. "That's all right," said the cashier. "Just sign your name exactly as you would on your letters and I'll give you the money."

So she carefully wrote on the back of the cheque, "Your loving Mary."

A young actor applied for work to the casting director of the Big Noise Film Company.

"Nothing doing at present," said the big man. "See me in two months' time."

"If you really want me you'd better sign me on now," replied the actor, "there are lots of other companies after me."

"Oh?" queried the director doubtfully. "And what companies are they?"

"The gas company, the water company and the electric light company."

She — "Don't you think that love is absurd?"

He — "Yes. Just two silly."

Tourist — "Don't you ever get lonesome up here?"

Mountaineer — "Oh, yes, but I have a couple of good jokes to tell myself."

Shares Many Millions

The International Harvester Company of Chicago, has announced its 65,000 employees in the United States and Canada would receive $4,400,000 extra compensation at the end of the fiscal year ending Oct. 31. Sydney G. McAllister, president of the company, said the directors in declaring a final 1937 dividend of $1.50 a share on common stock last week voted also to appropriate $2,500,000 to the company's pension fund out of 1937 earnings. Last year $2,300,000 extra pay was distributed to the company's employees.

IN UP-TO-DATE STABLES

—Old Reliable Minard's

When horses come in to stable with wire cuts or saddle galls, or cows have caked udder, the thing to do is get the Minard's bottle at once, as Mr. Dowd of Glenboro, Manitoba, knows. He writes:

"I like your Minard's Liniment. Like to have it in the house. I have found your Minard's Liniment especially good for barbed wire cuts on horses."

A family doctor prepared Minard's Liniment over 50 years ago. Still invaluable in every stable and every house. 39

Indians To Type In Own Language

The Cree Indians of Alberta will soon be able to learn typewriting. Through the co-operation of the Oblate Fathers and several Edmontonians, an eastern typewriter concern recently built a machine with 88 characters.

The Cree language was put into characters by Father Lacombe and James Evans of Edmonton many years ago and through efforts of Father Langois and Athol Beattie, Edmonton manager of the typewriter company, standard 42-unit keyboard was fitted to meet requirements of the language.

The machines are to be used by the Oblate Fathers in Northern Alberta mission fields and on Alberta reserves. The language is adaptable to both northern Cree and Chipewyan Indians.

Dreamer

He trod the path that hundreds of his kind
And humble calling trod. And yet a sense
Of worthiness surrounded him as fence
Of blooms may hide a lovely soul and mind.
His face held radiance, which the wholly blind
Could feel and see, as he drew near a door.
Young head and shoulders lifted, which before
Had slumped beneath a weight of daily grind.
Blue jeans may house a heart of rarest joys,
Small matter if Life's grime and soot has stained.
For men who practise living honourwise,
Swinging a shining pail midst clang and noise
Becomes a game . . . and broader vision gained,
For men who walk with dreaming in their eyes.

—Irene Archer.

Air-conditioning Aids Growth of Mushrooms

Mushrooms grown in air-conditioned houses will shortly grace milady's dinner table in New York and points East.

Thirty growing houses near West Chester, Pa., have been fitted with apparatus to control the temperature and humidity and by that means to increase the mushroom yield from two crops to three. Previously the houses were shut down during the summer months because hot weather produced inferior mushrooms.

Control of temperature and humidity marks another chapter in the art of mushroom growing, one of the world's most specialized crafts. Parisian mushroom growers long ago found a partial solution to the problem of variable temperature and humidity by placing their growing beds in galleries and cellars from 60 to 160 feet below the surface of the ground.

Suicide Used Clock To Start Gas Going

Carl Bell Yeargin, 44-year-old South Carolina machinist with an ingenious mind, executed himself with lethal gas in what was believed to be the first "trailer suicide" on record.

The key of an alarm clock unwinding as the bell sounded lowered potassium cyanide tablets into a solution of sulphuric acid producing deadly fumes which overpowered him as he lay stretched out on the floor of his trailer.

On the door a warning sign was posted: "Danger! Poison. Only the law shall enter here."

The hour indicator on the alarm clock had been set at 2 o'clock, indicating he had been dead nearly 12 hours when police broke into the trailer early in the afternoon and found him, his face turned a pasty white.

Officers were forced to leave the door open several minutes so the gas would escape.

Yeargin was embittered toward life in general, notes showed.

Movie Actress Shoots Rival With Blanks

LILLE, France.—Germaine Fevrier, 23-year-old movie extra, drew herself up histrionically this week and pointed a pistol at Jeanne Calime, 27, her love rival.

"Miserable woman!" she shrieked. "Prepare to die!"

Then she fired point blank—bang! bang! bang!

Jeanne crumbled to the ground and spectators rushed forward.

They stepped back, amazed, when Jeanne got up and brushed herself off.

It then became known that a Lille gunsmith had become suspicious when Germaine asked for "a loaded gun" —and had filled the pistol with blanks.

The police took Germaine away.

Had to Walk 30,000 Miles

Edmonton Meter Reader Says Dogs Get to Know Him

John Woodruffe, an Edmonton meter reader, estimates he has walked almost 30,000 miles during his duties in the past ten years.

"People have the funniest places for hiding their gas meters," said Woodruffe when he remarked it wasn't so much walking 10 to 15 miles day. He checks and notes in a book about 150 meters every day. He finds meters tucked away in basement corners, in dining rooms and in almost every room possible.

Woodruffe has encountered every type of housewife from pugnacious to sweet. He has explored nearly every home in the city. And he knows a lot of dogs, too. Terror of every door-to-door worker, dogs get to know the regular meter reader with his uniform and don't snarl or bark, Woodruffe noted.

A stout pair of shoe soles is worn through in six weeks on the beat but in his walking clear around the globe in actual mileage, Woodruffe has found health and a good job, he says.

Papal Official's Suite In Vatican Robbed

The Papal Major-domo, Archbishop Mella di Sant'Elia, reported this week that burglars had rifled his apartment, next to Pope Pius' suite, while the Archbishop was away on holidays.

The Major-domo has not yet compiled a list of the things missing nor estimated the value of the burglars' loot. Nor was it known when the apartment was entered. Vatican police were working with Italian authorities on the case.

The Archbishop is that member of the Papal staff who approves the applications of thousands of pilgrims who come each year to see the Holy Father.

Some Lottery Numbers Considered Unlucky

Sellers of French State Lottery tickets have recently made some curious discoveries about likes and dislikes in figures.

Even when, as is sometimes the case, there is a run on tickets just before a draw, there are many which remain unsold, and they consist of tickets numbered 5,555,555., 1,888,888, 0,113,333, and so on.

For some strange reason these repeated numbers are reckoned to have far less chance than tickets with a good mixed number.

Despite the assurances of mathematicians that 1,111,111 is every bit as likely to turn up as 7,418,962, that 1,111,111 remains unsaleable and numbers like 0,123,456 are cold-shouldered, too, because they are consecutive. A lucky number, in the Frenchman's opinion, is a thoroughly well-mixed number.

Lily — "Do you remember, Willie, how you used to catch me in your arms every night?"

Willie — "Yes, dear, and now I catch you in my pockets every morning."

Vote for More "Sunshine" Budgets

Hepburn's last budget, with its nine-million surplus and its tax reduction accomplishments, has become popularly known as the "Sunshine" Budget. Vote for a continuation of these "Sunshine" Budgets. X

Vote Liberal And Keep The Old Henry Gang Out

IT'S all right to let Earl Rowe kid himself that he is steering and running the Conservatives, but the electors don't want to let Mr. Rowe kid them into believing that he is leading a new, clean, thoroughly purged Conservative party. The same "old Henry gang" is managing the Rowe boat. The "old Henry gang" think that they were beaten by "some mistake" in 1934. On Wednesday, October 6th, show them that it was no mistake, but that you were in deadly earnest when you voted them out and that you want them even less today.

Hepburn's Social Legislation Proves He Is "a Man With a Heart"

BY his deeds, Mr. Hepburn has shown he has the interests of the masses at heart. His government has assumed the full cost of Mothers' Allowances. A mother with one child is now entitled to an allowance, a right denied her by the former Conservative government.

Under Mr. Hepburn, the government assumed the municipalities' share of Old Age Pensions.

It established Pensions for the Blind.

It abolished Students' Examination Fees.

It cancelled the Amusement Tax so that people are no longer penalized for enjoying themselves at theatres, concerts and games.

Hepburn Benefits Labour

HEPBURN has shown true friendship for the workingman, with advanced labour legislation — Minimum wages for men as well as women, an Industrial Standards Act providing codes by agreement between employees and employers and already improving conditions for 75,000 workers; and the creation of the Industry and Labour Board.

Another evidence of Mr. Hepburn's friendship for labour is his promise, if re-elected, to enact legislation to provide Unemployment Insurance, and Mr. Hepburn makes good on his promises.

Hepburn Takes Liquor Out of Politics

HEPBURN'S proposed Board of Three —a Judge, a Liberal, a Conservative— is the sanest, soundest, most constructive plan for removing liquor from politics that has yet been devised.

In respect to beverage rooms the Hepburn Government stands for the principle of local option. It is up to the municipality to decide for itself whether it wishes to be "wet" or "dry". That's British fair play.

Hepburn prevented the sale of liquor in restaurants.

On its record of successful administration during its first term in office, the Hepburn Government deserves to be returned to power—deserves the support and the vote of all fair-minded people.

Do your part to assure Ontario a continuance of good government for another term by voting for the Hepburn candidate in your riding.

Dicing With Death

The dice-cup is for daredevils who willingly bet their cash on the caprice of the ivory cubes, but in that giddy game of life and death which is Ontario's traffic lottery, everyone has a stake, willing or not. Doddering old men, tiny tots—yes, even babes in arms.

Last year, 26 toddlers up to four years of age met death in automobile accidents almost as soon as they had learned to talk; 23 of these were were pedestrians who perished even as they were learning to walk.

Two out of every three persons 65 years and over who departed from this life in traffic accidents last year were on foot when their fatal moment arrived.

There is a severe indictment of reckless driving to be found in these figures—a charge of apathy, if not of gross negligence.

Little children cannot be held accountable for their actions; they cannot be expected to take care of themselves in traffic. Drivers must think for them and protect them. Elderly persons are at an equal disadvantage. The mind may be clear but the footsteps falter and the necessary nimbleness has left their limbs. Drivers must look out for them, too, if needless highway fatalities are to be prevented.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Hutchinson, Elmbank, wish to announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Kathleen, to Donald Percival Livingston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Livingston, Claireville, the marriage to take place early in October.

OBITUARY

Glen Gowland, Brampton's first victime of infantile paralysis, died in the Toronto General Hospital last Saturday, age 15.

George Warrell, 72, Port Credit, died on Sept. 25th, and was buried in Gorrie cemetery.

Joseph H. Block, age 70, passed away at Port Credit on Sept. 26th, and was buried in Clarkson cemetery. He was one of the pioneers of Port Credit, and a nephew of the late Abram Block.

Roy Bartlett, aged 42 years, was found hanging in his home at Churchville on Sept. 22. It is claimed he became despondent over business troubles.

Mrs. Jacob Swackhammer

Weakened by a lengthy illness, Mrs. Jacob Swackhammer, daughter of the late Matthew Beatty of Churchville, died at her home near this village on Sept. 24, in her 84th year. She was born at Churchville, where her father was one of the first millers of Northern Toronto Township, and had been a lifelong resident of Peel County, noted for her activity about her home until a year ago. Predeceased by her husband some years ago, she is survived by two sons, Roy and Homer, of Brampton. The funeral took place to Churchville cemetery.

Joseph Sibbald

Mr. Joseph F. Sibbald, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Sibbald, of Meadowvale, died suddenly in the hospital at Milden, Saskatchewan, on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, following an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Sibbald is survived by his widow, 2 sons and 2 daughters. He went to Saskatchewan as a young man in 1901 and settled on a farm near Conquest. The funeral service was conducted at his late home on Thursday at 3 p.m. His sudden death comes as a shock to those who knew him.

DOUGLAS, Mary C. (Erie)—At Hamilton, on Wednesday, Sept. 22, 1937, Mary C. (Erie) Douglas, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Douglas, Hornby.

Funeral took place, Saturday, Sept. 25, from residence of her sister, Mrs. G. A. May, Hornby, to Hornby Presbyterian Church cemetery.

The Open Column

The longer we live, the more we believe that something will have to be done about coroners' inquests. They are getting more and more expensive, and have, in the past fifty years or more, turned out nothing really useful, so far as we can see. A recent inquest in this vicinity cost the taxpayers of the county of Peel about $200, in spite of the efforts of the coroner and the Crown Attorney to keep the expenses down, and the only persons who could reasonably be expected to derive the slightest benefit from the procedure were the insurance companies which carried the insurance on the cars involved. In fact, towards the end of the inquest, it began to look very much as though the insurance company lawyers were running the affair, although they had not legal status whatever at the inquiry.

A much better way of dealing with the situation which arises when someone loses life in an accident, particularly in a motor accident, would be to have the circumstances reviewed before a magistrate. The magistrate, having a lengthy training in legal proceedings, would be much better able to decide whether someone had been to blame in the accident. Better able, we believe, to fix blame, if there was any, than the best coroner's jury ever empannelled in this county, for the simple reason that it is highly unlikely that any man sitting on a coroner's jury will have had any legal training. Although the coroner is required to offer suggestions to a jury as to their findings, there are very close limitations on the suggestions that the coroner may make, and the coroner, after all, is a medical man, not a lawyer.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris, Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. Lymer, Brampton, visited at the Turney home over Sunday.

Miss Jean McCaughertv, R.N., New York, visited at her home here this week.

Miss Flo Wedgewood of Toronto spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bunt.

Toronto Schools will not open until Tuesday, Oct. 12th. The epidemic of infantile paralysis is still acute.

George Burrows, Sr., Brampton, and Carl Cook, Mayfield, were injured Friday night at Snelgrove and Third Line East intersection, when a car collided with an oil truck.

Lakeview School, Toronto Township, will remain closed until Tuesday, Oct. 12th.

COOKSVILLE

Cooksville Fall Fair was held last Friday and Saturday. On account of the epidemic of infantile paralysis, the attendance was not as large as formerly, but the Society will make out alright financially.

The entries in fruit and vegetables were not as numerous, but the sports program made up for any deficiency in other ways.

There was a good showing in ladies' work, etc., and the dog show proved very interesting. Some Streetsville dogs were awarded prizes.

LET US SMILE

An old woman, on her first trip to the seaside, was greatly impressed by the sea and decided to take some of it back with her in a bottle.

When she arrived home she proudly showed it to her husband, who asked: "Why didn't you fill it to the top?"

"Well, you silly," was the answer, "I had to allow for the tide coming in."

An exchange says that a negro in the Southern States died leaving $10,000 in the bank. The reason he left it there was because he was shot in his attempt to steal that amount.

BRAMPTON

Beef cattle, harness and saddle horses featured the final day of the Peel County Fair, which closed Wednesday.

The final program was attended by a large crowd, believed by some officials to establish a record for the fair, although official figures were not available.

In the Shorthorn section, John Gardhouse swept the prize list, taking the first award in all but three instances. S. E. Griffin and Dr. A. P. Hart of Malton were the other winning exhibitors in the class. David Bouvaird and Robert Bouvaird, both of Brampton, took the majority of awards in the saddlehorse class, with Miss Mary King, Galt, and Kenneth McCannell close behind. Miss Mary Ainsley, Streetsville, and Robert Kerr of Acton were awarded the special prizes in the section.

PORT CREDIT

Volunteers completed loading a carload of vegetables and fruit, which shortly after left for Craik, Saskatchewan, from which point it will be distributed to stricken areas in Western Canada. The gift was made possible by a committee representing all churches in the district. The consignment was valued at over $1,000 on the basis of present market values.

"TRUST"

"I have never committed the least matter to God, that I have not had reason for infinite praise."—Anna Shipton.

"Step by step will those who trust Him find that 'God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble'."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"Trust God for great things; with your five loaves and two fishes, he will show you a way to feed thousands."—Horace Bushnell.

"To trust God when we have securities in our iron chest is easy, but not thankworthy; but to depend on him, for what we cannot see, as it is more hard for man to do, so it is more acceptable to God."—Feltham.

"Look at that beautiful butterfly, and learn from it to trust in God."—Jeremy Taylor.

"How calmly may we commit ourselves to the hands of him who bears up the world."—Richter.

JUST AN ACCIDENT!

A pleasant Sunday afternoon in the country. Thousands of happy families "out for a drive", whizzing along on a typically picturesque Ontario highway. Suddenly, around a curve—screams, the shriek of brakes and tires, a terrific crash, the screech of tearing metal, the sickening shatter of glass, agonizing moans—then a deathly moment of silence.

A man, one arm hanging limp, crawls from the wreckage. One ear has been flayed from the side of his head. He leans over someone else in the car, then collapses.

Help comes almost immediately. Limp, broken bodies are dragged from the wreckage and laid on the roadside. A thin red stream trickles over the running-board of the car and forms a pool on the highway. One body is covered over with a blanket. Two others are rushed to the hospital; there may still be time to save them. A bystander peers curiously into the back of the car. He turns away with a shudder and is violently sick; someone else fishes out an arm and tucks it under the blanket beside the still body.

Horrible, isn't it? But neither uncommon nor exaggerated. It is simply a factual report of one of the 501 motor accidents in 1936 which resulted in fatalities. The headline in the newspaper next day read something like: "ONE DEAD IN CURVE CRASH, TWO IN HOSPITAL MAY DIE." You've seen dozens of headlines just like it, but how often do you stop to think of the hideous picture of blood and pain and death which lies behind them.

Accidents are horrible. Horrible to hear about and look at. Horrible in the pain and agony and sorrow they bring. Most horrible in the realization that THEY NEED NOT HAPPEN!

In Ontario, the Department of Highways is determined they will not happen. But to prevent them, it needs your help. You must drive (and walk) carefully, sanely. YOU MUST STOP TAKING CHANCES. And you must make sure that others do the same thing by reporting those who endanger lives by reckless driving. Dismiss any silly prejudice which suggests "it's none of your business" It is your business! It is one of your responsibilities to yourself and to the community. It is one of your duties as a citizen—and it is one of your duties as a human being to help save others from a needless death or injury. YOU ARE YOUR BROTHER'S KEEPER!

Comparing Casualty Lists

One hundred and five British flyers have been killed in accidents this year. That record sounds bad until it is compared with the highway casualty list during the same period. —Peterborough Examiner.

Where It All Goes

How much Canadian nickel has gone, and is going, into the manufacture of the world's instruments of war in these years since 1918? That, it seems to us, is a question the Canadian people should put to themselves soberly, earnestly. Because it does involve a most serious responsibility.—Halifax Herald.

Those Radio Licenses

The government department issuing radio licenses might save itself a great deal of work and householders a lot of inconvenience if collectors were supplied with adequate and reliable information as to those who have remitted their fee. Only a government could afford to offend the public by demanding that householders produce evidence that license fees have been paid.—Financial Times.

Where Dissent Is Treason

It becomes the people of the democracies to take note of what is going on in the nations of the other persuasion. We have a right to say and believe, on th eevidence that is available, that human life is better to live in the democracies than in the dictatorships. That is a very simple way of putting it, but that is the apt expression of what matters. There is a terror abroad in those countries. Men are not free to speak their minds. What we call opposition to the government, those countries know only as treason. — Vancouver Province.

The Bicycle Craze

There has been as astounding increase in the patronage of bicycles in Ontario. Especially in the cities, towns and villages has the bicycle attained the popularity that was characteristic of 40 years ago. In the last nineties there was a bicycle craze in Canada and the United States. Even the most inferior roads were swarming with male and female bicyclists. Touring clubs were formed and there was much organization to promote rides to various parts of the country. Special trucks were built for racing and circuits were formed for the holding of races at night at electrically lighted speedways.—Sarnia Observer.

A National Trade Policy

Without suggesting that Canada should turn away from the policy of exporting to markets abroad, it is becoming more than ever apparent that the Government's reliance on the capture of world markets is devoid of any promise of sustained prosperity at home. The productive resources of this Dominion are more than sufficient to assure every Canadian worker of an abundant standard of living. The national policy of Canada must surely be designed first to maintain this standard at home by productive labor applied to home resources. Canadian enterprize in world markets could follow, under conditions of greater security for Canadian workers, when national prosperity is no longer dependent upon competition with workers abroad under a lower standard of living. It will call for more light on Parliament Hill. — Ottawa Citizen.

Remove License Plates

It is generally admitted that one of the most effective means of remedying violations of the traffic laws is the removal of license plates for a definite period from the cars involved in the offences. . .

A driver may treat a fine lightly but, as The Ottawa Journal suggests, "an offending driver then would come under the force of domestic or business displeasure and resentment."

That is perfectly true, and if the penalty of removing the license plates from the cars were carried out, their owners would be exceedingly careful as to who was permitted to drive. Certainly the only remedy for the carelessness and recklessness that is abroad today on the part of a small percentage of drivers is by the imposition of drastic penalties, hence the sooner the Highways Department decides upon the removal of license plates in addition to the other penalties imposed the sooner will the highways become safer for law-abiding motorists. — Brantford Expositor.

They Are Not Exhibits

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, physician of the Dionne quintuplets, has spoken out against treating the babies experimentally as "guinea pigs." He referred to the statement of Dr. Lee R. Rigler, before the International Congress of Radiology, at Chicago, that the quints might help the science of heredity materially by being subjected to complete X-ray examinations.

The story of the five babies is a dramatic one. But any tendency to regard them as exhibits or as material for laboratory probing is a regrettable one. There are human lives involved in Callander, and the supreme right to develop as normal children. Otherwise they drop into the classification of freaks, adding another sorry chapter to the exploitation of physically unique people whose birthright is their greatest handicap. To overcome that handicap should be the main goal of those who have the interests of the babies at heart. Anything that would aggravate it should be checked at the start.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE EMPIRE

Sign of Social Progress

In the small groups of English folk found all over the Empire, every one knows every one else, hence the bank clerk's wife will be entertained by (and must in her turn entertain) the British Consul's lady. There is consequently a leveling of classes, and the leveling is upwards. Every one uses finger bowls.—London Queen.

Problems of Eastern Europe

"The problem of Eastern and Central Europe is the one which, if mishandled, is most likely to lead to a general war. And it is the one in which British policy finds it most difficult to follow a clear line. On the one hand the electorates of Great Britain, and still more of the oversea Dominions, view Eastern Europe as the field in which their own interests are least directly engaged, in which they can exercise the least direct military force, and in which they are least willing to commit themselves beforehand.

"Indeed, with a navy which cannot reach Eastern Europe at all, an army which has practically no European expeditionary force, and a home air force which is unlikely to reach parity in numbers with Germany, the only way in which Great Britain could exert direct force would be by turning what might be a local conflict into a world war. On the other hand, neither Great Britain nor any Dominion can be indifferent to alterations in the status quo in Eastern Europe, especially if they are brought about by power politics or war, because of the far-reaching effect they may have upon the balance of power in the world as a whole.—Round Table Magazine.

Out of the neck of one Edward Simpson, Massachusetts police doctors last week dug evidence which may convict him of murdering a policeman. The evidence:— a bullet from a brother policeman's gun.

Air Troubles On The Stage

Nervous Hubbies and Wives Squabble in Therapeutic Theatre and Are Cured.

Troubled husbands and nervous wives have found a new cure for family rifts, a therapeutic theatre at Beacon, N.Y., where they go on the stage and quarrel to their hearts' content.

The results of the first six months' use of this theatre for domestic, and for more serious mental troubles, is reported in a new publication, "Sociometry, a Journal of Inter-Personal Relations." The editor is Dr. Gardner Murphy of Columbia University. The publisher is J. L. Moreno, M.D., who built the theatre.

Comes To Surface

The idea is defined thus—"The full psychodrama of our inter-relations does not emerge; it is buried in and between us." In this theatre, spontaneous play-acting, done under medical supervision, has brought out some of the hidden facts of married lives.

The new journal describes the play-acting of "Robert" and his wife, "Mary." They re-enacted some of their tiffs, and at the same time spoke aloud the thoughts they had felt, but not uttered, during the quarrels.

"She never puts things in the right place," was one of "Robert's" asides. One of "Mary's" was: "He is so restless. Why didn't he let me wash the dishes?"

When Things Went Wrong

"Robert's" trouble, it developed, was two neuroses, one about time and the other about space. He always worried for fear of being late for appointments. This "time" trouble was so bad he went to one appointment three hours early to escape worry over being late. In "space" anything misplaced, even the slight up-tilted corner of a rug, worried him.

"Robert" and "Mary" found the cure for their troubles on the therapeutic stage. They learned how to talk to each other when things went wrong.

News In Review

No Longer Take Risk

LONDON—British insurance companies have announced their decision to refuse to accept war risk insurance.

They asserted that "development of aerial warfare alone has introduced an incalculable hazard."

The statement said that this decision was effective October 1, 1937 and added that "nearly 300 insurance companies of all nationalities" were included in the agreement to ban such insurance.

Il Duce's Visit Ends

BERLIN—Premier Mussolini's visit to Chancellor Hitler ended with a parade of the pick of the new German army.

Twenty-five regiments of the army paraded past the Fascist Duce and the Nazi Fuehrer.

Then there was a final luncheon at Hitler's chancellery, the last event on the program.

Sleeping Beauty Dies

Death brought an end to the 67-month coma of Patricia Maguire, Chicago's famous sleeping beauty, this week-end. Double pneumonia ended her life as physicians prepared to operate upon her to remove a tumor which menaced her life.

Vacancies in Senate

OTTAWA— Death of Senator Rodolphe Lemieux in Montreal increased the number of vacancies in the Upper House to four. Two of these are in Quebec, one in Ontario and one in Alberta.

Youthful Murderer Confesses

SARNIA—A signed confession of William Labadie, 17, on trial for the murder of seven-year-old John Luckins, in which he allegedly states he was under the influence of liquor and struck the lad with a hammer, was admitted as evidence by Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay.

Struggle for Control of Border

HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontier.—A large-scale battle throughout Northeast Spain raged as Government and insurgent forces struggled for control of principal avenues to the French border.

The fight was for possession of areas which might provide, for the Government, a broad lane for transport of French munitions and supplies, and, for insurgents, isolation of Government Spain from Barcelona and Upper Catalonia. France has intimated she may open her border to supplies and arms if foreign "volunteers" are not withdrawn from Spain.

Robbed By Fake Doctor

CHATHAM—A "fake" doctor robbed 87-year-old James Hawkins of $10 while the aged man lay helpless in bed at his Ridgetown, Ont., home where he lives alone. Two $1,000 bonds were overlooked by the thief.

Pope's Encyclical

VATICAN CITY—Pope Pius XI has issued a dramatic encyclical which is construed as an attack on Communist Russia, Nazi Germany and the leftist-inclined governments of Spain and Mexico.

The document, "An encyclical letter on the rosary of the blessed Virgin Mary," urged the Roman Catholic faithful to pray against the evils of Communism and the tendency of some state leaders who war against Communism to "exhume pagan errors and morals."

Want Eight Hour Day

TORONTO—The Provincial Federation of the Ontario Fire Fighters' Association have renewed efforts to have the Provincial Government pass legislation for the establishing of the three-platoon system or eight-hour day for firemen.

Epidemic Like Dysentry

TOKIO—More than 5,500 persons are ill of an epidemic disease resembling dysentery in Fukuoka Prefecture and 283 have died, the Domei Agency reports. The disease was devastating the town of Omuta, where the municipality was experiencing difficulty in cremating corpses. Fifteen emergency infirmaries have been established there.

Break's World's Record

LEXINGTON, Ky.—The 15-year-old mile world's record for trotters was broken here by Greyhound.

In his second assault on the mark established by Peter Manning on the Lexington track in 1922, the five-year-old grey ghost, under the piloting of his trainer, Sep Palin, stepped the distance in 1:56 flat, three-fourths second under the former time.

Japan Resents Animosity

TOKIO — Japan's newspaper resentment over what were termed "unjust" accusations that her army conducted ruthless warfare in China took an anti-League of Nations, anti-British course this week-end.

The Nichi Nichi attacked Great Britain, which, it claimed, "uses China, as well as the League, as tools for checking Japan."

The Nichi Nichi said that anti-Japanese sentiment in Britain, which has resulted in a movement favoring an economic boycott, would not serve British interests, "but would very adversely affect not only Far Eastern peace, but also the international political situation."

On Outstanding Events of the Week

A New Civilization In North

Just back from a tour by airplane of the Central Manitoba mining area, Northern Saskatchewan, Alberta and the Northwest Territories as far north as the Arctic Circle on Great Bear Lake, the Dominion Minister of Mines, Hon. T. A. Crerar sees in the Canadian North with its slower tempo, a more contemplative people arising, a people with more time and aptitude for thought, not beset by city excitement and quite content to do without it.

The Minister declared that a prosperous future lies ahead of the newer mining fields up there and there is room for tremendous development. With water transportation available everywhere in the summertime, and almost year-round air service, it is believed facilities will be ideal for establishment of a comfortable civilization.

This week Yvonne Dionne cut her twentieth tooth, the last of the Quintuplets to acquire the full score of baby grinders. The Five now have 100 teeth amongst them.

Rome-Berlin Axis

Ever since the autumn of 1935 when Germany refused to join with the other European nations in imposing sanctions on Italy for her aggression in Abyssinia, we have been hearing the phrase, "Rome-Berlin axis." Especially of late, in the Mediterranean crisis when Italy was accused of piracy and nations rallied to one side or another. Last week the "axis" was made doubly solid by the visit of Mussolini to Adolf Hitler. The speeches of both men on that occasion while reaffirming their united front against Bolshevism, declared also that Nazism and Fascism are joined in a common desire for world peace. With the cementing of such a bond, entered also by Britain, and later France, we may see a better day dawn for Europe and the world.

Terminal Market Proposed

"A terminal market in Toronto would do a great deal towards rectifying sorry conditions in Ontario whereby farmers in the Holland Marsh find themselves possessed of 'bountiful crops and no markets,'" declared the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, J. B. Fairbairn. "All produce would come to the one market," he suggested, "thus permitting control of supply and demand, better prices to producers." Many parts of Ontario are similarly hit each year, the fruit-growing districts included, and the crops rot on farms because of poor marke[t]

Right Jobs For Jobless

Surveys being made under the headship of the National Employment Commission are attempting classification of all unemployed persons in Canada to discover forms of work to which they are best suited. Eventually it is hoped to have every relief recipient classified according to his fitness for some form of employment. Special mention will be made also if the jobless man is permanently unemployable as a result of some physical, mental or social handicap.

Noiseless Streetcar Being Developed

New Standard Car Designed In The United States

OTTAWA.—Development of a noiseless street car with new standards of comfort, was described to the Dominion Tariff Board at Ottawa by George Gray, representing the Canadian Transit Association, Montreal.

The car had been designed at the instance of the United States Transit Association, Gray said, and $1,000,000 had been spent in experimental work before it had been put into service.

"It is an attempt," he s[aid] "to standardize on a vehicle that will compete with buses and private cars.

"The hope has been to produce a street car at from $15,000 to $17,000. As developed it has remarkable powers of acceleration and deceleration. It is silent and comfortable."

The car was described as having hard rubber wheels which run on tracks.

Some of the cars were running in the United States cities, Gray said, but there were none in Canada yet.

The same old story is being retold again — crowded schools. At the opening of the fall term at Windsor, N.S., Miss Anne Monro, kindergarten teacher, reported 91 pupils enrolled in her class.

Giant Broadcaster 'CBL' Will Take Air This Month

Canada's New Ultra Modern Broadcast Station at Hornby, Ontario, to Have Aerial Tower 200 Feet Higher Than Tallest Building In British Empire—One of World's Most Modern Transmitters.

Canada's first high-powered broadcasting station, the ultra-modern otherizer to take the air early this month as the first in the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's coast-to-coast chain of eight new $250,000 transmitters, is rapidly nearing completion at Hornby, near Georgetown.

The giant broadcaster, to be known as "CBL", is to radiate programs to all Ontario. Its huge output tubes, each valued in the neighborhood of $1,000, will power the station to 50,000 watts. This is more power than that used today by any other Canadian station.

CBL will have a sister station in CBF, also under construction at Vercheres, Que., and will service that entire province.

647 Feet High

According to A. Bourke, engineer in charge of construction, and W. C. Little, the C.B.C.'s chief engineer for this region, the new transmitter will be one of the world's most modern. The aerial tower, when completed, will pierce 647 feet into the sky. It will be 200 feet taller than the tallest building in the British Empire, the Bank of Commerce. Today this steel tower is 365 feet tall and is going up at the rate of 30 feet each day.

Approximately five tons of concrete have been poured into what forms the base of the tower. Atop this base is a set of porcelain insulators which according to engineers, is about the size of a hat box and which weighs about 500 pounds. On this is built the steel tower which, when completed, will weigh 54 tons.

Aided by an intricate ground system, this tower, acting as the aerial itself, will cast the station's signal hundreds of miles into the air.

Approximately 21 miles of copper wire have been buried nine inches underground in the 50 acres of property surrounding the transmitter house.

Lights to Warn Aeroplanes

Now being assembled in Montreal the transmitter itself will be shipped to Hornby as soon as a roof has been built on the one-storey transmitter house. The transmitter uses output tubes which are more than five feet tall. They are said to be the only tubes of that type in the world.

An electric eye will be employed to operate the spotlights at the peak of the tower and studding the steel. These lights, to serve as a warning to aeroplanes, will be switched on automatically as soon as darkness begins to fall. The electric eye—or photo-electric cell—also will switch off the lights at dawn.

Their Horses Still Make a Brave Showing

Free From Sciatica For 35 Years

In Perfect Health at 73 — Thanks to Kruschen

Thirty-five years ago this septuagenarian was helpless with sciatica. Then he heard of Kruschen. Since that day, he has enjoyed perfect health. Here is his remarkable story:

"Thirty-five years ago I had a severe attack of sciatica and could scarcely move for about six weeks. Then I started taking Kruschen—about half-a-teaspoonful every morning in hot water. In a few weeks I got rid of the awful pain in my hips. I have never had to consult a doctor since, and am still in perfect health at 73 years of age, which I can only attribute to taking Kruschen Salts every morning."—T.A.

Most people grow old long before their time because they neglect one vital need of health—the need of internal cleanliness. Eventually, they start the healthy Kruschen habit. Then, probably for the first time in their lives, they start getting rid, every day, of all waste matter from the system. The result is renewed health and vigour. Ailments due to clogged systems vanish, youth returns, and life becomes really worth living.

Greenland Has Daily Newspaper

Exports Pay Cost of Publication Resulting in Free Distribution

One of the most peculiar dailies, no doubt, is the Greenlandian paper Atuagagdliutit (try to pronounce it some night when you have run out of sleep).

It is printed daily in Godthaab, the biggest settlement in Greenland. News is gleaned from Danish papers arriving there six times a summer, from daily broadcasts of American and Icelandic news services and from local correspondents all over Greenland, who forward their copy in verbal "manuscripts" delivered from the original settlement to some native fisherman or hunter paddling along to the next settlement where he delivers his news to another hunter, who keeps it in mind until he happens to go to the next settlement or meets a hunter from there.

3,250 COPIES

As it can be imagined the story is rewritten several times before it arrives in the editorial office in Godthaab, which is located in the official Greenlandian printing house.

Every day 3,250 copies are printed. Once a year copies covering the whole year are bound strongly and the books are distributed among the "subscribers" in accordance with the name of the paper which means "lecture free". The cost of the printing and distribution is paid by the fees taxed on Greenlandian products exported to Denmark.

Editor Lynge of the paper is half Danish and half Greenlandian.

Alleged WIT

It's a wise storekeeper who knows what will sell:

An artist who was spending a holiday in a small village entered the store and asked if they carried camel hair brushes.

"No sir, we don't," replied the shopkeeper. "Y'see, sir," added, in an apologetical manner, "we never have no call for 'em. Nobody in these parts seems to keep camels."

In a desire to cut down expenses, a man will take his wife to a $1.50 dinner and stay away from a $2.00 dinner, entirely forgetting that in either event his wife will spend $2.00 to have her hair fixed on the day of the occasion.

Neighbor— What makes you look at me like that, young man?

Junior—I thought you were in the hospital.

Neighbor — What ever gave you that idea?

Junior—I heard Daddy tell Mummy that you had been shooting off your mouth again.

A father wrote to his son at college—I'm sending you the $10 in addition to your regular allowance as you requested in your last letter; but I must again draw attention to your incorrect spelling; "$10" is written with one nought, not two.

Mr. Y—Doesn't it annoy you that the Scotch family living in the flat above dance every night?

Mrs. Z—Oh no, when we want to stop them, we turn off the radio.

Woman Customer—Do you return the money when an article isn't satisfactory?

Merchant — That depends on the article.

Customer—This is a book.

Merchant—What was wrong with it?

Customer—I didn't like the way it ended.

Statistics show that more men embezzle money in order to gamble and drink than for any other reason . . . And most women who get touchy fingers, do so because they live beyond their means.

Teacher—Now, Johnny, can you name a place in Alaska?

Johnny—No 'm.

Teacher—That's right; Nome. Good for you! Next!

Another way to make home happy is to say nothing about the spots that get on the table-cloth. They will always wash out, while the memory of unkind words sometimes won't.

Crawford—So you can't understand why your boy in college flunked in all the foreign languages?

Crabshaw—No, it's a mystery to me. He picked up all the college yells in no time.

Friend—Tell me, sir. Who was braver than Lancelot, wiser than Socrates, more honest than Lincoln, wittier than Mark Twain, and more handsome than Apollo?

Mr. Wise—My wife's first husband.

Plumber (arriving late)— Well, how is it?

Happy Husband — Not so bad, while we were waiting for you I taught my wife to swim.

Wife (trying on new fall hats) — Do you like this one turned down?

Hubby—How much is it?

Wife—Twelve dollars.

Hubby—Yes, turn it down.

There is a disposition for the man who works in the mass today, to prize equality in income above everything else. It can be had, all right. But it always winds up with equality with those who have the least, rather than with those who have a bit more.

The Seven Georges

When George Goodman, 18, of Milwaukee, Wis., ran afoul of the law, he also ran into a few namesakes.

George Raabe and George Legge, detectives, arrested him. Desk Sergt. George Heidelberg booked him. George A. Bowman, deputy district attorney, issued a warrant charging him with the theft of 150 pounds of lead. Judge George E. Page bound him over for trial and Jailer George Schneak led him to his cell.

It almost gave George the willies.

First Known 'Link' Lived Seventy Million Years Ago

Smithsonian Report Places Man's Earliest Ancestor In Dark Montana Forest—Ancient Animals Tiny—But Bones of These Tree-Dwellers Show Human Resemblances, Scientists Say

Scattered remains of the earliest known members of the order of life to which modern man belongs have been discovered in Central Montana by three scientists who in succession spent nearly thirty years exploring a wooded paradise of 70,000,000 years ago, according to a report issued by the Smithsonian Institution.

Offshoot of Earlier Stock

Only teeth and jaws of these creatures have been found and only a paleontologist, the report says, could recognize their relationship to the monkeys, apes and humans of today. Tiny creatures, hardly larger than mice, they lived in trees of the ancient forest region just east of the Crazy Mountains, according to Dr. George Gaylord Simpson of the American Museum of Natural History, author of the report.

No claim is made that the little animals were in the direct ancestral line of present-day primates. It is believed that they were offshoots of an earlier general and still unknown stock from which man also derived.

Crocodile Creatures Ate Them

The branch of life in question apparently became extinct after the Paleocene age, and signs indicate many of the animals were devoured by large crocodile-like reptiles which were the dominant creatures of their period.

The explorations were begun in 1908 by Albert C. Silberling of the United States Geological Survey, and a large collection of all sorts of specimens were made. Investigation was continued by the late James W. Gidley of the National Museum staff and continued after his death in 1931 by Dr. Simpson. Dr. Simpson's report is based largely on the extensive Smithsonian collection of the fossils from the Crazy Mountain area.

Although only four or five semi-complete skulls and no complete skeleton exists in the collection, Dr. Simpson states that one of the types discovered seems to combine various fundamental features of the pseudo-monkeys, the lemurs and tarsioids, the latter now represented only in the East Indian tarsius.

Some scientists hold the view that the primate branch which eventually produced man budded off from the main primate stock in the tarsioid stage.

The First Equines

The report discloses the discovery also of remains of animals related to bears and to such insectivores of today as shrews and moles, as well as discovery of probably the earliest beginnings of the family now represented by horses, cattle, deer and bison.

In the earliest strata of the Crazy Mountain formation, according to the report, are found fragments of animals at least 50,000,000 years old and entirely different from any known today. These are the multi-tuberculates which at one time made up the most abundant form of mammal life.

The collection from this area includes the finest single multi-tuberculate specimen yet discovered, the report states, skull, jaws and partial skeleton of one of the small rodent like animals.

Canadian Blind May Be Led By Trained Dogs

"Seeing Eye" Institution for Teaching Canines to Lead Blind Masters May be Established.

Hope that at an early date Canada would have a "Seeing Eye" institution for training dogs to lead the blind was expressed by Captain Edward Baker, Dominion secretary of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, speaking to the blind people at Ottawa.

The gathering had just heard an interesting talk given by Miss Hazel Hurst, of Ogdensburg, N.Y., who spoke of the pleasure and assistance derived from "Babe" her "Seeing Eye" dog.

Captain Baker added negotiations had been going on for some time between the Institute and the "Seeing Eye" Institute at Morristown, N. J., and when a trainer with the exacting qualifications could be secured, the plan would be put into operation. The proposed institution would be similar to the one at Morristown, which, he believed, was the most efficient one in the world.

Three Already Here

At present there are three "Seeing Eye" dogs in Canada from the Morristown institute, two in Toronto and one in Montreal.

Both independence and protection were obtained from her carefully trained dog, Miss Hurst stated. The animal accompanied her to church, and always picked out an empty pew for her. The speaker caused much amusement when, in regard to her guide, she confessed: "She is the boss, I am only at the other end of the leash."

"Aerocatering" Done By Flying Boats

Passengers making air journeys in the new Empire-type flying-boats of Imperial Airways, pay warm tribute to the efficiency of the catering arrangements. Well-equipped kitchens at airports, and completely-fitted buffets in the flying-boats, enable meals to be served up in the air which are in every way the equal of those supplied in first class restaurants.

Travellers who made flights on the first air-lines operating between London, Eng., and the Continent, comment in terms of keen appreciation on the progress in airway comfort which has been achieved in the past 18 years. Pioneer air passengers after driving out to draughty sheds embarked in small, noisy machines in which there were no catering facilities at all.

Today, modern airports have commodious ticket-offices, waiting-rooms, restaurants, and hotels; while up in the air, seated in spacious luxuriously-equipped saloons which are scientifically heated, ventilated, and silenced, passengers have only to press a bell at their elbows in order to summon a white-coated steward and have placed at their disposal all the resources of a highly-organized catering service.

Jews Shunned as Partners

Germans are forbidden to have Jewish business partners.

A court in Hamburg ruled that although there is no law forbidding Jews to engage in business, "a close relationship between a Jew and Gentile is fundamentally wrong."

A partnership, the court decided, is a "close relationship."

EXPECTANT MOTHERS

WOMEN who suffer periodically, who may have sideache or headache, and those about to become mothers, will find Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a dependable tonic. Read what Mrs. Alfred Weller of 279 Palmer St., Guelph, Ont., said: "Before the arrival of my little girl I was in miserable health. I felt weak and tired all the time, suffered from pains in my back and had dizzy spells. I felt so discouraged, being unable to do my housework, I wondered if I would ever be well again. That's when I started taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it strengthened me in every way." Buy now of your nearby druggist.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

MODERATOR COMING

The visit of the Moderator of the United Church of Canada, the Right Rev. P. Bryce, D.D., to the United Church, Streetsville, on Sunday, October the 10th, for the morning service is anticipated with great pleasure. Dr. Bryce has endeared himself to all types of people by his humanitarian activities and his deep interest in every movement seeking richer life for all. The wealthy often look to him for direction in their benevolences and the poor find in him a real friend. As Pastor of Earlscourt for a number of years he found many challenging opportunities for service and the Bolton Camp is one of the answers to need he had much to do with establishing and maintaining. He has never ceased his deep interest in this great venture of love and preaches each year the closing sermon.

When the Province thought to institute a Mother's Pension fund the Rev. Peter Bryce was asked to establish the Board and to be the directing commissioner. During his chairmanship, the Board carried forward its work without political bias and with equal fairness to all claimants. Dr. Bryce was largely responsible for the commencement of the Federated Charities in the city of Toronto. Indeed it would be difficult to mention any helpful movement embracing all types of life in the city in which he has not been closely associated.

In 1925, when the United Church was consummated, Dr. Bryce was in the act of accepting the Principalship of Albert College when leaders of the Church pressed him to accept the post as Secretary of the Missionary and Maintenance Fund and having yielded to their importunities he has acted in this capacity ever since.

So deeply has he endeared himself to the whole church that he was nominated by a number of Conferences as Moderator. He published a request that his name be not considered, but pressure of office could not silence the pressure of affection and at last he yielded and was elected to the highest office the church has to award to any man.

A FINE SUPPER AND CONCERT

The supper and concert given in the United Church, Streetsville, Monday evening proved a great success and everyone who assisted in the event is to be congratulated. The supper was excellent and well served, the concert a delight and satisfaction. Arrangements for the evenings entertainment must have been carefully made; for there was no hitch and the workers found no difficulty serving the large number of friends who joyfully joined in the evening's program.

Two ladies spent the afternoon making the rounds to collect food and had a good time, for they were well received. There was no lack of workers and everyone seemed to set to the task allotted with a hearty good will. The concert proved a most delightful type. Diversity, quality and quantity combined to provide pleasure for all who remained for the program and there was a good number who did.

The following took part:

Organ solos by Mr. Herbert Falconer. Pianaforte solos by Miss Pauline Groves. Solo accompanied by himself on the Mandolin by Mr. Joseph Burns. Readings by Miss Hazel Ross. Violin solo by Mr. Jas. Steen. Solos by Mr. Beatty, Miss Jessie Jamieson, Mrs. J. H. Hare and Mr. B. Bunt; Flute solo by the Rev. T. D. Jones, instrumental duet by Mr. Jas. Steen and Rev. T. D. Jones, two selections by the Orchestra.

The enthusiastic encores for the artists proved how well their work was received and they responded with good numbers to the increased delight of the audience.

The supper and concert well maintained the reputation of the church for events of this order and will long be remembered with joy by all present, especially by those who did the work of organization and arrangement or contributed in any way to the success achieved. Mr. Jones expressed the thanks of the church to all who had taken part including the accompanists and the committee of arrangements.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The Com. Club met at the home of Mrs. Sandford, Wednesday, Sept. 29th. The president presided.

The Secretary's report was read.

The business discussed and an afternoon euchre planned, to be held at the home of Mrs. W. Atkinson, Wednesday, Oct. 13th.

The roll call was answered with a suggestion or something helpful to the Club.

Mrs. W. Hamilton gave a reading on everyone doing their part.

Mrs. Anderson May also gave a reading along the same line.

Mrs. O'Connor recently returned from Regina, gave a talk on the situation in the West.

The hostess served a dainty lunch at the close of the meeting.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. John Bonham, Wednesday, Oct. 20th. Please note the change of date.

It has been said, husbands are "prizes", surprises" and "consolation prizes". So come prepared to answer the roll call with "The kind of a husband I always thought I would marry".

Three papers will also be given on the same topic.

HELPFUL SERVICES

The Harvest Festival services in the Streetsville United Church were well attended and proved to be very helpful and interesting.

The theme for the morning service was "Praise the Lord with the trumpet" and in the evening "Thou shalt keep the Harvest Festival with thanksgiving, bringing thy first fruits to the altar".

The speaker said that the trumpet is the instrument symbolic of the open spaces. He thought that a man's religion ought to awaken the whole of life and find expression in business, pleasure and in public life as well as in synagogues, churches and temples.

The Trumpet is the instrument used to sound the "Forward march". It is never used to suggest defeat. In the evening, Mr. Jones spoke of the three great festivals of the Jews. The feast of the Passover, celebrated with joy, yet with unleavened bread. It was not the type of feast to attract people, for the memory was suggestive of a tremendous event and reflection was the chief purpose of the feast.

The second feast was that of spring, but this became associated with licentiousness and eventually sank into insignificance through the establishment of the Easter festival and holy season. The third was the festival of Harvest in which all peoples for ages have celebrated their thanksgiving and praise. Then the speaker led the congregation in a study of grounds for praise concluding with the thought that those who honour God, giving of their substance with cheerfulness will be honoured of God.

Mrs. Frank Reid sang a solo during the morning service and the choir sang an anthem. The music was very effective. The Choir sang a fine anthem in the evening.

The decorations of the Church were beautiful, well balanced, tasteful, diverse and suggestive of grounds for praise.

We noticed that the church had placed gravel along the front between the pavement and the roadway and this should be appreciated by all.

HISTORIANS HEAR CAUSTIC COMMENT ON ROAD POLICY

W. Perkins Bull, K.C., Says Old Methods Routing Highways Best

Caustic comment on the policy and practice adopted in the construction of some of the roads in Ontario was passed by W. Perkins Bull, K.C., Toronto, at Thursday's meeting of the Ontario Historical Society, in the Dominion Archives. He suggested it would have been better if some of the extensive road system in Peel County had "never been born".

Mr. Bull was commenting on a paper read by Professor Norman Macdonald, M.A., Ph.D., of Toronto, on the subject of: "Roads and Road Making in Early Canada."

Other Side of Picture

"As Professor Macdonald spoke of Simcoe's work in building Dundas street through Peel, and Miss Appleby spoke of the Guelph plank road running through Meadowvale and Streetsville, and Mr. David Williams spoke of the Centre road from Port Credit to Collingwood, I thought that it was only fair to give the other side of the picture," said Mr. Bull.

"Peel has roughly 755 miles of 66-foot road (those of you who are good at mental arithmetic can figure out how many acres or square miles of waste land that is). Only about 100 miles are highways such as the speakers have been discussing.

"As for the highways themselves, they were not built to serve Peel. They were built so that outsiders could pass through Peel and out again in the shortest possible time.

"Professor Macdonald spoke of the condition of corduroy and plank roads. I have lived 67 years in the country, and the worst roads I have yet traversed are cement roads in disrepair.

"On the other hand, the nicest and most desirable roads, so far as rural Ontario is concerned, are, or were, the old main travelled roads built to connect actual places."

Mr. Bull mentioned the old road from the mills at Meadowvale to the elevators at Malton; the Stavebank and Mississauga roads down the banks of the Credit; an old short cut across country from Erindale to Streetsville.

Most Attractive

"These old trespass roads that Professor Macdonald condemns as roundabout and unplanned, were the most attractive scenically and serviceable economically in the county, because they were built in the places the Lord had designed for roads, with reference to local needs and in harmony with local contours.

"It would save time and money, since Ontario is still a young country, to work in harmony with nature instead of blasting through rocks and mountains and building through swales and swamps to make rectangular roadways," said Mr. Bull.

"Whatever little curves or wobbles the old roads made to suit the topography, they were as nothing beside the extra distances perforce travelled by the farmers because of the checkerboard surveys to which we today so slavishly adhere. There are three or four hundred miles of Peel's extensive road system it would have been better if they had never been born," he concluded.

REACHING THE GOAL

Consumption, as tuberculosis of the lungs is commonly called, is a wasting ailment; stubborn to master, requiring treatment and care over a long period of time. It can seldom be cured at home. Then, too, it is a communicable disease, especially dangerous to young children.

This was fully realised by the founders of the National Sanitarium Association, when forty years ago they erected the first hospital in Canada for the treatment of this disease.

This venture met with much opposition and even ridicule, for at that time it was firmly believed that tuberculosis was incurable. It was just one of those things which had to be, so why bother about it.

However, it was not long before the regimen of this small hospital began to show results—people were actually being cured—going home and talking about it.

Such was the small beginning of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives, which now provide for more than one thousand patients.

The progress made and the change in outlook is reflected by these and the many other fine sanatoria throughou the Dominion, and by the large numbe of public and private organizations which to-day are sparing no effort to overcome tuberculosis.

The results have been that thousands upon thousands have been given a chance to get well, who but for hospital treatment, would have been left without hope, and the mortality from this disease has been reduced by 75%.

With tuberculosis ousted from the premier position to seventh place as the cause of death, there is cause for congratulation, but there is also the danger of the feeling of self complacency and the slackening of effort. With the goal in sight, this would indeed be a calamity, for tuberculosis will not halt its advance unless it is forced to do so. This can only be accomplished with the continued co-operation of the public at large.

The Trustees of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives are determined that, so far as lies within their power, no one who suffers from tuberculosis shall be denied a chance to get well. If you would help in this great life saving work, please send a gift to National Sanitarium Association, 223 College Street, Toronto.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
SPECIAL PICTURE HOBBIES

ONE of the attractions of the hobby of amateur photography is that it provides an almost unlimited number of hobbies within the hobby; as many, in fact, as there are kinds of things that the eye can see. Ships, flowers, trees, clouds, locomotives, colonial architecture, historical monuments, gargoyles, machinery, babies, horses, dogs, cats, birds, insects are only a few subjects which have their devotees as special picture hobbies. Enthusiasm for photography combines with the collector's instinct, resulting in albums of photographs of the chosen subject that are a source of pride, pleasure and instruction.

In addition to the enjoyment of making the photographs, the value of a special picture hobby is that it usually leads to an accumulation of knowledge about the subject that is educational and broadening. If the photographer starts making pictures of flowers, he soon discovers that there are many things about flowers that he never knew before. He is likely to become quite a botanist. So with ships. He is likely soon to be studying up on marine architecture and enjoying it.

Above is an amateur photograph from the album of an insect specialist. This is a hobby which affords him the extra enjoyment of walks into the woods and fields in his hunts for specimens. He photographs them on the spot and captures them to take home for indoor [illegible]. He has become an amateur entomologist. Now he really knows about "bees' knees," "butterflies' eyebrows" and how many legs a caterpillar has. He finds that photographing insects in the open fields, garden or woods, is really a sport. Some kinds you can stalk successfully but he tells you that, more often than you would suppose, you have success by lying in wait for an insect to come within lens range and pose itself on flower, leaf or twig on which you have focused. If you locate yourself in a place where there are plenty of them, it won't be long before one of the multitude hops or flies into position in front of your waiting lens. Of course, if you do not have a close-focusing bellows camera, you should use a portrait attachment in order to get a large image, and in either case you will usually need to have an enlargement made from the important part of the negative.

The exposure should usually be twice that given regular outdoor scenes with the same light conditions. Being close to the subject there is less light reflected, and, as detail is essential, it is better to double the exposure time, and also to use a small stop. Your camera should be stationary on a support. You must expect some failures because of the refusal of an insect always to stay in position long enough for the required exposure, but that adds to the value of the successful pictures.

Grasshoppers, bees, spiders and their webs, the praying mantis and the butterfly offer good opportunities; so does the wasp's nest, if you care to take a chance.

First Clocks Wonderful
Examples of Maker's Art

The first clocks that were set up in church belfries and public buildings in the later Middle ages were crude affairs compared with the scientifically precise instruments, but their general principles were exactly the same. They comprised a power source — usually weights—which moved wheel work, to which was attached some means of indicating the time. The rate of going was regulated by a vibrating body, at first a horizontal bar, later a balance wheel or pendulum, and the power was governed and applied a little at a time by a device known as an escapement, which alternately caught and released some part of the mechanism. It is the escapement in a watch or clock which does the ticking; it is truly the heart of the timepiece, writes Eugene Guild in the Washington Star.

The word "clock" comes from an old word meaning "bell," and the German word for bell is "glocke" to this day. Later, dials were rigged up, with a moving hand showing the time—an idea taken from the ancient Greek water clocks.

As time went on medieval craftsmen developed clocks which were marvels of mechanical ingenuity, if not of accuracy. The famous clock of Strasbourg cathedral is an example. It was put up in 1352 and has been twice rebuilt, each time with greater elaboration. It is three stories high, and stands against the cathedral wall somewhat in the shape of a great altar with three towers.

Schipperke Is Blackest Dog of Various Breeds

The schipperke (pronounced skipperke) is the blackest dog of all breeds and it was in faroff Belgium that they won their first merits, according to a writer in the Los Angeles Times. Around the barges that float on the Flemish canals runs a wide ledge and there these small dogs would keep watch, barking an alarm at danger and assisting the barge captains so efficiently that the name of "little skipper" was bestowed upon them.

They have one very noticeable characteristic — the complete absence of a tail. The majority are born tailless.

The average "Skip" weighs about twelve pounds. Their general appearance is that of a small cobby dog, intensely alert, and exceedingly dainty. The head has a fox-like expression with its pointed muzzle and sharp, erect ears. The eyes are dark, oval in shape, and very expressive.

Early Ohio Publicity

Many myths about Ohio in its settlement days were spread throughout the East to attract more families into this new region. Among the fabulous tales, relates a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, were that springs of brandy flowed down the hills, that flax bore little pieces of cloth on the stem, that pumpkins grew as big as barrels, and that melons—well, the size of Ohio melons ranged in comparison, from a two-gallon jug to a bushel basket. On the other hand, at the same time that such myths were going the rounds, myths of an adverse nature also trickled into the East. One of these was that the Ohio hoopsnake carried such a poisonous wallop that when its fangs pierced, say, a tree trunk, the leaves curled up and died, the tree itself dying soon afterward.

Paper-Making

The center around which paper making spins is the paper-making machine, says a writer in the Scientific American. It is a gigantic combination of intricate mechanisms which takes in raw stock at one end and spins forth paper at the other. A full-sized machine approaches 200 feet in length, weighs nearly a million pounds and costs in the neighborhood of a half million dollars. Because it is a grouping of machinery, one might say that there is a hazard every foot of the length. There are some fifty individual motors, about twenty - five pumps, thousands of feet of pipe and many miles of wire. Every unit must coordinate perfectly to deliver a product that is satisfactory.

Hickory Heavy Wood

Hickory is one of the heaviest of Northern common woods, a dry cubic foot weighing 52.17 pounds. The earliest American settlers discovered its advantages when shaped into tool handles, advantages of strength and elasticity under strain. Second-growth hickory, which means that the tree has emerged from the stump of an older, faster growing tree, is in demand because its fiber is more compact and close-grained. Hickory decays quickly in heat and moisture and warps easily unless carefully seasoned in the open air.

"The Sieve," a Waterfall

"The Sieve," just outside Uruapan in the state of Michoacan, Mexico, doesn't fall over rocks. It sifts through the volcanic basalt dike in a thousand small waterfalls that catch the sun's light, refract it, and crown the boiling waters below with a shimmering rainbow. Points at which The Sieve's waters break through the rock are from 60 to 150 feet above the basin.

Hy-ah School

Streetsville High School is now going strong,and,we pupils are really going to accomplish things with our new teaching staff, The boys have formed an Athletic Society,which our School has never had before. We elected John Fellowes as President and Orville Schnick as Sec.-Treas.

We have added another sport to our curriculum, known as pole vaulting. Two poles have been bought and we are really trying. I have heard several boys say, lately "We are going to have a school here yet," and I think we are, with the School Board's co-operation with us and ours with the teachers. The girls played Follow the Leader, and also formed a Girls' Athletic Society.

Our annual Field Day, which is to be held on Oct 15,is well under way. If you like sports, be a sport, and come to see us amateurs perform. We hope you will also see us with high standards in our studies as well as in sports and amusements.

Last Thursday, our H. S. Girls Softball Team defeated the Public School Girls by a score of 34—7.

"SALADA" TEA

SOA

HOSTAGE HEIRESS

By DAVID DRESSER

Janet Duane, millionaire's daughter, gives a party one night aboard her father's palatial yacht, anchored off Miami. Gregory Gason tricks her into being lef behind wih him when the guests are taken ashore. The only other persons aboard are a crippled wtachman and Janet's Negro maid. Meanwhile, "Dusty" Lanion, lawless adventurer, has laid plans to seize the yacht to carry arms and ammunition to Cuban revolutionists. Believing the boat to be deserted, except for the watchman, who has been bribed, Dusty and his mean are about to board her.

CHAPTER V

"So! You have done it?" Sakara Pitzinoff seized Dusty's hand. "You are magnificent," she told him, her dark eyes glistening. "I did not believe . . . I could not believe the boat would be here. I keep telling Don Martinez, all the long trip in that so horrible truck, that it could not be."

She stood very close to Dusty and smiled up into his face. Sakara made no secret of her admiration for Dusty, and Janet, watching from the deck of the yacht, could see it in every movement. Dusty was strong and ruthless—the two qualities which Sakara admired most in a man.

She, in her own way, was also strong and ruthless. She had fled from Russia during the Revolution, claiming she had been marked for death because of her noble ancestry. Perhaps it was true. Certainly she had not sought to evade death after escaping from Russia. Her beauty and her daring did not make for a placid life. She scorned security.

Dusty had been here only twice before. She was known to him as an important cog in the Cuban revolutionary machine. For years, he had heard of the exploits of Sakara Pitzinoff—of her reckless deeds and her reckless loves. At last, meeting her in Miami while planning this coup, she had fascinated him strangely. Sakara was unlike any woman he had ever known. Here, he had recognized, was a spirit to match his own.

But he was troubled now as he smiled down into her eyes. He hadn't expected Don Martinez to bring Sakara.

Strictly On Schedule

"Why did you come?" he asked.

"We'll be all through on this side as soon as we get the cargo loaded."

"That is why I came," she said simply.

They started to move toward the truck, where Don Martinez, Cuban rebel leader, awaited them. A dozen or more negroes had climbed down from the truck and were starting to carry the cargo to the yacht through the shallow water.

Sakara caught Dusty's hand as she walked beside him, drawing it up to encircle her waist. She smiled up at him.

"What do you mean—that is why you came?" he asked awkwardly.

He was conscious that they could be seen plainly from the deck of the Fleetwing, and he gently sought to withdraw his arm, but Sakara would not let him.

"Because we are through here," she said. "There is no more work for me to do here. I sail with you tonight." She glanced up at him obliquely, seeming to say, "I will sail with you always."

Dusty disregarded her glance. Something had happened to him since last they had been together. Her ardent glance now vaguely irritated him. He withdrew his arm from about her waist as they neared Don Martinez.

"So, my friend! You have won the success!"

Don Martinez took Dusty's hand. He was tall and slender. His face was gaunt, and dark eyes glowed beneath bushy brows.

"Everything's on schedule," Dusty assured him.

"It is colossal!' Don Martinez exclaimed. "Even you . . . I feared you would fail in this so bold attempt."

These Passengers

"I had my little troubles," Dusty acknowledged. "Things didn't go just as I'd planned. You see . . ." He paused awkwardly. "I've got three passengers on board."

"Eh?" Don Martinez looked startled.

"It's rather awkward," Dusty said slowly. "You see . . . one of them happens to be Cyrus Duane's daughter."

"Eh?" Don Martinez said again.

Sakara said nothing. Her hand rested on Dusty's arm, and he felt her fingers tighten convulsively.

"Janet Duane, her maid and a man," Dusty said briskly. "They all happened to be aboard last night when we cut the mooring ropes and towed the Fleetwing from the bay. They didn't know anything was happening until we started the engine."

Don Martinez was noplussed. "What will we do?"

"Carry on," Dusty told him promptly. "Exactly according to plan. The man doesn't count. He's been sulking in his cabin all day. He'll cause no trouble. The girl is different." He paused reflectively. "She has courage. But I've explained the situation, and she realizes she can do nothing except go with us. After we land the cargo?" He shrugged his shoulders. "Quien 'sabe. I had planned to run the yacht to an anchorage I know off Honduras, dismantle her, and make her unrecognizable. But now—I think I shall return the girl and the yacht to her father when I am done."

"Fool!" Sakara said angrily. "They will hang you!"

"Perhaps," Dusty said casually. "Though I think it unlikely. I haven't any intention of sticking my head in a noose. I'll see the girl back safely, and then disappear."

"It matters not," Don Martinez muttered, "after the cargo is landed safely."

"That's right," Dusty said. "We will worry about the rest of it after we get this stuff landed."

"Shall we go abroad?" Sakara took Dusty's arm and urged him toward the shore.

"Yes—I must see about stowing this cargo away safely." Dusty turned back to Don Martinez. "Suppose you stay on shore and see they get everything."

"Right," the other assented.

Beauty vs. Beauty

Sakara was silent as she and Dusty turned away. He was conscious of a feeling of antagonism toward her. Why the devil, he wondered, had she come tonight? The fine edge seemed to have been taken from the adventure. He thrust away from his mind the thought of Janet and Sakara on board the Fleetwing together.

"Is she very beautiful . . . this Janet Duane?" Sakara murmured, as they neared the water's edge.

"No," Dusty growled. "She's not pretty at all." The vision of Janet's lovely face obtruded. He felt mean and disloyal.

"Not so beautiful as I?" Sakara stopped before him in the sand. Her arms encircled his neck. "Put her ashore when we sail," she whispered into his ear. "What right has she to spoil the happiness we might know together? You and I . . . We will take this yacht and sail to the ends of the earth . . . together."

She was trembling. The warmth of her seemed to flow into Dusty, weakening him. Her lips found his. He gave way to her allure for a moment — then abruptly thrust her away.

"No!" he said harshly.

"Very well," Sakara said icily. "We shall see." She turned toward the yacht.

"Wait," Dusty said thickly. "I'll carry you."

She waited silently. Dusty stepped forward and picked her up lightly. Her arm encircled his neck, and she smiled faintly. He waded into the water doggedly, trying not to breathe in the subtle fragrance of her hair, sternly striving to pay no heed to the softness of her as she relaxed in his arms.

COULD HARDLY CLOSE HANDS

Had Rheumatism and Neuritis

"I suffered severely from Rheumatism and Neuritis," writes Mr. W. J. Tracy of Toronto. "I could hardly walk upstairs or close my hands. After taking Fruitatives four days the swelling left my hands and knees. I could climb stairs and ladder. I advise any person suffering as I did to take Fruit-a-tives. They give quick relief." Try this real fruit juice, herb and tonic prescription of a famous Canadian doctor. If you suffer, they might clear up your case too. 25c. and 50c. No substitute. At druggists.

Canadian Immigration May Reach 27,000,000 This Year

Say Immigration Officials at Border; The Movement is From Europe Chiefly of Agricultural Families

Although Canada is not actively encouraging migration of settlers to this country, immigration officers manage to keep busy.

F. C. Blair, director of immigration at Ottawa predicts examinations of persons at border points this year will total 27,000,000. The increasing tide of tourists is responsible for raising the figure 2,000,000 from last year. In 1935, border examinations numbered 22,750,000, and in 1934, 21,000,000.

Assisted Influx

The question of assisted immigration has again attracted attention with the visit of Sir Richard Linton, founder of the Big Brother movement, who will cross Canada on his way to Australia where assisted immigration is again to be put in operation. Sir Richard is making arrangements for the movement of settlers to the Antipodes.

It is expected Sir Richard will call on Ottawa officials and possibly some members of the government, but it is considered unlikely the conversations will extend to questions of government policy.

Boys and Girls

The Fairbridge Farms, Incorporated, an organization which is participating in the Australian movement, has a farm on Vancouver Island and Sir Richard may visit it before sailing southward.

Boys and girls are brought to the farm from Great Britain, are educated and trained until they are 16 and then are placed on farms or in domestic service. There are about 150 girls and boys at the Duncan, B.C., farm and 50 more are on the way from England. The organization is supported by the British Government and British philanthropists.

For several years the Canadian government joined with the United Kingdom government in assisting juvenile migration schemes and more than 18,000 British boys and girls were settled in this country between 1923 and 1931.

No Schemes During Depression

Only 12,000 people a year are now coming to Canada to make their permanent homes here. Unemployment resulting from adverse economic conditions and western crop failures have discouraged the government from taking any action to stimulate the movement of settlers from the United Kingdom or other parts of the world.

Since the beginning of the depression no schemes for assisting immigrants at government expense have been in operation. No barriers have been erected, however, against British settlers who are able to pay their own steamship fare to Canada and are able to take care of themselves.

From Europe the movement has been confined to agricultural families who have money enough to establish themselves and to a few relatives of men already established here.

Every year a considerable number, mostly of British stock, cross the border from the United States to settle in Canada.

To Take Photos Of Sun's Corona Between Eclipses

Airman Tels How Camera Can Be Set for "Shots" at Sun From Stratosphere

Flights into the stratosphere by airplane and balloon may make additional observations of the sun's corona possible between the times of total eclipse.

Speaking at Minneapolis before the concluding session of the American Astronomical Society's meeting at William College, Major A. W. Stevens of the Army Air Service stated that from the altitude reached on such flights the sun's corona may be photographed without waiting for an eclipse.

The camera employed would be similar to one designed and used by Dr. Bernard Lyot of the Paris Observatory, with which successful photographs of the brightest details of the corona have been made from the Pic du Midi, in the Pyronees.

Focusing of the Camera

A lens focus sees the image of the sun on a dark circular screen, just its size, then another lens picks up the faint image of the corona around it and focuses it a second time. Great care is taken to keep all the optical surfaces scrupulously clean and to have all the lenses perfectly clear.

With the gondola below the balloon, which cuts off the view directly overhead, the sun cannot be seen near noon. Therefore observations would have to be made in the morning, from 9 to 10 o'clock, or at a corresponding time in the afternoon, when the sun is not too high.

Only One a Year

In such a flight a balloon of new design might ascend to 85,000 feet, Major Stevens said, but he did not know whether a new flight would be made. Not more than one could easily be made a year.

Will Finance 45,000 Families

The Dominion will provide direct relief for 45,000 families in Saskatchewan this winter together with feed and fodder for their livestock, Agriculture Minister Gardiner announced this week.

Ravages of persistent drought have raised the number of relief families from 25,000 last year. Estimates for drought areas in other parts of the West are still to be made.

Ominous signs of scurvy have appeared in the West, the minister said, and as a result the government will launch a scheme to move large quantities of surplus fish, cheese, vegetables and fruit from other parts of Canada into the drought areas.

In addition to providing direct relief in the areas of greatest suffering the Dominion will make direct grants-in-aid to the provinces to help municipalities on the border of the drought belt.

Scheme devised by the Kwangtung (China) Provincial Government: — Every family will be given a chicken worth 20 cents. Under penalty of imprisonment they will have to feed and house it until it is reclaimed by the Government. The reclaiming wil be done when the chicken is worth five times its original value.

THE THANKSGIVING FEAST

Thanksgiving and homecoming! They seem synonymous, don't they? Sons and daughters bringing their friends home from boarding schools and colleges for the holiday weekend, nature radiant in her autumn colors, and radiant faces around your family table! Make this a real day in the life of your family and serve a meal, the memory of which will last till next year.

Here is a suggested menu that covers everything from cocktail to nuts. It can be the basis on which to plan your Thanksgiving dinner, with whatever changes and additions suit your own particular family.

Grapefruit Juice

Celery Olives

Roast Turkey with Coconut Stuffing and Giblet Gravy

Stuffed Potatoes Buttered White Onions

Green String Beans

Cranberry Mould

Head Lettuce with Russian Dressing

Pumpkin Pie

Nuts Coffee Raisins

There are a few points to remember when purchasing your turkey and here are some that may help. A 10-pound turkey will serve six to eight persons generously. Get one that is well padded with fat and make sure that the breast bone is pliable by moving the end of the bone farthest from the head, from side to side. Another point to remember is that the legs of a young turkey are black and smooth, those of an old bird, greyish and scaly.

After you have washed, singed and drawn the turkey, stuff it and then truss and tie it. Place on back on a trivet in a roasting pan, and rub the entire outside surface with salt. Baste frequently during the roasting. If there is not enough fat in the pan for basting, use a mixture of ¼ cup of butter melted in two-thirds cup boiling water. After this is gone, use fat in pan. Turn turkey frequently, that it may brown evenly. Turkey should be roasted at 350 Deg. F., for the whole period, allowing 20 minutes to the pound.

Coconut Stuffing

2 bouillon cubes (chicken flavor)
1 cup soft bread crumbs
4 tablespoons celery, finely cut, (or ¼ teaspoon celery salt)
1½ tablespoons parsley, finely cut
1-8 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk, scalded
2 cups coconut, premium shred
¼ teaspoon sage
1 teaspoon scraped onion
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons melted butter.

Dissolve bouillon cubes in hot milk. Combine with remaining ingredients, mixing lightly. Pack stuffing in loosely. It expands while cooking. This stuffing can also be used for duck, goose, pork, veal or chicken.

For stuffed potatoes, use large flat ones. Bake in hot oven. (450 to 500 Deg. F.) 45 minutes, or until done. Remove from oven, cut lengthwise in halves, and scoop out insides. Mash, season with melted butter, salt, and pepper. Add hot milk and whip until fluffy. Pile mixture into potato shells and bake in hot oven (450 Deg. F.) 5 to 8 minutes or until browned. Stuffed potatoes are a wise choice for a large dinner, because they can be prepared ahead of time and simply heated in time for dinner.

The Cranberry Mould will be a delightful change from ordinary cranberry sauce. It's new, delicious and lovely to look at.

Cranberry Mould

1 package lemon flavored jelly powder
½ cup celery, finely cut
1 cup thick cranberry sauce, sweetened
1½ cups warm water
½ cup canned crushed pineapple.

Dissolve jelly in warm water. Chill. When slightly thickened, add celery, pineapple, and the cranberry sauce. Turn into mould. Chill until firm.

The Russian dressing for the salad is made by combining:

1 tablespoon chili sauce
¼ teaspoon vinegar
1 cup mayonnaise
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon pimiento, chopped finely.

Pumpkin Pie

1½ cups coconut, premium shred
2 cups cooked mashed pumpkin
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon mace
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon allspice
3 tablespoons melted butter
3 eggs, slightly beaten
2 cups milk, scalded.

Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry, rolled to 1-8 inch thickness. Combine ingredients in order given and mix thoroughly. Pour into pie shell. Bake in hot oven (450 Deg. F.) 20 minutes, then decrease heat to moderate (350 Deg. F.) and bake 30 minutes longer.

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON II.
THE CHRISTIAN
IN GOD'S KEEPING
(Psalm 121; Book of Jude)
PRINTED TEXT—Jude 1—4, 17—25.
GOLDEN TEXT—Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.—Jude 21.

The Lesson In Its Setting

Time—Inasmuch as the author of the 121st Psalm is not known, its date cannot be determined. Jude wrote his epistle about 65 A.D.

Place—We have no way of determining where the 121st Psalm was written. Strange to say, we have no information of any kind that would tell us where the epistle of Jude was written. It may have been Jerusalem; it may have been elsewhere.

"A Song in Praise of God's Preservations," Psalm 121: This beautiful psalm is the trustful expression of a heart rejoicing in its own safety under the watchful eye of Him who is both the Maker of Heaven and earth and the Keeper of Israel. The Creator of the universe, the Keeper of the nation, is also the Keeper of the individual. Undoubtedly the characteristics of Jehovah revealed in the first two verses of this psalm are stated to set Jehovah in contrast with the dead gods of the heathen nations around them, who, on the one hand, did not make the heavens and the earth, and, on the other hand, were even acknowledged (at times) by their worshippers to fall asleep and thus to forget their subjects. A God who has created the universe has power enough to easily keep and protect individuals, no matter how threatening, or how powerful adverse circumstances or external antagonisms might be.

From physical dangers, the Psalmist rises to moral dangers, assuring those to whom he wrote that Jehovah the Creator, would actually keep his own from all evil contamination of soul.

God's Promises

This exquisite psalm is, as it were, a condensation and summary of similar promises of God in the ages that had gone before, as, e.g., the words of God to Jacob the night he fell asleep at Bethel, after leaving his father's home in sorrow. "Behold I am with thee and will keep thee whithersoever thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of". So, hundreds of years later, the Lord said to Moses— "Behold I send an angel before thee to keep thee by the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared."

"Jude, a servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James."— There are six different men in the New Testament who bear the name of Jude or Judas. The author of this epistle of one chapter was a brother of James who wrote an epistle, and, consequently, a brother of the Lord Jesus himself (Matt. 13: 55; Mark 6: 3). To them that are called. That is, to those who have heard the call of the gospel message to accept the Lord Jesus Christ, and have hearkened to it. "Beloved in God the Father."— It is God's love which sent the Lord Jesus Christ to die for us, and then sent that message to us through his word and through his ministers:— those who are called of God truly are the beloved of God. "And kept for Jesus Christ."— The word here translated "kept" occurs five times in this single chapter—here, twice in v. 6, once in v. 13, where it is translated "reserved," and a final time in v. 21. The word expresses watchful care and is suggestive of present possession. It is the same word three times used by our Lord in his wonderful intercessory prayer in John 17. Jude is so confident of God's purpose to keep us that he links it inseparably with and makes it to be a very part of our calling, and the fact of our being loved by God. We are kept day by day from those things which would harm our souls.

That which alone can come between us and God is sin. It is God alone who can deliver us from the power of either of these, and from the weakness and wicked inclinations of our own flesh.

"Mercy unto you and peace and love be multiplied."— This sentence is what might truly be called an invocation, so common in all of Paul's epistles. "Mercy" is the unmerited source. "Peace" and "love" are the blissful results, whether by love is meant the mutual love of the readers, or their love to God, or God's love to them, or all three.

Trouble in the Church

"Beloved, while I was giving all diligence to write unto you of our common salvation, I was constrained to write unto you exhorting you to contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints. For there are certain men crept in privily, even they who were of old written of beforehand unto this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying our only Master and Lord, Jesus Christ." — A terrible situation had arisen in the Christian Church at the time Jude was writing, which was probably about 35 years after the ascent of our Lord to glory, possibly A.D. 65, or 66. Certain men had stealthily come into the church, who allowed themselves to become members of the church, but who concealed both their heretical beliefs and their impure life from other Christians, and were thus hypocrites at the outset. They were false both in their beliefs and in their conduct. The two go together. These terrible conditions led Jude to urge his readers to earnestly contend for the very faith which these men were denying.

"But ye, beloved, remember ye the words which have been spoken before by the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ; That they said to you, In the last time there shall be mockers, walking after their own ungodly lusts."—St. Jude reminds his readers that the apostles had often said that mockers would come and then proceed to quote an apostolic document in which this saying was recorded in a particular shape.

"These are they who make separations."— It was characteristic of the false teachers and mockers that they drew lines of demarcation which Christ had not drawn, between themselves and others, or between different classes of believers. "Sensual, having not the Spirit."—That is, they were "men who lived only for the natural self — men who make the sensuous nature with its appetites and passions the law of their life."

Keep in God's Love

"But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith." — Probably these phrases, of which this is the first, form as perfect an illustration as can be found in all of the New Testament of the words of the apostle Paul — "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." The way to build ourselves up on our faith is by doing the things which Jude now admonishes. "Praying in the Holy Spirit." To pray in the Holy Spirit is to pray in accordance with the leading of the Holy Spirit who dwells in us. Consequently, all prayers will be characterized by holiness and by spirituality.

"Keep yourselves in the love of God."— It is not, "Keep God loving you." But we need to keep in the conscious enjoyment of it. We keep ourselves in the love of God primarily by doing those things which please him. "Looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life." —We are to continually look for our Lord to come back, at which time we know that mercy will prevail. At this time we shall come into the full apprehension of and the full realization of the eternal life, which, as a gift, was bestowed upon us when we accepted our Lord Jesus Christ as our Saviour.

"And on some have mercy, who are in doubt. And some save, snatching them out of the fire; and on some have mercy with fear; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh."—As the Lord has been merciful toward us, so should we be merciful toward others, and especially must this be observed as we deal with those who have come into the darkness of doubt, or have fallen into some great sin.

"Now unto him that is able to guard you from stumbling."— The concluding sentence of Jude's epistle is one of the richest, if not the richest doxology to be found at the end of any of the New Testament writings. "And to set you before the presence of his glory without blemish."—The glory here referred to is, of course, the glory of God, the outshining of all his divine attributes. "In exceeding joy." This probably refers to the joy which is God's and the joy of the Lord Jesus Christ in bringing to completion their great task.

"To the only God our Saviour, through Jesus Christ our Lord, be glory, majesty, dominion and power, before all time, and now and for evermore. Amen."

Roosevelt Regins War on Paralysis

Medicos Pleased — Will Organize Foundation to Determine Cause

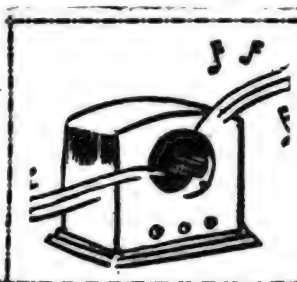
Public health service officials this week welcomed President Roosevelt's announcement of the impending organization of an infantile paralysis foundation.

From its research, they said, may come the all-important explanation of what causes the disease.

"Many, many laboratories still are fumbling for the cause," commented Dr. Robert Olesen, an assistant surgeon general. "We have made headway in treatment, but as for cause and prevention, we still have to talk in glittering generalities."

Mr. Roosevelt drew on his own experiences as a victim of the disease in describing the need for launching an adequately-financed campaign through which one national body would "lead, direct and unify the fight on every phase of this sickness."

Dependent Human Beings



"Those who today are fortunate in being in full possession of their muscular power," he said, "naturally do not understand what it means to a human being paralyzed by this disease to have that powerlessness lifted even to a small degree.

"It means the difference between a human being dependent on others, and an individual who can be wholly independent."

The disease, also called poliomyelitis, wreaks its greatest ravages on children. The children's bureau reported last year that three of every ten crippled children were the victims of infantile paralysis.

The new foundation, as envisioned by the president, would carry on investigations into the cause, prevention, treatment and "every medical possibility of enabling those so afflicted to become economically independent."

Tea was first introduced in Europe on a commercial scale during the latter part of the 17th century. It has been used as a beverage in China since about 500 A.D. Before the development of tea cultivation in India, Ceylon, Japan and the East Indies Netherlands, China enjoyed a world monopoly. Today China supplies a very small percentage of Canada's tea requirements (0.6 in 1936). The duty on China tea imported into Canada is 8 cents per pound, whereas Indian and Ceylon teas enter the Dominion under the Empire preference rate of 4 cents per pound.

Script Writing No Cinch

Some authors spend months or years writing a single novel, but Irna Phillips, author of The Guiding Light, Today's Children, and the news series The Road of Life, three N B C Serials, turns out more than 30,000 words each week. Her job is no snap —spending nine hours a day at least five days a week in her Chicago office dictating to her secretary. To get the natural touch, faithful characterization, and so on, Miss Phillips invites such people as policemen, storekeepers, etc., in for a chat when she must write a part for such characters.

Chose Hard Road to Success

Joan Edwards, pretty 19-year-old rhythm singer, is determined to make good on her own. Although she is a niece of Gus Edwards, famous for discovering and developing stars, Joan wants none of his influence. And so she suffered many disappointments and heartbreaks. Her father is a song publisher, her mother a former vaudeville singer. Both encouraged Joan's ambition to become a singing pianist. She made her professional debut in Miami, where she was presented by Rudy Vallee, and later by Fred Allen. She is now heard on the blue network on Tuesdays and Wednesdays at 10.15 p.m.

The News Is Out

About 77 more days till Christmas —but we know now that Arturo Toscanini will conduct the N B C Symphony orchestra consisting of 100 hand picked musicians on December 25 from 9:00 to 10:30 p.m. and each Saturday thereafter. The program will originate in N B C's large Radio City studio and will be heard from coast to coast over the Red web. Toscanini, in returning to America about December 15 to take over the baton of the NBC Symphony, comes back to the land where he has had many great triumphs. It was during his seven years of association with the orchestra at the Metropolitan Opera, from 1908 to 1915 that he rose from the rank of fine conductors to the pinnacle of individual supremacy among them. 1920 saw Toscanini returning to La Scala in Milan, where in his earlier years, his great genius had matured. Last year he left America, and was thought to be lost to music lovers here until last Winter he consented to return to the States to conduct ten radio concerts for N B C for which he will receive 40,000 iron men.

Jell-O Benny Rides Again

October 3 saw Buck Benny back on his Jello spot with Mary Livingstone, Kenny Baker, Don Six Delicious Flavors Wilson, Phill Harris and his Jello guzzling orchestra, gravel-voiced Andy Devine, and Sam Schlepperman Hearn, who's "Hello Stranger" has been missed during the last part of Benny's series. The day—Sunday. The time—7:30 p.m.— The network, NBC Red.

Sport fans will have a full Saturday afternoon of rugby, for these games will be followed by the Big Four Games. . . . Wondering what happened to Pauline Drake, whose charming voice pleased many radio listeners while pinch-hitting for another female commentator. . . . Lou Snider and Murray Ross have gained many, many friends across Canada on their present C B C network programs. This two piano team is one of the popular features on Canadian Radio. . . . Horace Lapp and his musicians move back into their Royal York Hotel spot, and will soon be heard dispensing smart dance tunes over the air. They have just returned from Banff, Alberta.

Gasoline From Clover

Two young men named William Mahle and Harold Ohlgren, while engaged on research work at Macaleester College, Eng., developed a secret process for manufacturing gasoline from ordinary field clover. Their gasoline would be far cheaper than that marketed at present, for overhead charges would be far less.

There is no doubt whatever that their product has a commercial value for already representatives from various governments have approached them and offered to purchase the secret. Patriotic motives have compelled them to decline, and an American corporation is now formed to exploit the new product.

Scales Opera Heights

Beverley Lane, 17-year-old Chicago high school graduate, who has signed a three-year contract with the Chicago Civic Opera Company. She will make her debut as a coloratura soprano in Rigoletto in December.

That section (4) of by-law 1223 shall be amended as follows. There shall be added after the word "First" in the second line of the said section the following words "machine to be installed by each applicant on each separate or individual premises in the said Township" and then shall be added after the word "applicant" in the third line thereof the following words "in each separate or individual premises" and that the said clause 4 be further amended by adding the words "And there shall be further fee of $2.00 paid on each transfer on said license." Applications shall be received only from owners of such machines. So that the said section 4 shall now read as follows:

4. The fee to be paid for a license under this By-Law shall be the sum of $200.00 for the first machine to be installed by each applicant on each separate or individual premises in the said Township and $12.00 for each subsequent machine installed by each applicant in each separate or individual premises, and such license shall cover a period of twelve months from the date the granting of such license. And there shall be a further fee of $2.00 paid on each transfer of said license. Applications shall be received only from owners of such machines.

And that the Seal of the Corporation shall be attached thereto. Carried.

On motion Council adjourned.

Plow Assists Radio Engineers

Even in these days of advanced science the radio engineer turns to the humble plow — perhaps man's first mechanical achievement — to assist him in the construction of an ultra-modern high powered broadcasting station. Here we see the plow, specially designed by J. B. Radford, in charge of installation of the two 50 kilowatt stations, at Hornby, Ontario, and Vercheres, Quebec, which are being built for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation by the Northern Electric Company Limited, in Montreal. The plow is used for the burying of 15 miles of copper wire in the form of a huge wheel at the base of the 650 ft. radiating tower, at the top of which, as shown in our sketch, is an aerial beacon. This mass of wire forms a perfect ground system and is as wide as the tower is high. These two stations, the most powerful in Canada, will be on the air early this Fall.

DID YOU CAUSE THIS?

As a motorist and a citizen of Ontario, answer this question: How would you like to face the rest of your life knowing that you were responsible—through carelessness—for an accident like this? Would you ever want to drive a car again?

If you do drive, get this clearly in your mind! Should you break an Ontario traffic law and cause death or injury, you may not be allowed to drive a car again! We are determined to end the needless slaughter of our people. Cutting in, passing on hills and curves, crowding, racing and other breaches of the traffic laws, will get you into trouble—make no mistake about that!

Reckless driving must stop—now!

WE WANT YOUR HELP!

When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place, and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders!

District News

John H. Douglas passed away in Esquesing Township on Oct. 7th, in his 68th year. He had been living at Brandon, Manitoba. The funeral took place to Hornby Presbyterian cemetery.

James G. Blackwood, aged 36, was run over by an auto Saturday night, west of Port Credit, and killed. He lived at New Toronto with his wife and three young children. He was a member of the Masonic Order, and a Past Noble Grand of the I.O.O.F.

Mrs. W. S. Hall, Trafalgar Township, near Oakville, passed away on Oct. 7th. Her maiden name was Ina Dell Powley.

Peel County had its first snowfall on Oct. 9th and people shivered standing out at the country fairs.

Mrs. Phoebe Carter, mother of Mrs. R. E. Pallett, Islington, died on Oct. 7th. She leaves two daughters and three sons.

Blinded by glaring lights on the Malton Road, Howard Martin of Malton lost control of his car and crashed into a culvert. His 2-year-old son, Howard, Jr., was badly cut about the head and face.

Norma Jennings, aged 21, collapsed and died at a birthday party in Brampton last week. She leaves her parents, four brothers and four sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. Hawke of Oakville have moved to Dixie.

Anniversary services will be held at Munn's Church, Trafalgar, on Sunday, Oct. 17, morning and evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lawrence have arrived at their home at Sheridan, after a honeymoon trip to the Pacific Coast.

TRIP AROUND THE WORLD

The Taylor Stattens will soon be off to India to open a camp there for boys and girls, the first camp of its kind in India . . . will be mostly under canvas at Madras and will be known by Mrs. Statten's Indian name, "Tomakela," which is an interesting point, too—a North American Indian name for a camp in Asiatic India. Mrs. Taylor Statten left Wednesday to visit her daughter, Mrs. Harry Ebbs, in Birmingham, Eng., and will be joined there in December by Mr. Statten, and together they sail for India from Marseilles on Christmas Day . . . After three weeks in India, organizing the camp headed by A. W. Forgie, through money raised in Taylor Statten's northern camps here, the Toronto couple will continue their journey around the world, arriving home early in March. Mrs. Statten has been much feted before leaving, parties being arranged by Mrs. Robert Page, Mrs. Howard Hood, Mrs. Charles Matthews and Mrs. George Aykroyd.

How a Hit and Run Driver Feels

Well, you got away with it. So far, anyway. Of course you're still a bit nervous. You are startled by doorbells; your palms sweat when you pick up the morning paper; your mouth gets dry when a stranger seems to stare at you. For there is just a possibility that some chance passer-by saw you. But your pulse is beginning to behave again. Each passing day brings added safety.

If it will make you feel any better, you may never be caught. But, my craven fellow, you'll never escape yourself! You'll never escape the shame of having killed a child and run away. You'll never escape the aching, burning memory that, faced with the test, you preferred cowardice to courage.

You will live the rest of your days bluffing yourself into believing that you didn't have time to think (although life's crises are not scheduled for men's convenience); that anybody else would have done the same thing (although you don't dare tell anybody else); and that it wasn't murder, but just an accident (as though people hid themselves after an accident). The days will be trying, but not so bad compared with the nights, when you lie awake with your conscience and when, having fallen asleep at last, dreams steal into your tired brain to re-enact that scene of secret shame. Yes, the nights will be hard.

A thousand times you will wish to release that pent-up shame to scream: "I killed a child and ran away!" It would make you feel better, but you won't do it.

Listen, Mr. Hit-and-run Driver: YOU DIDN'T GET AWAY WITH A THING! AND YOU KNOW IT!

"There are difficulties in your path. Be thankful for them. They will test your capabilities of resistance."—W. M. Punshon.

Visits to homes where children placed 387

Office Interviews 29

It is now over a year since the Society closed the Shelter and adopted the Boarding Home System. This type of care for the children is proving quite satisfactory. They have readily adapted themselves to their new homes and without doubt have a new outlook on life. The interest and co-operation of the foster mothers is very encouraging and with their assistance we feel the children are on the way to becoming useful citizens.

Separation of parents is still one of the large factors in respect to neglected children. Even with increased employment the child is too often the last consideration of the parents.

The unmarried mother and her child is also one of the big problems of the Society and practically no change is noted in this regard from year to year.

G. F. THOMPSON,
Superintendent.

LET US SMILE

The applicant for a job as housemaid was being interviewed by the employment agent, and was asked if she had any preference as to the kind of family she would like to work for.

"Any kind," she said, "except highbrows."

"You don't like to work for highbrows?"

"You bet I don't," she said. "I worked for a pair of 'em once—and never again. Him and her was fighting all the time, and it kept me running back and forth from the keyhole to the dictionary 'til I was worn to a frazzle."

Celebrates 83rd Birthday

R. H. Edwards Still Driving His Majesty's Mail

Seventy winters of cold, rain, snow and sleet have failed to discourage Robert Edwards, Streetsville octogenarian, in his daily task of "taking through the King's Mail."

One of the few surviving veterans of the stagecoach days, back in the '70's, he marked his eighty-third birthday here on Saturday, Oct. 9.

Despite his age, he stubbornly refuses to consider retirement. Life, and his job, hold too much for him. Last winter, when the country roads were drifted and the cold wind bit home like a bayonet, he and Nellie covered as much of the road as they could, and liked it. "Better a bit cold than too hot," he shrugged. "Anyway, the mail has to go through."

His route covers over seventeen miles from the Postoffice at Streetsville, and back again, with another mile and a half to and from his home overlooking the rolling country on the east bank of the Credit River. Once home from his route, his work is never over. He built his own home in the afternoons and evenings after work, and he still plows his own garden. Hard work has never hurt anyone, he believes.

Robert Edwards was born at Langstaff, where his father was employed by Dr. Langstaff, after whom the village was named. As a youth, he entered the service as a mail courier. A few years later, he was driving the Royal Mail stage from Schomberg to Aurora, through Pottageville, Lloydtown and Kettleby. Wild country at that time, it was while on this run that he had the biggest adventure of his life; a brief whirl of events which left its mark on his face, as well as on his memory.

"At the time, I was working under a Mr. Hulse, at Schomberg," Mr. Edwards recalls. "He had about $3,500 to send to Toronto, and he arranged for me to take it by stage to Aurora, and there have it expressed to the city. The only means we could take of safe-guarding the money, was to place it in a cigar box."

"In those days, the country about my run was really wild. There were men roaming the country who would slit your throat for a penny. Considering this, and the shipment, considered a large sum in those days, which I was carrying, it isn't hard to understand why I was a bit worried for fear word of what I was carrying had been noised around. That day, I had taken out an unbroken colt called "Black Hawk." As one of the team I decided on the spur of the moment to take the colt, because of its tremendous speed. Hulse was furious when he heard that I had taken the colt, but I was away before he could stop me.

Raining Hard

"It was raining so hard that day that you could hardly see your hand in front of your face. I was getting near Kettleby, sitting on the cigar box with the money in it, when something hit me a terrific blow on the side of the head. The force of the blow knocked me clean across the driver's seat, and I hit a standard with the back of my head. I was knocked clean out. I came to as the team was tearing down the long hill into Kettleby.

"I had a bugle to blow when we came to any post along the stage route, and, believe me, I sure blew it that day. People went back and hunted for the fellow who hit me, and two detectives from Toronto came up later, but they never found the man. But, whoever did club me didn't get the money. I guess he thought that the team would stop when I was unconscious, but the unbroken "Black Hawk" must have dragged them on, and the money went through all right."

Mr. and Mrs. Edwards, who was the former Miss Rebecca Lyons of Flesherton, were married forty-four years ago. They have two sons, Walter and William, near them in Streetsville, and a third, John, in Toronto. They have four daughters: Mrs. Alice Card, Toronto; Mrs. Lewis Rice, Detroit; and Mrs. F. E. McFadden and Mrs. Ella Powers of Chicago.

DIFFICULTIES

"It cannot be too often repeated that it is not helps, but obstacles, not facilities, but difficuties that make men."—W. Mathews.

"We must have trials and self-denials, as well as joys and victories, until all error is destroyed."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"There is no merit where there is no trial."—A. Hill.

"The greater the obstacle, the more glory we have in overcoming it; the difficulties with which we are met are the maids of honor which set off virtue."—Moliere.

"Difficulties show men what they are. In case of any difficulty God has pitted you against a rough antagonist that you may be a conqueror and this cannot be without toil."—Epictetus.

Induction at Trinity Church

Bishop of Toronto Officiates —Rev. E.S. Ottley Becomes Rector of the Parish

On Thursday evening, Oct. 7th, the Rev. E. S. Ottley, B.A., L.Th., was inducted as Rector of Trinity Church, Streetsville. The Church was filled with people, who came from far and near, to witness the ceremony. Printed service forms had been supplied and the congregation joined heartily in the service.

The Right Reverend A. R. Beverley, D.D., Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese of Toronto, was in charge. The sermon was preached by Right Reverend R. J. Renison, M.A., D.D., Rector of St. Paul's Church, Bloor Street, Toronto. Rectors of the Local Diocese assisted including Canon Allen, Brampton; Rev. F. G. Banks, Erindale; Rev. R. J. W. Perry, Islington; and Rev. F. Vipond, Streetsville. Several young clergymen, friends of Rev. Mr. Ottley, were also present.

In his sermon, which was based on the 23rd Psalm, the Right Rev. Renison spoke very highly of the new Incumbent of the Parish of Streetsville, who had served at St. Paul's, Toronto; Church of the Advent, Hamilton, and in other churches. He said the Streetsville congregation should be congratulated upon having him as Rector, and that they should get behind him and help him in every way they could.

At the close of the service, the people present were invited to the Parish Hall, where a social hour was spent, and everybody got acquainted with the new Rector and his wife.

Short speches were made by Churchwarden James C. Rutledge, Bishop Beverley and Rev. E. S. Ottley. Refreshments were served and a very pleasant evening was brought to a close.

The Review wishes to congratulate Rev. Mr. Ottley upon his induction and hopes that he and his good wife will have a long and successful life in Streetsville in the service which they have been called upon to render.

Snider's

Rev. W. R. Archer, B.A., Lowville, was the special minister at Wesley Church on Thanksgiving Sunday at the anniversary service with the minister, Rev. H. S. Lovering assisting in the evening. Mr. Frank Trimble, Toronto, a former Wesley church boy, and Mrs. Clarence Ford, Omagh, rendered vocal solos, which added to the beauty of the service. Mrs. E. F. Wilson was their accompanist. A gratifying thankoffering was received. Autumn leaves and bright autumn flowers were used in decorating the church. A feature of the evening service was the duet sung by Mr. Archer and Mr. F. A. Forster, (In the Sweet Bye and Bye) with Mrs. A. A. Biggar accompanist. Mr. Forster, who celebrated his 80th birthday last April, was organist of the church 35 years ago, when Mr. Archer was junior minister on the Trafalgar circuit and Mrs. Biggar was organist at Munn's Church, another appointment on the same circuit. Mr. Archer also made mention of the presence at the services of Mrs. Sarah Gillelan, who celebrated her 90th birthday last May, and with whom he boarded when on the circuit.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ardenne and son Jack, of Tweed, were guests on Sunday of the Misses Marshall. Mrs. Ardenne was formerly Rhea Forster of Snider's. They paid a visit in the afternoon to the old home (the Newton L. Forster farm) and in the evening attended Wesley church and renewed acquaintances with former friends.

Mrs. Gillelan is visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Dunn.

Miss Grace Fish, Thistletown Hospital, visited at her home on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Broadbear, Brampton, and Miss Bernice Bentley of Islington, were visitors with Mrs. G. Bentley on Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Lovering supplied the pulpits of Lowville and Zimmerman churches on Sunday morning and afternoon respectively.

Miss Doreen Chamberlain and Miss Alma Sparling, Streetsville, were visitors on Sunday with the Misses Roberta and Louise Dunn.

SAL

HOSTAGE HEIRESS

By DAVID DRESSER

Janet Duane, millionaire's daughter, gives a party one night aboard her father's palatial yacht, anchored off Miami. Gregory Gason tricks her into being lef behind wih him when the guests are taken ashore. The only other persons aboard are a crippled wtachman and Janet's Negro maid. Meanwhile, "Dusty" Lanion, lawless adventurer, has laid plans to seize the yacht to carry arms and ammunition to Cuban revolutionists. Believing the boat to be deserted, except for the watchman, who has been bribed, Dusty and his mean are about to board her.

CHAPTER VI

A few lights burned cautiously on the deck of the Fleetwing. Snifter was awkwardly superintending the placing of the highly inflammable cargo in the after hold.

"I'll have to get down into the hold to see that we're not all blown up by careless placing of some of those cases," Dusty told Sakara.

"And I," she told him soberly, "will see this Janet Duane for myself."

She smiled mockingly at him in the half-darkness. Dusty turned away from her. He wanted to cry out that she must not see Janet. But he knew that wouldn't settle anything. Besides, he reminded himself, Sakara certainly had no reason to be jealous of Janet. Why, the idea was absurd! As though he could mean anything to Janet Duane, the heiress!

But he shook his head moodily as he went into the hold. There was stuff aboard the Fleetwing a thousand times more explosive than this cargo he was so concerned about.

Useless to Fight It

Janet had caught her breath sharply as she had watched Dusty and the strange woman together on the shore. When Sakara had pulled his arm about her, it had seemed to the watching girl on the yacht that he embraced her tenderly. She had bitten her lip sharply, and had been angered to find her eyes misted with tears. What was the matter with her?

She had turned away. Why should she mind, she had demanded of herself? What was Dusty Lanion to her? A thieving adventurer! She had walked up and down the deck, clenching her hands.

Then, suddenly, she had faced the truth. Something had happened to her that morning when she had first stared uncomprehendingly at Dusty. Flashingly, in that instant, she had perceived something of the unconquerable instinct which drove him on to face any hazard with a blithe disregard of consequence . . . and in that instant, she had known she could love this lawless marauder.

Through the long hours of the day, she had fought unavailingly against the realization that she, Janet Duane, could so far forget herself as to be attracted by this tall stranger. And she had known it was useless to fight against this attraction. The men she had known now seemed no better than stuffed dummies as she contrasted them with this quiet stranger whose every movement was eloquent of his fierce vitality.

Glancing again toward the shore, she had seen Dusty pick the strange woman up in his arms to carry her to the yacht. Then it was that she had fled to her cabin.

She was sitting quietly in a chair, brooding, when a knock sounded on the door. She rose listlessly and opened it — then stepped back with a startled exclamation. It was the strange woman!

Sakara seemed entirely composed. "Hello," she said briefly. "I'm Sakara Pitzinoff. And I suppose you are my hostess . . . Miss Duane?" Her bold eyes studied Janet as she stepped into the cabin.

Janet made no attempt to conceal her resentment of the intrusion.

"I shan't say I'm delighted." Her voice was cool, though she trembled inwardly.

"Neither shall I," Sakara replied, with matching coolness. "I've come here only to say what needs to be said between us." She studied Janet briefly. "You have one admirer aboard, I understand. Make no mistake in thinking you may have two, Dusty Lanion is mine. Mine! Do you hear?"

Janet moved to the door proudly. "I've heard entirely too much." Her tone was edged with contempt. She opened the door and stepped back. "Get out!"

They faced each other for a moment. It was Sakara Pitzinoff who dropped her gaze first. Then she laughed sneeringly, and left the cabin.

An Offer Rejected

Dusty was just coming from the hold, after supervising the stowing of the cargo, when Gregory accosted him. Gregory was no longer the suave gentleman of the preceding night. His evening clothes were rumpled, he was unshaven, his eyes were bloodshot, and his face was drawn and haggard.

Dusty regarded him contemptuously. From Fandella, he had learned before to estimate Gregory's character correctly.

"Well?" he demanded.

"See here," Gregory wet his lips nervously and did not meet Dusty's direct gaze. "I've been thinking that you and I might get together. Seems to me we have a lot in common, and it's always better to work together than to play lone hands."

"Go on." Dusty's voice was dangerously low.

"After all, we're both after the same thing—money. Am I right?" He peered at Dusty.

"Go on," Dusty said again.

"I'm offering to cut you in on the biggest thing you ever fell into. This little stunt of yours is just chicken feed. Why not get wise and make some real dough?"

"Go on," Dusty said a third time. He had already picked out the exact spot on Gregory's chin where a fist would do the most good.

"It's a cinch," Gregory told him earnestly. "I don't know what you're planning after you dump your load into Cuba, but I want to remind you that we've got a fortune aboard . . . if we keep our heads and play the game right."

Dusty's fists clenched. He waited.

"Duane's kid," Gregory explained. "The old man's daffy about her. He'll pay a million for her safe return. We go in together, fifty-fifty. I handle the collection while you keep the girl hidden. And that's giving you a break," he smirked. "She's a hot little . . ."

Dusty hit him. His fist caught Gregory's chin at precisely the calculated spot. Gregory slumped to the deck.

Dusty rubbed his fist and walked away. He did not look back, so did not see a woman's form glide up to the prostrate man. He might have been more cautious had he realized that Sakara had heard and witnessed the entire incident, and that it was she who hurried to Gregory's assistance.

Life's Fine Weather

O shame, if we can only see
A day whose hues are dun!
There surely are more days by far
On which we see the sun.

And though a cloud may us enshroud,
The sun is there the while;
It yet shall rise and flood the skies,
And all our fears beguile.

The talk with friends when the day's toil ends,
The dinner bell that calls,
The fireside nook, with song and book,
And sweet rest when night falls,—

These cheer us up, fill Nature's cup.
At life's feast why be sad?
For the day's new birth, for the kind earth,
Let every heart be glad!

—Alexander Louis Fraser.

Grape Desserts in Season

Autumn is certainly in the air these days and that means that winter cannot be far behind. But before the last signs of summer have gone, capture the luscious grapes from the horn of plenty which Nature has spilled over the land.

Every housewife is busy these days preserving this good fruit to help her in planning delicious meals during the winter and that takes a lot of time from ordinary household routine. But when your jars of grape preserves are in the cupboard and your thoughts frantically turn to dinner, let grapes again come to your aid.

Dinner will take on a gala air and young eyes will light up at the sight of either of these grand desserts which are made with some of the grapes you didn't have time to preserve today.

GRAPE FLUFF

Ripe Grapes
1 cup warm water
½ cup coconut
1 package lemon-flavored jelly powder
½ cupful whipping cream

Wash and stem about 1 pound of ripe grapes, mash and add 2 tablespoons of water. Simmer until soft, then drain through two or three thicknesses of cheesecloth. Measure 1 cupful of the juice. Dissolve the jelly powder in the boiling water and add the grape juice. Chill until it begins to thicken, then whip with a rotary egg beater until light. Fold in the whipped cream and add the coconut. Turn into a cold, wet mold and chill firm. Serve unmolded with plain whipped cream.

GRAPE WHIP WITH IMPERIAL SAUCE

1 package strawberry jelly powder
1½ cups warm grape juice
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup warm water
½ cup cold grape juice.

Dissolve jelly in warm water and warm grape juice. Add sugar and salt. Reserve ½ cup of mixture for sauce. Chill remaining 1½ cups of mixture until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold. Prepare sauce by adding ½ cup cold grape juice to reserved ½ cup jelly and grape juice mixture, and chill until slightly jellied. Pour jellied sauce over each mold. Serves six.

EXTRA TASTY SUPPER DISH

Baked Stuffed Eggs

6 hard cooked eggs
¼ cupful of chopped mushrooms, raw or canned
¼ teaspoon salt
Pepper
2 tablespoons evaporated milk
1½ tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cupful liquor (liquid from mushrooms plus water)
1 cupful evaporated milk
1 Oxo cube
½ teaspoon salt
Pepper

Cut the hard cooked eggs in halves, lengthwise, remove the yolks and mash. Cover the chopped mushrooms with 1 cupful of water and stew slowly for 5 minutes. Drain, reserving the liquid for the sauce. Add the mushrooms to the mashed egg yolks, season with the ¼ teaspoonful of salt and pepper, and moisten with the 2 tablespoonfuls of evaporated milk. Refill the whites with this mixture and arrange in a buttered baking dish. Melt the butter, add the flour and stir until it is thoroughly blended and smooth. Gradually add the mushroom liquid, stirring until smooth and thickened. Add the evaporated milk and the Oxo cube and stir until the cube is dissolved. Season with the salt and pepper and pour over the eggs in baking dish. Cover the top with buttered bread crumbs, and bake in a moderate oven (350 Deg. F.) until crumbs are browned and the mixture heated through. Serves six.

Germany's new airship, which should be ready for service this fall, will contain 25 cabins, each fitted with two berths and running hot and cold water.

LESSON III
CHRISTIAN SPEECH AND CONDUCT—James, Chapter 3

Golden Text.—Let no corrupt speech proceed out of your mouth. Ephesians 4:29.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING.

Time.—The date of the epistle of James is greatly disputed. The author died in 63 A.D. Some place the epistle the year before this, while others date it as early as 50 A.D. The exact date cannot be determined.

Place.—Probably James wrote the epistle in the city of Jerusalem.

The author of this epistle was the brother of the Lord Jesus, and is referred to directly only twice in the Gospels (Matt. 12:46; 13:55; Mark 6:3. Cf. John 2:12; 7:3,5). He was, of course, a Jew, brought up in the strict teachings of the Jewish synagogue, devoted to the law of Moses, zealous in living a righeous and godly life. His was probably the first epistle written in the early church.

It is against this general desire to be prominent as instructors that St. James is here warning his readers. In teaching others, they were in danger of forgetting to teach themselves; to possess faith and to do nothing but talk.

If any stumbleth not in word, the same is a perfect man, able to bridle the whole body also. 3. Now if we put the horses' bridles into their mouths, that they may obey us, we turn about their whole body also. James here begins the subject which occupies almost the entire chapter, namely, that of the control of the tongue. What James here means is that, if a man has his tongue under control, i.e., his speech, he will be thereby keeping under control all the organs of his body which will lead him into sin if not mastered.

A Tongue Controlled

4. Behold, the ships also, though they are so great and are driven by rough winds, are yet turned about by a very small rudder, whither the impulse of the steersman willeth. 5. So the tongue also is a little member, and boasteth great things. As a horse uncontrolled is worthless as far as man is concerned, so a ship when driven by rough winds is certain to founder on the rocks or the beach and be smashed to pieces.

"Speech can guide into right ways, escape dangers, battle successfully with storms, and conduct into restful harbors, but it can also wreck and shatter lives and drown in bottomless floods. Behold, how much wood is kindled by how small a fire! 6. And the tongue is a fire. The tongue can inflame another with the passion of anger, or the poison of suspicion. The world of iniquity among our members is the tongue, which defileth the whole body. "You sully your lips and degrade your whole nature when you suffer yourself to speak the tainted and tainting word. Passions kindled by unscrupulous language spread through various channels and courses until the whole cycle of human life is in flames. And is set on fire by hell. "The fire of man's wrath is kindled from beneath as the fire that cleanseth is kindled from above.

7. For every kind of beasts and birds, of creeping things and things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed by mankind. 8. But the tongue can no man tame; it is a restless evil, it is full of deadly poison. Augustine well remarks: "James does not say that no one can tame the tongue, but no one of men; so that, when it is tamed, we confess that this is brought about by the pity, the help, the grace of God."

The apostle now calls the attention of his readers to the great but mysterious truth with which we are all acquainted—that with the tongue great good and great evil both may be effected.

9. Therewith bless we the Lord and Father; and therewith curse we men, who are made after the likeness of God. 10. Out of the same mouth cometh forth blessing and cursing.

"How great are the possibilities of a tongue which is under divine control, cleansed and anointed! What sorrows it can comfort, what wounds it can heal, what strife it can still! It is also God's mightiest instrument for the pulling down of the strongholds of sin, and the upbuilding of his kingdom.

My brethren, these things ought not so to be. It was abnormal that a man should bless God in his prayers or creed and yet so despise or speak evil of members of his own family, inasmuch as he and his fellow-men were the offspring of a common Father.

11. Doth the fountain send forth from the same opening sweet water and bitter? 12. Can a fig tree, my brethren, yield olives, or a vine figs? Neither can salt water yield sweet. For similar figures of speech used by our Lord, see Matt. 7:16-18; 12: 33-36.

Two Kinds of Wisdom

Who is wise and understanding among you? In a most natural way, James proceeds from his specific discussion of speech to the larger question of wisdom. The understanding of things human and divine and their causes. It is the word used to describe the wisdom of Christ himself (Matt. 13:54). James refers to the need for wisdom at the very beginning of his epistle (1:5, 6), and now returns to the subject once again. Let him show by his good life his works in meekness of wisdom. Meekness in the New Testament "included submissiveness to God as well as gentleness towards man.

14. But if ye have bitter jealousy and faction in your heart, glory not and lie not against the truth. The word here translated faction might be more accurately translated "rivalry," expressing the strife existing among different individuals or groups of individuals. There is nothing more tragic in the world than to see Christian teachers, and officers in the Christian church striving among themselves for superior places of honor, and angry if someone else gets more praise than they get. To glory with their tongues of superior wisdom, while they cherished jealousy and faction in their hearts, was a manifest lie, a contradiction of what they must know to be the truth.

James now turns from his discussion of wisdom in general to a characterization and development of the two kinds of wisdom which men may have, one bearing evil fruit, and the other bearing fruits of righteousness.

15. This wisdom. That is, any such wisdom that allows jealousy and faction in one's heart. Is not a wisdom that cometh down from above, but is earthly. That is, it does not have a divine origin, but derives from the natural plane on which unregenerated men live. "It belongs to the lower impulses, not the higher, in man's nature. Devilish. The original word here really refers not so much to the devil himself, as to demons, and as partaking of the nature of demons or unclean spirits who are represented as possessing the souls of men, and reducing them to the level of madness.

16. For where jealousy and faction are, there is confusion and every vile deed. In I Cor. 14:33, God is said to be the author, not of confusion, but of peace. The word here translated vile means good for nothing.

17. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure. (See Prov. 2: 3-6). "The purity of the heavenly wisdom does not consist merely in victory over temptations of the flesh, but in freedom from worldly and low motives. "I cannot win men from impurity to purity if I am not pure." Then peaceable, gentle. "It is because the man who is inspired with pure wisdom has no ulterior, selfish ends to serve that he is gentle, sympathetic, and considerate towards those who oppose him. Easy to be entreated. The best interpretation of this phrase would be "winning its way by gentleness." Full of mercy and good fruits. Without variance, without hypocrisy. The first two words here probably mean "unwavering," "steadfast," "single-minded," while, as we all know, hypocrisy means "insincerity," "pretending to be something which one is not."

A Ten Year Goal Reached

Foremost among the coveted honours won by Bell Telephone first aiders was the Dominion-wide Championships for women and men—a goal which Bell first aid teams have been striving to attain for ten years.

In the picture two Bell Telephone first aid graduates are giving an exhibition of how head, arm, and leg injuries should be cared for. In the background are the trophies won by the different Bell Telephone teams. Left to right: the Ontario Provincial Shield and the Montizambert Cup emplematic of the Canadian Championship won by Team No. 1, Toronto. The Sir George Burn Trophy, All Canada Ladies' First Aid Championship, won by the Accounting Ladies' Team, Toronto. The Wallace Nesbitt General Trophy and the Quebec Provincial Shield won by Team No. 1, Montreal.

Approximately ninety-five out of every hundred Bell Telephone male plant workers are now qualified to render First Aid.

Duchess Abandons Wallis Blue Color

"Wallis blue" went by the board this week. New clothes chosen at Paris by the Duchess of Windsor were black, brown and red. Only one costume struck the familiar blue note. It was a traveling ensemble in navy blue wool.

There was a strong note of plaid in apparel the duchess selected for day wear at Mainbocher's, where a private room was set aside for her fittings.

Her new dinner frocks for winter parties were of lace and georgette. The fabrics chosen for formal evening gowns included broadcloth, tutler, flashing metal fabrics and somber velvets.

Continues Work On Artificial Heart

Dr. Alexis Carrel, research scientist, disclosed this week that he and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh were continuing experimentation looking toward perfection of the artificial heart" which they devised for study of human organs outside the body.

Dr. Carrel, returning to New York from abroad on the Normandie, refused to say that they were making progress, but indicated that they still were working along the same lines. He rejected as "nonsensical" reports that Lindbergh planned to become a British citizen.

Log Cabin Show Features Jack Haley

Last Saturday, October 9, Jack Haley started the Log Cabin Syrup series over the NBC Red Network. Haley, if you remember, was the timid crooner in the 20th-Century-Fox picture "Wake Up And Live." Supported by Ted Flo Rito's orchestra, Warren Hull, author, and Virginia Verrill, youthful blues singer, this series promises to be on the favorites for this season.

You listeners who have heard so much about Voodoo, here is your chance to listen to an authentic description of a voodoo service with its accompanying chants and drum calls on Wednesday, October 13, at 3.00 p.m., over the Blue web. The broadcast is designed to show the typical life of Haiti today, and will feature Irma Goebel Labastille whose husband was born in Haiti and Blair Niles, noted woman explorer. The program is titled "Women Expore the World."

Another milestone in its long record of service to the farmers and homemakers of the nation has been passed on Saturday, October 2, when the National Farm and Home Hour began its 10th year over NBC. On that day, the popular noon-hour program was aired over the network for the 2,771st time since the inaugural broadcast in 1928. During the course of this time, the network has been increased from 17 stations to a total of 70.

New Canadian Voices

And now for a wee bit of Canadian news. A couple of days ago, CFRB ran an audition over the air just before midnight. We think the program was probably the choicest bit of airing we have heard for a long time emanating from a local station. The program introduced a new voice to the air—that of Ran Daly—and girls, is he handsome! Vince "Flying Fingers" Boyd played the organ, while Ral Purdy gave bits of philosophy and quoted poetry. The program was quite appropriate to the hours—you know, the soft, lulling kind. Some smart sponsor should look into this.

Stan Francis just dropped down on the desk. Stan is the m. c. on the Sunday Night Community Sing Jamboree broadcast over CKCL, at 9:00 p.m. We haven't seen Stan since sometime in the summer when he shaved off his mustache. Incidentally Stan presents a smart review three nights weekly at the Lansdowne Theatre.

We have to hand it to Reg Dagg of CKWX, Vancouver, who made Canadian radio history by broadcasting interviews with Sino Japanese war refugees from Shanghai upon arrival here aboard the Canadian Pacific's Empress of Asia. Dagg went over to Victoria the night previous, and boarding the liner on its arrival there in the early hours of the morning, he arranged the interviews on the five hour crossing to Vancouver, and when the first hawser came ashore the dock, Dagg heaved his mike lines ashore. The interviews were on the air before the gang-plank was in place.

Interested In Canadian Stations

American sponsors are getting interested in Canadian radio stations is so far as to bring their American network programs into Canada. This is indicative of the upswing in Canadian radio business. What we can't figure out is if these stations are valuable, why not run a Canadian series, emanating from some point in Canada. Then we may get some real programs in Canada.

The announcers out west are having plenty of fun. With the sudden demand for football game broadcasts, a sponsor has undertaken to broadcast the Western Canada group. This consists of teams in Calgary, Winnipeg and Regina. The announcers travel from 350 to 780 miles to do a single broadcast. Nice work, if you get it.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SERMON TO VACATIONERS

The photographer, fairly close, took care to focus on the child, not on the distant scene. Exposure 1/100 second at f.8 on a fair day.

THIS year when you go on your vacation, resolve to come back with better snapshots than you did a year ago.

Determine to take more care with your lens stops, your shutter speeds and your focusing. Decide that before you take a picture you will give thought to the light conditions; whether the day is hazy, dull or very dull; whether a midday sun is shining from a clear sky or the less intense early morning or late afternoon sun; whether the light is increased by reflections from expanses of water or sand; whether your subject is in average shade or deep shade; whether under any of these conditions you are photographing nearby objects or a distant scene. Say you will consider these things each time and carefully adjust your camera to fit them.

Make up your mind that you will think also about the composition of each picture, that it shall have merit because of its pictorial qualities and that in each scene showing human or other beings there shall be story-telling interest.

Declare that you will bring back from this year's vacation no more out-of-focus pictures nor underexposed or overexposed ones, nor pictures blurred by camera movement; no more of those lifeless pictures of persons just posing, nor "scenics" as void of noticeable feature as an army blanket, nor any more conglomerations of meaningless composition shot at random for no good pictorial reason. Such pictures are, as you know, products of no ambition to make the best out of the possibilities of a person's camera, the film he uses and of himself as a photographer.

In terms of entertaining, eye-delighting, emotion-stirring and photographically excellent pictures, these possibilities are unlimited, and on vacations, whether you head for the ocean, mountain, lake, river, even the prairie or the desert, the opportunities for real pictures are unlimited. Do make up your mind this time to think before you shoot.

Special supplication: If you have never used a color filter, treat yourself to two or three of different types, or at least one average filter such as the K-2, and experiment with them before you start. Filters bring in clouds distinctly, cut through haze, combat too bright reflections from water or sea sand. Like deftly placed cosmetics on milady's face, deftly used filters enhance beauty. Learn to use them. You will be surprised and delighted with the results.

Streetsville Fall Fair

Was a Success in cool weather

The annual Fall Fair of the Toronto Twp. Agricultural Society was held in Streetsville on Friday and Saturday, and was quite a success. There were more entries, especially in children's work, and the gate receipts were better than last year. The show of horses was splendid, and as one man said, there was nothing better outside of the C.N.E. The weather was fairly good all day and there was a good crowd at the dance at night.

Among those from a distance we noticed; J. H. McClintock, Joseph Fulton, John McAlister, Mrs. J. Lindsay, J. C. Hetherington, Toronto; Miss M. Perry, Miss A. England, Islington; Reeve Robert Worthy, Mr. Cheyne, Mr. and Mrs. David McClure, Brampton.

There was a good display of fruit, flowers, vegetables, dairy and domestic science, ladies' work, school work, etc., in the hall. It was a good idea to have a two-day Fair, as the exhibits in the hall were judged the first day, which meant that the hall was open all afternoon of the second day for spectators to see the display.

Music was furnished by Anson Forster's Amplivox machine.

Aeroplanes made by Streetsville boys, Chester Rundle and Johnny McClintock, were on exhibition. The former had the larger one, and was awarded first prize. Both exhibits were a credit to the builders.

"Campbellite" Refers to the Disciples of Christ

The term "Campbellite" refers to a member of the denomination called Disciples of Christ, so-called from Alexander Campbell (1788-1866), of Virginia, the founder of the sect, which, however, repudiates the name "Campbellites."

Alexander Campbell, a native of Antrim, Ireland, was educated at Glasgow university. He emigrated to the United States in 1809, and in 1811 received a license to preach from the Christian association, a religious organization founded by his father, Thomas Campbell, at Washington, Pa. In 1812, according to a writer in the Indianapolis News, he formed a connection with the Baptists and labored as an itinerant preacher principally in Pennsylvania, Virginia and Ohio. In 1826 he published a translation of the New Testament in which the words "baptism" and "baptist" gave place to "immersion" and "immerser." By his discussions and by the "Christian and Baptist" and the "Millennial Harbinger," Campbell gradually formed a large party, which about 1826 organized the Protestant sect known as Christians or Disciples of Christ. In 1841 he founded Bethany college in West Virginia, and was its president for 25 years. Others of his works are the Christian Messenger and Reformer, the Christian System, and Christian Baptism.

The term "Campbellite" refers to a follower of John McLeod Campbell (1800-72), a Scottish theologian, ejected from the church of Scotland because of his views of the atonement.

Lucky and Unlucky Days Recorded by Astrologers

The ancient astrologers kept a record of events which occurred on certain days. They definitely stated that certain days were lucky and others were unlucky. This list of lucky and unlucky days existed long before the calendar. It was used by the Babylonians in 200 B. C., according to a writer in Pearson's London Weekly.

The Egyptians also had a list of lucky and unlucky days. These lists were handed down until they reached the astrologers of the Middle ages, who changed them to fit our calendar.

Monday represented peace, Wednesday success, Thursday courage, and Sunday rest and happiness. These were lucky. Tuesday, the day of Mars, Friday, the day of Venus, and Saturday, the day of Saturn, were unlucky.

The Arabs disagreed, insisting that Friday was lucky, as it was the day of marriage.

The modern astrologers disregard the calculations of their ancient forerunners and also the decisions of the astrologers of the Middle ages. Modern astrologers claim that the signs under which one is born decide one's lucky day.

Formosa Famous for Fence

Ceded to Japan by China in 1895, Formosa is famous for one of the most unusual fences in the world, Called the Aiyu-Sen, or guard line, it extends for more than 360 miles, of which 230 are electrified. Its purpose is to keep back the Chin-hwan, or "wild savages," who live in the interior and raid the civilized communities which cling precariously to a narrow belt of coastline. The savages number more than 100,000 and are divided into 146 tribes. They practice head-hunting. For currency, salt is used. Instead of priests they have priestesses. These women act as "rain destroyers." It rains so much in Formosa that "rain - making", practiced among primitives of dry climates, gives way to savage incantations to prevent rainfall.—Washington Post.

Bees' Eyes

The impression that bees are attracted to flowers brightest to human eyes has been proved erroneous by experimenters of the Amer- They have learned that bees and other insects see colors beyond the ultraviolet end of the spectrum. Ultraviolet, to the human eye, is black, the absence of light. When photographed through ultraviolet filters, certain flowers reveal patterns very different from the colors seen by the human retina.

Gen. Sam Houston's Activities

Gen. Sam Houston with 743 raw troops defeated Santa Anna with 1,600 Mexican veterans, thus winning the independence of Texas. General Houston was elected president of Texas in 1836. The independent republic was admitted to the Union in 1845, and sent General Houston to the United States senate. He was elected governor of the state in 1859. He tried to prevent Texas joining the Confederacy. Southern sympathizers succeeded in deposing him in 1861. He died in 1863.

Deeds Give Proof

To prove that we have goodness within us, it must blossom into deeds. A tree that yields no bloom and bears no fruit, of what use is it? Even the sturdy pine drops its beautiful symmetrical cones, and the grand old oak its dainty acorns, —proofs that each not only lends shelter and grace to the world, but that it is showering down its treasures in token of growth and strength.

Masonic Meeting

There was a good turnout on Tuesday evening at a special meeting of Streetsville Masonic Lodge. Wor. Bro. H. W. Hope presided. It was Past Masters Night. Past Masters filled the chairs and exemplified the first degree in a splendid manner with Very Wor. Bro. Fred Maas in the 'East.' Mr. Maas was appointed Grand Stewart at the last meeting of the Grand Masonic Lodge, held at Ottawa, and to mark the honor his Lodge on Tuesday night presented him the regalia of his office, a lovely apron and collar in blue and gold. The regalia was presented by Wor. Bro. Hope and the address made by R. Wor. Bro. H.W. Gerhart.

V. W. Bro. Maas made a very suitable reply and thanked the lodge for their kindness to him

After lodge closed a banquet was enjoyed. Following were the toasts—

The King, God Save the King.

Grand Lodge : Proposed by Wor Bro. Wm. Couse ; response by V.W. Bro. F.A. Maas.

The candidates: Proposed by Bro. Rev. T.D.Jones, response by Bros. W.J.Moore and Chas. Hersom.

A splendid address was then given by Right Wor. Bro. Peter Grant of Toronto.

Vocal selections were rendered by Messrs. A. Hannah and W.E Capps of Brampton.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

It's so much easier to shop by TELEPHONE..

On wet days and snowy days, on days when there is so much housework to be done, on days when you aren't feeling up to scratch yourself or when one of the youngsters is ailing, it's great to be able to shop by telephone. And on fine days too, and when everything else is going right, it saves you an endless amount of tiresome traipsing around. Make the telephone your market basket.

On the Scent

Half a tone of onions were stolen from a farm near Goderich. Surely the police will soon pick up the scent. —London Free Press.

Sound Philosophy

Women are the true philosophers. A woman saves her pride by looking at her good points and forgetting the others.—Victoria Times.

Haven't Got The Cash

Mr. Anthony Eden seems to have made a two-base hit at least when he stated at Geneva that the trouble with countries (like Germany and Italy) which wanted raw materials is that they haven't the money to pay for them. Even "colonies" like to get some cash.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

Lost "Face" In Nanking

It is a curious thought that, though for years many people in the United States have considered Japan as a potential enemy, while most persons in the British Empire have considered Japan as an active friend, when the crisis arrives, the Americans go, and the British stay. As a result of this fact British prestige will be greater in the Orient (among Chinese and Japanese alike) than that of the United States.—Hamilton Spectator.

Life Goes On

The public view of the daily news is always out of perspective. Shanghai people are going to the movies. The Mediterranean is spangled with the white sails of pleasure craft. The taverns of Madrid are ringing with laughter. And—even—in Alberta men and women rise in the morning and go about their tasks and harvest crops and love and listen to music and —write sonnets; the mountain streams still murmur as they move among the pebbles, and the sun still sets in red and gold; neither has the prairie lark forgotten his song. Extraordinary, isn't it? — Calgary Alberta (Social Credit).

Rendering a Real Service

Mark well this brief press despatch, just over the wires from Belleville, Ontario. "Fifteen bushels of alfalfa seed from three loads of hay is the record set by Joel Murray, Hillier farmer." Not a great triumph in war or diplomacy, to be sure; not a great record in sport; not one of those achievements that make the front pages—but a record, nevertheless, and of far more importance to mankind than all the bluster and sabre-rattling that surround the ways of "warlords" today. A new system in bridge; a new service at tennis; a baseball pennant won, or a football kicked so far. A picture to take the critics by storm . . . All these things "go over big." But that man who has just made two blades of grass grow where only one grew before is deserving of more praise.—Halifax Herald.

The West Has Faith

There is apparently no limit to optimism of the people of Western Canada. They do not appear to be discouraged after eight seasons of drought that have afflicted areas in the Prairie Provinces comprising about 12,000,000 acres. In a recent speech before the Canadian Chamber of Commerce luncheon at Regina, the Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Federal Minister of Agriculture, said: "There is no better next-year country in the world than Western Canada." In that brief sentence the Minister of Agriculture epitomized the opinion of Western Canada. One wonders sometimes whether there is something in the big open spaces of the Prairie Provinces that develops this spirit. It is questionable if the citizens of Eastern Canada would stand up as well under repeated discouragements as their Western compatriots have. — Brantford Expositor.

Hunters—Stop, Look!

If all who take pleasure in hunting would remember four little words — Stop! Look! Make sure! — there would be none of these hunting fatalities which disgrace the newspapers of British Columbia every time the hunting season comes around. There is not one of these accidents but could have been prevented. In every case human carelessness is the prime cause of a hunter being killed, maimed or injured to some degree or other.

The prevention is simple. It requires only that those carrying lethal weapons should always remember to STOP, LOOK and MAKE SURE.

Don't walk behind a companion with a cocked gun pointing toward him; don't grab a gun by the muzzle and pull it toward you when getting out of a car, boat, or when crawling under a fence; don't guess, be sure it is not a human being at which you are shooting, and don't forget to unload your gun.—Kamloops Sentinel.

THE EMPIRE

British Subjects

The constitutional report of the Imperial Conference, published recently, finally scotches the rumors and fears that the common status of the citizens of the British Empire could and would be altered and the title of "British subject" changed. Not even in fact did South African delegates propose a modification of the status. As for defining nationality within each Dominion, quite another point, the suggestion that legislation was necessary everywhere has found no support, and the matter is left for future consultation. Let us hope the whole thing will be dropped. Meanwhile, the main fact is that all South Africans remain British subjects, not in the sense of subjects to Britain but as subjects to the King.—Capetown Argus.

Training the Unemployed

In Great Britain the government has achieved a good deal by fostering training and instructional courses, chiefly attended by the younger unemployed. These cater for three classes of men—those who have never learned a trade are given a modicum of skill ensuring in almost all cases their permanent engagement; those who find their skill unsought are fitted for other trades where labour is in demand; those who have lost manual dexterity, or general physical condition, or the habit of work, owing to prolonged idleness, are given the opportunity to tone up eyes, muscles and hands. The first two classes go to the training centres for six months and the third to instructional courses for three months. Such a scheme might well be adopted here. On the one hand there are the tens of thousands of unemployed; on the other many opportunities for qualified men. Well organized training centres could do much to bring labour supply and demand together. — Auckland (N.Z.) News.

X-Ray Martyr Again Sacrifices

Prof. Charles Vaillant, of Paris, Undergoes 14th Operation

Professor Charles Vaillant, called the X-ray martyr, last week underwent his fourteenth operation, a stomach incision, made necessary by his voluntary exposure to X-rays during his life-long radium research work.

The rays continue corroding the tissues, and during the last 25 years Prof. Vaillant, whose name incidentally is the French for courageous, has had both arms amputated bit by bit in 13 operations.

Rays Attack His Body

Now the rays have attacked his body for the first time. But Prof. Vaillant, who has been lodged at the nation's expense among the war-mutilated heroes and invalids, is undismayed.

He declared after last week's successful operation that he thought his was no remarkable sacrifice to science.

Prof. Vaillant, who has received the decorations of the Legion of Honor, the Carnegie Hero Medal and the Gold Medal of the City of Paris for his work, is 65 years old. The previous operations he underwent, which consisted of the progressive amputations of both arms, took place previous to 1923. The last of these, on December 3rd, 1922, was the severance of his right arm.

The amputations started at the fingers of the left hand. Drs. Infroit and Leray, other French X-ray pioneers who received the Carnegie medals in 1921, died a few months later of cancer infections caused by the research work.

Cost of Living Still Climbing

Weekly Budget of Average Canadian Family For Food, Shelter Rises to $17.48.

The cost of living mounts. Figures issued from Ottawa by the Labor Department show the weekly budget of the average Canadian family for food and shelter rose to $17.48 in August from $17.24 in July and $16.72 in August, 1936.

The index has been rising steadily from 1934. In August of that year it was $15.92. In the boom year of 1929 it was up to $21.90 which was still below the post-war peak of $26.60 in 1920.

The food budget has climbed to $8.80 from $8.17 in the past year and the weekly rent average for a modern city house of six rooms has increased to $5.87 from $5.71. Fuel and light costs receded, however, to $2.77 from $2.80.

B.B.C. Broadcast Daily For Canada

Two-Hour Program to be Transmitted by Short-Wave

The British Broadcasting Corporation and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation have announced an arrangement effective October 4th, whereby a BBC direct short-wave beam to Canada will be transmitted for two hours daily, from 7 p.m., to 9 p.m., G.M.T. (2 p.m. to 4 p.m. E.S.T.)

Of this CBC at Ottawa intend to rebroadcast over a national hook-up at least an hour's selection of the best material.

Governor Alan Plaunt of CBC concluded the negotiations here and expressed gratification at the generosity of Sir John Reith, BBC director-general, and BBC empire officers who have extended the service without a charge and intend to provide the most interesting programs for Canadian consumption.

Canada May Reciprocate

It is held possible Canada eventually will construct a 50-kilowatt short-wave station and perhaps return the courtesy of BBC with Canadian programs.

"Literary Edition" Of Bible Issued

Scriptures Presented In Luminous Form—Spelling Modernized

The jealously guarded privilege of the King's Printers and the University Presses of Oxford and Cambridge to print the authorized version of the Bible has been relaxed for the production of a "literary edition."

The new edition, called "The Bible, Designed to be Read as Literature," is aimed at presenting the Scriptures is a luminous, compact and fitting a form as possible.

A few portions have been omitted, including the Book of Chronicles, and parts of the Apochrypha as well as genealogies. Spelling and punctuation have been modernized.

In an introductory essay, Laurence Binyon declares that, "though the Bible represents one of the greatest literatures of the world, it has for centuries been studied apart from its literary form and value; the way in which it is printed testified to this difference."

Many Famous People Victims of Hobby Bug

Kings, Presidents, Movie Stars Are All Bitten — True Disciples Search Globe For Prizes.

The hobby bug is no respecter of persons. It bites with equal viciousness the rich and the poor, the great and the lowly, and one might almost say the sane and the others.

President Roosevelt's stamp collection is known to be one of the best in the United States. He's been at it since he was 17 years old, and many a one-sentence dispatch from Washington has been to this effect: "The President spent last evening with his stamp collection."

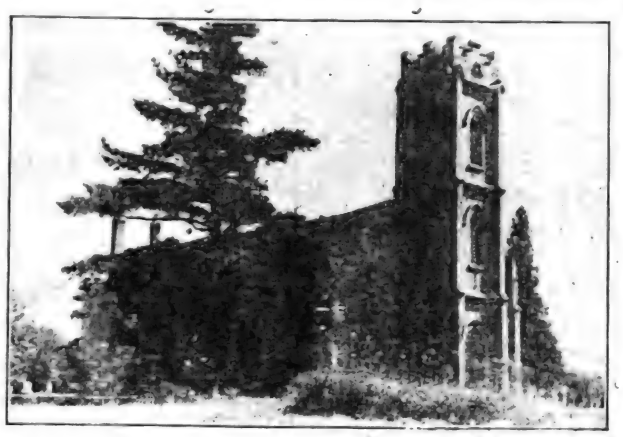
King George VI is continuing the stamp collection begun by his father, which is one of the greatest in the world, and worth literally millions of dollars. He has a philatelic secretary who does nothing but take care of the collection, which has grown 'way beyond a mere hobby and become a full-time job.

Artists Succumb Easily

But those are orthodox hobbies hobbies. Many people of prominence have been drawn to less-traversed bypaths. People in the arts seem to be particularly addicted to hobbies, and many carry them to what would seem to an outsider considerable extremes.

Lucrezia Bori collected historic fans, Roland Young has a houseful of canes of all kinds. David Belasco had a Napoleonic complex, paying any amount for old boots or hats of the former dictator. Fanny Hurst collects altars and religious furniture from all over the world, and associated with all kinds of religions. Rudy Vallee has a bad case of amateur movie itch, and Toscha Seidel, the violinist, is a spare-time bacteriologist.

Lionel Barrymore's work as an etcher and painter might have won him considerable fame if he had never acted at all, and there is a rumor that Rupert Hughes, the novelist, is a string saver. Albert Payson Terhune bred and kept dogs as a hobby for years before they became his meal-ticket, filtered through his typewriter.



Collector Aids Science

Otherwise practical and materialistic business men have shown no immunity, even those who have been able to collect $500,000 Old Masters and give them to the government.

The late Nathaniel Rothschild, head of the European banking family, collected fleas, though on a severely scientific basis. He ransacked the world for all types, and even sent an expedition into the Arctic to get specimens of a flea that annoys certain kinds of Arctic seals. When he presented the whole collection to the British Museum, that august institution was delighted. Of course fleas are notorious disease carriers, and the more known about them the better, so Rothschild's hobby was not as silly as it sounds.

Henry Ford's weakness for antiques got the better of him to such an extent that he had to build a separate village to hold them, adjoining his home and plant at Dearborn.

Many hobbies have become so absorbing as to lead their riders to become actual authorities in their fields, and sometimes they have led directly into a good living.

GOLF MASTERS MEET ON HISTORIC GROUND

Famed Church, Harbor and Highway of Upper Canada Scene of Links Battle.

By MR. HECTOR CHARLESWORTH

Hard by the site of this year's battle for the Seagram Gold Cup, emblem of the Canadian Open golf title, stands the churchyard and rectory of St. John's, York Mills, one of the oldest Anglican Churches in Canada. In the churchyard are graves which date back to the first decade of the 19th Century.

Some idea of the antiquity of the edifice, which stands on a hill overlooking a large stretch of country, may be gleaned from the fact that the largest Anglican church in Toronto today, St. Paul's, Bloor Street, was originally established as a mission of St. John's, which lies about five miles north of it as the crow flies. What is now the City of Toronto did not extend more than a mile back from the Bay, and at the time mentioned, only farm lands with a few cross-road settlements lay between the parent church and its offspring.

Part of Oldest Highway

The ground where St. Andrew's course is situated is historic for another reason. The old road on which it faces, now merely a by-way, was once part of the oldest highway north of Toronto, laid out under orders of Governor Simcoe. The original Yonge Street, planned to connect Lake Ontario with Lake Simcoe, and the hinterland to the north, detoured along the hills to avoid the deeper valleys, and this by-way is one of the original detours.

Another fact of unique interest is that the old church once overlooked what was an inland harbor. The Don River, which used to cross Yonge St. at this point, was so deep as to be navigable from Toronto Bay to this point. Flat-bottomed boats carried cargoes for the north which were transferred to wagons and sledges at York Mills.

Commentary on the Highlights of the Week's News . . . by Peter Randal

Canada Criticized

Declaring that Canada lacks national aim and is drifting along without leadership, the former editor of the London Evening Standard before leaving on the return trip to England last week criticized the Dominion for having a wonderful future which it is not trying to use. "It is a marvellous country," he said, "but populated by 11,000,000 people content to drift along between Britain and the United States as markets and protectors, without any national plans of its own, no policy to follow. You could be a great people . . . ."

President Roosevelt's Speech

Believed to be the most important speech he had ever delivered on world affairs, President Roosevelt's address at Chicago last week has created a great deal of comment in countries other than his own. He spoke in actuality to the world, appealing for the "concerted effort" of peace-loving nations "to uphold laws and principles on which alone peace can rest secure." He raised his voice against an "epidemic of world lawlessness," against the trouble-making powers, declaring that epidemics always call for quarantine. The President's suggestion for a quarantine against international lawlessness is looked upon as the strongest and most concise offer of United States co-operation given to European nations seeking to curb the aggression of Italy, Germany, Japan.

Press-Gag Bill Stopped

The bills before the Alberta Legislature on taxation of banks, the Credit Act and the bill "to ensure the publication of accurate news and information" were reserved by the Lieutenant-Governor to await the pleasure of the Governor-General of Canada, when they came before the House this week. The Lieutenant-Governor gave his assent to eight other bills which bore no relation to the one disallowed by the Federal Government in August. Premier Aberhart's proposal to control the press of Alberta has thus gone by the board.

Japan Indicted

A conference of the nine powers who signed the League of Nations treaty guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China (China, Japan, Great Britain, the United States, France, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Portugal) is proposed for this week to deal with the Japanese invasion. This followed close on the declaration of the League's Sino-Japanese sub-committee that Japan is guilty of violating the treaty.

Medical Plan Attacked

Claiming that medical services are not being provided the public on a sound economic basis, Dr. T. H. Leggett, of Ottawa, President of the Canadian Medical Association, calls for a thorough overhauling of the system in Canada. At present, he said, the scheme is right for the wealthy but not satisfactory for the middle class, working men and those on relief.

Present Spread of War

War is already here according to the Hon. Mrs. Freemantle, British author, journalist, who last week addressed the Toronto Branch of the English-speaking Union. "But we can prevent spread of war by immunization," she declared, "as we would deal with an infectious disease. The important thing for us to do is to avoid infection by taking preventive medicine."

Toronto-to-Rio Flight

Harry Richman, night club singer, screen star, Atlantic flyer, has announced that in February next he proposes to beat the world non-stop flight record by hopping from Toronto to Rio de Janeiro, a distance of 7[illegible] miles. United States authorities will not allow him to make the flight from there, and now he is hoping that the Dominion Government will not express similar disapproval.

News In Review

Russia Buys Arms In U.S.

WASHINGTON.—Soviet Russia was disclosed this week-end to have bought more than $10,000,000 in arms, munitions and implements of war in the United States during September, more than half of which was for war vessels.

This expenditure was believed to have been for the first materials and equipment for two battleships which the Moscow Government sought some time ago to buy from the United States.

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask.—Confirmation three prospectors had drowned in May Lake, 272 miles north of Prince Albert, was received in a wireless message from Lac la Ronge, 160 miles northwest of here, this week-end.

Further Search For Fliers

MOSCOW.—Four big planes with 35 more searchers under the command of Ivan Chuknoffsky left Moscow this week to look for Sigismund Levanoffsky, lost "Lindbergh of the U.S.S.R."

They will go to Rudolf Island via Archangel.

U. S. Brands Japan

WASHINGTON.—The United States Government this week-end formally branded Japan as the aggressor nation in the undeclared Sino-Japanese war.

The Government accused Japan of violating the nine-power pact and also the Briand-Kellogg anti-war treaty.

The action was announced in a formal statement issued by the State Department.

It came after the League of Nations Assembly had adopted a report of its Far Eastern Advisory Committee, in which Japan was declared the aggressor nation.

Chinese Take Offensive

SHANGHAI. — Chinese forces took the offensive in a sharp counter-attack the tenth day in the present battle for Shanghai.

The Chinese surged from their entrenchments all along the front from the ruined Chapel native quarter on the edge of the International Settlement north almost the whole twenty-five miles to Lotien.

More Ships For Mediterranean

LONDON.—The Admiralty has announced that eight more of the navy's newest destroyers are due to assemble at Portsmouth, preparatory to leaving for the Mediterranean. All are 1,375-ton craft belonging to the fifth destroyer flotilla of the home fleet. They are mounted with 4.7 inch guns and have a top speed of 38 knots.

Shelve Yukon Annexation

OTTAWA. — Premier Pattullo, of British Columbia, announced this week end the Dominion Government had concurred in his suggestion that action to include the Yukon Territory within British Columbia's boundaries be held in abeyance until consideration can be given the report of Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations.

Robertson Remanded

LONDON, Ont.—Lauchlin John Robertson, middle-aged factory worker, accused with 70-year-old Dr. Charles Cline of murder in connection with Mary Wilkinson's death, made a brief court appearance this week, but the Crown was not ready to proceed with the case. He was remanded till a later date.

Demonstration Against Japan

LONDON. — The Government was urged this week-end by resolution of 10,000 people to seek means for international co-operation in preventing a continuance of bombing of Chinese civilians by Japanese airmen.

A crowded meeting in Albert adopted the resolution that expressed "horror and condemnation of indiscriminate attacks on non-combatants by Japanese forces in China."

Giant Goes to Law

CHICAGO.—Robert Emerson Wadlow, youthful Alton, Ill., giant, whose case excited medical curiosity so much that the dignified American Medical Journal published an article discussing it, [illegible]nated that this scientific contribution had embarrassed him to the tune of $150,000.

Fruit Crop Outlook Continues Bright

According to the latest official report showing the condition of fruit and vegetable crops throughout Canada, prospects for the fruit crops continue bright. All commercially-grown fruits in the Dominion have produced larger crops this season than in 1936, with the exception of pears and cherries. Substantial increases are reported in the production of apples, peaches, strawberries, raspberries, and grapes. Plums made a moderate gain, while the falling off in Ontario's pear production was not wholly offset by the increase in British Columbia.

Matured Earlier

As a result of the hot dry weather which prevailed in the Maritime Provinces, also in Ontario, crops matured earlier than usual and the export season for apples commenced about two weeks ahead of 1936. No major epidemic of disease or insect pests affected the quality of the crops and on the whole fruit was of a distinctly better quality than a year ago. Generally speaking, weather conditions throughout the season favored the normal development of the crops, although boisterous gales which swept Nova Scotian orchards in the early part of September shook a quantity of fruit from the trees and caused considerable loss.

Canadian Eggs Become Important to British

Canadian eggs are becoming increasingly important in the British breakfast. Agriculture department officials predicted shipments to Great Britain this fall would be 1,250,000 dozen, a 37-per-cent. increase from 912,000 dozen last year.

The export season is from mid-September to the end of November. Up to last week 270,000 had been shipped.

Although exports to Great Britain are not large in comparison with those to other countries, Canadian eggs sell at a premium there. Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario are the chief exporting provinces.

Phone Mouthpieces Fairly Harmless

Scientists Believe Users Not Likely to Pick up Disease

The chances are slim you'll pick up a disease from talking into a telephone mouthpiece, two scientists agreed last week after tabulating germs on 246 public and private phones.

In their 18 months' study Dr. Calvin B. Coulter and Dr. Florence M. Stone, research bacteriologists at Columbia University, New York, said they found as many germs on telephones in private homes as on those for public use in bar-rooms and restaurants.

To gather the germs they used glass lips designed to imitate the action of human lips speaking into a transmitter.

Although they found pneumonia and deadly streptococcus bacteria on the mouthpieces during certain seasons, the research workers concluded that the stagnant air of closed booths might prove more dangerous than the telephone transmitters in spreading the germs.

Plan Splendid Hunting Season

Prospects for big-game hunting are unusually bright in Canada this fall. Reports covering the thousands of square miles of wilderness accessible by Canadian Pacific Railway show a plentitude of game and excellent conditions for hunting. Outfitters and guides across the country also report more reservations for hunting parties, both from Canada and the United States, than they have had for years.

Wild sections of Canada lying practically in the back yard of civilization have a wide variety of big game in addition to many types of game birds and smaller animals. Nova Scotia has moose, deer and black bear; New Brunswick, deer and black bear; Quebec, moose, caribou, deer and black bear; Ontario, moose, deer and black bear; Manitoba and Saskatchewan, moose, deer and caribou; Alberta and British Columbia, mountain sheep and goats, caribou, moose, elk (wapiti), deer, and grizzly, brown and black bear; and the Yukon Territory and Alaska, practically the same as British Columbia.

An indication of the increased interest in hunting this year has been given by the number of applications coming to the general tourist offices in Windsor Station, Montreal, for copies of the two hunting booklets, "Open Seasons for Hunting" and "Fishing Waters and Game Haunts."

Canadian Pacific President Tours Ontario

"Ontario on the whole is enjoying an excellent year. Beginning with agriculture and ending with industry progress has been greater than in the past seven years," Sir Edward Beatty, G.B.E., K.C., LL.D., Chairman and President, Canadian Pacific Railway, stated after a recent inspection of the Company's properties and of agriculture and business generally throughout the province. Sir Edward, and the members of his party, were everywhere welcomed by representative citizens, and are here shown on the station platform at Sudbury after being received by W. E. Mason, president of the Sudbury Board of Trade; J. H. Simpson, acting mayor of Sudbury, and Mayor E. A. Collins, Copper Cliff. In the picture are seen from left to right: L. B. Unwin, vice-president of finance and treasurer; Aitken Walker, general freight agent; George Stephen, vice-president of traffic; Mayor Collins; Sir Edward Beatty; H. J. Humphrey, vice-president and general manager, eastern lines; Thomas Hambley, North Bay general superintendent; Mr. Simpson, Mr. Mason, and B. J. Quilty, superintendent Sudbury division.

Grave Robbers in Streetsville

Visit Local Cemetery Monday Night and Steal Body of Young Man

This little village has had the most gruesome shock in its long history this week——the robbing of a grave in Streetsville Cemetery, of the body of a 20-year old boy, that of Hayden Pope, a son of Mr. and Mrs Anson Pope, Streetsville, buried last Sunday afternoon.

When Mrs Robert Edwards went to the cemetery on Tuesday to care for some flowers she had placed on the grave, she noticed some earth had been removed from the grave. Afraid to go closer, she called to Earl Raine, who was delivering groceries at her home. Earle took a look at the grave and hurried back to the store where he reported to his boss. Mr. Hewgill and Tom Doherty then went to the cemetery to investigate. The earth had been removed and the casket could be seen. With the assistance of Mr. Hewgill, Tom reached down and moved the lid. The body was not there, it had been stolen. They returned home and notified Reeve S. H. Foster, who, in turn, called up the authorities at Brampton. P.C. Owens came down and investigated and placed a guard at the grave

Many citizens visited the cemetery out of curosity and hundreds more engaged in the hunt for the body which was located on Wednesday near Churchville and brought back to the undertaking parlors here for re burial.

In the casket was found a note, in block letters, asking for $100.00 for the return of the body. This must have been a 'blind' to throw people off the track.

We would not like to think there were people living in Streetsville who would commit such a dastardly deed. We hope the guilty parties will be caught.

The greatest sympathy goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Pope and family in their great sorrow.

Blacksmith's Agreement

How they Engage Boys as Apprentices in England

Below we produce a copy of an agreement between a Blacksmith in England and his apprentice. This information was supplied by a local blacksmith, Mr. Lovatt, and shows the arrangement that was in order when he started to learn his trade. It makes very interesting reading and is quite different to agreements made in this country, if there are any at all.

This Indenture witnesseth That Frederick William Lovatt, age 15 years April 8, 1901, son of Joseph Frederick Lovatt, of 181 Wiggerstow St. London England, doth put himself apprentice to Arthur Elliott, Blacksmith, etc, Byrkley Street, Burton upon the Trent, to learn his art and with him after the manner of an apprentice to serve from 1901 to 1907 until the full end and term of six years from thence next following to be fully complete and ended, During which Term the said apprentice his Master faithfully shall serve, his secrets keep, his lawful commands everywhere gradually do. He shall do no damage to his said Master, nor see to be done of others, but to his power shall tell or forthwith give warning to his said Master of the same. He shall not waste the goods of his said Master nor lend them unlawfully to any. He shall not contract Matrimony within the said term nor play at Cards or Dice Tables or any other unlawful Games whereby his said Master may have any loss with his own goods or others during the said term without license of his said Master. Shall neither buy nor sell; Shall not haunt Taverns or Playhouses nor absent himself from his said Masters service day or night unlawfully. But in all things as a faithful Apprentice he shall behave himself towards his said Master and all his during the said Term

And the said Arthur Elliott hereby agrees to pay unto the said Frederick William Lovatt on attaining the age of 16 years seven shillings per week, on attaining 17, 8 shillings, at 18, 9 shillings, at 19 10 shillings, at 20, 12 shillings, until the end of the said indenture, and also further agrees to pay in addition to the aforesaid rate of wages for work which he is called upon to perform between the hours of six p m and 6 a m at a rate to be agreed upon mutually between the said Master and Apprentice. Arthur Elliott agrees to accept his said Apprentice in the Art of Blacksmith, which he useth by the best means that he can shall teach and instruct or cause to be taught and instructed —— Finding unto said Apprentice sufficient meat, drink, lodging and all other necessaries during the said Term.

Mexico's Orchids Weigh Twenty to Thirty Pounds

Orchids in Mexico usually grow three to six feet from the ground, on a variety of rough barked trees, such as the palm and mesquite. Their position on the tree varies, the favored place being on the large branches. The roots of the orchid adhere closely to the bark of the tree.

Some of the plants bear from 20 to 50 blooms, each flower about four inches across. The climate of this region is very favorable for orchids, and plants weighing 20 to 30 pounds are not uncommon, according to a writer in the New York Times.

The orchids of Guatemala are among the most beautiful of the entire orchid family. The various specimens found are large and unusually vigorous.

The western slope of Honduras yields a small yellow orchid with brown dots and lip. There are several flowers on each stalk. Here also is found a delicate lavender orchid. These lovely plants are said to be inferior to those of the eastern slope of Honduras

The orchids of Salvador usually grow to a larger size, possibly because of the greater humidity.

Orchids are not hard to grow, though one must forget everything he has learned about ordinary gardening, particularly when it comes to the use of water. Orchids live a long time dry but rot quickly when wet.

Barisal Guns Puzzling: Firing Seems Continuous

Sometimes one hears queer noises, like cannon being fired, when in the country or by the sea. These are atmospheric discharges, and are known as Barisal Guns, the name being taken from Barisal, a little town in Bengal, India, where the firing of cannon in the distance seems continuous, says a writer in the London Tit-Bits Magazine. A queer thing about these noises is that although a group of people may hear them at the same time, each may be certain that the reports came from a different direction.

Similar sounds may sometimes be heard on Dartmoor and on the shores of Lough Neagh, while on the Belgian coast noises like sharp pistol shots are located. At Hillsprings, Carnarvon, Australia, visitors occasionally hear three sudden high explosions, like escaping steam, for which there seems to be no satisfactory cause. Scientists offer many explanations for these phenomena; bamboos bursting in jungle fires, thunderclaps, the collapsing of banks, globular lightning, landslips, submarine eruptions, and air pockets being suddenly filled. This last seems to be the most likely theory of all.

Robert Adam Styles

Among the most distinguished designers during the latter part of the Eighteenth century was Robert Adam, favorite of George III, bachelor king of England. Son of an architect, he and his brother James gained considerable fame as architects under the partnership legend of the "Adelphi." Most of Adam's furniture shows his architectural leanings, the pieces being well balanced and comparatively severe in outline. Some of the loveliest furniture Adam made was of mahogany with delicate carvings and dainty inlays. He originally introduced the shield back chair, but abandoned it in favor of the wheel back chair.

Flag Symbols

A blood-red flag has always been a symbol of mutiny or revolution. A black flag was the symbol of the pirate. Now flown only after an execution to show the law has been carried out. All over the world a yellow flag signals infectious disease, and a white flag is universally a flag of truce. At sea, striking of the flag means surrender. When the flag of one country is placed over that of another the victory of the former is denoted. In time of peace, this would be an insult and if done, even by mistake, an apology would have to be made. In the old days, it was customary to trail the flag of a vanquished foe behind the ship.

Word "Drug" Defined

A "drug" is any substance used as a medicine, or in making medicines, for internal or external use; also, formerly, any stuff used in dyeing or in chemical operations. According to the pure food and drug act the term "drug" includes "all medicines and preparations recognized in the United States Pharmacopoeia and National Formulary for internal or external use, and any substance or mixture of substances intended to be used for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of disease of either man or other animals."

Duping the Ducks

Each season an eider duck will produce about half a pound of eider down, but it must be tricked into doing so, says Samuel J. Beckett in "A Wayfarer in Norway." Artificial nests are placed in the rocks in the haunts of the bird, and there the ducks lay their eggs. As the eggs are systematically taken away, the bird continues to sit for long periods, all the time plucking the valuable down from her breast for the nest. Lokta is one of the centers for the eider down industry.

First Watches Were Made in Germany, About 1500

It is generally agreed that the first man to make watches was Peter Henlein, an expert mechanic and locksmith of Nuremberg, in Germany. About 1500, shortly after Columbus discovered America, he set himself to produce a small pocket clock. For motive power he introduced the main spring, and with this as a basis produced little clocks —"watches" as they came to be known—which would fit in the pocket or the purse.

We call an old-fashioned watch a "turnip" because it is so thick; but that is nothing compared to Peter Henlein's products, asserts a writer in the Washington Star. They were almost round, and when they were sold throughout Europe they became known as "Nuremberg eggs." Soon expert mechanicians in other countries were making them—strange-looking devices, round or drum-shaped, with no crystal on the face and no minute-hand, and a chiming apparatus to strike the hours. They became the fashion for the wealthy. They were not very accurate; people still relied on sun dials for really correct time; but they were valued as jewelry—and a watch has remained a jewel to this day.

Kings and queens owned them. Queen Elizabeth and her court selected watches as modern women do their hats—to match their various costumes.

Indians of the Jungle First as Rubber Makers

Savages of South America had rubber shoes, bottles and balls before Columbus was born. An Indian in the jungle tapped a rubber tree and from the milk or latex made what he wanted directly. He simply let the latex coagulate or dry on a form, states a writer in the New York Times.

European technicians developed more complex methods not because they were ignorant but because latex does coagulate spontaneously at times. In fact, this tree-milk is much like blood. It clots. So for generations European and American manufacturers had to make their rubber goods from crude rubber or huge clots of latex. Such a clot can more be brought back to its original state than dried blood. Hence the necessity of chewing or kneading crude rubber in powerful masticating mills and manipulating it in machines of a dozen different kinds before it is possible to produce a satisfactory rubber shoe or hot water bottle.

In spite of this expensive and troublesome kneading and chewing of crude rubber, the finished articles are not quite so good in some respects as those made by savages in the Amazon forests. Our rubber products are well made, but the Indians' are tougher and stronger.

England's Government

The supreme legislative power of the British Empire is vested in a Parliament which is dominated by the House of Commons, of which the premier is the responsible head. Parliament is summoned by writ of the king on the advice of the privy council, and the king opens and closes each session. The king has a right to veto bills passed by both houses of Parliament, but in practice his veto is obsolete, as custom has decided that he must sanction every bill which Parliament approves and resolves to make law. Whatever the theoretical powers of the king may be, they are unquestionably limited to his personal influence over his ministers.

First Submarines Were Small

The first submarines were small affairs. The very first, built in 1620, was merely a large wooden rowboat, decked over and made watertight by a covering of thick, well-greased leather. King James, of England, traveled under water several hours in one of the strange craft, propelled by 12 rowers. A similar submarine, built a few years later, was equipped with several leather bottles. Water was admitted into the bottles to make the craft submerge. To rise to the surface, the inventor squeezed out the water with a lever and bound up the neck of each emptied bottle with a string.

First Precious Stone Lovers

So far as is known, the Sumerians, earliest inhabitants of Mesopotamia, were the first nation in history to recognize the ornamental value of semi-precious stones, and to understand and practice the art of stone-cutting for the purpose of making cylinder seals, signet rings, beads and other jewelry. Great quantities of beads of agate, carnelian and lapis lazuli were excavated years ago from the ruins of the ancient Sumerian city of Kish by the Field Museum-Oxford university joint expedition to Mesopotamia.

The Serbian Tragedy

King Alexander of Serbia and his wife, Queen Draga, were assassinated in their palace in Belgrade on June 10, 1903, as the result of a military consiracy. Draga was a former lady-in-waiting to Alexander's mother. She was the widow of an engineer named Mashin, and was 10 years older than the king. The king's reactionary policies had for years made him unpopular.

Set Fire to Cat Fined $212

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 16—Pleading guilty to cruelty to a cat by soaking the animal's fur with kerosene and setting it ablaze, Francis Sharron, 20, and Walter Stepto, 18, Windsor, were fined $106 each, including costs, in police court today. The youths have been confined to jail for two weeks awaiting sentence.

The two were arrested, along with two juveniles, following investigation by the Humane Society, which was forced to shoot the kitten.

"This was so utterly opposed to normal human behavior that I thought you were proper subjects for mental examination," Magistrate Arthur Hanrahan said. "I am surprised to learn from the psychiatrist's report you appear to be normal."

Weddings

Gladman—Wyndham

Snapdragons and autumn foliage will blend their rich colorings against a background of palms for the wedding this afternoon at St. John's church, Oakville, of Nan Marian, daughter of Mrs. William Wyndham, and Rev. Donald James Gladman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gladman, Exeter. Rev David Gallagher will read the marriage service, and Miss Lilian McBann will be organist. Mrs. Morley Funston of Hamilton will be soloist.

Given away by her brother, Mr. Carl Wyndham, the bride will be gowned in white lace with little jacket and train. Her long tulle veil will fall from a Juliet cap, and her flowers will be violets and lily-of-the-valley. Miss Jean McIlveen, wearing wine velvet with matching off-the-face hat and carrying Johanna Hill roses, will be bridesmaid, and Mr. Edward Taman will be best man. Mr. Charles Gladman, Peterborough, and Mr. Jack Maxwell, Toronto, will usher. At a small reception at the bride's home Mrs. Wyndham will receive wearing black velvet with corsage of Killarney roses. The bridegroom's mother, also in black velvet ensemble, will wear a Talisman corsage. The honeymoon will be spent in New York, the bride travelling in a black wool tailleur with touches of gold. Later they will make their home in Crediton.—Globe and Mail, Oct. 16.

Donald J. Baillie, North Bay, and Laura Irene Tilson, Brampton, were married by Rev. C. E. J. Cragg on October 11.

Harold C. Brindle, Toronto, and Ethel Velma Coulter, Brampton, were married Saturday at Brampton, by Rev. T. W. F. G. Andrews.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Buckle visited friends at Belleville last week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Wilson have moved into their nice new home on Queen Street, South. We hope they may live many years to enjoy it.

Mr. W. N. Atkinson has commenced to erect a dwelling house on Thomas St., adjacent to the house now occupied by Mr. Len Atkinson.

Mr. W. G. Cooke and daughter, Miss Wanda, and son, Bert, motored to Detroit, Sarnia and other places recently to visit friends.

Major T. Aisthorpe, Tannery Street, who has been a resident of Streetsville for two years, will move shortly to the New Toronto district.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McLellan and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McLellan of Toronto were in the village on Sunday.

William Wilson, who lives with his sister, Mrs. Walter Buck, was taken to Peel Memorial Hospital, Sunday, for treatment. Dr. Montemurro is in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dingwall, Jr., Toronto, are both under the doctor's care.

Mr. J. B. Ross had the misfortune to run into a Pontiac Sedan south of Barrie when returning from a business trip Friday last. The Pontiac had run out of gas and seemed still to be going, it's light lost in the glare of oncoming traffic. Instead of pulling off the road, the driver stopped on the highway and the crash followed. Both cars were badly damaged and Mr. Ross suffered from wounds in the head and arm and also from shock. The others were not seriously hurt.

COOKSVILLE

The staff of Cooksville Public and Continuation School entertained at dinner at Crofton Villa in honor of J. H. Breckenridge, principal of the Public School, who is leaving for Hamilton to complete a course in manual training. Miss A. L. Burrill, of Norwich, a recent appointee to the staff, was also honored.

A number of friends gathered at a farewell party tendered Mr. Breckenridge, when dancing and supper was enjoyed at the "Saucy Sue", Dixie. Earlier in the evening bridge was played with Miss Bessie Breckenridge and Howard Pallett winning prizes.

LET US SMILE

A young matron, shopping, asked a butcher the price of hamburger steak.

"Twenty-five cents a pound," he replied.

"But at the corner store it is only twelve cents," said the customer.

"Vell, vhy didn't you buy it there?"

"Because they haven't any."

"Oh, I see," said the butcher. "Ven I don't have it I sell it for ten cents a pound."

KILL! KILL! KILL!

On with the dance! Step on it, we are late! Hello, there are a couple of cars that have run into each other head on! Hurry past! There are dead and wounded people on the grass. We might have to go to court as witnesses, or carry them to a hospital! Give her the gas! You can pass that truck before we get to the top of the hill! Hurry! Gosh, you almost hit that old lady! Why do people allow women as old as that to get on the highway, anyway? They are all hen-minded. We might have hurt her. There is a hole we can break through in that line of traffic. Give her the gun! Gee, that was close! Did you hear that guy swear? We didn't hit him. Blow that horn and make that fellow get over where he belongs! Why, the fool won't give us the right of way! He can't be going over 45. How can he expect to stay on the pavement at that pace?

Hit her up around the right side there. Boy, that scared him! Maybe that will teach him to keep over where he belongs! I thought for a minute we were going to turn turtle. Look, there's another accident! That car is on its top with its wheels in the air! Looks like a bug on its back, doesn't it? There was blood on the grass. Someone must have been badly hurt. Crazy fools, they don't know how to drive, yet they get right into the thickest traffic. Watch that woman! She's driving all over the road! Run up alongside her and give her a blast on that horn! Whew! Didn't her fender nick ours when she swerved? I believe it did. Thank heavens she didn't lock fenders with us! It might have caused an accident. I hate women drivers. Cut around that fellow. Never mind the curve. There isn't anything coming. Look out!

CRASH!!

Where am I? What has happened to me, doctor? My leg has been taken off? My God!

Y. P. Banquet at St. Andrew's

The Autumn leaves decorating the Sunday school room in St. Andrew's Church, Oct. 15, 1937, reminded us another summer was in the past. And this was the annual banquet of the Young People's Society, the beginning of another fall and winter for the present young people to carry on the good work that had been left to them from past generations in this same Sunday School room, of striving and endeavour for the good that needs assistance, for the ills that need resistance, for the future in the distance, for the good they all can do.

The banquet tables were laden with every good thing imaginable to suit the most whimsical appetite. The passing, the present and coming generations, participated in this part of the entertainment. The way this part of the programme was appreciated and enjoyed was sufficient recompense for the donors of the banquet. The old fashioned tallow candles and candlesticks on every table sent us back to pioneer days, when the candle was all the light they had after the daylight was done. After full justice had been done to all the good things provided, the second part of the programme was given. Miss Jean Dunn, the president for the coming season, made a charming chairlady; she always seemed to have the right things to say, and say everything in the right place, which means a good deal. The toast to the King, responded to by all singing "God save the King", the toast "Our Church," proposed by Miss Reba Weylie, sent us back over the past history, the beginning of the Presbyterian Church in Streetsville, when a young Presbyterian minister left Bonnie Scotland to come to the great wilderness in Canada and would come from Muddy York on horseback to preach in the first Presbyterian Church in Streetsville, which was built where the cemetery now is.

Then Miss Weylie paid this tribute to all the church workers since the beginning that they were faithful in all work entrusted to them. It was not only a duty but a privilege "To be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the word of the Lord for as much as they knew their labor was not in vain in the Lord." Mr. Thomas Wilson, the ruling elder, ably responded to the toast. The toast to the visitors, proposed by Miss Cora Woodruff. The cordial welcome given to the visitors by this 'eloquent' speaker made them feel like it is good for us to be here.

Mr. King, representing the Young People's Society from the Sixteen church, thanked them for the welcome they had always received and the pleasure it always gave their Society to meet together for there was pleasure and profit in these social gatherings.

The toast to the Young People, proposed by D. McGregor, responded to by Floyd Marlatt, a faithful worker in the Society, and an eloquent speaker, expressed the hope that any careless or indifferent ones would join with them this season and make this one of the most successful years the Society has ever known.

In Mr. Fraser's address, we could easily see he will never lose his love for the young people of the Sixteen Church and for the Streetsville Church. The guest speaker, Rev. Mr. Kerr, from Chesley Presbyterian Church, chose the words for his lecture:

"What kind of a Church would my Church be
If every one was a member like me."

Everyone was delighted. The lecture was instructive and amusing. The Irish wit kept the audience in continued applause.

We were treated to several solos by Mr. Beaty, accompanied by Miss Peacock, from the Sixteen church, which were rapturously encored. And from Mrs. Frank Reid, Streetsville, accompanied by Herb Falconer, some of the old songs giving special delight. Mrs. Reid is always an acceptable and willing contributor at the young people's entertainments.

How delighted we always are when Rev. Mr. McFaul, from Milton Presbyterian Church, our Interim Moderator, finds time to be present with us. And this will be a great loss to Streetsville when Mr. McFaul moves from Milton.

In the Young People's history, when turning the leaves,
We find them like harvester's gathering in sheaves,
For they are always loyal, faithful, and true,
For any church work their hands find to do,
And in all of this history we never can find,
A sting, or a jar, they are ever leaving behind,
And whether we dwell in a castle or cot,
The pleasure they give us will not be forgot.

Local News

A very large number of cars from out-of-town visited Streetsville cemetery on Sunday. No doubt these people had been reading the extensive reports in the daily press about the recent grave-robbery. We think Toronto papers overdid it, and they certainly have no feelings for the family who have been caused untold suffering.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

The C.G.I.T. in the United Church had an attendance of 23 last Monday evening with an additional three leaders. Mrs. O. T. Steen continued studies in Nursing and Margaret Jackson led the meeting. Two pianoforte selections were played by Margaret Temple and Brenda Redick. The Girls are organizing into groups of ten or twelve, each group with a leader. Miss Edna Stephens and Mrs. Steen, with the minister, are acting as leaders.

The Rev. Bruce Miller, B.A., B.D., of Islington, took charge of the service in the United Church last Sunday night.

The Communion Service in the United Church last Sunday morning was conducted by the pastor and 75% of the resident membership celebrated the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. A number of visitors were welcomed and six members received by transfer into fellowship with the church.

HIGH SCHOOL FIELD DAY

The local High School held its annual Field Day on Friday, with the Principal, Mr. A. E. Buckle, and assistants, Miss E. M. Henry, B.A., and Miss E. J. Bonham, B.A., in charge. They were assisted by Rev. T. D. Jones and Rev. E. S. Ottley, B.A., L.Th.

In spite of cold weather, the participants showed up well.

Among the winners in the Girls' Classes were: Nora Rundle for the juniors and Jean Rice for the seniors. Lorraine Beattie and Ruth McGill were several points ahead, but they were not eligible for top honors on account of victories in previous years. Other senior girls who finished were: Marion Steen, Ferne Crozier, Ruth McGill, Marjorie Trimble, Kathryn Reid, Hazel Aisthorpe and Mildred Stephens.

Other junior winners were: Margaret Jackson, Anna Hilyer, Betty Reed, Dora Schnick, Ruth Sheppard, along with Hazel Aisthorpe and Mildred Stephens, who also competed in the senior events.

Senior boys finished in the following order: Hugh Lamb, John Fellowes, Frank Reid, Bill Evans, - Juniors: R. Arnott, B. Adamson, Cleve Green, H. Lamb, Bill Evans, Glen Noble, Philip Estall.

On account of the cold several events were held over until better weather.

Takes 166 Feet

One thing to be remembered in connection with the changed speed limit is that at 35 miles an hour a car can usually be stopped in about 95 feet, while at 50 miles an hour it requires 166 feet.—Toronto Star.

Couldn't Happen Here

Two special nurses deserted a five-year-old boy in an oxygen tent in a Massachusetts hospital because, it being an insurance case, they might have to wait some time for their wages. Our Canadian nurses are, we think, made of better stuff than that. —Brockville Recorder and Times.

Testing-Time For the League

London Free Press: It is easy to see the difficulties in the way of definite League action in the present crisis, but there is not the slightest doubt that if no action other than a protest against bombing is taken against Japan at a time when world opinion is unprecedently unanimous the League might as well close up shop and sell the Geneva palace to the armament manufacturers.

The Greatest Danger

When you examine 700 highway accidents and find that 255 of them occurred on straightaway stretches and only 125 at admittedly dangerous curves, you do not have to go far to find the only possible explanation, which is excessive speed. Barring a few plain lunatics, the very great majority of drivers take such hazards as bad curves, hill crests, etc., with a certain degree of caution. But the wide-open modern road, properly surfaced, marked and banked, is too much of a temptation for a multitude of people who are in too much of a hurry even to think. That is why the majority of accidents for them—Montreal Star.

Cooking Exclusively Canadian

Some visitors, endowed with culture and enriched by experience, have expressed astonishment, with all the kindness in the world, that the ordinary cooking of our hotels includes nothing that is specifically Canadian. It is impossible to deny the fact. In the very expensive hotels and restaurants it is cooking called (in Europe) international that prevails—costly dishes, often excellent, that are found identically in London, New York, Berlin, or in the Antipodes. In the moderately priced places it is the ordinary American cooking that is eaten everywhere. Finally, the French, Italian and German restaurants serve their specialities. Canadian Cooking? Nowhere. Certainly it is not a matter of being fanatical in the matter of cooking more than anything else. But would it not be possible, at least in the restaurants that do not specialize in certain types, to include some local dishes in the programme? Some of them are so good. — La Patrie (Montreal).

How Free We Seem

The Duke of Windsor is reported to have made a promise to refrain from giving any public speeches during his projected visit to the United States, and, according to a London dispatch, a stipulation to this effect was given before the British cabinet would give its consent to the tour.

We wonder, when Edward was sailing away on a destroyer from England, and England's throne, whether he thought that he was sailing away to freedom. If so, he must be sadly disappointed. He has escaped from the routine of kingship, but he can never escape from the political results of his birth. Whether he be a king or not, he cannot be free until the day of his death, unless the British constitutional monarchy ceases to exist.

It was Browning who wrote: "How free we seem, how fettered fast we are!" and Edward might well reiterate the thought with a definitely personal application. — Hamilton Spectator.

THE EMPIRE

The Great Shrinkage

The Government must secure all possible information regarding the shrinkage of population with which, according to experts, this country and a great part of the civilized world are threatened in the immediate future. Light is required on its causes and probable effects. They should be studied scientifically with the fullest array of evidence available. . . . Experts forecast that, unless the forces at work can be radically altered, population in the near future will decline rapidly. In this country, according to these prophets, it will fall to about 30,000,000 at the close of the present century and in a hundred years' time to 5,000,000. —London Daily Mail.

The Urge to Write

A high and official voice has declared that sixty-five thousand million letters are written throughout the world in a year, which means that the average individual output is roughly thirty-two (an uninspired calculation, because the world population includes babies and illiterates). Even these statistics leave out many things. They do not include the mysterious drum-beats of the jungle post or, certainly, the romantically bottled missives of shipwrecked sailors. But the official figures are still very impressive. One might have thought that with the telephone everywhere and television round the corner this spate of letters might have been curbed. Not at all; the people of the United States, renowned for progressiveness, write more letters than any other nation in the world.—Manchester Guardian.

Joe Louis the heavyweight champ is travelling all over the continent with his Brown Bombers. He now plays each game its full length on 1st base. Joe's manager thinks this is the best idea any champ has hit on to keep fit physically.

Louis, who has teh courage of his convictions refuses to edorse any product unless he actually uses the article. In his own inimitable way he's really trying to do tihgsn on the right and at that rate should go far.

Think these over till next week. What is the name of the big-time baseball star whose mother cannot speak one word of English?

Are you able to name the wrestler who has had his nose broken 23 times?

Speaking of wrestling Jack Corcoran is starting his fall shows in a big way in Toronto these days. He promises bigger and better matches than ever before (if possible.)

Colonies Given Trade Benefits

Canada Gazette Pubishes Special Edition on Concessions

OTTAWA. — Trade concessions to several British colonies, protectorates and mandated territories are announced in an extra edition of the Canada Gazette.

Some of the concessions are to fulfil undertakings in the Canada-United Kingdom agreement and the other to carry out the spirit of the trade agreement with Australia which has been extended and amplified.

Retroactive to Sept. 1st, when the renewed Canada-United Kingdom trade treaty came into force, benefits of the British preference have been given to Malta and most favored nation treatment has been extended to all the non-self-governing colonies and protectorates, the mandated territories of Togoland, the Cameroons, Tanganyika, territory and Palestine.

RECEIVE BRITISH PREFERENCE

From Oct. 1st, when the continuation of the Australian agreement became effective, Papua and Norfolk Island receive the British preference together with special preferences given Australia, Naura, mandated to Australia, gets the British preference.

The Gilbert and Ellice Islands and the British Solomon Islands protectorate in the Pacific also receive the British preference as from October 1.

With most of these countries trade is small. In the past fiscal years, however, exports to Palestine were $274,000 and imports from there $59,000.

The largest item of Canadian imports from Palestine was oranges valued at $12,000. Oranges already come in free from Palestine in the first four months of the year and are not affect-

Calendar Reform Systems Narrowed Down To Two

League of Nations Has Them Under Consideration—Wants Confusion Cut Out of Calendar.

Something is to be done, at long last, about the confusion and chaos of our out-of-date calendar, says Pearson's Weekly.

Europe, Egypt, Northern India, and China all have different calendars, which differ by as much as 800 years!

Our own present calendar is based on that of Julius Caesar of 48 B.C. In 1582 Pope Gregory XIII discovered that the calendar had an error in it, which, by then, had accumulated to 11 days. He amended this, and his rectified calendar is the one we now use.

In addition to the confusion caused by having several different calendars in use in the world at the same time, our own calendar from year to year causes quite enough confusion to statisticians and to business generally.

Easter In Different Quarters

Compared with 1936, the first quarter of this year has 3 less working days than the corresponding quarter last year; the second quarter has two more; Easter is not only in a different month, but in a different quarter!

This means that all comparisons of quarterly or even monthly figures between the two years will be misleading.

200 Schemes!

But it is not only these two years of our calendar which have caused trouble. Every year is as bad. Fluctuating Easter and Whitsun cause trouble and loss to sports and sports-wear shops, and to holiday resorts.

Now an international effort to reform the calendar is being made. Two hundred different schemes for calendar reform have been submitted to the League of Nations, and by careful sifting the number has been reduced to two.

The matter is being pressed as urgent, for it is desired to start the new calendar on January 1st, 1939. The date is particularly apt, for it is a Sunday, and so would cause the least possible interference in business.

The two systems now under consideration are as follows:

That pressed by the International Fixed Calendar League of America is to divide a 13-month year into equal months of 28 days each. The new month thus created is to be called Sol, and will be placed between June and July. The odd day will be called Year Day, and will follow December 28th as a National holiday.

Every month will start on Sunday, and each day in every month will be the same date year after year.

"Year Day"

The other system, sponsored by Lord Desborough, and named the Desborough Calendar after him, is less revolutionary and therefore more likely to be chosen.

It has a twelve month year, divided into equal quarters. Each quarter is made up of one month of 31 days, followed by two months of 30 days each. Every month has 26 working days. Every day will be the same date every year (as in the other calendar), and Easter Sunday will be fixed as April 8th.

The odd day, to be called Year Day, will come at the year end as a national holiday, and will not count in the calendar. Leap Year Day will get the same treatment, except that it will be placed between June and July as a national holiday.

Will the nations adopt it?

Can January the First, 1939, see the confusion cut out of our calendar?

Apartments In Sweden Feature Sunny Balconies

Modern Flats for Workers Have Sunshine Rooms For All Weathers — Gaily Flowered

One of the enchanting things the visitor to Stockholm first notices, is the typical Swedish balcony, gaily flowered and furnished for living.

Blocks of modern flats for workers in the heart of the city and small houses in the surrounding garden villages all have sun-facing balconies, planned for comfort and privacy. Their flowing planes, painted pure white, have a look of seagulls' wings.

.... HOOD-SHAPED SUN-BLINDS ....

Bright sun-blinds and flower boxes shine against the white. Most of the sun-blinds are hood-shaped with scalloped borders, and different bright colours are used for neighboring blocks of flats. The contrast of tangerine, cherry, peacock and apple green gives a light-hearted sparkle to the buildings.

The flower boxes are charming, too. You see a harlequinade of petunias, marigolds, fuchsias, scarlet geraniums laced with white petunias and pots of those curiously decorative Victorian flowers — gloxinas and plump coralred begonias. Cacti gardens are cherished in the sun-trap extensions to the living rooms, which are a feature of the small houses.

A FILL OF SUNSHINE

Sun rooms and built-out balconies alike are most sensibly furnished for living, so that the owners can have their fill of sunshine and fresh air on fine days. And how many days there are in the year when one can sit out in comfort in a well-planned sun-trap. We don't make full use of ours in this country!

Meals are taken in the Swedish home in these sun-trap rooms, or on the balcony in summer. A very light round table of birch, and chairs to match, are the favorite furnishings. The lady of the house has her sewing corner in the sun, complete with sewing machine, low-slung modern chair, and elbow-high table.

Should Milk be Added Before or After?

English Tea Drinkers Debate The Question

Until a recent controversy started in English newspapers many tea habits were without explanation. Like so many other things English, a thing was "done" or "not done"—and that was that.

For instance, the addition of milk to tea. There have always been two schools, each firm in the belief that milk should be poured into the teacup before the tea—or, that milk should be poured into the tea.

Two Schools of Thought

Neither school knew nor cared, or troubled to inquire why it adhered to the favored practice.

Now, a correspondent who favors following the tea with the milk offers what seems to be a sound reason. She reasons that when the milk is put in first it is slightly cooked by the hot tea and thus may impair the fine flavor of the beverage. On the other hand, she points out, when the milk is poured last the tea has lost its first heat and the flavor remains unimpaired.

The Famous Pair Will Visit A...

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor, now in Paris, are soon to pay a visit to the United States. The British Cabinet is understood to have granted the Royal couple permission to make the 3,000 mile journey "reluctantly."

Commentary on the Highlights of the Week's News . . . by Peter Randel

France Arms the Border

The Franco-Spanish frontier is quietly but swiftly being militarized this week in preparation for any situation that may arise from Italy's refusal to withdraw her "volunteers" from participation in Spain's civil war. If Premier Mussolini continues to defy efforts to turn the civil war "back to the Spaniards", France backed by Britain may take "really strong action", calling classes of her vast reserve army to the colors as a defense gesture. The French Government thinks that as matters now stand, the southern frontier is no longer secure. Several authorities on international relations are of the opinion that Mussolini is stalling, and will continue to stall until, as he thinks will happen, the Rightist army in Spain gains the ascendancy.

Campaigning For Colonies

With the publication of a new illustrated weekly, "Colony and Home," Germany is launching an intensive campaign of propaganda in a drive to regain "lost colonies." A series of mass meetings will be held, sponsored by the National Socialist (Nazi) party and the Reich Colonial League which has 50,000 members in Berlin alone. The campaign serves to make the German people more and more conscious of their unfortunate lack of imperial possessions, and is developing the question into a major issue. The world is to know that Germany means business.

More Brown Shirt Girls

BERLIN.—A half million 10-year-old girls were mustered into the League of German Girls this week, donning Hitlerism's brown uniform for the first time. Each girl must undergo an athletic examination before admission.

To Export Thatcher Wheat

WINNIPEG. — The Board of Grain Commissioners announced this week that it was arranging, in collaboration with the Canadian Wheat Board, for shipment of commercial quantities of Thatcher wheat to United Kingdom and Continental millers willing to cooperate for a trial run of this wheat in their mills.

About 30,000 bushels of wheat will be involved. The announcement said: "This is being undertaken to confirm the laboratory findings that Thatcher wheat, which has proven rust resistant, is eligible for grading as No. 1 Northern Manitoba grade as being equal in quality to Marquis wheat."

Air Battles In Spain

HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontier.—Spanish insurgents and Loyalists fought for supremacy in the air this week-end. Nearly 350 war planes were engaged on the northern fronts and thirty were reported to have been shot down.

On the Aragon front, where a fleet of eighty loyalist planes atempted to wipe out the insurgent stronghold of Saragozza, a squadron of new Italian ships entered the dog-fights.

Alberta Prepares Case

OTTAWA.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King has intimated to the Alberta Government and other interested parties that any representations they may wish to make to the Federal Government with respect to Alberta legislation referred to the Governor-General, should be in writing, he told a press conference.

The Alberta Government has advised the Prime Minister that a brief is being prepared and representations are also to be made by the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association and by the daily newspaper publishers.

Ontario's Liquor Profits

TORONTO.—Ontario Liquor Control Board profits for the year ended March 31, 1937, were $8,960,600. Profits in the previous fiscal year were $7,862,719, the increase being $1,097,981. Profits on liquor store operations were $5,869,206. The rest of the $8,960,600 is profit on beer sold through warehouses and beverage rooms and on wines sold through wineries.

Russia Prepares For Election

MOSCOW. — Campaign for a full vote of nearly 100,000,000 electors in the December 12 election to choose Soviet Russia's new Legislature swung under way this week. First posters appeared urging everybody to vote.

A two-chambered supreme Soviet is to be chosen in the direct and secret election for a nationwide Legislature.

The Soviet of the union will have 569 members, elected on basis of population; the Soviet of nationalities will have 574 members elected on a geographical basis.

New Belgian Pact

BRUSSELS. — A cherished dream came true for Belgium this week — her home as a nation to stand aside from quarrels of major western powers and carry on an independent policy.

Acceptance of Germany's declaration pledging recognition of Belgian inviolability marked the realiztion of these hopes. The declaration followed similar ones by Great Britain and France, and left the way open for Belgium to continue faithful to her obligations as a member of the League of Nations.

The Reich pledge, however, placed upon Belgium the responsibility of strengthening her defenses in order that her territory may not be used, against Belgium's will, as a base of military action by other powers against Germany. Belgium accepted that responsibility.

To Equal Peak Year

It is expected that before the end of 1937, Canada's tourist trade for the year will be equal in volume to the peak of 1929. Speaking to the Maritime Board of Trade, D. Leo Dolan, Chief of the Canadian Travel Bureau declared that this year's total may reach the sum of $300,000,000. He urged that fish and game resources be conserved in the interest of the tourist industry, as well as for the benefit of resident Canadians.

Italy's Four-Year Plan

In the late twenties, it was Russia with her Five-Year Plan. More recently came Germany with her scheme for intensified development of her resources. Last week Italy instituted a Four-Year plan for economic independence, with the government declaring that the relative scarcity of raw materials, minerals and other products makes such a program necessary if the country is to achieve equality with nations having greater resources at their disposal. Mussolini's plan is to make Italy entirely free from dependence on other countries for supplies "without constituting an economic challenge to her neighbors", authoritative spokesmen state. Some sort of a trade war, however, is likely to result.

"Unity Is Empire's Need"

Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, Federal Conservative leader, warned last week that the British Empire cannot hope to remain intact unless a greater amount of co-operation and a stronger sense of unity is developed. "Where there are hundreds of millions of people in the world clamoring for land and where you have one seventy-fifth of the world's people occupying one-seventh of the land, you have danger," he pointed out. "We must learn to coordinate our efforts as a united people." As it is now, Canada knows little, for example, about Australia and its problems. Australia may know less about us; but it is our business to get to know each other.

No More "War Risk" Policies

Lloyd's of London last week stopped writing "war risk" policies, not only for China and Japan, but for anywhere on earth. Joined by all other British insurance firms of consequence, they announced that "the writing of war risk insurance on land has become in fact little more than a gamble, which plays no part in insurance, where rates are based on scientific application of the law of averages as ascertained through experience."

The British insurers believe that they have made "a substantial contribution to the cause of world peace," explaining that property owners unable to take out war risk policies will be forced to start "working for peace."

Migration to Dominions

Creation of a corporation "to initiate, consider and aid the carrying into effect of schemes for all forms of useful activities inside the British Empire, migration and development", was urged at the Empire Migration Conference meeting in London, England. Believing that the time is ripe for resumption of migration from the Old Country to the Dominions, the Conference asked that representatives of the Dominion Governments be invited to consider beginning work on the scheme. It was suggested that migration be aided financially.

The Duke In Germany

BERLIN.—The Duke of Windsor's motor trip to Croessinsee Castle, where future Nazi leaders are trained, was like a triumphal procession this week. In every hamlet and village crowds of natives stood cheering and shouting "heil" as he passed in Reichsfuehrer Hitler's new limousine-a glorified house-trailer, equipped with a bar, kitchen, telephone and other conveniences.

Oxford Receives $5,000,000

LONDON. — Total benefactions of Lord Nuffield, millionaire automobile manufacturer, came to around $5[illegible],000 with announcement of [illegible] gift of $5,000,000 to Oxford University.

The money is to be used for a new college. In addition, he gave the University $1,000,000 for medical research and the money for a site for the new building, valued at $500,000. The new college will be devoted to social studies.

Chinese Dislike Drinking Coffee

Wil Not Buy the Beans For A Penny A Pound

A little-known peculiarity of the Chinese is their dislike of coffee. Yet down in South America, thousands of tons of good coffee beans are used for stoking railway engines, burned on rubbish dumps or thrown into the sea, in order to keep up the price of the product.

Such beans have been offered to Chinese merchants for a few pennies a pound, but the offer was not snapped up. In the United States matters are just the other way round. Large sums have been spent in trying to persuade the ubiquitous coffee drinker to turn to tea. This is having some success, but the American still prefers coffee.

OTHER NATIONS DO

Ireland drinks very little coffee but her consumption is more than five times that of China, although China has more than 300 people against about four million in Ireland.
people against about four million in Ireland.

The Danes consume more coffee than any other nation — more than 16 pounds per head in the course of the year. Each Swede drinks about 15 lbs. each Norwegian about 12 pounds. And then come the Belgians, the Americans, the Dutch, the French and the Swiss.

Used To Wake Up With A Headache

Now Fresh and Lively Every Morning

Here is a man who woke up every morning with a dull headache. Then Kruschen transformed his days. Read his letter:—

"I used to wake up in the mornings with a dull headache. A year ago, I started taking Kruschen Salts regularly. Today, I wake up fresh and lively and can do my day's work without any exertion. I can recommend Kruschen for anyone suffering from headaches and constipation, and for putting new life into you. I intend to continue with Kruschen for the rest of my life."—E.P.

Headaches can nearly always be traced to a disordered stomach, and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. Remove these poisons—prevent them from forming again—and you'll never have to worry any more. And that is just how Kruschen Salts brings quick and lasting relief from headaches.

HAVE YOU HEARD

Wife — "I'm afraid Oliver, that you do not love me any more — at least, not as much as you used to."

Husband — "Why?"

Wife — "Because you always let me get up to light the fire now."

Husband — "Nonsense, my dear! You're getting up to light the fire makes me love you all the more."

It is well that a man be not wise in his own conceit, nor make the mistake of taking the conceit of others for wisdom.

He — "You've been out with worse-looking fellows than I am, haven't you?"

She did not reply.

"I said you've been out with worse-looking fellows than I am, haven't you?"

She — "I heard you the first time, I was trying to think."

Ever notice that the fellow who is always in a hurry is usually late.

Husband — "Have you ever wondered what you would do if you had Rockefeller's income?"

Wife — "No, but I often wondered what he would have done if he'd had mine."

Opinions are like watches — no two are ever alike, and each man swears by his own.

Clerk — "Mr. McPherson, how about buying the latest atlas?"

Mr. McPherson — "Not noo, mon; I'll wait until the affairs in Europe are more settled."

Some folks insist on figuring life like a custard pie. If the crust is good, the filling will get by.

"What does the bride think when she walks into the church?"
"Aisle. Altar. Hymn."

The late Thomas A. Edison was showing a party of friends over his beautiful summer residence, equipped with many labor-saving devices. One exception, however, was a turnstile so stiff that it required considerable strength to force a passage.

One by one his guests pushed their way through. At length one of them ventured to say: "Mr. Edison, why do you have everything so perfect except this awful turnstile."

"Ah," replied the host, his eyes twinkling. "Everybody who pushes that turnstile around, pumps eight gallons of water into the tank on my roof."

At breakfast one morning, the town bachelor noticed some hand-writing on one of his three-minute eggs. Examining it closely he made out the following message: "This egg was packed by a girl who is prepared to marry the man who notices this message. She is said to be the prettiest girl in this neighborhood."

He wrote: "I would like to correspond with you — object matrimony."

Several days later he received a reply: "I am flattered by your offer, but I am now married and have three children."

"Human nature is an odd mixture of credulity and incredulity," remarked a lecturer. "If you tell a man that there are two hundred and seventy billion stars, he'll accept your word for it. But if you put up a sign 'Fresh Paint,' he's never satisfied until he proves it is fresh.

THE BETTER THINGS

There's beauty all about us here,
And he is wise who finds it;
There's ugliness that can't be helped
Let's pass it by, don't mind it!

Fall Fertilizing Aid to Pastures

A Benefit Which More and More Farmers Are Recognizing

The value of the application of fertilizers in the fall to pastures and alfalfa, and particularly to permanent pastures, is becoming more generally recognized. The fertilizers used for this purpose, being composed of phosphates and potashes, do not leech from winter snows and rains, and the plant food they supply is ready to give the desired results with the first growth in the spring. Further, the fall application is a saving of time in the spring when so many other farm operations demand attention. The application may be made either before or after the freeze-up.

The specially balanced fertilizers for this purpose recommended by the Provincial Fertilizer Boards are 0-12-6, 0-12-10, 0-12-15, 0-16-6, 0-16-10 and 0-16-12, to be applied at the rate of at least 300 pounds per acre. It would be wasteful to apply a complete fertilizer in the fall, that is, one containing nitrogen in addition to the phosphoric acid and potash, as most of the nitrogen would be lost by leeching or ammoniation before plant growth had started in the spring.

Great Britain Gets Canadian Eggs

Exports of Canadian eggs to Great Britain in the export season which started recently are expected to aggregate in the neighbourhood of one and one-quarter million dozen eggs. The export season extends from the middle of September to the latter part of November and at the end of September about 9,000 cases—3,240,000 eggs—had gone forward.

The export trade at this season is made up of eggs laid in the spring which are held under refrigeration until shipping date. Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario are the chief exporting provinces, with Quebec and Alberta making smaller shipments.

Here and There WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

Not Thinking of Retirement

Official denial of a rumour circulated in London following the close of the International Scout Jamboree in Holland that Lord Baden-Powell was contemplating retirement as World Chief Scout, was made by Mr. J. F. M. Stewart of Toronto, upon his return from the Jamboree, where he acted as official head of the Canadian Scout contingent. Mr. Stewart is Chairman of the Executive Board of the Canadian General Council of the Boy Scouts' Association.

"It was officially announced by the Imperial Scout Headquarters in London," Mr. Stewart stated, "that there was absolutely no foundation to the rumor.

"My wife and I had the pleasure of spending a week-end at Pax Hill with Lord and Lady Baden-Powell, and the World Chief Scout was in excellent health, full of energy and discussing a long list of Scout engagements. Some of these were two years ahead. This winter he will visit South Africa and Rhodesia. In 1939 he expects to attend a Scout Jamboree in the West Indies, and another in New South Wales, on the other side of the world. He also plans to attend the next World Rover Moot, to be held in Scotland in 1939.

"No, the old chief is still the irrepressible, ever-youthful B.-P., and he is not for a moment thinking of going on the shelf."

The international gathering of the Scouts in Holland Mr. Stewart reported as a splendid, happy gathering that offered an unforgettable example of internation youth friendliness, in contrast to the strain and turmoil that characterizes so much of the adult world today. Some 28,000 boys were present from 32 different countries, and only the happiest fraternizing characterized their two weeks of camping together.

The Canadian Scouts made an excellent impression, and very creditably represented the Dominion in the various reviews. In the great opening march past before Her Majesty Queen Wilhelmina of Holland and Lord Baden-Powell, Canada had the honour of leading the British Empire section of 8,000 boys, the largest division of the review. The next largest visiting contingent was the French, whose 2,000 Scouts made a splendid appearance.

I LEARNED TO 'BEAT' ACID INDIGESTION
ONCE LIFE WAS MISERABLE, NO APPETITE... LITTLE SLEEP...UNTIL THE DOCTOR SAID 'ALKALIZE'

BUT NOW—AT THE FIRST SIGN OF ACID-INDIGESTION I USE PHILLIPS' AND I FEEL LIKE A NEW PERSON ALMOST IMMEDIATELY!

The fastest way to "alkalize" is to carry your alkalizer with you. That's what thousands do now that genuine Phillips' comes in tiny, peppermint flavored tablets—in a flat tin for pocket or purse. Then you are always ready.

Use it this way. Take 2 Phillips' tablets—equal in "alkalizing" effect to 2 teaspoonfuls of liquid Phillips' from the bottle. At once you feel "gas," nausea, "over-crowding" from hyper-acidity begin to ease. "Acid headaches," "acid breath," over-acid stomach are corrected at the source. This is the quick way to ease your own distress—avoid offense to others.

Members of Palm Family Form an Odd Collection

The various members of the palm family form an odd collection. Some are dwarf, but a foot or two high; others tower aloft 100 feet. Many, nearly all, are of single columnar shafts, but some are freely branched and others consist of many stems, rivaling the bamboos in this respect. Some have both sexes on the same plant, others differ in sex. Some flower and fruit annually, to a grand old age. Others make a large growth without flowering and then, in a supreme and life-crowning effort, put forth a flower stem 30 feet high, and perish from exhaustion.

There are palms that have tiny fan - shaped leaves a few inches across; others enjoy leaves many feet in diameter. Some have tiny ostrich-plume leaves, and some give rise to fern-shaped fronds 30 feet long. Some trunks are dwarf or entirely absent, while climbing rattan palms have lengthy trunks.

Certain palm seeds are less in size than a grain of wheat, and then there are others with coconuts, or with the "double coconut," a fruit never seen here, states a writer in the Los Angeles Times. The latter hails from the Seychelles islands and weighs fifty pounds. It is so large that it requires several years to grow and mature. Usually palms perfect their seeds in one season, as do nearly all plants. A few pines and oaks are exceptions to this rule.

Cuckoo Clock First Made by Black Forest Pioneer

No hanging clock has ever attained the popularity of the cuckoo clock among the people of every land. It is the clock of children, as "grandfather" is of their elders. The latter is more inclined to prove a melancholy companion.

There is nothing melancholy about the cuckoo. When this sprightly bird pops out from his little chalet, not only do the youngsters get a thrill, but even the elders take notice of it. There is a fleeting vision of Alpine peaks, lordly pines and babbling mountain rivulets.

The first cuckoo clock, according to a writer in the Montreal Herald, was made more than 200 years ago by a village clockmaker in the Black Forest. He was Anton Ketterer, and he was one of the pioneers who started the manufacture in that region. The clockmaker worked at his own bench, then in his own cottage, and produced everything by hand.

There are varieties of bird clocks produced in the Black Forest, from blackbirds which whistle realistically, to nightingales, which keep up a sustained trill. But none has rivalled the cuckoo in popularity.

Quaker Founder

George Fox was nineteen when he felt the call to preach which resulted in his arrest for disturbing the peace and his establishment of the Society of Friends (Quakers). "Priests, lawyers and soldiers were all obnoxious to him," says a biographer. Consequently, every type of persecution was practiced on the sect in England and the American colonies; for a long time it was a worse crime to be a Quaker than a thief. William Penn was jailed because he was a Quaker; this induced him to come to America. Numbers of Quaker men were put to death in Massachusetts; in New Hampshire Quaker women were stripped and whipped from one town to another, for Quakers were the first to acknowledge the equality of men and women in religion and allow women to preach.

Gown of Abigail Adams

John Adams had been appointed to arrange a treaty with England and when he and his wife, Abigail, were presented at court she was attired "in an elegant but decently plain gown, white lutestring, covered and full trimmed with white crepe, festooned with lilac ribbon and mock point lace, over a hoop of enormous extent; a narrow train of about three yards in length to the gown waist; ruffle cuffs, treble lace, ruffles, a very dressy cap with long lace lappets, two white plumes and a blond lace handkerchief." Mrs. Adams had two pearl pins in her hair and earrings and necklace of the same kind.

Beeswax

Beeswax, widely used in arts and industries, is little produced by American hive-keepers. Bees consume ten pounds of honey to manufacture a pound of wax. Consequently, beekeepers strain out the honey and return the comb to the hive for refilling. The United States imports 700,000 pounds of beeswax annually, says Literary Digest,—mostly from Brazil, Portugal, Chile, Cuba, Egypt, the Dominican Republic, Uruguay and Ethiopia.

Persimmons Don't Need Frost

One of the most prevalent of erroneous beliefs about the persimmon is that frost must fall on it before it is really good to eat. This old saw is not only inaccurate, says a writer in the Los Angeles Times, but is a direct controversion of the truth, which is that otherwise perfect fruit is not only not helped, but seriously injured by frost or freezing, just as is the case with other fruits.

A shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W H.McGill, of the Streetsville Road, Erindale, in honor of their second daughter, Olivia Mae who was married yesterday to Mr. Harry Robbinson. It was a community affair and over 125 friends were present. The bride to-be was the recipient of many pretty and useful gifts.

The tower on Trinity Church has been repaired and part of the driving shed has been removed. The part which remains will be closed in and used for storage purposes, Not very many people drive a horse and buggy to church these days, so the shed had passed its usefulness

Members of the local Horticultural Soicety planted over 250 bulbs in their 'garden' by the old cemetery near the Presbyterian Church this week. When they bloom next year they will help to make our beautiful village more beautiful.

Some person tried to steal Earle Raine's car the same night that the Dominion Sash Factory was broken into. He had locked his car, and when they could not open the door they broke the handle off. but did not take the car. Earle says he don't think he will stay around this town any longer if they are going to carry on like that.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SCHOOL DAYS ARE HERE

The many school activities offer countless opportunities for snapping pictures that you will enjoy in years to come.

IF there was ever a snapshooter's paradise, it's school for those who attend it. It may be a one-room school or it may be a great university. Wherever, whatever it may be, it's crammed with unbeatable picture possibilities.

Yet we might as well face the fact of the matter—few snapshooters make the most of school's snapshooting opportunities.

Perhaps they are dazzled by the very wealth of the material at hand. More likely, they assume that somebody else is going to take the pictures. And that's a fatal mistake. For nobody else can see things as you see them. And it's what you see that means most to you—and to the folks at home, now or years from now.

The question, then, is how to make the most of school's picture possibilities. A little planning will do the trick.

First, about the right camera for school. Any camera will do, providing it is clean and in good order and uses a size of film that is easily available anywhere. If yours has a fast lens and a fast shutter, you'll have an advantage in taking shots at sporting events, but such a camera is not at all essential. With a little care you can make even the simplest box camera turn out entirely satisfactory pictures.

Then, how can snapshooting be planned? All of it, of course, cannot be planned, but many of the most important shots can be. Why not work out a scenario, Hollywood fashion?

First of all, whether school's just around the corner or a thousand miles away, you'll want a few good shots of home. Then a view or two taken on the way to school. Maybe those views seem commonplace now, but wait a few years.

At school, of course, there are the obvious shots of the buildings, the grounds, new classmates, teachers, old friends, sports, picnics, class ceremonies, and so on. It's a good idea to take them so as to form a kind of continued story. Then, when they are mounted in your album, the pictorial story will flow along evenly.

A really good collection of school pictures is hard to find, as any school year-book editor will tell you. Yet there's nothing much easier to take; and few snapshots increase in value, year after year, as surely as those taken at school.

Canada's Favourite Tea

"SALADA" TEA

HOSTAGE HEIRESS

By DAVID DRESSER

Janet Duane, millionaire's daughter, gives a party one night aboard her father's palatial yacht, anchored off Miami. Gregory Gason tricks her into being lef behind wih him when the guests are taken ashore. The only other persons aboard are a crippled wtachman and Janet's Negro maid. Meanwhile, "Dusty" Lanion, lawless adventurer, has laid plans to seize the yacht to carry arms and ammunition to Cuban revolutionists. Believing the boat to be deserted, except for the watchman, who has been bribed, Dusty and his mean are about to board her.

CHAPTER VII

A cathedral-like hush mantled the luxurious office on the seventeenth floor of a Manhattan skyscraper. There were deep carpets on the floor to absorb the footfalls of men and women as they obsequiously scurried to and fro to lay memorandums on the mahogany desk and to receive curt orders from the heavy man who sat at the desk. There were priceless tapestries on the walls, and the cumulative effect of silence and luxurious furnishing was to give the impression that here was a hallowed precinct.

Cyrus Duane had spent a great deal of money to achieve exactly that effect. It pleased him to sit alone at his desk in this magnificence and know that men leaped to obey when he lifted a blunt finger and pressed one of the buttons on his desk.

He was a man who gloried in the acquisition of power. Money meant little to him, except as it provided him the necessary leverage to control the destinies of peoples, of nations. He had more than enough money—he could never have too much power.

His heavy shoulders were hunched forward, and elbows were planted solidly on the polished desk top as he studied a paper which had just been laid before him. An intricate mass of detailed information concerning the movements of his merchant fleet over the seas girdling the globe.

An Urgent Message

A man entered and moved soundlessly toward him. Duane's efficient and colorless secretary, the only man who dared enter the inner sanctum without a summons.

Duane did not look up. "Don't bother me, Tooker," he grunted.

Tooker peered helplessly at the telegraph message he carried.

"Yes, sir," he breathed respectfully. "I have—that is—an urgent message, Mr. Duane." He laid the telegram on the desk.

"Will you never learn to attend to insignificant details yourself, Tooker? Time and again, I've told you not to interrupt me when I'm busy with my daily ship report." Duane pushed the telegram aside testily without looking at it.

"I'm sorry," Tooker murmured. "This is hardly insignificant, Mr. Duane. Your— daughter and the Fleetwing—they have disappeared."

"My daughter and? What are you blathering about?"

"The telegram, sir. It explains everything." Tooker pushed it in front of Duane again.

Cyrus Duane frowned as he grabbed up the sheet of paper and commenced to read. His frown changed to a look of disbelief, uncertainty, dismayed incredulity. He finished the message, then started to read it again, aloud, pronouncing each word with a terrible emphasis:—

"Your yacht Fleetwing has disappeared from anchorage and your daughter Janet cannot be located stop Please wire this office immediately if you wish any steps taken."

Chief of Police,
Miami, Florida."

"The— — the Fleetwing? And — Janet?"

Duane's face went ashen. The yellow paper fluttered from his fingers and fell to the carpet. Then, suddenly, the huge man came to life.

"It's a hoax, Tooker! It must be a hoax!"

"No, sir." Tooker spoke firmly. "I've had Miami on long distance. The message is official."

"Wire Miami to get every available officer on the trail. The Coast Guard—boats—airplanes . . ."

Not a Joke

"Yes, sir. That's attended to, sir. There's another matter—" Tooker hesitated.

"Confound you, man!" Duane roared. "Have you lost your tongue?"

"Yes, sir. Ah, that is—no, sir." Tooker said firmly. "I've had two of Miss Janet's friends in Miami on the long-distance wire. A man has disappeared with her, sir. A Gregory Gason. They were together at a party on the yacht last night. Neither of them—ah—returned from the party."

"What?" Duane stared at Tooker blankly. "I don't undertsand."

"Nor I, sir." Tooker told him promptly. "Perhaps it's a joke of Miss Janet's, sir."

"A joke? You're an imbecile, Tooker! Yachts like the Fleetwing don't disappear at the wave of a hand. She has to have a crew. Engineers, navigators —" He made vague motions with his hands.

"Quite so, sir."

"Captain Coleman!" Duane suddenly exploded. "He's at the bottom of this. The scoundrel! The— the kidnapper! Get Miami on the phone, Tooker!

"Sorry, sir. I thought of Captain Coleman immediately.— I have two wires clear to Miami, sir, but Captain Coleman has a perfect alibi for last night."

"You've checked up—?" Duane gurgled over the words.

"Yes, sir." Tooker's voice was firmly respectful. "You've always complained if I came to you with petty matters."

Planes to the Search

"Petty matters!" Duane choked.

"Quite so, sir. —It wasn't until I received a report on this Gregory Gason from a Miami detective agency, that I felt it necessary to come to you."

"Who is he? What is he?" Duane roared.

"I have the complete report here." Tooker took a folded paper from his pocket. "This came over the wire a few minutes ago. The man seems to be a thorough knave, sir. Blackmail, stocks-promotion schemes, confidence game." He laid the paper before Duane.

"And Janet's gone off with a scoundrel like that!" Duane rose and strode across the room. Then back. "Get me Andrew Gale on the 'phone. President of Mammoth Air Lines. He owes me a favor. Get him on the 'phone!"

"Yes, sir." Tooker was unruffled. "We've been trying to get him. The girl hadn't got the connection through when I came in. There!" as a red light glowed on the huge desk. "I expect that's Mr. Gale, sir."

Tooker tiptoed out as Cyrus Duane bellowed into the telephone.

The result of his conversation with Andrew Gale was an immediate order for every Mammoth plane in the region of Miami to be thrown into the search for the Fleetwing. During the afternoon, Duane talked to several gentlemen in Washington, thundering forth demands.

Women Jurists To Have Lounge

Will Cost $2,500; 'Powder Room' Has Been Asked

Women who serve on New York County Supreme Court juries are going to have a $2,500 lounging room with every facility for their convenience, it was announced by John Ahern, jury clerk for the court. Mr. Ahern said that plans for the room already had been prepared and that official approval was expected soon.

Two large circular mirrors were placed in a room assigned to women jurors on the fourth floor of the county court house.

Several Complained

The lack of adequate conveniences for women jurors has been marked since the first mixed panel was drawn, and since they began jury service several women have asked for a "powder room."

The proposal for a lounging room for them was sent to Samuel Levy, Manhattan Borough president, on May 27, Mr. Ahern revealed, and when it comes back with Mr. Levy's approval, it will be sent to the budget director for a final decision on an appropriation to cover the cost of the new installation. This, it was said, was confidently expected.

To Clean Spectacles

The best way to clean the lenses in spectacles is to polish them with a piece of fine tissue paper.

Take a piece about the size of a man's handkerchief and keep it for this purpose. The more it is used, and the softer the paper becomes, the better polish it will give.

Tasty Lunches— At Home

You are a fortunate mother if your children are able to come home for lunch every day. The noon rest makes a break in what seems to them a long school day and sends them back refreshed for the afternoon session. The outstanding advantage in having the children home for lunch is that you can give them a hot meal consisting of the foods they should have. Though hundreds of thousands of children take their lunches to school in the form of sandwiches, this is usually a necessity and certainly not a preference.

What child wouldn't rather come home for lunch when mother puts a little extra time on meal planning and turns out delicious, hot dishes that satisfy and soothe? The following lunch dishes will make a hit with both the youngsters and the adults. Casserole of Salmon, delicately flavored pink and golden brown—hot biscuits, light as a puffball—a simple green salad, and fruit—served with the grace that costs only a little thought and care. Such a luncheon gives new meaning to the old refrain "there's no place like home." This Casserole of Salmon is as easy to make and as economical as it is delicious.

And the baking powder biscuits are famous!

Casserole of Salmon

2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1 cup canned salmon, flaked
1 cup celery, diced
1 tablespoon onion, chopped
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon melted butter
6 to 8 unbaked baking powder biscuits, rolled ¼ inch thick.

Combine ingredients in order given. Turn into greased casserole; bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) 25 minutes, stirring mixture twice during first ten minutes of baking. Place biscuits on top of salmon mixture after it has baked 10 minutes; return to oven, bake 12 to 15 minutes longer to bake biscuits. Serves 4.

Vegetable Mixture

½ cup fresh peas
½ cup celery, cut in strips
2-3 cup raw carrots, diced
1 medium onion, sliced
2 tablespoons butter
Salt
Pepper.

Cook vegetables together in small amount of water until just tender. Drain. Saute in butter and season with salt and pepper. Prepare omelet; turn out on platter. Place vegetables between folded layers. Serve at once. Serves 6.

Omelet

2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¾ teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
¾ cup milk
1 tablespoon butter
4 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon colored
4 egg whites, beaten stiff.

Combine dry ingredients and milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 3 to 5 minutes), and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add butter. Cool slightly. Add egg yolks. Fold in egg whites. Pour into hot, buttered 10-inch frying pan. Cook over low flame 3 minutes. Then bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 15 minutes. Omelet is sufficiently cooked when a knife inserted comes out clean. Cut across at right angles to handle of pan, being careful not to cut all the way through.

Baking Powder Biscuits

2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter or other shortening
2-3 cup milk (about).

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cut in shortening; add milk gradually until soft dough is formed. Roll ½ inch thick on slightly floured board. Cut with floured biscuit cutter. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 12 biscuits.

Eggs and vegetables which are so necessary in growing children's diet can be combined in an appetizing vegetable omelet.

Potato Crust For Meat Pie

6 medium-sized potatoes
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
Hot rich milk.

Peel potatoes and boil until tender. Drain, then shake over low heat until dry. Rice or mash thoroughly. Add butter, salt and pepper. Whip very light with sufficient hot milk to moisten suitably. Pile roughly over top of hot meat mixture in deep greased baking dish, and brush with melted butter. Re-heat and brown in a hot oven, 450 degrees F.

Note 1. Sweet potatoes may be used instead of white potatoes.

Note 2. For pies using potato crust, fill baking dish with meat mixture only to within an inch of the rim, before adding the potato crust.

Move to Preserve Treasures of Art

Loss of Great Masterpieces Will Be Stopped

The National Gallery fronting on Trafalgar Square, London, England, is reputed to hold the second or third finest art collection in the world. And within a few moments' ride are the Tate Gallery and the National Portrait Gallery.

No one pretends to place a value on the paintings and sculpture which are housed in these galleries. They have been built up by purchase and by donation and works of art, once acquired are never sold.

Criticized

In the past six months the directors of the galleries as well as the Government have been criticized severely for failure to preserve and maintain the art treasures in England. The Government has not challenged the critics and newspapers like the Times not only concede the truth of the charges but express the deepest concern for the future.

In State of Decay

It seems that the Government, the directors of the galleries and private individuals have been so intent upon adding to the national collections of art that little thought has been given to preserving the paintings already possessed. Thus many of the world's masterpieces are in peril of being lost. In the Tate gallery, for example, three Turner's valued at $75,000 each, are in an advanced state of decay. These paintings are, "Port Ruysdael," "Pilate Washing His Hands," and "Bay of Baiae."

Unless a way is found to restore these canvases they will soon be rubbish.

His Roman Nose

Vatinius of Beneventum, a cobbler, and favorite of the Emperor Nero, is said to have been owner of the biggest nose in history.

War Affects Chinese Wedding Customs

Shanghai City Hall, Famous For Massed Marriages, Destroyed

Because of the destruction of the city hall in Shanghai the municipal government announced this week that weddings could not be held in the civic centre which has long been famous for its massed ceremonies.

In the past, scores of "foreign-style" marriages occurred there daily, the dainty Oriental brides wearing smart, Western wedding dresses with long veils in preference to native costumes.

Marriages on Increase

Despite the carnage and chaos of war, marriages all over China are steadily increasing. Orthodox Chinese parents who have been holding out against their daughters marrying until the prospective son-in-law could at least afford to give his bride a dowry, are now glad to rush through the marriages. The heavy war casualties have greatly decreased the number of eligible youths.

Wedding ceremonies have been simplified immensely and where previously elaborate ceremonies, expensive gifts and lavish banquets were considered necessary, now the most economical rites are fashionable.

"Whatever it is your duty to do, you can do without harm to yourself."

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON IV
Christian Renewal — John 10:7-16; Titus 3:1-11
Printed Tet Titus 3:1-11

GOLDEN TEXT — "For the grace of God hath appeared, bringing salvation to all men." — Titus 2:11.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time — The words of our Lord were uttered in October, A.D., 29. The Epistle to Titus was written shortly before the martyrdom of St. Paul, probably A.D. 66.

Place — Our Lord's words were uttered in Jerusalem. The Epistle of Paul to Titus was written from Rome to Titus who was residing in the island of Crete.

John Ruskin has well said. "There is no wealth but life." The question might well be asked by every man, in the quiet of an hour when he is alone with himself and with God: "What would I consider to be the richest, fullest possible life for myself, if I could have everything in the world I should wish to choose?" Then he might follow this question with another: "Is my life today as rich, deep, full, and satisfying as it can be?"

John 10:7-16. The central statement of this lesson assigned to us from the tenth chapter of John, as it relates to the general subject of our lesson for today, is found at the end of verse 10, "I came that they may have life, and have it abundantly."

The reason why Christ is able to bestow abundant life upon men is because, on the one hand, he delivers men from all those powers which rob them of life. He delivers from the power of sin, the power of Satan, and the power of death. He is able to do this because he lived sinlessly and can give victory.

The abundant life which we have in Christ extends into every sphere of our personality.

Our Lord came also to give us more abundant intellectual life. We can hardly imagine today the mental darkness of the world into which our Lord came.

More Abundant Life

Most of all, Christ is able, and he only, to give to men a rich, more abundant, overflowing spiritual life. He alone brings God into the life of man.

The epistle of Paul to Titus was written to him while he was working as a disciple of Christ and a laborer in the church in the island of Crete.

"Put them in mind to be in subjection to rulers, to authorities, to be obedient." The reference here is principally to Roman officers who were in authority in the island of Crete. "To be ready unto every good work." Good works have nothing to do with the certainty of our being saved, but good works certainly ought to be a part of the experience of everyone who is saved.

"To speak evil of no man." There is probably no greater sin among the children of God than speaking evil one of another, and this vicious habit the New Testament continually denounces. "Not to be contentious." Literally, this means not to be fighters. "To be gentle, showing all meekness toward all men."

"For we also once were foolish." That is, acting without understanding, stupidly, without discernment, which is a characteristic of every sinner. "Disobedient." Both to God's laws, and the laws of magistrates and rulers. "Deceived." As in 2 Tim. 3:13, either by the devil or by the false opinions of men. "Serving divers lusts and pleasures." With a sort of grim humor St. Paul here flashes a sudden light on what is called a life of pleasure, and shows what a slavery it really is.

"Living in malice and envy, hateful, hating one another." Are not hatred and envy the cause of nearly all murders, and most of the lies that people tell about others, and, ultimately, the cause of war itself?

"But when the kindness of God our Saviour, and his love toward man, appeared." Of course this is a direct reference to the incarnation of the Son of God, for God's love for the world was so great that he sent his only begotten Son. Until that time men hardly knew, and never knew in all the wealth of its meaning, that God in heaven loved sinners on earth.

Washing of Regeneration

"Not by works done in righteousness, which we did ourselves." All the good works done in righteousness, are worthy and commendable but they can never save us. "But according to his mercy he saved us." The mercy of God is simply his knowledge of our desperate need, and his delivering us from the fearful consequences of our desperate condition. "Through the washing of regeneration." Literally, our word regeneration simply means born again. Most commentators make the word washing to refer to baptism. However, baptism does not save us, but is a symbol of the washing away of our sins which takes place when we are born again.

It is that gradual conforming of the mind, more and more, to that new spiritual world into which he has been introduced, the restoration of the divine image.

"Which he poured out upon us richly, through Jesus Christ our Saviour." All the spiritual blessings of the new birth and of the new life are represented as flowing down to us from and out of the one fountain and well-spring of the love of God the Father.

Sinner Declared Just

"That, being justified by his grace, we might be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life." To be justified is to be declared just, and, in the epistles of Paul, it means that a sinner before the throne of holy God is declared just or righteous.

"Faithful is the saying, and concerning these things I desire that thou affirm confidently, to the end that they who have believed God may be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men." Good works are simply doing those things that bring good and blessing to other people. There are good works on a strictly materialistic basis, such as supplying clothes, food, shelter, and relief in physical distress, ministering to the sick, and the lonely, and the impoverished; but there are good works on a higher plane, such as unfolding the word of God to those who do not know it, bringing comfort in an hour of tragedy, leading others out of darkness into light, ignorant men and women, praying with others and for others, faithfulness to those who need us, etc. That great passage in Tim. 3:16, 17 reveals the supreme spirituality of what we call good works, and no man can do good works unless he is a believer in the Lord Jesus. Notice especially the word "careful." The word implies two things: "Bring your brains to bear on these truths that are being thus constantly examined; bring them into your hearts through your minds, that they may filter into the shape the life. Carefulness means the occupation of the mind with the truths that produce holiness of life. And then, secondly, there must be a direct and continuous effort to increase our faith.

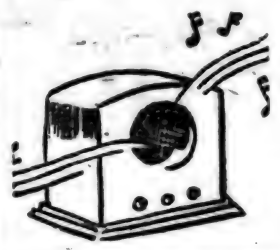
"But shun foolish questionings, and genealogies, and strifes, and fightings about the law; for they are unprofitable and vain."

"A factious man." The word indicates a man who is determined to go his own way, and so forms parties and factions in the church. "After a first and second admonition refuse; Knowing that such a one is perverted, and sinneth, being self-condemned. The meaning seems to be that, after a first attempt to induce this person to desist from his perverse and self-willed conduct, Titus is to waste no more time on him, because he knows his efforts will be useless.

"It is a kindly fate that has not given us the gift of seeing ourselves as others see us."

—Will Durant.

Church Struck By Lightning



The picture was taken of the spire of St. Joseph's Church, Riviere des Prairie near Montreal, which was struck by lightning in an electrical storm. The first was not noticed till dark, being inside the metal-sheathed steeple. The upper blurr shows the smoke and flame coming out the top of the steeple, the lower blurr being the spotlight of the Montreal firemen, who got up inside the spire and cut a hole through the flooring of the compartment where the fire had been smouldering.

Roumanian Street-Criers Stage Protest March

Incessant activity of the streets of Bucharest are the Olteni—young men from the province of Oltenia—who carry big baskets of fruit through the streets, crying their wares as they go. But the cries got so loud that the authorities decided to restrict the noise in the same way as they curb the tooting of motor horns. The itinerant fruit-men resented this and staged a "protest" march.

Around The Dial

RADIO HEADLINERS OF THE WEEK

With FRANK DENNIS

Well, here we are back again with a little more gossip about the people you hear on the radio.

The other day we slipped into the studios of CFRB, and gum-shoed our way into a studio . . . and what do you think we found—Roy Locksley and an unknown lad. Roy tells us that the lad is Joseph Laderoute—a new comer to radio—and Joseph has one of the finest tenor voces we have ever heard. We understand that Joseph is taking the tenor lead in the Mendelssohn Choir Concert in the very near future. Laderoute originally comes from the Sault. Our best wishes to you, Joseph.

Grad Presentation

Another new voice to come on the air in recent programs is that of Jack Barkin. Jack sang in Toronto some years ago, at which time he started on a night club tour. Now he is back for the Grad Cigarette Broadcast. Congratulations are in order in Jack's case, for a week ago, the stork paid the Barkins a visit. Speaking of the Grad presentation over CFRB, the program is one of the finest yet presented—featuring two minutes of practically everything that could be broadcast—sport—comedy—drama—song—and music.

Some good friends of ours just breezed into town —Norman Harris and his orchestra. The boys were summer-jobbing it up north and now are located at the Palais Royale in Toronto—broadcasting over CFRB. Frankie Radcliffe, Harris's ace trumpeter, we take it is quite a lad. No sooner than he gets in town that he calls Dorothy Daly, local songstress, and it seems that they are that-a-way about each other. By the way, Dorothy's brother, Ran, used to play in the Harris organization about a year ago.

Paging Canadian Talent

Talking to Ken Soble, he tells us that Canadian amateur talent is far from running dry. Elimination contests are being run from local theatres at Galt, Guelph, Chatham, Brantford, Woodstock, Sarnia, Hamilton and other points west. The winners are heard on the Sunday noon amateur hour. Arrangements have been made for the ultimate winner to visit Hollywood for screen tests. Who knows—there may be another Garbo or Barrymore. We think this series of programs is really giving Canadian talent an opportunity. If any of our readers would like to compete, just write Ken Soble at CFRB, Toronto.

From down below the border comes word that Murray MacEcheran, Toronto trombonist who joined the ranks of Benny Goodman's Swingeroos has left that musical organization to join Glen Gray's Casa Loma Orchestra. This brings a couple more of Toronto's musicians together. Glen Gray, if you recall, some years ago formed his band in Toronto and played at the Casa Loma when it was turned into a hotel.

Two-Piano Team

Just spoke to Lou Snider of the famous piano team of Snider and Ross. He informs us that they will put on a fifteen minute program over the CRCT, Commission and Mutual networks on Thursday, October 28 at 8:15. We recall the first time these boys played their first two piano program and we are really tickled with the progress they have made. They are also heard on the Grad Cigarette Show on Friday evenings with Roy Locksley's orchestra.

From down below came the inauguration of the 12th consecutive season on the air of the "Voice of Niagara" program, featuring the Carborundum Band and age old Indian legends related by Francis D. Bowman. This is one of the pioneer commercial programs. The programs are heard from 7.30 to 8.00 Saturdays over the CBS web.

Listeners who are great followers of series such as Ma Perkins, the Goldbergs and others will certainly appreciate Columbias new series entitled "Jenny Peabody," heard every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 3:30 p.m. The programs will originate from the Chicago studios and will feature a distinguished cast headed by Mento Everitt, well-known character actress.

Descriptive Music

Victor Bay's new program is causing a deal of comment. This new series is devoted to music describing all manner of worldly subjects under the direction of Victor Bay, brilliant young CBS conductor, with David Ross, Hollace Shaw and other stars. The program is aired Thursdays over the Columbia set from 10:00 to 10:30.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"This is just like being home!"

Bill Watson occasionally gets fed up on that out-of-town job. Work is oppressive. His pals are dull. Meals are tasteless. The outlook, generally, is bilious. Good, old-fashioned homesickness, that's what it really is — and Bill has a sovereign remedy, once he has diagnosed the case: a long distance call home. And it costs so little, too, that he has decided to forestall attacks by a regular schedule of weekly calls.

Bill's ideas are right in line with the rest of the family. The Watsons have come to appreciate fully the comforts, conveniences and low cost of Long Distance. Do YOU realize how little it costs to telephone?

SPOOK PICTURES

FROM time immemorial, from generation to generation, there have always been honest people who claimed to have seen ghosts. And during the three generations since photography came into existence people believing in ghosts have maintained that, since ghosts have been seen, they can be photographed.

Even though no ghost believer, when confronted by one, seems ever to have had a camera handy to prove this claim, speculation on the question has gone so far as to suggest that, surely, photographic chemistry will some day evolve an emulsion sensitive to the emanations of the spirit world, if such there be. The discovery and photographic use of the invisible rays of the spectrum, infra-red and ultra-violet, and of x-rays, Grens rays and other kinds of radiation for which photographic emulsions have been developed, is pointed to as giving grounds for the speculation. Certainly a fascinating, not to say alarming possibility to contemplate, but meantime, whether or not spooks exist, present day photography has no trouble at all in making synthetic spooks.

Behold the spook illustrated. It is the work of an amateur photographer. How was it made? First, with the camera on a tripod, the door was photographed and the camera shutter closed. Then without the camera's being moved or the film wound, the ghost walked into the picture, the ghost being a person dressed as such. Then a second exposure was made for half the time given the first exposure. In other words, it was simply the old trick of double exposure, by which all sorts of weird miracles may be performed in photography, depending upon the ingenuity of the photographer. Ghost pictures are among the simplest.

YOUR NAME IN MONDAY'S PAPERS!

Will your name appear in Monday's newspapers? If it does, will you be writhing with pain in the emergency ward of a hospital, will your mangled remains be resting in a funeral parlor—or will you be held by the Police on a charge of manslaughter?

If you are a motorist and value life and property, help to stop this slaughter of innocent people. The death toll from car accidents in Ontario must go down!

We are justly proud of the Police of this Province—but they cannot be everywhere. Most accidents occur when a policeman is not around. Traffic violators know better than to speed, cut in or crowd other cars with a policeman in sight.

Ontario Motorists will Co-operate

When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders.

Statue of Cleopatra Is Egypt's Chief Attraction

Though the Nile is lined with temples and statues erected to the honor of Egypt's ancient pharaohs, many travelers search especially for the one ruler who is most vivid in their minds and most expressive of Egypt's charm—Cleopatra. Actually, according to an authority, only one original likeness, sculptured in Cleopatra's own time, remains in existence—the statue on the temple at Dendera. This shows Cleopatra in the conventionally stiff, upright attitude, with the emblem of the goddess of love on her head and the little caesarion, her son by Julius Caesar, at her side.

The temple at Dendera is one of the best preserved in Egypt. But the fact that it retains its statue of Cleopatra is due to a curious circumstance. When Julius Caesar had been assassinated in Rome, his successor, Augustus, vindictively commanded that all statues of Cleopatra be destroyed.

A wealthy admirer of the great Queen, however, appealed to the cupidity of Augustus and bought immunity for her statues at the fabulous price of 2,000 talents—something more than $500,000. The image of Dendera, therefore, the only one remaining, may be ungraceful from the modern point of view, but must rank as one of the costliest statues known.

Blue Whale Is Largest; Heavier Than Elephants

Of the many species of whale, the blue whale, or, as he is sometimes called, the sulphur bottom, is the largest. The whale is not a fish, as is commonly supposed, but a cetacean, says a writer in Pathfinder Magazine. A cetacean is a mammal that lives an aquatic life; a mammal is an air-breathing, warm-blooded animal that bears and suckles its young; a fish is a cold-blooded vertebrate, living in water and breathing through gills instead of lungs, and having fins instead of fingers or toes.

Equipped with enormous heads, one-fifth to one-third the size of the body, but apparently without any neck, whales have small eyes that are set well back. These massive creatures can remain under water for half an hour if necessary, but usually they come to the surface every eight or ten minutes to breathe, then remain on the surface about two minutes, blowing eight or ten times. They are hunted chiefly for their oil and whalebone, a single specimen sometimes yielding an amount worth nearly $5,000.

One of the largest blue whales of which there are authentic records measured 88½ ft., but the average is 76 ft. The weight of a large blue whale is more than that of five elephants.

Duping the Ducks

Each season an eider duck will produce about half a pound of eider down, but it must be tricked into doing so, says Samuel J. Beckett in "A Wayfarer in Norway." Artificial nests are placed in the rocks in the haunts of the bird, and there the ducks lay their eggs. As the eggs are systematically taken away, the bird continues to sit for long periods, all the time plucking the valuable down from her breast for the nest. Lokta is one of the centers for the eider down industry.

Nature's Barometer

The Burmese, who, like the Chinese, are fond of betting, have a novel method of gambling on the rains. No one knows accurately when the monsoons are going to break, says a writer in Pearson's London Weekly, but there is a flower called the Padouk, blooming three times between April and May, which the natives carefully watch. They say in Burma that when the Padouk flowers for the third time it means an immediate downfall of rain.

Meaning of Ore Dressing

Ore as taken from the mines is usually contaminated with various impurities of no value. Mechanical methods of concentrating the valuable minerals and of separating one ore from another, as zinc sulphide from lead sulphide, are known as ore dressing. Ore is usually discharged upon bar screens called grizzlies, where large lumps of impurities can be rejected by hand. The remainder passes through various mechanical processes.

Pastures to Paints

Giotto, who painted many of the frescoes in the church of San Francesco in Assisi, Italy, was a shepherd boy when the painter Cimabue discovered him drawing sheep on flat pasture stones, says Robert M. McBride in "Hilltop Cities of Italy." Cimabue taught the lad to paint, and today Giotto's frescoes are among the most sought out by visitors to this medieval church.

Raw Sienna in Paint

Raw sienna, an earth pigment, is one of the most valuable colors used in the paint making industry. It received its name from the city of Sienna, Italy. The sienna found near this city was of a very fine, rich transparent color and possessed great beauty and color permanence. When mixed with a white base, clear and delicate tints result.

Chukar, Native of India, Found in the Far North

The chukar, sometimes called red legged partridge, is a native of India and is found as far north as the Mongolian countries. It is a bird of more or less high altitudes and frequently ranges as high as 16,000 feet, writes Albert Stoll, Jr., in the Detroit News.

The color of the plumage is grayish-brown with a bluish tinge. A black border beginning above the eyes runs along the head and neck and across the throat and encircles a light buff patch of feathers. The eyes are dark brown circled by red skin and the beak is red, brown ear feathers and red legs. Except during the breeding season it is difficult to distinguish between the male and female. In size it is larger than our quail but smaller than ruffed grouse. There are a number of sub-species of the chukar but they are more or less similar in size and plumage.

In commenting on the chukar and its habits, an authority says:

The chukars feed on grains, grasses, buds, insects, and fruit. There is no evidence that these birds severely damage crops.

Over their wide range the chukars inhabit very different types of cover but they prefer open and dry, barren plains or high mountain slopes. They seem to shun areas of heavy rainfall and thick cover.

The birds normally lay ten to twelve eggs. They are swift runners and low, fast flyers that offer good sport. Some authorities say that they lie well to a dog, others state that they are very difficult to approach. The chukars are quite aggressive and might offer severe competition for food and cover to the pheasant or Hungarian partridge. In confinement they generally kill other species of quail and pheasant and often injure or kill each other.

Florence's Pitti Palace Ruined Man Who Built It

Luca Pitti, a Florentine merchant whose riches could compete with the Strozzi and Medici families, began the Pitti palace in Florence in 1440.

One day at table with his friends, he bet that he would build a palace large enough to inclose in its courtyard the Strozzi palace, and that it would have windows larger than the coach entrance of the Medici palace. His palace was to be more beautiful than any of his friends or rivals could build.

The old story says that on the day the new palace was ready, he invited a hundred of his envious friends to dine with him, and to prove that the task had not ruined his fortune, he gave them all sacks of gold to sit on at table.

Bt the sequel tells that it was too much for him. He was overwhelmed with debts and had to sell to the Duchess Eleonora of Toledo, wife of Cosimo I, for 9,000 gold florins.

Chrysanthemum Held Sacred

In China the chrysanthemum is revered as a sacred thing, and pilgrimages are made yearly to the River Kai where natives drink of the petal-strewn waters in the hope of gaining long life. The type of chrysanthemum which grows there is a tiny plant or bush, with blossoms little larger than a "bachelor button." It is called chrysanthemum indicum and is a far cry from the giant ostrich feather types we grow in the United States. Whereas we wear our flowers and decorate our homes with them, the ancients worshiped them In Japan a yearly festival is held in their honor, at which time a festive drink is made from the petals. The imperial emblem of Japan represents a sixteen petaled chrysanthemum.

As the Tree Lives

Every living cell of a tree is at all times consuming food, breathing, and giving off waste. Trees store their food during the summer in their stems, limbs, trunks, and roots. It is carried about in the sap. Oxygen is constantly absorbed by the tree, and carbon dioxide is given off. This "breathing" results in the liberation of some heat. In the spring the tree must draw further on its reserve food supply to open its buds and put out its new leaves It is in the new leaves that food is again manufactured.

From Pastures to Paints

Giotto, who painted many of the frescoes in the church of San Francesco in Assisi, Italy, was a shepherd boy when the painter Cimabue discovered him drawing sheep on flat pasture stones, says Robert M. McBride in "Hilltop Cities of Italy." Cimabue taught the lad to paint, and today Giotto's frescoes are among the most sought out by visitors to this medieval church.

Origin of Glass

Glassware, so necessary an item of every day living and casually accepted as such, was in existence as early as the Fifteenth century before Christ. Used in magnificently colored vessels by the Egyptians for their toilet tables, and in bowls and goblets for their dining tables. This glass was difficult to distinguish from pottery, being opaque and brilliantly colorful.

The Open Column

Recently returned from a "holiday" in New York City, we have not yet ceased to congratulate ourselves that we live in a nice, sensible, comfortable place like Peel County. We are imbued, apparently, with a "hayseed" complex, for which we are duly grateful to Providence, and it would take about two months of life in New York to drive us completely insane, but only two months.

There seems to be no particular reason for the city. Like Topsy, it just grew, apparently, and has not ceased to grow, or become noisier and dirtier. Space on Manhattan Island is so limited that the pressure of population is forcing the city to take to the upper air, like a mushroom. The R.C.A. building is new since we were there last, and rivals the Empire State building in size. But traffic conditions are just the same, or even worse.

Yet driving in New York, particularly for a Canadian visitor, is simple enough. There is only one rule to be followed. Get furiously angry with every other motorist. Cut in on him. Swerve suddenly in front of him. Hog the middle of the road as long as your nerve hangs out. Pay no attention to taxi-drivers or truck drivers. Tear along without regard for anyone but the traffic cops, and the acclimatized New Yorkers will treat you with respect, even believing, possibly, that you live in the city. More hair-raising stunts are pulled in New York traffic than in any other city we have struck so far, although residents of Detroit and Chicago claim even more violent lack of control in the traffic of their home cities.

Personally, we did most of our travelling about New York by subway and elevated trains. We like the subway. It is so different from things Canadian, and usually brings the inexperienced traveller to the light of day in a different station each trip, no matter where the said traveller wanted to go when he first stepped aboard.

Then, in an auto again, it is so much fun to drive through Jersey. We wanted to go to East Orange, but the man who was driving the car had to speed along at 40 miles an hour over an elevated highway. We failed to see the sign until we were past the turn, and then, of course, could not turn around on the speedway. We got to East Orange after passing through towns we had no desire to see, and which we would much rather never have seen. A great country, America, if you can stand the pace. We like Canada.

25 YEARS AGO

From The Review, Oct. 31, 1912.

Philip Ellis-Dunn and Eva G. Ward were married on Oct. 29th by Rev. T. O. Curliss. They went to England on their honeymoon.

The fifth annual plowing match of the Toronto Township Plowmen's Association will be held on the farm of D. H. McCaugherty, on Nov. 5th.

There was a fatal collision at Streetsville Junction, C.P.R., Thanksgiving night, when two soldiers were killed and 35 injured. A military train and the Detroit Flyer collided. A whole company of 48th Highlanders was seriously injured. Dr. S. H. Smith, Coroner, took charge of the bodies and empannelled a jury who viewed the dead and the inquest was adjourned.

"The Temple of Fame" was given in the Oddfellows' Hall, Oct. 24th, by the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Church. Mrs. W. Weidenhammer was the originator of the event and acted as the fair goddess in the play.

Erindale C.P.R. station was broken into Sunday night, but the thieves did not get any money.

Local News

Mrs. Ray O'Neil, Erindale, gave a very interesting account of her visit in England, at the recent meeting of the Eastern Star, Streetsville.

Several members of Peel Chapter, Order Eastern Star, visited a Chapter at Weston Tuesday night.

Streetsville Masonic Lodge will meet next Tuesday evening. Election of officers for 1938 and other business. All members requested to attend.

The new officers of Streetsville Oddfellows Lodge for the ensuing year were installed last night.

LET US SMILE

The Admiral beamed genially upon the examination candidates for the navy.

"Whom do you consider the three greatest British sailors?" he asked.

"Drake, sir; Nelson and—er—. I beg your pardon, sir, but I did not catch your name as I entered."

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Stewart, of Kemptville, Ont., wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Eva Mary, to George Edward, son of Mr. J. W. Buck and the late Mrs. Buck of Milton, Ont. The marriage to take place in November.

PORT CREDIT

George G. Higgins, Port Credit resident, and Toronto business man, was informed by cable today that his ticket in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes was drawn among the consolation awards. He receives $500 under the nom-de-plume "Secretary."

MILTON

A new electric drill and tools stolen from the Acton Machine Co., Ltd., in Acton, one week ago Tuesday night, when thieves gained entrance through a rear window of the factory, were returned last Monday to Fred Blow, proprietor, by Constable McPherson. Sectionmen working on the railroad between Streetsville and Cooksville found the tools in a bag abandoned on the right of way near Streetsville during the week-end and notified the police.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

The Rev. George Williams, of Toronto, addressed the Streetsville United Church Congregation on Sunday morning relating his belief in Christian Missions because of the good they accomplish, the need they meet and the goodwill they express. His stories of experiences in Formosa were refreshing and deeply moving. He came close to the Head Hunters and said that there are still over 180,000 of them in the Mountain regions. These folk believe that blood, human blood, on the hands is necessary to life, and marriage depends to some extent upon the heads a young tribesman has secured.

Mr. Williams reported that over 700 carloads of fruit and vegetables had already gone to the West, with the likelihood of the number being increased to 800 or more.

The Eden Harvest Home services are being held Sunday, Oct. 31, at 2.30, when the Rev. C. E. J. Cragg, M.A., B.D., of Brampton, will preach, and at 7.30, when the Rev. J. E. Mitchell, M.A., B.D., of Port Credit, will preach.

U.F.W.O. NOTES

The U.F.W.O. met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Dowling Monday evening. In spite of the weather there was a good attendance. The president was in the chair, and the meeting opened with our club song. After the roll call, Miss Verna Dowling and Miss Elsie Temple favoured us with a vocal duet. The yearly reports were then read and Miss Freda Dowling took the chair for the installation of the new officers, which resulted as follows:

President: Mrs. J. E. Dowling.
First Vice: Mrs. T. Rogerson.
Sec.-Treas.: Mrs. H. Lee.
Sick Committee: Convener, Mrs. W. N. Steen.

Mrs. Dowling then took the chair and made arrangements for our next meeting which is to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Rogerson, Nov. 8. Every member is given the privilege to bring a friend.

Early History Halton County

By SANDY

No. TEN SCHOOL

The young men and women pioneer settlers who came to the great wilderness in Canada, in the year 1818. It is about these young settlers we are going to review some of their trials and triumphs. Settled in the North East of Trafalgar Township, Halton County, New Survey. Six years after, when children were running around every log cabin. They found themselves confronted with the responsibility of providing education for their children. Accustomed to Church and School in the old land a school was the next building after their log cabin home to be built. At that time there was no educational department or Clergy reserve fund. The enterprise, building a school, was purely local. The settlers framed their own section looking forward to the school that would be most convenient for their children.

On the 15th of May, 1824, these settlers assembled on Lot 3, 9th line, to build their first school. This was the tenth school in the Township of Trafalgar and was called "School Section No. 10".

It was similar to all the other schools of unhewn logs, plastered with mud, with clap boards for roof and floor.

It was a labor of love, the bee building this school for their children.

The following are the names of the first settlers with the numbers of their farm lots, who voluntarily connected themselves with number 10 school section, and their successors, the second names, owners of their farm now. Commencing from the base line between the old and now survey: Lot 1, Ninth Concession, New Survey, East side, Mary O'Hara, present owner, Mrs. M. O'hara; Lot 2, Samuel Rogers, present owner, John McCarron; Lot 3, where the first school was built, John Beaty, present owner, Mr. Byers; Lot 4, Francis Cummings, present owner, W. G. Cooke; Lot 5, John Treynor, present owner, Peter Stephens; Lot 6, John Highland, present owner, William Nunan; Lot 7, Philip Triller, present owner D. McGregor

Tenth Concession. The first lot mentioned faces the 9th line, the second faces the 10th line.

Lot 1, Murdock McLeodowner, present owner, Mr. Hemfly; Lot 1, John McKinnon, present owner, William McClure; Lot 2, William Sparling, string lot from 10th to 9th line, Robert Coulson, owner; Lot 2, William Sparling, string lot from 10th to 9th line, Mrs. S. McDowell; Lot 3, Rose O'Hara, the present owner, Mrs. Workman; Lot 3; Michael O'Conner, the present owner, John Beaty; Lot 4, William McCarron, fifty acres, present owner, W. G. Cooke; Lot 4, Solomon and John Cordingley, another string lot, this lot the buildings are on the 9th line, present owner, Cliff May; Lot 5, Owen McCarron, two hundred acres, present owner, Fred McCarron; one hundred and fifty acres, Bert Fullerton, 50 acres; Lot 6, William McCarron, fifty acres, John Cavell, fifty acres, James Fullerton, fifty acres, John Highland, fifty acres; Lot 6, The first two lots owned by B. Fullerton, the second two by Miss Campbell; Lot 7, John Foster Orr, present owner, Dugald McGregor; Lot 7, Joseph Orr, present owner, Wilmer Hamilton; Lot 8, Solomon Cordingley, present owner, Samuel Cordingley.

Eleventh Concession: Lot 1, Joseph Patterson, present owner, Harry Lee; Lot 2, William Dalmage, present owner, Wick Atkinson; Lot 3, Jacob McCracken, present owner, Nathaniel McCracken; Lot 4, John Sterling, present owner, Jim Bonham; Lot 5, William Robinson, present owner, John Bonham; Lot 6, John Miller, present owner, Will Sparling; Lot 7, Robert Miller, present owner, Frank Chamberlain; Lot 8, John Halliday, present owner, Anderson May.

The school was opened with due ceremony Sept. 20th, 1824, the whole section picknicking in the bush. The first teacher was Mr. Hingston. On the opening day fifty pupils were put on the roll.

Mr. Andrew Porter succeeded Mr. Hingston and taught until the school was burned in 1858. The school had been boarded up and down outside and shingled when Mr. Porter took charge fourteen years before and was in splendid shape for a fire.

Pat Dockerty, of no particular address, on a cold October night put on a rousing fire to make himself comfortable for the night when a terrible wind arose and sparks from the chimney set fire to the roof. The school was burned, but the tramp escaped, and apparently changed his circuit and residence for he was never heard of since.

The ratepayers were soon busy making arrangements for a new school. A more central site was selected, it being on the East corner of the tenth line, on Mrs. Robinson's farm. A red brick school was built in 1859. The contractors putting up the building jerryed the job, and a disastrous lawsuit was the result. Messrs. Sparling, Orr, and Robinson were the trustees. They had taken the job from the contractors but the ratepayers refused to take it from them. In the ensuing lawsuit the trustees nearly lost their farms and bad feelings were engendered in the section. The first teacher in the brick school was Squire McGill. He had a residence in Streetsville, walking out every Monday morning, boarding at Mr. John Cavell's during the week, walking home on Friday nights. At this time this was not a Union Section for the South-east side of the Town line, Toronto Township, refused to be coerced to joining with No. 10, Trafalgar. They opened a school on the town line corner, a house John Miller had built for his hired man. Here about twenty-five pupils were taught by Miss Lucy Axford, and about the same number by Squire McGill. Many of the pupils were grown men and women. Each party were proud of their own school, and had contempt for the others. The result was daily fights were indulged in, and by mutual agreement knuckles were not to be used unless on special occasions. Rough and tumble was the favourite way. When the snow was in a suitable condition for making snowballs, the girls would often take part in these skirmishes. Mr. McGill would watch these battles out of the little red school window and for anyone performing any conspicuous act of bravery would have some treat for them next day.

When Mr. McGill retired in 1863, his successor was Dr. McDonald, a very tall, stern man, who was opposed to these local battles between the two schools, and whenever he caught anyone participating in this enjoyment he would make the dust fly out of their jackets with a broad leather strap he would use freely. He was succeeded by his cousin, Mr. McDonald, a small man with a club foot. He did not have much control over the pupils. During this time Mr. Ackin was public school Inspector for Halton and was succeded by Mr. Little. Mr. McKinnon was Inspector for Peel. Then No. 10 was made a union section, Trafalgar Township paying 75 per cent, and Toronto Township 25 per cent of the expenses. Then the little frame school on the Town line was closed and Miss Axford went to the brick school to finish out Mr. McDonald's term. He only taught the first term of 1866. One day in November this school had the greatest romance for the scholars in this school's history. A young man, with a stylish horse and buggy, drove up to the school, tied his horse to the willow tree and asked for an interview with Miss Axford. After a short conference in the little porch, he had taken his departure. The teacher confided in one of the girls that the young man had asked her to marry him. This news soon spread through the school, and the rest of the day was practically a holiday. Miss Axford taught until Christmas, then married this young man, Mr. Lindsay, a farmer from Hornby.

Mr. John Hooper, the next and last teacher in the brick school, at the age of seventeen, had a certificate as public school teacher. On a January morning, 1867, this young stripling came to this school. Between fifty and sixty pupils greeted him, many of them young men and women older than the teacher.

These were the days before the institution of Model schools or any system of teacher-training. From the very first he was a success. A splendid singer and good musician, he instituted an opening and closing ceremony. The compulsory religious service of today often conducted as a mere routine at this school was approved of by all the parents and pupils, and are lovingly spoken of by pupils, now grey haired men and women. When Mr. Hooper found out a great many of the young men and women in the section had to help their parents on the farm, and could not attend day school, he started a night school, and for many nights without fee or reward, except for the knowledge that he was able to send out men and women with sufficient education to fit them for the battle of life. This night school was soon turned into a literary society, and they started to prepare for an old-time entertainment called an exhibition. Dialogues and dramas were prepared, several weeks being devoted to practice three or four nights in the week. Young people of today may go in expensive cars to picture shows and high-class entertainments, but they never can have as good a time as the boys and girls had who came to practice at the old red school. The first exhibition ever held in the section was held April 1st, 1867, a charge of 15c for adults, children 10c, children in arms free. Many good-sized children were carried in.

The ground was covered with snow, there was good sleighing and it was a lovely warm spring night. There was a pine stump fence around the school; there was no playground. But on the South corner, McCarron's farm; on the West, Fullerton's; on the North, Miller's, were rail fences. And horses hitched to sleighs were tied for a mile to these fences. This

"SALADA" TEA

HOSTAGE HEIRESS

By DAVID DRESSER

Janet Duane, millionaire's daughter, gives a party one night aboard her father's palatial yacht, anchored off Miami. Gregory Gason tricks her into being left behind wih him when the guests are taken ashore. The only other persons aboard are a crippled wtachman and Janet's Negro maid. Meanwhile, "Dusty" Lanion, lawless adventurer, has laid plans to seize the yacht to carry arms and ammunition to Cuban revolutionists. Believing the boat to be deserted, except for the watchman, who has been bribed, Dusty and his mean are about to board her.

CHAPTER VIII

It was late in the evening. Lights still blazed in the Duane office. Two wires were kept clear to Miami, and an army of clerks were busy receiving and filing messages.

Cyrus Duane still sat at his desk. He looked haggard. Fear had sucked away his strength, and uncertainty had undermined his arrogant assurance.

He looked up quickly as Tooker entered with a sheaf of papers.

"Anything new?" His voice was hoarse.

"Nothing important, sir." Tooker laid the papers before him. "I merely brought these to you because you ordered that you should see everything, sir."

Duane shuffled through the papers wearily and pushed them aside. "Sit down, Tooker."

"Yes, sir." Tooker gasped. Duane had never before asked him to sit down in his office. This affair had certainly broken the chief, he thought, as he sat down gingerly.

Utterly at Sea

"What are we going to do, Tooker?" Duane eyed him pleadingly.

"I don't know, sir." Tooker compressed his lips. "If you persist, sir, in entering into no alliance with the one man who has been represented as the most likely intermediary. . . His name has come to us from three sources, sir. All reliable, and presumably well-informed."

"Three sources? What is the third? I know only of the Miami police and the Coast Guard."

"The United States Bureau of Investigation, sir," Tooker told him suavely. "The message came from them a short while ago. They confess themselves utterly at sea. It seems that this man, sir, has wide connections with forces beyond the law in every portion of the country."

"That's just it. I refuse to deal with a fellow of that type."

Tooker said desperately, "This man is our only hope, sir! And even among law officers, he is admitted to be a square shooter."

"I can't bring myself to traffic with an outlaw, Tooker. That's what the fellow must be. By heavens, it's time our enforcers of the law were thoroughly purged if we've reached the pass where they themselves admit their incapacity to handle a situation, and advise us to turn to an outlaw for aid!"

"True enough, sir." Tooker bit his lip.

A Go-Between

"I don't see how a ship like the Fleetwing could utterly disappear. Why, it's . . . it's . . . Tooker, it cannot have happened!"

"But it has, sir."

"Yes." Duane's shoulders sagged. "It has happened."

"This man, sir," Tooker persisted. "How can there be any harm in asking his help?"

"Suppose he had a hand in it? Suppose it was he who kidnapped my daughter?"

"Oh, hardly that, sir. From what I've heard about him, there is nothing to indicate that he would stoop to kidnapping."

"Very well, Tooker," Duane gave in, with a sigh. "Have them seek out this . . . this go-between, and ask his help."

"Yes, sir. I gave the order more than an hour ago, Mr. Duane."

"You what?"

"I gave the order, sir, that an effort be made to contact the man."

"You gave the order!"

"Yes, sir." Tooker spoke firmly. "I took that responsibility, sir, feeling that you would agree with me later."

Duane gaped at him. Tooker arose respectfully and went out of the room. He felt vaguely sorry for Cyrus Duane. He had never before dreamed of pitying his employer. But he realized, now, that power and money and security of position mean little when one is faced with the realization that all these avail nothing to combat an unseen force.

Escape in a Boat

"Miz Janet! Mis Janet." Fandella's hoarse whisper startled the girl as she lay alone in the lounge of the Fleetwing a short time after sending Sakara away.

"What is it?" Janet sat up.

The yacht was throbbing with the slow, rhythmic pulsation of the engines as the Fleetwing got under way.

"Shh, Miz Janet." Fandella advanced jerkily from the door. "Git yo' coat, honey. Don' lose no time. Git yo' coat an' come on wid me."

"Where to, Fandella?"

"Come on, Miz Janet," Fandella pleaded. "I'se got hit all fixed. Deys uh li'le rowboat tied up at de Jacob's ladder thing over on de side. All we gotta do is slip out on the deck while ain' nobody lookin' an' crawl down de ladder to de boat. Den we cut de rope an' rows back to lan' afo' dey misses us."

"What good is that?" Janet asked. "We could row ashore all right, but how would we get back to civilization?"

"I done fix eve'ything. One uh dem men whut come to load de boat is uh man wut I knows in Miami. He de truck drivah, an' he ca'ies us right back to Miami slick es uh whistle soon's we gits asho'. Come on, Miz Janet. We gotta hurry, else mebbe dat scamp not wait fo' us'n."

"All right." Janet grabbed up her coat with quick decision, and they stepped quietly out into the companionway.

The Fleetwing was almost out of the cove, and Dusty was putting the wheel hard over to swing her nose clear of the point. Every light on the deck was extinguished, and the faint glow of moonlight was just sufficient to make the low-lying shore visible.

Fandella's teeth were chattering as she crept with Janet toward the railing where the sea-ladder was suspended.

"Heah's de rope whut the boat's tied to." Fandella said excitedly.

"Can you row a boat?" Janet said in a whisper.

"Yes ma'am! Jes' le' me git holt ob dem oars!"

"You go down first," Janet whispered. "Get in the boat and I'll follow you."

White Man's Food Brings On Decay

Isolated Eskimos Found Free of Tooth Trouble

Most primitive Eskimos have little tooth trouble if isolated from traders and white men's food, acording to Dr. Taylor Pyle, U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs supervising dentist for Alaska.

He said that dental cavities were rare among tribes isolated in Alaska while the Indian who has been in contact with the whive men since the coming of the Russians is constantly developing a toothache.

Free Dental Attention

As wards of the government, Eskimos and Indians receive free dental attention, Dr. Pyle said. There are about thirty-five practicing dentists in Alaska and Eskimo and Indian work is distributed among fifteen in widely separated districts. In addition, Dr. Pyle personally attends the more isolated communities, reaching them by plane, boat and dog team.

During four seasons in the far North Dr. Pyle has made a study of Eskimo teeth diet and living conditions in the isolated regions.

Dr. Pyle said that when twins are born the Eskimo believes there will not be enough brains for both, so only one is permitted to live.

Hallowe'en Goodies

The Goblins Will Get You if You Don't Watch Out

On the night when witches and goblins and black cats are abroad the youngsters will want to be out too. However, this is just about the best time for mother to throw a party at home for the young gang so that when irate neighbours wonder who broke their front gate and created other havic, you can be righteously indignant, knowing that your Johnny and George and Bobby were at home on the night in question.

The children do enjoy this evening of make-believe and appreciate it when their parents can enter into the spirit of Hallowe'en. Let them have a party, dressed in weird costumes dug out of attic trunks, give them plenty of games such as ducking for apples in a tub of water and pinnng the tal on the donkey. They can pop corn at the open grate, pull candy or make taffy apples too. But the grandest part of the evening to them will be the refreshments so give them goodies that apeal particularly to children.

The Chocolate Fudge Cake, for which we are giving the recipe below, is an old favorite, especially for parties. On Hallowe'en it comes dressed for the occasion in a new orange colored frosting.

Chocolate Fudge Cake

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspon salt
½ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted.
1 egg, well beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup milk

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add chocolate and blend; then add egg and vanilla. Add flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Bake in greased pan, 8 x 8 x 2 inches, in moderate oven 325 degrees F. 1 hour. Cover with Orange Butter Frosting.

Orange Butter Frosting

Grated rind of 1 orange
Grated rind of ½ lemon
¼ cup orange juice
2 tenspoons lemon juice
1 egg yolk
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons butter
3 cups confectioners' sugar, sifted

Add orange and lemon rind to orange juice and allow to stand 10 minutes. Strain. Combine lemon juice, egg yolk, salt, butter, and confectioners' sugar. Add orange juice until of right consistency to spread. Beat until smooth and spread on cake. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of two 9-inch layers.

For small cakes, Chocolate Marguerites will prove very popular.

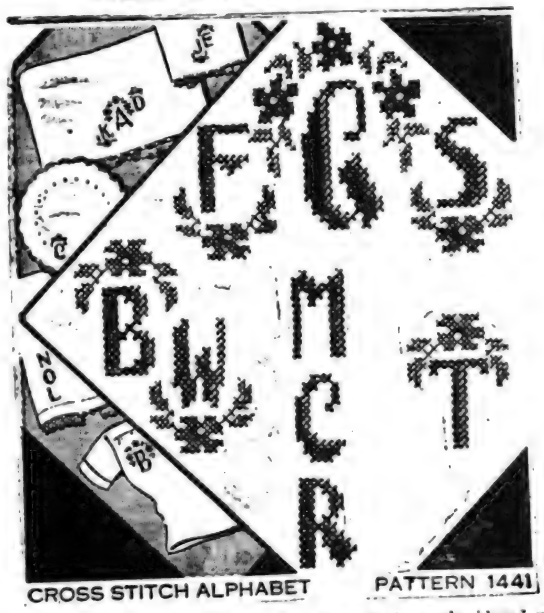
Chocolate Marguerites

1 cup sifted cake flour
⅛ teaspoon each soda and salt
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs, well beaten
2 tablespoons butter
1½ squares unsweetened chocolate melted.
1 cup finely cut pecans

Sift flour once, measure, add soda and salt, and sift together three times. Beat sugar gradually into beaten eggs. (Melt butter with chocolate and add to egg mixture; blend. Add flour gradually; then nuts. Turn into a greased small fancy pan. Place pecan half on each. Bake in moderate oven 375 degrees F. 10 minutes. Makes 2 dozen cakes.

A light, easily-prepared and much appreciated dainty for the Hallowe'en party are Jelly Jack-'O-Lanterns.

1 package quick-setting orange jelly powder
1 pint warm water
Dried currants
6 halves canned peaches, drained
6 marshmallows, flattened



Dissolve jelly in warm water. Fill wide sherbet glasses about one-third full and chill. Press currants into rounded side of each peach half to make eyes, nose and mouth of jack-'o-lantern face. When jelly is firm, place marshmallow in centre of each glass and cover with peach half, placing face-side up. Pour remaining jelly over peaches; chill until firm. Serves 6.

HOT SUPPER DISH
Casserole of Vegetables
(6 Servings)

1 cupful diced potatoes
1 cupful diced celery
1 cupful green peas
1 cupful lima beans
1 medium onion, chopped
¼ cupful rice
1 cupful canned tomatoes
1 teaspoonful salt
⅛ teaspoonful pepper
4 Oxo cubes
2 cupsful boiling water

Dissolve the Oxa cubes in the boiling water, and combine with rest of ingredients. Turn into casserole, cover and bake in a slow oven 350 degrees F. for two hours or until all vegetables are tender.

Iodine Proves Best Germ Destroyer

Iodine, the old-fashioned germicide, has been shown to be the most efficient germ destroyer when tested with a number of the newer germicides. The tests were made by Dr. A. J. Salle, assistant professor of bacteriology at the University of California. The germicides were tested on two kinds of germs, one a pus producer and the other the organism that causes typhus. It also was tested on embryonic tissues. The latter tests were made in order to ascertain to what extent the germicides injured the healthy tissue while they were engaged in the task of killing the germs. Iodine led the list in germ-killing tests and injured healthy tissues least. Of the newer organic germicides hexylresorcinal was found to be valuable for general use. The tests were made primarily to determine which germicide was best for use in surgical operations.

Bar Patrons Start Seeing Elephants

Patrons who had attended the performance at the Winter Circus in Paris the other night, crowded to capacity the bar adjoining the restaurant. There was sudden terrific commotion at the corridor door. The drinkers gave one look, dropped their glasses and fled through the restaurant exit as the barmen jumped over the counter to join in the stampede.

Two elephants butting each other and trumpeting loudly in a furious duel lumbered into the place. In an instant it was a wreck.

Amid smashed furniture, mirrors, bottles and general glassware, the animals fought until their keepers succeeded in separating them and driving one back into the corridor and toward its pen. Then docilely the other followed.

Sunday School Lesson

THE MORAL ISSUE IN THE DRINK PROBLEM (International Temperance Sunday). — Romans 13:12-14; I Corinthians 6:9-11; Galatians 5: 16-24.

GOLDEN TEXT—Walk by the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh. Galatians 5:16.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time.—The epistle of Paul to the Romans was written about A.D. 57. His First Epistle to the Corinthians was written about 59 A.D., while the epistle to the Galatians was written probably in the year 61 A.D.

Place.—The epistle to the Romans was written to Rome from the city of Corinth, in Greece; the First Epistle to the Corinthians was written from the city of Ephesus; while the epistle to the Galatians was written from the city of Corinth.

12. The night is far spent, and the day is at hand. (See Thess. 5:5). The passage may refer to our Lord's First Advent, when the darkness of heathenism began to pass away and the day of light and gospel purity commenced; it may also refer to the approaching day when the Lord Jesus Christ would come back again. Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness. "No doubt the word darkness suggests also 'the powers of the darkness,' the personal spiritual 'rulers of the darkness,' who tempt the soul and intensify its tendencies to evil. The habit resulting from these deeds is here figured as a night robe which is to be put off as the sleeper rises to conflict." And let us put on the armor of light. "There is the light of sincerity, the light of purity, the light of love, the light of joy."

13. Let us walk becomingly, as in the day; not in revelling. And drunkenness. Not in chambering. (Professor Moffat translates this word "debauchery.") And wantonness. It means not only licentiousness, but lawless insolence and riotous excess." Not in strife. That is, contention, whether it be at home, in school, among neighbors, in social circles, in business, or in a church. And jealousy.

Filled With Things of the Lord

14. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ. Christian life is not one empty of the things of the world so much as it is one filled with the things of the Lord. We shall not walk in darkness, if we put on the Lord Jesus Christ. And make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lust thereof. "Let the evil thing die of famine. Let the ungodly suggestion perish for sheer lack of food. Kill your spiritual enemies by starvation. This appears to be the principle advocated by the great apostle for the culture of the spiritual life.

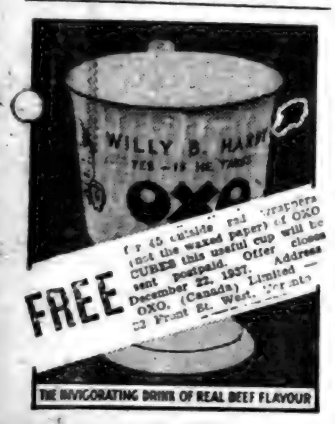
Or know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Unrighteousness is wrong doing of any kind. A person who lives in unrighteousness, the apostle clearly tells us here, and elsewhere, is one who cannot enter into the kingdom of God. Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with men. 10. Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God.

11. And such were some of you, but ye were washed. It possibly means that when they were baptized, having accepted the Lord Jesus Christ, they deliberately put away the filthiness of these sins from their lives. But ye were sanctified, but ye were justified. "It is best to take 'sanctified' in the sense of dedicated to God, and 'justified' as referring to the actual, moral righteousness of life, which is brought about by union with Christ. In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and in the Spirit of our God. No matter how great, or deep, or powerful, the sin which most easily besets us, the three persons of the Godhead can certainly subdue this sin, and deliver us forever from its power.

And ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh. The meaning simply is "life in its outgoing shall not consist in indulgence of carnal affections, being otherwise occupied, preoccupied, filled up."

17. For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; for these are contrary the one to the other; that ye may not do the things that ye would. 18. But if ye are led by the Spirit, ye are not under the law. Paul does not mean that we shall live a life in which the flesh plays no part, but that we shall not be slaves to fleshly desires, but shall live in our bodies as the Holy Spirit dictates, not as bodily desires dictate. This conflict is not present in the lives of unbelievers.

19. Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness. 20. Idolatry, sorcery, enmities, strife, jealousies, wraths, factions, divisions, parties. 21. Envyings, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; of which I forewarn you, even as I did forewarn you, that they who practise such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. A fourfold classification of the fifteen sins here mentioned has been suggested: (1) sensual vices; (2) religious vices connected with heathendom; (3) malevolent vices, enmities, strife, jealousies, etc. (4) vices of excess or intemperance.



Walk in the Holy Spirit

What should be given the greater emphasis in this lesson is not the vices which we are to put away, and deny, and triumph over, though these certainly should be spoken of, but the meaning of and the daily experience of the glorious privilege of walking in the power and under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is a person, the Third Person of the Godhead. It is by the Holy Spirit that we are indwelt. As a person, he has a most intimate knowledge of each one of us. As the Holy Spirit, his desires for us are always the most holy.

22. But the fruit of the Spirit is. "All these graces spring out of one living root. The origin of this fruit is the Holy Spirit, not man's spirit, but the Holy Spirit himself. Those who are led by the Spirit not only do not do the works of the flesh, but they bring forth the fruit of the Spirit." Love. This stands first, the root of all other graces, love for God and love for one another. Joy. "Joy is opposed to dullness, despondency, indifference, and all the destructions and remorses which are wrought by the works of the flesh. This joy is the spring of energy, and praise wells out of the joyful heart. Peace. This is the first peace with God, which has been obtained for us by the Lord Jesus Christ. This peace leads to perfect tranquility in the human heart. Longsuffering. "It enables us to bear injury without at once avenging ourselves." Kindness. The word means "the soft answer," "a loving and sympathetizing temper." Goodness. It is difficult to distinguish between goodness and kindness, though probably the latter word means the actual, visible manifestation and exercise of the virtue of kindness. Righ here one might remember that love, joy, and peace are virtues that we have in ourselves by the Holy Spirit, without particular regard to others, except God; while longsuffering, kindness, and goodness, are never developed except as we are in contact with others. They are not virtues that have to do with ourselves as we are living among men and women.

23. Meekness. "A grace of the soul which consists in habitual submission to the dealings of God, arising from the sense of his greatness and the mind's own readiness to sin. Hence then, we are to pass over the insults and wrongs inflicted by men as permitted by God, and a part of his discipline." That is, the holding in of the passions and appetites. Against such there is no law. You can never find any law on any of the statute-books of any Christian nation legislating against the virtues here enumerated.

24. And they that are of Christ Jesus have crucified the flesh with the passions and the lusts thereof. By crucifying the flesh and its passions and lusts is meant taking a deliberate and positive stand against their domination and their incitements, a reckoning of one's self to be dead indeed unto sin, but to be alive unto God.

Bathtub Songs Of Men "Best"

Science has explained away man's superiority over a woman as a bathroom singer. Sir James Jeans goes into the subject in his new book of "Science and Music."

A room of small dimensions like a bathroom, he says, will make any note below middle C "go on" echoing round and a bass or tenor voice will resound in all its richness since its harmonics are only filtered out to a slight degree. But this is not true of a soprano. Hence the peculiarly melodious pleasure of singing in the bath.

Discussing the book in an article headed "Music of Spheres?" the London News-Chronicle declares: "Sir James Jeans has explained why men sing in the bath. He ought to go and tell us how to stop them."

Canadian Arctic Maps Improved

2,000 Square Miles Added as Result of Year's Exploration

Two thousand square miles have been added to the map of the Canadian Arctic through explorations this year of two young Englishmen, R. J. O. Bray and P. D. Baird.

They came out on the mission ship, St. Teresa, in September after a year in the Arctic but intend returning "down north" again as soon as possible.

Bray and Baird, who are classifying bird and rock specimens at the Canadian archives, were members of Manning expedition, from Cambridge University.

Many Inaccuracies Existed

It was found that many inaccuracies existed on maps of the western coastline of Baffin Island and at least 2,000 square miles of territory were added. Baffin Island was found to be a huge deposit of limestone.

Baird, a student of geology, doubts if mineral deposits will be found in commercial quantities on Baffin Island.

British Would Laugh Dictator to Defeat

A dictator would be laughed out of office in six months in England, according to Sir William Malkin, K.C., legal adviser to the foreign office.

Speaking at Bury St. Edmunds School, he said: "A dictator must always be taken seriously. If he's not taken seriously he cannot dictate.

"He cannot possibly afford to become an object of humor but if a dictator ever succeeds in establishing himself in England, the English sense of humor would have him out of office in about six months."

Gold Used in T.B. Treatment

Injections Have Curative Effect In Some Cases

Gold, often charged with money as being "the root of all evil," credited with curative effects in some cases of tuberculosis.

Fifteen of 26 tubercular patients who received an injection of prepared gold showed "fairly encouraging" improvement, Dr. Melvin Tess reported in the American Review of Tuberculosis.

Increase Resistance

In the same 18-month study, only four patients in a control group not receiving the gold injections improved. All those treated were advanced cases at Koch Hospital a sanatorium, New York.

Gold-sodium-thiosulphate, containing 87.4 per cent metal, increased the body resistance and stimulated formation of scar tissue, Dr. Tess said. Increased resistance, included lowered temperature, a gain in weight and a more favorable blood court.

From six to eight grams of gold solution were injected after a 12-hour fast, Dr. Tess explained. Only a light meal follows to minimize complications, chief of which was heavy-metal poisoning.

Use Not to Be General

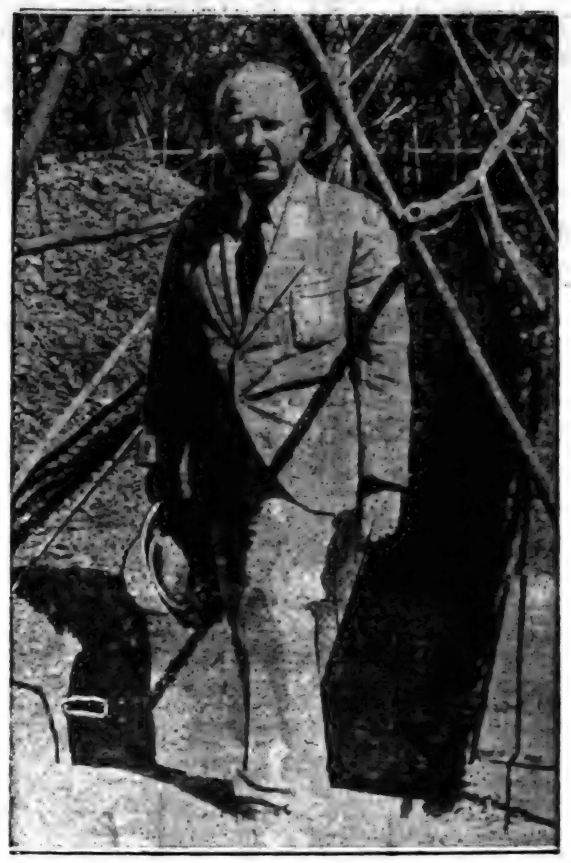
Dr. Tess stated "there is a very small number of tuberculosis patients, probably one or two per cent, in whom the use of gold is indicated. This group would consist of patients with recent involvement in whom the disease is acute or sub-acute."

He warned against use of the gold treatment by general practitioners but added, "I shall not hesitate to use gold in the future, subject to certain limitations."

Curative effects of gold were claimed as early as 12 years ago, but the study just completed was the first made with adequate laboratory tests throughout, the physician asserted.

Bread and Beans Diet Leads to Long Life

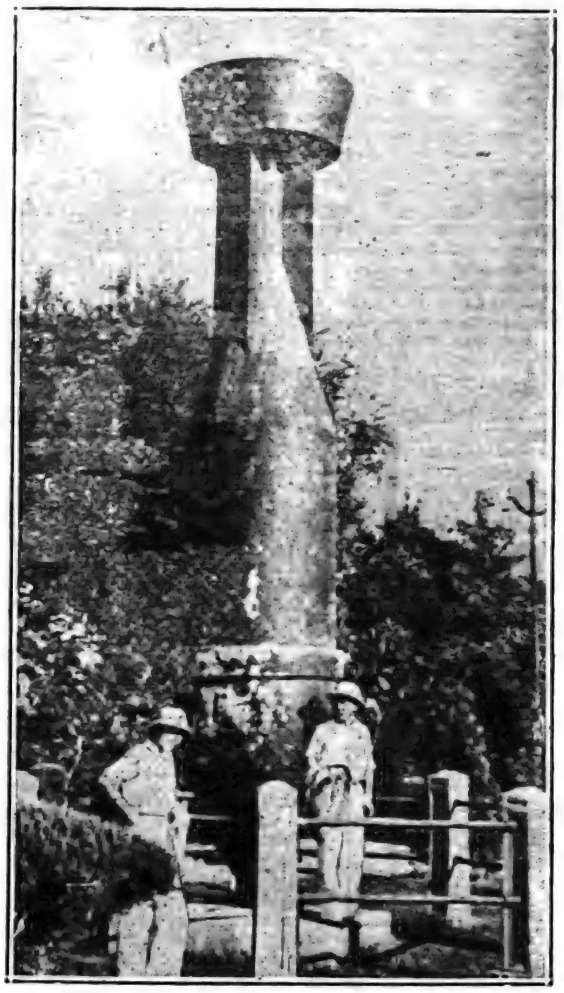
Bread, beans, and cheese may be the road to longevity.



Pavel Biskup, a young Czech doctor who has passed two years studying the reasons for the long lives of peasants and shepherds of a Balkan district, came to the preliminary conclusion it had to do with uniform diets that for generations seem to have been especially suited to the people.

In most cases, bread and beans were the most important foods. Little meat was eaten, and then only in winter.

How Smoke Is Inhaled



Many people have the idea that when a smoker inhales, the smoke goes to his lungs and is then breathed out again through the nostrils. It would be impossible for a person to stand so much smoke in his lungs without violent coughing. Even a small amount of smoke accidentally breathed into the lungs brings about instant coughing. Inhaled smoke merely goes to the back of the mouth where the nostrils connect with the throat, and then goes up and out through the nostrils. It may be puffed out of the nose or mouth by exhaled breath from the lungs, but none of the smoke itself goes into the lungs.

Summer Beard Grow Twice As Quickly

Tests Show That Whiskers Grow That Much Faster in Warm Months in Florida

In Florida, whiskers grow nearly twice as fast in summer as in winter.

The Florida hair growing experiments, announced in Science by Paul Eaton and Mary Wright Eaton of Jacksonville, indicate whiskers probably do the same everywhere else in the United States.

In Jacksonville where whiskers records were kept for one entire year, it was not possible to discover the effect of zero weather, because the lowest average temperature was 54.

N Critical Temperature 65

But it appeared that something happens to whisker speed at about 65 Fahrenheit. That, Eaton observes, is the average temperature at which heat is turned on in homes and offices.

That is the "critical" temperature for whiskers, the dividing line between fast and slow growth. In January, with an average temperature of 58, the daily growth of whiskers was a bit over a hundredth of an inch on the face measured by the Eatons.

It was two hundredths of an inch in September, when the average temperature was 79. A 12-month table shows the whiskers apparently making New Year's resolutions to grow bigger and better. From January to October the Florida whiskers grow progressively faster month by month.

September The High

September was their high. Then in October, November and December they declined. The sharp drop however came in November when the heat was turned on.

The Eaton method was to measure whiskers three times a month. This was done for three days early in the month, three in mid-month and four toward the end.

Sample whiskers were obtained by taking one stroke of a straight razor on the right cheek in front of the ear. An area of a square inch was thus harvested.

The whisker cutting was done at about the same hour every test day and always with the same technique.

Learn Chinese Etiquette From Book of Rules

It Comes in Handy to Tell Hollywood How Natives Should Act in a Film

The Chinese "Patterns of Filial Piety" proved a valuable reference in the making of the film "The Good Earth," Striving for authenticity in depicting Chinese department, speech and manners, Sidney Franklin, the director, found repeated occasion to consult this volume, corresponding very roughly to American books of etiquette but a much more important factor in the lives of the Chinese. On the set also was General Theodore Lu, technical advisor, lent by the Chinese government.

Luise Rainer, the O-Lan of the photoplay, could not walk side by side with Paul Muni, as Wang Lung, for that would have been a breach of public etiquette. A Chinese wife walks behind her lord and master.

Mustn't Bow to Younger

In one sequence Walter Connolly, as Muni's uncle, was called on to bid his nephew a happy New Year. Connolly, speaking his lines, bowed. Lu explained that the older man could not, according to the "Patterns," bow to the younger. Similarly, when children address their elders they may not adopt an informal or casual tone. An honorable prefix and a bow must accompany each salutation.

Rules for children were most intricate. When two brothers were shown at play, the older, though he was only eight, had to be sedate, while the six-year-old romped and frolicked. As an older brother it was necessary for the eight-year-old to set an example in dignity. He countenanced the little fellow's frisking, but regarded it merely as the folly of youth.

Court of Revision

Streetsville, October 25, 1937

Council met as a Court of Revision for the Municipality at 7.30 p.m. on the above date.

Present: Reeve Foster, Councillors Bailey, Meredith, Potts and Cantelon.

After subscribing to Members Oath, the Court proceeded to the business of considering appeals against the 1938 Assessment.

The following appeals were read by the Clerk. The Oddfellows Lodge complaining that their property was assessed too high. W. J. Lasky asking that his assessment be struck off as he did not intend carrying on business in Streetsville.

John Dingwall appeared on behalf of the Oddfellows Lodge and presented reasons why they considered their property too highly assessed. After considering the case the Court confirmed the assessment as it stands, Land $150.00, Buildings $2650.00. In the case of W. J. Lasky the Clerk was instructed to write the assessment off the 1938 roll.

There being no further business it was regularly moved, seconded and carried, that this Court of Revision now adjourn.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

The Young People's Society of the Streetsville United Church held a very enthusiastic election of officers on Monday night. The Powerful Public

Whatever timid governments may think of it, the general public in several lands is quite ready to apply sanctions to Japan. And the public makes and unmakes governments.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

Worst Is Yet To Come

Mr. Justice McFarland says the slaughter on the highways is becoming appalling. With a 50-mile speed limit and markers that cannot be read it is to be feared that the worst has not yet been seen.—Peterborough Examiner.

Thanksgiving In Oxford

An old hymn for harvest thanksgiving runs: "The valleys stand so thick with corn that even they are singing". The current report of the department of agriculture says that in Oxford "a great many will have corn left over after silos are filled." —Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Cruelties of Boycott

A boycott against Japan because her military leaders are bombing China might work terrible hardships on the wage-slaves of Japanese industry, who, with business as it is, earn scarcely enough to keep body and soul together. Pressure on their country scarcely could drive them to revolt, while they are in the grip of military autocracy.—Hamilton Spectator.

Hitting the Wrong Man

Perhaps municipalities are helpless because they have to shoulder their portion of the burden of relief, but that the small property owner should have to pay four or five extra mills on the tax rate after a life of effort and sacrifice indicates something wrong. He is being penalized because of the ills of others and through no fault of his own. That is where the system of social legislation is at fault. It is conceived on false premises and has a tendency to keep on the process of making people poorer. If there is any new found system in civilization which needs a thorough overhauling, it is the ways and means devised for the taxation for and the distribution of State charity.—Victoria Colonist.

The North Has a Future

Lord Tweedsmuir's notable and adventurous trip to the Far North of Canada, resulting in a great confidence in the importance of the development that lies ahead of it, will remain one of the experiences by which his term as Governor-General will always be remembered. He has certainly quickened the interest of the Canadian people in their north country, in the transformation that will inevitably take place and in the benefit to come from the development of northern resources. With Russia making great progress in the development of its northern regions, and with the richness of the resources in parts of the Canadian North already known, why should we not look to a great future for that part of Canada, long regarded as a permanent wilderness?—Winnipeg Free Press.

Absent-Minded Drivers

A news note recently reported the fact that in a survey of the American Automobile Association garages it was disclosed that 1,500,000 motorists ran out of gas on the roads in the United States last year, in spite of the fact that there is a service station at frequent intervals on all the highways. The significance of this is that it shows that there must be a considerable amount of carelessness and absent-mindedness on the part of motor drivers. The picture of 1,500,000 drivers on the roads making frantic effort to obtain gas is a striking comment on their mentality. Perhaps this neglect may seem innocent enough in itself, but the question that arises is as to its relation to serious disregard of the rules of traffic. The inference is inescapable that such inattention as failure to observe the gasoline gauges in their cars is almost certain to reflect itself in more serious directions. Absent-mindedness at any time or place is something to be strenuously counteracted, and especially in the driving of automobiles. At any rate the fact is worth pondering by those who are concerned about the increasing number of accident on the highways.—Brantford Expositor.

THE EMPIRE

China Unconquerable

China is an awkward dish to swallow. Like a string of macaroni, she is too long to swallow whole, but also too tough to bite off short. If anyone is rash enough to take one end between his teeth, he finds himself forced to go on swallowing till he chokes.—London Economist.

Sinned Against and Sinning

One may spend an instructive five minutes in any busy thoroughfare in the city watching the human hens crossing the road. They will step into a stream of fast-moving traffic with all the confidence of the children of Israel passing through Jordan. If there are traffic lights they ignore them. If there are pedestrian crossings they go out of their way to avoid them. There is scarcely a human folly that can be committed in face of such a weapon of destruction as a bus that they fail to commit. And motorists, if they are sinned against, are themselves sinners, although the rigours of the law exact from them a higher sense of responsibility than pedestrians usually reveal. But if pedestrians are afraid to use Belisha crossings in Glasgow—and there is no doubt that many are—it is motorists who have made them so. One may see, too, without looking very carefully, many instances of selfish and heedless driving by motorists who allow themselves to relax from the ceaseless vigilance and caution that is due from them as road users. —Glasgow Herald.

Use Human Hair In Making Rugs

Germany is Collecting Barbers' Sweepings for the Manufacture of Carpets

Germany is leaving no mouth unopened nor head of hair uncut in her efforts to save valuable metals and to utilize waste matters in the production of synthetic materials. Gold as a stopping or crown for teeth is strongly discouraged by the German Government, and its place is being taken by an alloy of palladium, a metal of the platinum family, which is cheaper, lighter and stronger than gold. The new alloy for dental use contains only five per cent of gold.

300 Tons

Hair cut from customers' heads is being swept up from the floor, and after treatment used in the manufacture of carpets and felt. Hair of not less than one-third of an inch has long been used in the making of certain fabrics, but recent research has shown that still shorter hair can be commercially utilized. It is hoped to collect and use about 300 tons of the men's hair every year. Women's long tresses, regularly used for making of wigs, plaits and hair-nets, will be used for more important commercial purposes in the future.

Huge Property Lacks Owner

Valuable Land in Hungary Has Not Seen Possessor For 20 Years

Somewhere in Britain may be an elderly retired sea captain named Bruce for whom the Hungarian authorities are searching. He is the owner of valuable land on the outskirts of Budapest and if he — or his heirs — do not lodge a claim within a few weeks the land will be sold and the money will go to the Hungarian Revenue Office.

The land, 850 square yards, lies just above valuable mineral springs, the water from which contains remarkable medicinal powers.

Not Since the War

When the authorities were reassessing that part of the city for taxation purposes, they discovered that the owner was missing. They sent out demand notices which were not answered and eventually officials went along to investigate.

They found a small cottage in the centre of the property, occupied by a caretaker named Josef Posch, who had been given the job in 1903, and who helped his master, Captain Bruce, to dig wells and bottle the waters. Then came the war, and Captain Thomas Andrew Bruce returned to England. The Hungarian authorities have not heard of him since.

Retired Sea Captain

"The owner told me he was an Englishman," Posch told the authorities. "He was a retired sea captain and had some money which he intended to invest in exporting the mineral water.

"I last saw Captain Bruce in June, 1914. I know that when the war broke out he left Hungary and went back to England. He has never been here at all since."

Although the giant whistles of the Queen Mary, English liner, can be heard five miles away, they are pitched so low that they cause no distress to the ears of passengers.

Needles were first made in the year 1545, when the making of pins was a good day's work.

British Economist Says World Facing Disaster

Sir George Paish Sees Self-Sufficing Policy Ruining All Nations — Rearmament "Must Eventually Lead to War"

The whole world is following a policy which, if continued, means disaster for all countries without exception, Sir George Paish, British economist, says in an article in the current issue of International Conciliation, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The political and economic situations, he says, each becomes more difficult as the other becomes more difficult. Rearmament "must eventually lead to war" unless there is a change of outlook and action. Internal difficulties may also lead to war or revolution.

Government credit, he says, is really the final reserve of a nation, and "the world's recovery has come in large measure because the world has been using its ultimate reserves. The world's buying power has been greatly increased by the use of these ultimate reserves, and it will be reduced correspondingly if and when those reserves come to an end and are no longer available."

Depending on Foreign Trade

Because of fear that this may happen, and the fear of each nation that it will not be able to support its people, each nation has been attempting to become self-sufficient. And if Government credit is exhausted, this policy of self-sufficiency may be accentuated, and the result, Sir George says, will be "privation and starvation in every country, for all nations today depend for the maintenance of their people, upon the foreign trade which has grown to be so important."

Free Exchange Urged

Nations, he says, after pursuing a policy of increasing, inter?dependence for over a century, are now endeavouring to be self-contained, "and the consequence must be inevitable disaster, unless the policy can be changed."

Free exchange of natural wealth and of capital for development of the wealth is the solution Sir George suggests.

Doctor Advertises To Stop Suicide

Is Thanked By Unknown Voice Over Telephone

"Many thanks doctor for your advice. It was kind of you to take the trouble of trying to stop a distressed woman from committing suicide." This was the message Dr. Rosario Fontaine, Quebec medico-legal expert, received from an unknown woman over the telephone.

The doctor tried in vain to check the telephone number but he learned that the call had come over an automatic telephone.

The call leaves the criminologist perplexed because he does not know whether the mysterious woman on the telephone was the woman who sent him the letter threatening suicide on Friday, or whether it was just a citizen who was pleased with the manner in which he had brought the matter to public attention.

Unidentified Woman

Dr. Fontaine has been the recipient of hundreds of letters and telephone calls at his home and at the medico-legal laboratory offering him cash contributions, ranging from $25 to $50, if he could identify the unknown woman. In addition, there have been scores of letters offering positions.

The doctor offered his thanks to the senders of all these messages of goodwill, and he had decided to take a hand himself in securing a position for the unknown, besides giving her the benefit of all the other aid offered, should he succeed in finding her.

At the present time the doctor is wondering if the woman is dead, or whether his appeal was made in time to save her from self-destruction.

Desert Murderer Hunted on Camels

Bushman Who Shot Police Guide With Poisoned Arrow Wanted

A police patrol mounted on camels, are searching the great Kalahari Desert, South Africa, in search of a murderer who killed with a poisoned arrow.

The wanted man is one of the few remaining members of the primitive race of Bushmen.

A police patrol of eight men commanded by Sergeant J. Upton, with a native guide, raided a camp of Bushmen 150 miles northeast of Gobabis. The camp was seemingly deserted, but suddenly three arrows came from ambush. One of these poisoned arrows hit the guide. A native police sergeant shot one of the attackers dead, and the other fled.

The wounded guide lived for two and a half days while Sergeant Upton, who had slung the victim across his camel saddle, raced for the nearest medical assistance. But the guide died before a doctor could be reached.

Now the same patrol has taken up the hunt for the killer.

Chinese Deliver Blow

SHANGHAI. — Chinese military sources report that China's northern armies, spearheaded by China's famed "Red Napoleon," Chu Teh, have delivered a stunning setback to the Japanese along a broken 500-mile front from Shansi to the sea.

The reports said Chu Teh's veteran Eighth Routers, hard-bitten remnants of China's old "Red Army," had cut through the Shansi border into Hopei Province, and were attacking the Japanese from the rear.

Secretary Hull Visits Canada

OTTADA.—United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull, arrived at Ottawa on a visit to Governor-General Lord Tweedsmuir, was given the usual colorful reception accorded distinguished guests.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Arthur Redfern, private secretary to the Governor-General, headed a party of officials who greeted Secretary Hull when he stepped from his private car shortly after noon.

Mussolini Backs Down

LONDON. — Premier Mussolini, running up against a dangerous British-French front, suddenly dropped his defiant attitude and agreed this week to collaborate in a plan to withdraw his Fascist Blackshirts and other foreign "volunteers" from Spain.

Il Duce's conciliatory gesture, which came as a surprise even to Italian diplomats in Rome, held out hopes of solving a three-way deadlock with the Non-Intervention Committee and averting a crisis crammed with possibilities of war.

The Non-Intervention delegates, quick to seize upon Italy's consent to sending a neutral "volunteers" commission to Spain at once, agreed that it constituted "a substantial degree of progress" and asked that immediate steps be taken to put the proposals into operation.

The Market Recovers

Stock markets in Canada and the United States this week continued the vigorous rebound which started at the low levels of the security price avalanche which threw the investment world into a panic last Monday and for the first part of Tuesday's trading. It was generally agreed on the floors of the exchanges, in the brokerage houses and in banking quarters that trading later in the week was healthy and confident in marked contrast to the "jitters". More attention was being paid to intrinsic values and to long-term prospects of companies.

Arab Attacks Continue

JERUSALEM. — Elusive snipers kept alive the wave of terrorism in the Holy Land this week-end by a series of attacks in hallowed Biblical settings.

The new attacks were a continuation of the outbreaks which have resulted in thirty-nine deaths — six Jews and thirty-three Arabs — since Great Britain, as mandatory power, proposed the partition of Palestine July 7.

Autonomous Mongolian Gov't.

Formation of an "autonomous" Mongolian Government in North China was announced by a Japanese spokesman this week.

The Government's capital will be Kweihua, in Suiyuan province, and Prince Teh, heredity ruler of the Sunnet tribes, presumably will be its head.

Italian Capital Taxed

ROME.—A 10 per cent. levy on corporate capital to provide funds for imperial development in armaments was decreed by the Italian Council of Ministers this week. It is expected to raise between five and six billion lire.

Turnover taxes were raised from 2½ to 3 per cent. with minor stamp duties added. At the same time a move to attract foreign investors was made by fiscal concessions and freedom from debt duties for 20 years, on capital coming to Italy before December 31, 1939, together with a declaration that such capital cannot be sequestrated even in time of war, without indemnity.

News Parade

Commentary on the Highlights of the Week's News . . . by Peter Randal

Babes In Gas Masks

The British Home Office last week practised with babies in a nursing home at Hawkshurst, Kent, as models for fitting gas masks that will serve the rest of Great Britain's baby population in the event of an air raid. A very wise move on the part of the Home Office, we think, since should another war break out, is it not the babes in arms who will get the worst of it?

Stock Market Toboggans

Weakened by a steady retreat since mid-August, the New York, Montreal and Toronto stock markets went down before a selling whirlwind last week into the worst crash in more than four years. Losses in some leading industrial issues mounted as high as $10 a share, and sixty-five per cent. of the gains of the past two years were wiped out. Though the cause of the crash largely remains a mystery, some authorities blamed the undue optimism at the beginning of 1937, and the excessively glowing reports on business that were made at that time. President Roosevelt refused to intervene, would not close the New York exchange nor lift trading restrictions. The day following the crash, however, saw a revival of the market when huge international investment trusts with billions of dollars in resources stepped in and bought from speculators who were frantic to sell. It was feared in some quarters that a major depression would follow close upon the crash, but it is now pretty generally felt that the set-back is only temporary.

Asks Improved Banking System

President Roosevelt speaking at ceremonies dedicating the new Federal Reserve Building at Washington declared that the Government of the United States must improve and co-ordinate credit machinery if it is to "achieve and maintain an enduring prosperity, free from the disastrous extremes of booms and depressions." The banking system will have to be further improved, he said.

May Solve Our Biggest Problem

Canada's "greatest problem," finding a satisfactory basis for relations between the Dominion and the Provinces—in other words, "keeping Canada united"—may be solved by the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations, headed by Chief Justice Rowell, in the opinion of Federal Revenue Minister, Isley, just returned from a conference at Geneva, Switzerland. "At the present time," he said, "we have an outbreak of sectionalism in Alberta that is formidable."

Campaign Against Czechoslovakia

Germany this week intimated that it will not cease its "aggressive menacing press campaign" against the Czechoslovakian Government as long as the Czech police continue to down pro-Nazi demonstrations in that country. The German Government alleges that the German minority in Czechoslovakia are receiving brutal treatment at the hands of the police. The pro-Nazi agitation in Czechoslovakia has, of course, the approval of the German Government which hopes to gain independence for the region in which most of the Czech-German minority live.

Italy Capitulates

Finding that he could no longer [illegible] on the Spanish war participation issue, Mussolini, after giving all the countries of the world a bad scare last week, dropped his defiant attitude and agreed to co-operate in clearing Spain of "volunteer" foreign troops. Faced up against a formidable British-French front, he discovered that withdrawal from his belligerent attitude was the only way out. Thus another crisis crammed with possibilities of war was averted.

Kellogg Brands Japan

Declaring that he could reconcile Japan's present policy in China "neither with the letter nor spirit of the Kellogg-Briand Peace Pact," Frank B. Kellogg, co-author of the pact and former U. S. Secretary of State, said at St. Paul, Minnesota, last week, that the hope of the world for peace depends upon the faithful adherence of nations to their plighted word. The society of nations can exist only upon a foundation of mutual confidence, he believes.

Brazilian Unrest

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil—Faced with growing political unrest in Rio Grande do Sul state as a consequence of the resignation of Governor J. A. Flores da Cunha, President Getulio Vargas this week decreed Federal intervention in that southern state.

Gen. Eurico Daltro Filho, commander of all military forces there, was named intervenor for one year.

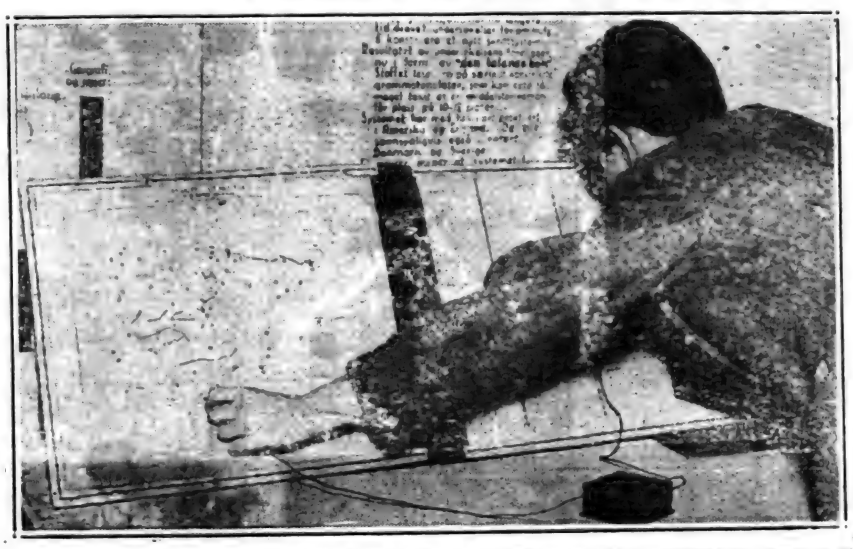
Famous Scientist Dead

CAMBRIDGE. — Lord Rutherford, one of the world's leading physicists and director of Cambridge University's famous Cavendish Laboratory for the past 18 years, died this week, aged 66. Lord Rutherford was Macdonald Professor of Physics at McGill University, Montreal, from 1893 to 1907.

The eminent scientist, winner of the Nobel Prize for chemistry in 1908, failed to rally from an abdominal operation.

Sarraut Appointed

PARIS.—The French Government has announced that appointment of former Premier Albert Sarraut as director of French North African affairs resulted from a loss of power by local authorities because of "too much interference and outside influence."



The Cabinet named him to the new post and gave him powers of "control and co-ordination" of general policy in North Africa.

Trinidad Buys More Horses in Canada

Canadian horses of the saddle type are proving eminently satisfactory for constabulary work in the British West Indies. A shipment of 12 horses, 15.3 hands high, weighing approximately 1,150 pounds each and from 4 to 6 years old left Montreal on September 30th for the Trinidad constabulary, being the fifth consecutive annual shipment from Canada that has been made to that island and Barbadoes. The horses that made up the recent shipment, like the other four shipments, were all bays and chestnuts, untrained for saddle purposes. They were purchased in the Brampton and Ailsa Craig, Ontario, breeding station districts, and were personally selected by Staff Sergeant Farrier Dingley, of the Trinidad Constabulary.

So satisfactory have Canadian horses proved for constabulary work in Trinidad and Barbadoes that it is understood that all future supplies of mounts for the Islands will be bought in Canada.

Take Precautions to Halt Invasion of Japanese Fleet

[illegible] of the large steamers that have been sunk in the Whangpoo River, opposite the Bund in Shanghai, China, to prevent the progress of Japanese troop ships upstream. By blocking the river, the defenders hope to make comparatively safe landings of Japanese troops an impossibility.

Canadian-American Friendship To Mark Royal Winter Fair Opening

Enhancing the cordial Canadian-American association which for sixteen years has characterized the Royal Winter Fair, the Hon. Norman Armour, United States Minister at Ottawa is formally to open the Fair during the evening horse show performance of Tuesday, November 16th. Many of the 15 trophies of the Royal owe their distinctiveness to the friendly rivalry of American and Canadian competitors.

Their Excellencies the Governor-General and Lady Tweedsmuir will make their official vice-regal visit, now a fixed tradition, on Monday evening, November 22nd. On the following day His Excellency will informally spend some hours at the Fair in a general inspection of the live stock and other exhibits in its eighteen sub-divisions.

As "Regal and Imperial Year," the Winter Fair is dedicated in loyal tribute to their Majesties on their coronation. Special trophies and ribbons will carry a memento of the historic event while the decorative scheme for the Royal Coliseum will be in keeping with the idea.

Five army officers' teams, those of Belgium, France, Irish Free State, Holland, and the United States, have been invited through the customary diplomatic channels to compete with Canadian Army Officers.

Boom in Jaffas

Five years ago, the export of Jaffa oranges from Palestine was comparatively small — about 3,700,000 boxes a year. But since then production has gone up by leaps and bounds, and it is estimated that the total export figure by 1940 will be more than 20,000,000 boxes.

SLICED VERY THIN

By Sixbits

"No Matter How Thin You Slice It — It's Still Boloney"

It is some years since we attended any horse races—but if we could only find the same bed of four-leaf clovers that Argonauts must have grazed in prior to their game with the Montreal Indians we think we might desert our well-ventilated perch on top of the Varsity Stadium grandstand this Saturday and go out and take in the last day at Dufferin.

Not that the Scullers didn't exhibit a whole lot of nice football between fumbles—but with the same kind of luck that they had in recovering loose balls we think we could run a seven horse parlay and come home with at least half of the Dufferin grandstand.

But if the Indians got few if any of the breaks, their Montreal fellow-townsmen—although maybe it is lese majeste or something to call McGill team fellows of a rude city outfit—seem to have got none the worst of it in their tangle with the lads from Queen's Park; and it must have been fairly painful for Warren Stevens—the man who first showed Canadians the true possibilities of the forward pass—to see a game snatched clean out of their grasp by means of that very same play, twice repeated.

From this distance we are not going to try second-guessing the officials in charge of that game in Montreal; although, if the newspaper accounts we read of that affair were not somewhat screwey, the decision that gave McGill that winning touch would seem to be slightly that way.

We will say, however, that no matter what the rights and wrongs of the case, the Varsity pass defence must have slipped very badly to allow those Montreal heavers to sink home those money passes, especially when they must have known that they were coming. And we hope their faces were properly rosy in the dressing room after the game. As we used to say up country when we were a lad—if a dog bites me once, shame on him; but if the same pooch takes a nab at me twice—shame on me.

Which—now we come to think of it—might be very well applied to the stock-market situation as well as to football.

• • •

Like what another old-time horse-player remarked to us when we ran across him the other morning. Walking down Bay Street we took a gander into one of those broker offices, and saw there a flock of citizens, their eyes glued on the changing figures on the odds-board, or whatever you call it, and their expressions that were by no means pleased or happy.

"Give a look," says our friend. "See all those people engaged in high finance—those are the same kind of folks that used to call you and me goofy for betting on horses and shooting dice and the like."

• • •

However, every man to his own favorite poison; and if you have the bug for gambling in your system—whether you call it that or some politer name—it is pretty hard to eradicate. We read a piece recently which said that race followers, down New Jersey way, are finding it difficult to see sufficient white horses out the race-train windows on the way to the track to make betting on their number very interesting.

We can recall when that used to be a very favorite way of passing the time when going to the races. You would take a window on one side of the train, and the man you were wagering with would take one opposite—and whichever saw the largest number of white nags would win the stakes, which sometimes rose to fairly large dimensions.

So large, in fact, that there was one guy who got so lucky in this pursuit that there was some suspicion that he had arrangements with farmers along the line by which they would park their white horses in the proper situation each day.

• • •

This may, of course, have been nothing but suspicion — and groundless, at that. However, when the first modern elevators—with floor indicator above the doors—appeared in a down-town hotel, and the boys would wager on what floor a certain car would stop at, this same chap also seemed very lucky at this, until it was discovered that he was working a nice little arrangement with the elevator jockeys, and when the betting grew heavy enough to be worth while, would slip them the high sign just where to stop on the next trip so as to be most profitable to him.

He believed, in fact, in taking as much as possible of the gamble out of gambling, and when last heard of was down south of the line somewhere running a flock of slot machines; which—if we know him—are probably rigged so that there won't be more than ninety per cent. in favor of the house. Or not very much more.

An Honor Well Bestowed

One of the medals struck in commemoration of the Coronation of their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth has come to Editor Rixton Rafter of the Arthur Enterprise. Commenting on this honor, he writes: "Why we have received this recognition we are at a loss to know, or to whom we are indebted for it, but certain we are that no recipient of this decoration among the loyal subjects of their Majesties appreciates it more or accepts it more gratefully."

But, as the Dundalk Herald says, many people have "a pretty good idea" why this editor was singled out for distinction. Mr. Rafter is blind, but he gets out one of the good weekly papers of the Province, and writes his own editorials: clever, well-written editorials. A reader keeps him posted on public affairs and news generally; then he makes selection of what he wants to use in his paper; and he uses a typewriter. Though sightless, he secured at the University of Toronto his B.A. degree.

This is another instance of the compensating faculties apparently given to those who lose their sight; also a philosophy that enables them to face life and its problems cheerfully. As the Dundalk paper puts it: "Isn't a man who triumphs over his great handicap the way Mr. Rafter does worthy of a Coronation Medal? We'll say he is." So do we.—Globe and Mail.

A kind-hearted English vicar one day observed an old woman laboriously pushing a perambulator up a steep hill. He volunteered his assistance and when they reached the top of the hill, said, in answer to her thanks:

"Oh, it's nothing at all. I'm delighted to do it. But as a little reward, may I kiss the baby?"

"Baby? Lor' bless you, sir, it ain't no baby, it's the old man's beer."

It ain't what a man gives, but the way he gives it that shows his true character.

Canadian Pacific Has Newest In Locomotives

Power, speed, an attractive semi-streamlined appearance, and the ability to haul heavy trans-continental trains more than 800 miles without change of engine are the outstanding features of 30 new 4-6-4 locomotives, numbering from 2820 to 2849, recently brought out by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

H. B. Bowen, chief of Motive Power and Rolling Stock, Canadian Pacific Railway, has embodied in the design of the locomotives the popular semi-streamlined appearance which he first developed in the 3000 class Jubilee type engines, as well as many of the other interesting details which were developed in connection with the Jubilee design, and which have been proven to be satisfactory in service.

Even more important than the trim appearance of the new locomotives, however, is their performance. Five of them, equipped with booster, each has a tractive effort of 57,000 pounds, which means that one engine can haul 4,789 tons or a weight approximating that of 100 loaded freight cars. As for staying power—they will be used on long runs such as the 813 miles of heavy grades and sharp curves between Toronto and Fort William and the 832 miles between Winnipeg and Calgary, where they will operate without change of engine. Latest engineering developments are incorporated in these newest Canadian locomotives, making them ideal either for fast passenger or heavy freight trains.

This new group of locomotives together with 20 lighter locomotives of the 4-4-4 type now under construction, combined with the power already in service will give the Canadian Pacific Railway one of the largest fleets of powerful modern locomotives on the North American Continent.

W. BAILEY & SON

Streetsville, Ont.

SNIDER'S

Mrs. Earl Albertson entertained the members of Wesley W.M.S. on Wednesday, October 13th. The president, Mrs. Roy Fish, arranged a Thanksgiving program. Among those taking part were Mrs. H. Post, and Mrs. J. McSparrow in readings, and Mrs. C. N. Fish and Miss A. Marshall, a duet. An interesting feature was the individual note, each person present citing something for which they were thankful. Used clothing and literature for the bale for the West was asked to be handed in this week. The thankoffering will be taken at the November meeting. There was an attendance of twenty.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Jewitt, Oshawa, visited for the week-end at the home of her father, Mr. D. Turner.

Mrs. A. Fish has returned from a visit to Hamilton. She was motored home by her sister, Mrs. A. Ayearst and Mr. Ayearst.

Miss Dolores Colgan, Toronto, was a recent visitor with her cousin, Miss Mary Shea. Mr. Charles Shea, Toronto, is staying with his brother, Mr. T. V. Shea, while completing work in Oakville.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Thomas and family have removed to Summerville.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the service at Wesley Church on Sunday.

Mrs. Wilson Duke, Mono Mills, who has been visiting her father, F. A. Forster, and sister, Mrs. Cecil Fish, returned home on Sunday with Mr. Duke, who motored down for her.

Mrs. Shaw, Sr., Toronto, is visiting at the home of her son, Mr. J. Shaw, Dundas Highway.

NOVEMBER 11TH IS POPPY DAY

The symbolism of the poppy, the sorrowful appropriateness of its blood-red bloom, takes on a deeper significance with each succeeding year. The Great War is passing almost into legend; a generation is bequeathed the duty of carrying into the years that have yet to come, the work and the ideals of those whom the Poppy commemorates.

Canada, along with the whole Empire, has adopted the Poppy as a symbol of Remembrance Day, because of the 60,000 graves in France and Belgium in which lie the dead of the preceeding generation; because of the 170,000 Canadians to whom the conflict brought disablement of one kind or another. The crosses in the cemeteries of Flanders are garlanded with Poppies—dolorous emblems of a nation's youth consumed in the "Wrath-red forge of war."

On Poppy Day this Dominion pauses in its normal activities to recall the sacrifices of its young men, to pay tribute to their heroism, their hardihood and the uncomplaining fortitude with which they bore their privations and sufferings. At the same time, Canada strives to liquidate in some small measure, an obligation to those disabled men employed in the Vetcraft Industries of the Country, whose only means of livelihood is the making of these simple emblems.

The Dominion wide ramifications of the great Canadian Legion, with its tens of thousands of workers on Poppy Day, take care of the distribution of these Poppies throughout Canada. There is thus ensured to their disabled Comrades in these Vetcraft Shops a loyal performance of a sorrowful yet prideful task. All Canadians of every age and degree should wear a symbol on Poppy Day. For that is surely a day of reconsecration and of rededication to the work on hand, of continuing the structure of civilization where the workers of a previous generation left off.

"KINDNESS"

"Kindness is wisdom; there is none in life but needs it, and may learn."—Bailey.

"If selfishness has given place to kindness, we shall regard our neighbor unselfishly, and bless them that curse us; but we shall never meet this great duty simply by asking that it may be done. World's Greatest Plague Being Overcome

Not so many years ago, consumption was the world's greatest scourge. It is still a deadly menace but not so potent because of the effective means which have been taken for its prevention and cure.

The physician, the dietitian and the sanitation expert have all combined and with the aid of the sun and fresh air and rest, have materially checked the great inroads which tuberculosis made upon our population.

The National Sanitarium Association operates the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children, which combined have a total capacity of just over 1,000 beds. They are thoroughly equipped and have all facilities for the modern treatment of this disease, and it is largely through their efforts that the death rate from consumption has been so greatly reduced.

These hospitals are not operated for the well-to-do but are maintained solely for the poor who are afflicted with tuberculosis and are without means to pay for their treatment and care.

It requires a great deal of money to operate these institutions, far more than they can hope to receive from statutory allowances, and it is only with the cooperation of many generous friends that they can continue to carry on.

Many thousands of dollars will be needed to cover the shortage on operating this year. Will you please assist by sending a contribution to the National Sanitarium Association, 223 College Street, Toronto 2.

McQUESTEN DECLARES PRESS MOST POTENT SAFETY FORCE

Claims Cooperation in "Fear" Campaign Has Saved Many Lives on Highway

THANKS EDITORS

Toronto, Oct. 26—The press of Ontario is the most important single factor in the war being waged against highway deaths and accidents, according to an opinion expressed this week by Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways for the province.

"Although conclusive statistics have not yet been completed," said Mr. McQuesten, "there can be no question that the 'fear' campaign which the highways department has conducted during the past several months has had a definite effect on the reduction of the horrible carnage and needless waste which has been stalking our highways.

"It is quite evident," he declared, "that whatever success this campaign has achieved is due in great measure to the whole-hearted cooperation which has been extended to the Department of Highways by editors in every Ontario community, and I wish through the medium of the press to extend to them this department's warmest gratitude for the public-spirited way in which they have used their news and editorial columns to save human lives and prevent misery and destruction."

Comments have been pouring into his office every day, the minister said, both from motorists and pedestrians concerning the effectiveness of the department's campaign. The most significant, he maintained, came from scores of travelling salesmen and truck drivers.

"These men," said Mr. McQuesten, "are driving on the highways every hour of the day and each day in the week. They, perhaps more than any other groups, are more quick to observe changes in the driving habits of the motorists of the province, and they have been almost unanimous in commenting on the general improvement in highway motoring. They report less cutting in, less passing on hills and curves, and a noticeable reduction in all the bad, careless, thoughtless habits which result in death and destruction on the highway."

But there is still much work to be done, pointed out the minister. People are still being slaughtered on the roads of the province, and automobiles are still piling themselves up in twisted heaps of wreckage. The war against thoughtlessness, recklessness and stupidity on the highways must be carried on until people can travel in complete safety and pleasure.

To this end, he called for the unceasing aid of Ontario editors and every pedestrian and motorist in the province.

"The Department of Highways," stated Mr. McQuesten, "is doing everything it can to design and construct highways which will be as accident-proof as engineering science can make them, but this can be of little effect unless the human beings who travel the highways take upon themselves the responsibility of controlling the ever-present 'human factor' in accident prevention. Engineers can mold concrete and steel to the ends of safety, but no force more potent than the press has been found which can mold human minds into paths of life-saving thoughtfulness."

was a night to be remembered. Mr. George Douglass, then in his prime, delighted the audience with his splendid rendering of "Rabbie Thompson Smiddy," and "Come Under My Plaidie." Miss Sterling, a winsome young girl and popular singer, (afterwards Mrs. Robert Graydon, Streetsville), delighted everyone with "Tommy Don't Go" and "Swinging in the Lane."

The teacher, John Hooper, and Miss Mary Miller, afterwards (Mrs. John Cooke), gave several splendid duets. In the dialogues, Malcolm McGregor took the charcter of "Paddy Miles" and "Handy Andy." Others taking part were: Guy Orr, Ellen Margaret Orr, Henry Cooke, Maggie Cooke, Alex Cooke, Joseph Fullerton, Becca Halliday, Dave Cordingley, Mary Cordingley, Marie Cooke, Agnes McGregor, Jake Miller, Charlie McGregor, Ella Nunan, Ella Beaty and George Beaty.

The proceeds of this entertainment was used to purchase prizes for the pupils. The teacher, John Hooper, and Malcom McGregor, picked the books and what books they were. The works of the great immortals of the ages, given the boys and girls, "Treasured Volumes." The works of the great poets are exhibited with pride today, the fly leaf showing they were given as prizes by John Hooper. Many private homes have libra[illegible] stocked with the best books on account of the literature instilled into the boys and girls in the brick school.

When Mr. Hooper left No. 12, 1870, the last teacher in the old red school, he was presented with a solid gold watch and chain. After quitting teaching he took with him one of No. 12 section's fairest daughters, Miss Jennie Miller. Mr. Hooper died in Hamilton, 1919. His widow still lives in Hamilton.

All the actors who took part in the last entertainment in the old brick school, took part in the first entertainment given in the new white school. The school was filled to its utmost capacity. The proceeds were used for buying the bell that has been used for calling the children to the school morning, intermission and noon ever since. The names of only two of the actors who took part in the[illegible] two exhibitions are still on [illegible] calendar of time, Mrs. Fagan Hamilton (Ella Nunan) and Mrs. James Hamilton (Ellen Margaret Orr, Trafalgar).

The Open Column

"Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party." This old practice line for typists applies very forcibly to Streetsville, at the present moment. During the past few weeks the village has been, in a sense, the butt of the metropolitan press by reason of the insane actions of some idiot who, apparently, resides in or near the village.

On Thankgiving Day, Streetsville was a sane, self-respecting village, a bit slow, perhaps, but a comfortable place to live in. The following day, Streetsville became a sort of Bedlam, overrun with representatives of a sensational press, who dug up details of a mean, senseless ffence against the peace with morbid avidity, disregarding the fact that the offence was obviously committed by a person of deranged mind, and that further offences, on the part of the same party or parties, might more readily be discouraged by a reasonable journalistic treatment of the situation, than by an outburst of yellow newspaper tactics.

Evidently, the publicity given this unfortunate affair has encouraged the fool who committed the offence to imagine himself a sort of heroic desperado, for further communications have been received, purportedly from his pencil. Reporters have swarmed about the village, in many instances hampering the activities of police who have sought to put an end to this chain of cheap attempts at terrorism. Because of the nebulous glorification in print he has received, the imbecile who is responsible for all this commotion has begun to consider the whole thing as a sort of grisly jest, and has publicly defied the provincial police. Let us point out that, if he is caught, there will be nothing to make him smile through the years he will have to spend behind bars. We strongly advise him, if he can read, to give up his mad antics.

Up to the present, the police have, seemingly, made little progress in apprehending the offender, possibly because every move they have made has been published in the daily papers. It would seem, then, that the responsibility must rest on the shoulders of the sound men of the community. Every clue that might bear upon this series of foolish threats against the peace must be put in the hands of the police, without reference to newspaper publicity, and every man who prides himself on his sanity and substance must use his brains to help arrest the folly that has brought so much unfavorable attention to Streetsville during the past few weeks.

Streetsville is a fine residential village. It has industries and advantages equal to those of most other villages in the province of Ontario. The citizens of the village are, with apparently one exception, decent people. But all the desirable features of the village will be forgotten, for years to come, by strangers who read the city papers, unless this nonsense is smashed flat as soon as is humanly possible.

No. TEN SCHOOL

On the 15th of March, 1871, Thomas McCracken, Sr., Dugald McGregor, Sr., and John Millar, Sr., trustees for School Section No. 10, met in the brick school-house on the Robinson farm. (This farm is now the property of John Bonham). The object of this meeting was to discuss the building problem.

At the annual meeting, in January, these men were appointed to select a suitable site for school and playground, and get estimates of the cost of a building, the size and shape that was unanimously approved of at the annual meeting.

Mr. John Miller, owner of the farm on the opposite corner, offered one quarter of an acre free. Mr. Miller's generous offer was immediately accepted. (Afterwards, when more room for a playground was asked for, he donated another quarter of an acre, making a half acre of level playing ground.) Then a number of tenders from well-known contractors were read. The tender of Mr. John Gailey, from Oakville, a well-known contractor, was considered the most reasonable and was accepted. On a warm July day, Mr. Gailey sent out a general invitation to all the ratepayers to raise the frame of the new school. The timbers were 8x8, of excellent quality pine.

Mr. Gailey was a jovial, good natured, generous Scotchman, and on account of the heat and the water being of poor quality, he provided a keg of beer from Brain's Brewery, Hornby, noted at that time for its excellent quality. Many competent judges claimed the liquid supplied at that time was much superior to the present beverage, supplied by the Government, both in quality and price. This school was boarded up and down and painted white, and has gone by the name of the White School ever since.

On an August morning, 1871, a group of boys and girls stood at the door of the white school eagerly watching for the coming of the new teacher. A young, slim boy was seen approaching and the children wondered if this pleasant-looking boy was going to undertake to teach S.S. No. 10. Mr. Galbraith was a favourite with parents and pupils during his term of teaching. The programme for the first exhibition at the white school was given by the same young people that had taken part in the last one in the brick school. These are some of the footprints they left behind: Prizes, books, for the brick school pupils that are treasures in many homes to-day. And the bell in the white school that has been ringing school days ever since.

The teachers who taught in No. 10 are: Mr. Galbraith, Aug., 1871, to July, 1872; Mr. Cumming, Aug., 1872, to July, 1873; Mr. Joyce, from August, 1873, to July, 1874; Miss Emily House, from Aug., 1874, to July, 1888; Mr. Smeaton, 1888 to July, 1890; Mr. Campbell, 1891; Dr. Edwards, 1892; Miss Sproat, 1893-98; Miss Bonham, 1899-1904; Mamie McCracken, 1905 to 1907; Royden McClure, 1908 to July, 1910; Miss Anderson, September, 1910, to January, 1911; Miss May Miller, 1912-13; Miss Sheapely, 1914, to June, 1915; Miss Abra, September, 1915; Miss Bell, 1916; Mrs. McGovern, from January, 1917, to July; George Atkinson, September, 1917, to June, 1918; Miss Riggs, June, 1918-20; Miss Parks, 1920-22; Miss Cordingley, September, 1922-23; Miss Paisley, 3 months, 1924; Miss Pierce, 3 months, 1924; Miss Campbell, August, 1924, to June, 1927; Jim Bonham, part of 1927; Mr. Graham, 1927-28; Miss Watkins, 1928-29; Miss Giffin, 1930-35; Miss Evans, and the present teacher, Miss Oakes.

Looking over this list we pay this tribute to all of these teachers. We sorry they had to send their children to No. 10 school, instead of to a city never heard any parent say they were school. Now we find in the Daily Globe, that never has any room for farmers' letters, or any country meeting, since M. O. Hammond, a Halton County boy and a reporter for the Globe, died. But when Dr. J. H. Putman, Inspector of Schools, Ottawa, attacked the country school system, the Globe treated us to twelve long letters. This is an extract of one of them: If boys and girls in the rural schools are to receive the education to which they are entitled, if country life is to be made as attractive and beautiful as it might be, if the calling of agriculture, in its many branches, is to be elevated and dignified, the people who till the soil must change the machinery of rural education. The machine is worn out; it is like the old car, it still runs, it belong to a past age; it is nearly one hundred years old. It is in the class of Model T Ford; its trade value is about the same. But it is hard to start, often runs on three cylinders, has no knee action, is difficult to steer, slow to accelerate, the engine heats, the battery is weak, there is a short circuit in the generator, it wastes fuel and costs too much for repairs. This harangue was surely never intended as an argument against our old reliable school system, or if it was intended for a joke it is one of the most ill-mannered ones we ever had to listen to, when we review the past in the Old No. 10 school, the teachers and boys and girls. And he advocates three trustees for the township at a high price to replace our three local trustees. If this modern lunatic had come to our reunion and started his silly jokes, after the Old No. 10 boys' speeches, he would have received a warm reception.

The greatest time in the history of the white school was when the old schoolmates gathered in reunion June 8th, 1929. What a happy day was spent, the meeting of men and women who were friends and playmates in childhood. These were the boys and girls of School Section No. 10 coming back to their old school and playground. Golden hair, brown hair and black hair are now of uniform gray and white. The smoothest cheeks of youth have been scored by the pencil of time. From eyes that looked mistily into the future, peers out experience of age. One thing only about the boys and girls has not changed, their kindly heart and their warm regard for one another.

Most successfully did the work of holding a reunion begin in a desire to gather all the old boys and girls of the Tenth Line White School reach its climax when, on June 8th, six hundred men, women, boys and girls, of the present generation, as well as those of the past and passing generations, and did his or her part towards making the affair something worth while, and something to recall in after years. There was a most able committee on the job: John Bonham, president; Mr. Cliff May and D. McGregor, secretaries; T. A. Leslie, treasurer; George Bonham, correspondence; Nat. McCracken, W. G. Cooke, reception committee, at the gate.

It seemed as if nothing had been left undone to make the reunion perfect. First of all was when W. J. Galbraith, ex-Inspector of Peel, and the first teacher to summons the boys and girls to their desks in the then new white school. Ting-a-ling went the bell over head and its sound conveyed a treble meaning. It recalled Mr. Galbraith's entertainment that raised the price to purchase the bell. It brought back frosty mornings and fragrant summer days, and it served to remind the older folks, that for many of them school will soon be out. One of the old teachers, Miss Emily House, who taught for 14 years in the white school, 90 years of age, was seated at the desk with Mrs. Thom. Sanderson in attendance, and all afternoon until she took her departure, old pupils were vieing with one another for the privilege of grasping her hand. Not only did she hold continuous court, but in her hand was placed a sceptre of love, a beautiful bouquet of roses, matching the blush in her aged cheeks, D. McGregor in presenting the flowers, and George S. Bonham reading an address, that she treasured all the rest of her life.

Mrs. Joseph Trimble was there, brought in an ambulance, she was so anxious to meet any of her schoolmates who knew her as little Kitty Brown. It was pleasant to watch her glowing personality, her vivid color, to understand what brought the boys, and girls, of that long-gone day flocking around her car, to grasp her hand and recall the past. That the occasion may be recalled long after the date has been torn from the calendar of time, and that boys and girls of 1929 may understand how boys and girls of 1872 love and remember one another. W. J. Galbraith carried into the school, and hung there, a beautiful wreath of immortelles. Those who have passed into a higher school "where Christ Himself doth rule" were recalled to memory by two minutes' silence throbbing with recollections. Then Mr. Galbraith came from the school, and in a beautifully-worded address, told how he wanted to express publicly his great delight at the reunion, and his own part in his happiness in meeting some of his pupils, and former residents of the neighborhood, and paid a tribute to the quality of the scholars who have gone forth from the 10th line white school.

Then followed a lengthy and pleasant programme of addresses by prominent men: Warden J. J. Jamison, Peel County; Reeve Morden, Oakville; Deputy-Reeve A. Buck, Trafalgar; A. S. Foster, Editor Oakville Star; Inspector J. M. Deneys, J. R. Kennedy, Cooksville; Rev. Father J. T. Egan, Brampton; Rev. W. T. McCree, Streetsville Presbyterian Church; Rev. R. J. W. Perry, Streetsville Anglican Church; Rev. S. J. T. Fortner, Streetsville United Church, and a number of ex-teachers and ex-pupils chosen from different regimes from the school. The grounds were beautifully deocrated with flags, a large "Welcome Home" sign appearing over the door. All the ladies of the section were on the refreshment committee providing everything. The warmest commendation for the way the guests were served with supper. It took very clever and careful planning to serve so many, so quickly, and so well, while the supper itself cannot be praised too highly for excellence and quality. Night did not bring an end to the gathering for an orchestra made its appearance and dancing was indulged in until midnight. Varey's orchestra supplied the music. It is easily to be seen that acquaintance one made in No. 10 section is a thing to endure in beauty and power while life shall last, and continue in fond recollections into the far beyond.

High School

A very enjoyable time was spent Friday evening, Oct. 29th, at Streetsville High School, when Hallowe'en was celebrated. About 75 people were present, including the teaching staff, pupils, ex-pupils, and a few friends. Games and contests were indulged in, also dancing. A ghost story was recited by Hugh Lamb. Blanch Terry gave musical selections on the guitar and Muriel Raine sang. Beatrice Jones had charge of the entertainment. The Principal and several pupils were dressed in costumes becoming the occasion and they certainly were comical. Everybody was out for a good time—and they sure had it. At the close, delicious refreshments were supplied by the staff and pupils.

'SALADA' TEA is delicious

HOSTAGE HEIRESS

By DAVID DRESSER

Janet Duane, millionaire's daughter, gives a party one night aboard her father's palatial yacht, anchored off Miami. Gregory Gason tricks her into being lef behind wih him when the guests are taken ashore. The only other persons aboard are a crippled wtachman and Janet's Negro maid. Meanwhile, "Dusty" Lanion, lawless adventurer, has laid plans to seize the yacht to carry arms and ammunition to Cuban revolutionists. Believing the boat to be deserted, except for the watchman, who has been bribed, Dusty and his mean are about to board her.

CHAPTER IX

Janet's heart was pounding wildly as Fandella disappeared over the side of the yacht. Something drew her gaze to the wheelhouse. All was darkness there except for the dim glow of the binnacle light, which was reflected upward to outline the features of the man at the wheel. A stern face. Strong. Frowning, now, with fierce concentration. It was a treacherous business, guiding the boat through the shoals in the darkness.

A queer emotion clutched at Janet's heart as she stared at Dusty's rugged face. A hoarse whisper floated up to her as she hesitated. Her hand, on the rope which Fandella had said secured the rowboat, felt a tug.

Then—resolution came to her. She knew, in that moment, that she could not go back to the stifled life she had known. Her place was here on the swaying deck, with Dusty Lanion at the wheel!

Savage exultation surged through her as her fingers jerked at the knot securing the rowboat. She cast the rope off with a wild gesture of freedom and leaned far over the side to call softly:

"Row back alone, Fandella. I can't leave the Fleetwing! I have to see it through!"

She smiled faintly as Fandella's astonished protestations floated up to her over the widening gulf of water.

He Gave Her the Chance

She walked swiftly to the wheelhouse and stopped behind Dusty.

"I've just said good-bye to my maid," she told him placidly.

His shoulders moved, ever so slightly. He gave no other evidence of surprise.

"Why didn't you go ashore with her?"

"Did you want me to go?" she challenged.

"Why else do you think I allowed that clumsy truck driver to tie a boat next to the Jacob's ladder?"

"You knew about that?"

"It's my business to know about everything that goes on aboard this tub."

"Tub?"

He flashed a swift grin at her over his shoulder. "Why didn't you go?" he demanded.

"Then you wanted to be rid of me?"

"I wanted you to have an opportunity to go," he told her slowly.

Janet found that she was content to stand there quietly behind him. She was fiercely glad she had cast the rope off.

"When will we reach Cuba?" she asked suddenly.

"Sometime after midnight if this boat is as fast as Captain Coleman claimed."

"Captain Coleman!"

"Sure. Oh, don't get me wrong," Dusty said quickly. "He's not in on this deal. I swung it alone. But the captain likes to boast and I made a point of cultivating him rather assiduously while I was planning to snatch your floating plaything."

"Assiduously," Janet murmured. "You've got a swell vocabulary for a pirate."

"I haven't always been a pirate," Dusty grunted. "I went to school once . . . just like anyone else." His voice was tinged with bitterness.

Borrowed Sweets

Janet was silent a moment. She didn't want him to think she was prying into his past.

"You plan to unload your . . . cargo . . . tonight?" she asked in a low tone.

"Yes. If we don't meet any curious Coast Guard cutters on the way over," Dusty said cheerfully.

"And afterward?" she persisted.

"I'll see that you're taken care of," he assured her grimly.

"I don't know that I want to be taken care of," she said in a small voice. "I could have attended to that myself a short while ago . . . if I'd wanted to desert the ship."

He shot a direct glance back at her, then turned to nurse the wheel tenderly.

"Almost clear of the Keys," he muttered. "We'll soon have a straight course and full speed ahead. I don't blame you for refusing to desert this ship," he mused. "She's the sweetest thing I ever handled."

"Stolen sweets," Janet said mockingly.

He flinched at that. "I never steal," he told her angrily. "Borrowed, is the word. She wasn't doing anybody any good anchored in Biscayne Bay."

"Is she doing good now? Carrying arms and ammunition to foment a rebellion?"

"Who can say?" he asked somberly. "They enjoy fighting, those Cubans. It's their destiny to follow lost causes."

Rat on the Rampage

There was a polite cough behind them. Janet and Dusty turned to see Don Martinez standing apologetically in the doorway.

"A thousand pardons." He bowed from the waist. "I am sorry to interrupt, but I must beg a word with you, Captain Dusty."

"Don Martinez," Dusty muttered, "Miss Duane."

"I am delighted." The tall Cuban bowed again.

"I'll go to the lounge," Janet said hastily, and withdrew.

"Ahh! What beauty. What youth and grace!" Don Martinez' eyes followed her admiringly. "You are the sly one," he chuckled to Dusty.

"The fair prisoner does not appear to be languishing over her captivity."

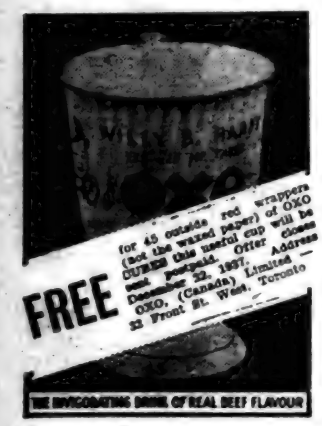
"What did you want to see me about?" Dusty asked brusquely.

"Ah, yes. It is this man Snifter. I do not like his eyes. Eh? He is a bad one, is it not?"

"Pretty mean if he gets coked up," Dusty said carelessly.

"Coked up?" Don Martinez wrinkled his brow in perplexity.

"Sure. Cocaine. Dope."



"Ah." Don Martinez looked upprehensive. "I am afraid he is, as you say, coked up. He appeared like a wild man when I saw him just now. I think he is dangerous. He was hurrying from the cabins aft, and he cursed me as he pushed me aside."

Dusty stiffened. 'If that rat is on the rampage, there's no telling what he'll do," he muttered. "Here." He stepped away from the wheel. "We're in the clear now. That's the course." He indicated the compass. "Can you hold on while I hunt up Snifter and see what he's up to?"

"But, of course."

5-Year-Old Boy Believed Genius

Played Liszt When Twenty-Six Months Old; Compared to Masters

Five-year-old Kenneth Wolf, of Cleveland, is a rising star in the music world who, at maturity, may be regarded as a genius, believes J. G. Horridge, his music teacher.

At the age of twenty-six months he astounded his mother when he climbed up on the piano stoool and played with mature skill the introduction to Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody.

Began at 2½

When Kenneth was two and one half his father began giving him piano lessons, using books of modern piano methods. At the age of 3½ Kenneth had completed several lesson books, was able to play all the small pieces in good time and could transpose them into various keys.

Mature Composition

Kenneth, a small, chubby boy with large frank eyes, composes compositions that are called incredibly mature and "if only we had some time, they should be written down," Horridge said.

The young pianist is said to compare with many of the old masters — Chopin, Mozart, Brahms, Bach, Schubert and others — with regard to an early showing of genius, although some of those "prodigies" were composing concert compositions at early ages. Kenneth can call off with ease various notes and chords.

At his first public appearance Kenneth played Bach Fugue No. 10. "I played it in E minor," Kenneth said, speaking slowly and choosing his words.

Kenneth's mother and father are both attorneys — have encouraged his talents with enthusiasm since Professor Wolf heard the introduction to Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody played by the 26-months-old son.

King's Christmas Talk Undecided

A Buckingham Palace spokesman declared this week that the question of a Christmas broadcast by the King "has not been settled yet."

British Broadcasting Corporation officials said the King would be asked to broadcast to the Empire, but that no invitation had gone out as yet.

His Majesty last year did not continue his father's practice in addressing his subjects at Christmas time. He had then been on the Throne for but a fortnight and had gone through the trying days of the abdication crisis. On Coronation night, however, he made a world-wide broadcast.

Bagpipes, generally regarded as thoroughly Scottish, were introduced to Britain by the Romans. Nero is said to have played them.

Cakes That Win Compliments

What an honest sense of achievement we have when our cake receives that sincere compliment — "another piece please!"

Such cakes have a delicate flavor and fragrance with a fine, moist, tender texture which is described by judges of cake as "velvety crumb."

Each of these cakes is a "velvety crumb" cake if you will follow directions carefully:

Lady Baltimore Cake

3 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons combination baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or other shortening
1½ cups sugar
½ cup milk
½ cup water
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon almond extract
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt; sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, cream together until light and fluffy. Add flour, alternately with liquid, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add flavoring; fold in egg whites. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 20 minutes. Spread Lady Baltimore Filling between layers and Lady Baltimore Frosting over cake. Double recipe to make three 10-inch layers.

Lady Baltimore Frosting and Filling

1½ cups sugar
⅓ teaspoon light corn syrup
2-3 cup boiling water
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
6 figs, chopped
½ cup raisins, chopped
½ cup pecan or walnut meats, chopped.

Combine sugar, corn syrup and water. Bring quickly to a boil, stirring only until sugar is dissolved. Boil rapidly without stirring until a small amount of syrup forms a soft ball in cold water, or spins a long thread when dropped from tip of spoon (240 degrees F.) Pour syrup in fine stream over egg whites, beating constantly. Add vanilla. Continue beating with a rotary egg beater 10 to 15 minutes, or until frosting is cool and of right consistency to spread. Use wooden spoon when too stiff for beater. For filling, add enough frosting to fruit and nuts to make a filling that will spread easily. Spread between layers. Spread remaining frosting on top and sides of cake. Makes enough filling and frosting to spread between layers and top and sides of Lady Baltimore Cake.

Hungarian Cream Cake

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons combination baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
1¼ cups heavy cream
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Add sugar gradually to eggs, and beat well. Add flour, alternately with cream, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in a greased pan 8 x 8 x 2 inches, in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 minutes. Spread with your favorite chocolate frosting.

Tomato Bouillon

1 cup boiling water
3 teaspoons tomato catchup
¼ Oxo cube
Salt and pepper to taste.

If desired, a spoonful of whipped cream can be added to each cup.

Hair Tinted Pink Is Latest Vogue

Called Newest Thing in Styles For Women by European Coiffure Expert

Hair tinted "a tender, tender rose" is the great new thing in women's styles, a European hair-styling expert said.

"You mean pink hair?" he was asked.

Leo of Vienna, who recently coiffed the hair of the Duchess of Windsor, thumbed through a small German dictionary for the word "pink." Then he looked up brightly and answered, "Ja, ja!"

Although the Duchess of Windsor prefers to wear her hair in its natural state, pink hair, he said, is perfect for evening, "because women, at evening, should always look flower-like."

"Tender Rose" Shade

The mild, tender rose shade looks "fresh and friendly" in the daytime, he added, with dark street clothes. Asked if men would like it, he nodded grimly. "They will."

Women should change their style of hair dress or at least vary its lines 10 or 12 times a year, said Leo, because many men are completely sick of the way their wives do their hair.

Should Change Style Often

The hair stylist is in the U. S. for the first time at the invitation of John A. Weis, chairman of the committee for the presentation of Austrian art, science and culture at the New York world's fair.

The committee has proposed a project called "Vienna, City of Songs," at which he may exhibit some of his coiffures to show "the gaiety and charm of Vienna."

To Suit Age

He said he'd never seen in another city so many beautiful women as in New York—"Such slim, slender women, with fabulous Greek-Roman profiles.

Our worst error in hair dress, is to copy film stars too often, "And try, at 36, to look like Ginger Rogers."

As for the "page boy" coiffure—it's the most unflattering style conceived in two decades, said Leo. "The trouble is, it makes most women look broad."

Joseph Conrad's Ship Scrapped

Otago, Swift Sailing Vessel, Once Commanded by Famous Author

The bark Otago, which lay at Hobart, Tasmania, wharves for many years and is now being broken up, has an interesting history, especially for readers of Joseph Conrad's novels.

The Otago was a trim little ship built at Glasgow in 1869, and in the palmy days of sailing ships she made a fast passage between Great Britain and the Australian colonies. Her chief claim to fame is the fact that she was the first ship to be commanded by Conrad, who though of Polish parentage made a name for himself as one of the foremost English writers of sea stories.

To Sea At 17

Conrad went to sea at the age of 17 and in 1880 visited Sydney as the third-mate of a Clyde-owned sailing vessel trading to that port. Four years later, he got his master's certificate in the British merchant service. And while master of the Otago, he collected the material for his book, "Mirror of the Seas."

Scrapped for Arms

Having outlived her usefulness, the Otago was bought by the Rudart Parker Shipping Company towed to Hobart from Sydney and for 30 years she was moored at the Hobart wharf, a grimy but useful and unromantic coal-hulk. About five years ago, she Otago was bought by the Hudd Par- Company and towed up the River Derwent to Mount Direction where she was beached beside another veteran, the barkentine Silver Cloud. She is being scrapped for the sake of the iron and steel in her hull which will be sold to Japanese buyers.

Judges' Messenger Stole Their Wigs

The mystery of the missing Lord Justices' wigs was solved this week with the arrest of a messenger who, London, England, police said, admitted stealing them.

The three expensive headdresses, loss of which threatened the dignity of the law courts on the opening of the Michaelmas term were recovered.

Joseph Pearce, a judge's messenger was remanded for trial. Officers in Bow Street court testified Pearce sold the wigs to a store, saying they had been given to him.

Lord Justices Slesser, Greer and Scott, who were forced to borrow misfits, got their wigs back, cleaned and renovated by the store.

READY TO BRING YOU RELIEF IN MINUTES

THE REASON "ASPIRIN" WORKS SO FAST

Drop an "Aspirin" tablet into a tumbler of water.

By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.

This speed of disintegration enables "Aspirin" tablets to start "taking hold" of headache and similar pain a few minutes after taking.

YOU can pay as high as you want for remedies claimed to relieve the pain of Headache, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Sciatica, etc. But the medicine so many doctors generally approve—the one used by thousands of families daily—is "Aspirin".

Simply take 2 "Aspirin" tablets with a half glass of water. Repeat, if necessary, according to directions.

Usually this will ease such pain in a remarkably short time.

For quick relief from such pain which exhausts you and keeps you awake at night—ask for "Aspirin".

"Aspirin" tablets are made in Canada. "Aspirin" is the registered trade-mark of the Bayer Company, Limited, of Windsor, Ontario. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every tablet.

WEDDINGS

Robbinson—McGill

(Received too late for last issue.)

A very interesting wedding took place on Wednesday, Oct. 20th, at the "Homestead," on the Credit River, Streetsville Road, Erindale, when Olivia Mae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McGill, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry Robbinson, son of Mrs. J. Robbinson and the late Mr. J. Robbinson of Erindale.

The lovely bride, who was given away by her father, wore a pale blue Neno chiffon dress and silver shoes. She carried a bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Edna McGill was her sister's only attendant and wore a jacket suit of sapphire blue velvet with vest of blue Peau-de-soie silk and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Mr. W. Robbinson. The ceremony took place under a very tastefully decorated archway, in the spacious drawing room, artistically decorated with autumn flowers and leaves. The Rev. R. A. Spencer officiated, and Miss Dorothy Adamson played during the service, and also Wagner Bridal March.

After the ceremony a reception was held. Mrs. H. McGill welcomed her guests wearing a Coronation blue crepe-de-chine dress, trimmed with silver, and a corsage of flowers. The bridegroom's mother was in oak brown satin with corsage of yellow roses.

Later the couple left by motor on a wedding trip to Montreal and other Eastern points, the bride travelling in an apple green dress and hat with brown accessories. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robbinson will reside on Dundas Street, Erindale.

Bird Sanctuary

Mr. J. A. Workman had several robins which nested on the verandah and this year found that three of these had built their nest together in a neat cluster. The group may be seen in B. Root's store.

This development of community interests among the birds is leading to considerable speculations. Is it a sign of the growth of polygamy, and ought not the birds to be taken in hand and advised to guard against the evils of civilization?

Suppose one birdlet crept over the wall of the nest into the neighbour's nest, would not complications arise?

Did the robins help one another in the feeding of the young?

We wonder if there will be a pilgrimage next summer to see the three pairs of robins who live together in peace and have common interests in life.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

Inspiring services were held Sunday last, afternoon and evening, in the Eden United Church, when the Harvest Home and Anniversary services were held.

The choir did remarkably well in two anthems. A quartette party, consisting of Misses Mildred May and Muriel Mason, Messrs. E. Waite and W. Mason sang "The Ivory Palaces" in the afternoon, and in the evening Misses A. Sinclair and D. Waite sang a duet. These numbers by members of the choir well revealed the splendid talent resident at Eden.

In the ministry of the word, both the Rev. C. E. J. Cragg and Rev. J. E. Mitchell selected as the theme, "Worship," and whilst entirely different each emphasized the need in the life of to-day for people to "Take time to be holy." The pastor, present in the afternoon, spoke words of welcome to the visitors and at the close of the services there was fellowship, everyone enjoying a chat and renewal of comradeship.

Next Sunday morning the Rev. Fred Smith of Silverthorne United Church, Toronto, will preach in the Streetsville United Church. Mr. Smith is well known for his great work in Sault Ste. Marie, where he successfully superintended the All People's Mission for some years.

The United Church Sunday School Executive, Streetsville, decided to hold its Sunday School concert and pageant on Tuesday, December 21st.

The Local Branch of theCanadian Legion held a very successful Hallowe'en masquerade Dance Friday night in their hall on Church Street. Lowden's Orchestra furnished the music and Bert Mason was Floor Manager. Everybody had a good time and they are anxiously waiting for the next event.

COUNTY IS DISCUSSED BY HISTORICAL GROUP

Comprehensive Outline of Peel Development Given by Wm. Perkins Bull

Peel came under discussion at a joint meeting of the English and French sections of the Canadian Catholic Historical Association in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto. Thursday morning, 21st October. Pierre Georges Roy, Esq., D. Litt., C.S.G., was chairman. The secretary, Dominion Archivist J. A. Kenney, Esq., Ph.D., LL.D., of Ottawa, persuaded Mr. Wm. Perkins Bull, K.C., to tell the society something about his historical research. Mr. Kenney said in part:

"We have with us this morning a gentleman who has spent considerable time and research on local history. He has had a half dozen people helping him in the Ottawa archives, and they tell me an even larger staff in Toronto, for he believes in going to the bottom of things and getting exact and complete information on anything he attacks. As he is busy among other things with a history of the Roman Catholic church, he can probably tell us a good deal that is new to many present, and I think it would be interesting to hear just why and how he has gone at his gargantuan task."

"Acknowledging Dr. Kenney's introduction, Mr. Perkins Bull spoke briefly:

"After devoting my energies to other occupations for upwards of unexpectedly drawn into historical three-score years, I found myself research, and its accompanying literary activity. Being a farmer's son with a strongly religious background, naturally some of my volumes have a religious flavour.

"I was born a Wesleyan Methodist. Unforunately, while I was living in the Motherland, the denomination into which Wesleyanism had been absorbed, ceased to exist. I paid my respects to the church of my fathers in a volume called Spadunk.

"Then having been appointed a lay reader of the Church of England, I went on to ferret out the story of Anglicanism, and its history is told in From Strachan to Owen, now in the press.

"Being thus out of a job, and having heard of your church, I thought, here is some work for an Orangeman. I suggest calling my Roman Catholic history From Macdonell to McGuigan, unless some of your highbrows object. Should anyone propose a better title I will buy him or her a hat.

"The more I study your early efforts, the more let me say, 'almost I am persuaded to' stop and think. Throughout, my aim has been to make people and movements appear really human and understandable, and that in my book on the Orange order I succeeded, to some extent at least, would appear from a letter written to me by one of Canada's oustanding Roman Catholic journalists. Among other things he remarks:

'From my point of view you have accomplished the next to impossible in making these flinty, uncouth and wrong-headed pioneers seem curiously attractive and often admirable . . . Your Rutledges, Gowans and the rest are terribly, overpoweringly Irish. Their furious bigotries, their stubborn clinging to a cause, their very persecution mania are testaments of race and blood . . . Your treatment of a difficult subject has been temperate and good-humoured. You write without rancor and you seek to give the devil his due, even when you suspect that his Satanic Majesty is a papist. Your method . . . taking Peel county as a typical cross-section and showing by it the growth of a movement in Canada—is first-class historical technique. The imaginative treatment of individuals gives me, as an outsider, my first insight into Orange mentality. It is illuminating.

'Your militant loyalist Irish Protestant, who when he dies, is ferried across Boyne Water into Heaven, is a logical fellow in his prejudices. I do not agree with, but I begin to understand him.'

"The work of the Roman Catholic clergy in Peel was of great value, and, as not infrequently happens, some of the best and most highly regarded citizens belonged to the minority group. The very fact of their being of the minority spurred them on to prove their worth. Roman Catholics in Peel, like Protestants in Quebec, found little to complain of in their neighbours of the opposite faith.

"On the whole, relations between your people and Protestants have been good. Individuals sometimes quarreled, and early years saw occasional faction fights, but religious animosity did not go very deep or extend very far. Many warm personal friendships existed. Working side by side, shoulder to shoulder, in mutual tolerance and trust, they built up Peel, as their co-religionists have built up the Dominion of Canada. And as it has been in the past, we have sound grounds for hoping it always will be."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Leprosy Known in Egypt as Early as in 4000 B. C.

Leprosy, curiously enough, to the Israelites, was more a moral than a physical affliction. Segregation was purely ceremonial. If the leper was fortunate enough to have his symptoms disappear a "sin offering" was prescribed by the Book for atonement. For a poor man, the holocaust usually consisted of two pigeons—one pigeon being killed over running water. Then, according to the law the sick man was sprinkled with the blood of the victim before he was allowed admittance into communion with the Children of the Promise.

Historically, states a writer in the Washington Post, leprosy was known to the Egyptians as early as 4000 B. C. In fact many authorities agree that it made its first dread appearance in the land of the Pharaohs. Pliny, the younger, writing of the spread of the disease in ancient Rome emphatically states that leprosy was unknown to the empire until the era of Pompey the Great, when it was imported from Egypt. Herodotus had another version linking leprosy with Persia where, he writes, a popular belief was given wide credence linking the afflicted with those who had "sinned" against the sun.

Few countries have been free from the ravages of this ghoulish disease. America is not an exception. According to well-known authorities leprosy predated the arrival of Columbus, its existence being proved by pieces of ancient pottery representing deformities suggestive of the disease.

anary Bird Hails From Islands Claiming Name

The canary bird is a creation of man but their ancestors did hail from the islands for which they are named, according to a writer in the Los Angeles Times. A story is told that early in the Sixteenth century, thousands of small yellowish green birds inhabiting these islands were captured and taken aboard a merchant ship. Off the coast of Italy the boat was wrecked and the birds freed, taking refuge on the island Elba. Here under favorable climatic conditions they are supposed to have multiplied in such numbers that the volume of their song attracted the attention of the natives who, realizing their value, shipped them to Italy, where they are first bred in captivity.

This is but tradition, for there is no authentic record of their existing on Elba and it is generally agreed that the true wild canary has never been found anywhere but in the Canary and Madeira islands. However, it is acknowledged that the birds were first domesticated in Italy.

The wild bird is very small, of slender build with feathers of greenish yellow, gray and black.

Marie Roland

Mme. Jean Marie Roland, nee Marine Jeanne Philipon, motioned one Lamarche to precede her to the French political guillotine in Paris, saying: "You would not have strength enough to see me die." Then, mounting the platform herself to suffer the fate of all rationalists in revolution, she looked over at a statue of liberty and uttered an immortal phrase that keeps the name of Mme. Roland alive: "Oh, Liberty, how many crimes are committed in thy name!" After her death her husband killed himself. "I would not remain any longer in a world so stained with crime."

Harvest Celebrations in Hungary

In Hungary the harvest season is celebrated with village festivals and processions in which peasants march carrying rakes, scythes, sickles and other tools decorated with ribbons and flowers. Two men carry on their shoulders a pole from which hangs a harvest crown, made of several kinds of grain and decked out with pink and blue paper flowers and bits of ribbon, says Grace Humphrey in "Hungary, Land of Contrasts." The afternoon is spent in singing and dancing to gypsy music, and is climaxed with a great supper of goulash, potatoes, paprika, onions and wine.

Most Sacred Music

The world's most sacred musical composition is Allegri's Miserere mei Deus, which has been sung during Holy Week for three centuries in the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican. For a hundred years it was deemed so holy that its score was jealously guarded and those who attempted a transcription were excommunicated. But it became public in 1769 when Mozart, at the age of thirteen years, wrote it down from memory after only two hearings.—Collier's Weekly.

Use of Absinthe

Absinthe, of Swiss origin, was perhaps France's favorite—and certainly best known—drink before the war. It was first used to a large extent by French colonial troops in Algeria during the conquest of 1840, when medical officers recommended the addition of a few drops of the drink to every glass of water as a protection against desease. The compound proved popular among colonial officers and men who introduced the drink in France, where it became famous.

Passing of J. P. Beattie

On Feb. 3rd, 1858, a little boy came to the Beattie farm home in Churchville and he was baptised John. 18 years of his boyhood days were spent at farm work, and getting his education in Churchville school. In 1877 his father, Mathew Beattie, bought a farm on the Tenth Line, Trafalgar, owned by Michael O'Connor, moving there with his family. On March 3, 1897, John was married to Edith Reid, taking over the management of the farm that year

Neighbors and friends who were always visitors at this home, pay this tribute to this home for the free-hearted hospitality that was always there. Every leaf told its own story of honesty of purpose and integrity that were never known to waver a hairbreadth from the straight and narrow pathway of rectitude. We never heard a word of slander and in all our work and conversation to gether we never heard John Beattie use one profane word, a glorious record to leave behind.

After three days of sickness our good old friend took that unknown journey we all must take to under stand, on Sunday, Oct. 31st

The funeral service was conducted at the homestead by the Reverend B. Eyre. ..... Over fifty cars formed the procession to the beautiful family plot, where he was laid to rest in Churchville cemetery. The floral tributes were beautiful, from W. B. Reid and family: Mrs. M. H. Beattie and family, Trafalgar Community Club, Mr. and Mrs Harry Rutledge, Mr. and Mrs Norman Lang, Mr. and Mrs JH Beattie and family, (Gates Ajar), Mrs. George Simmons and family, River Park Lodge, Mr. and Mrs. Merchant, Mr. and Mrs. E. C Saunders, Mr. and Mrs Jos Trimble, Mr. and Mrs. Laver, The Family (Gates Ajar) St. Andrew's Church, Baby Brenda Daves, Wilmer (Sonny) Hall, the grandchildren (basket).

Many friends were present from Seaforth, Ancaster, Toronto, Ingersol Brampton, Kitchener, Galt.

The pallbearers five nephews Will Reid, Isaac Askin, Will Rutledge, Bob Reid, Harold Rutledge, and neighbor, Nat McCracken

Mr. Beattie, the first link severed in the family, is survived by his widow, three daughters, Mrs Clarence Hall, (Muriel) Hornby; Mrs. Oscar Manes (Rowena) Streetsville: Mrs F. Daisy (Lilian) Brampton, two sons James, Toronto, and Harold Streetsville, and brother, James, Streetsville. SANDY.

but... ask your friends.

You'll be surprised at the number of people who really want you to have a telephone. Many of them don't even know you but they're interested nevertheless because of what your telephone means to their service. Too few telephones curtails service and the value of each individual instrument as well. The more telephones in service, the greater the value to each user. From the viewpoints of both service cost and service scope, every farmer is interested in seeing that every other farmer has a telephone.

NEW LOW RATES
for farm telephone service are now in effect!

THE DOG TAX AND LIVE STOCK PROTECTION ACT

This legislation protects live stock owners against the ravages of dogs

This Act requires:—

The taxing of dogs and the issuing of dog tags.

—where live stock (Cattle and Sheep) are injured, the owner shall notify the local Valuer or the Reeve of the Municipality within forty-eight hours after discovery of the damage.
